GRAHAM—EARL OF STRATHERN, AND EARL OF MONTEITH AND AIRTH.

Lineage.

SIR PATRICK GRAHAM, m. Euphemia, Countess of Strathern in her own right, only dau. and sole heiress of Prince David, Earl-Palatine of Strathern, eldest son of the second marriage of King ROBERT II. of Scotland, in right of which their descendants quarter the royal arms of Stuart. (See some account of them in The Vicissitudes of Families, 3rd series.) Their only son,

MALISE GRAHAM, inherited the title of Earl of Strathern; but King JAMES I. divested him of that earldom, under pretence that it was a male fee, and conferred it on his uncle Walter, Earl of Atholl and Caithness, for life, by charter, dated 22 July, 1427. To Malise, the king gave the lands of Craynia, &c., which he erected, 6 September, 1427, into the EARLDOM of MENTETH (more usually spelled "Monteith,") to be held in a free earldom by Malise and the heirs male of his body; which failing, to return to the crown. Under the designation of Earl of Menteth, his lordship went to England, 9 December, 1427, as a supplementary hostage in place of Robert Erskine, and was not released till 17 June, 1453, when he was ordered to be liberated out of the castle of Pontefract; Alexander, his son and heir, surrendering himself as a hostage in his stead, and the Earl of Douglas and Lord Hamilton becoming sureties for his return in the event of Alexander dying or escaping. Malise, Earl of Menteth, was dead before 17 May, 1491, when Marioun, Countess of Menteth, John of Drummond, her spouse, and John, Lord Drummond, appeared as pursuers in a civil cause, and the deceased Malise, Earl of Menteth, is mentioned; also Alexander, then Earl of Menteth. Malise, Earl of Menteth, m. 1st, Lady Anne Vere, dau. of Henry, Earl of Oxford, and had three sons, Alexander, who d. v. p. 17 June, 1453, being at the time a prisoner, at Pontefract as hostage for his father, leaving a son, ALEXANDER, heir to his grandfather.

John, of Kilbride, called Sir John with the Bright Sword, ancestor of the Grahams, Viscounts of Preston, extinct 1739; Grahams, of Gartmore; Grahams, of Netherby; Grahams, of Norton Conyers, Herts.; and other families of that name. Walter, 1st of the Grahams, of Buckquhaple.

The earl was s. by his grandson,

ALEXANDER GRAHAM, 2nd Earl of Menteth: who was served heir of his grandfather, 6 May, 1493. He m. Margaret, dau. of Walter Buchanan, of Buchanan, and had two sons, WILLIAM, 3rd Earl of Menteth.

Walter, who had a charter of the lands of Gartur, from the Abbot of Inchmahomoe, 1553, ancestor of the Grahams of Gartur, who appear to be heirs male of this family.

The elder son,

WILLIAM GRAHAM, 3rd Earl of Menteth, d. in 1537, leaving by Margaret, his wife, dau. of Mowbray, of Barnboulge, three sons and a dau., viz.,

JOHN, 4th Earl of Menteth.

Robert, of Gartmore, who d. s. p.

Gilbert, of Gartmore, whose male line is EXTINCT.

Margaret, m. to Archibald, 4th Earl of Argyll, and had issue.

The eldest son,

JOHN GRAHAM, 4th Earl of Menteth, was one of the prisoners taken at the rout of Solway, 1542, and ransomed for 200 marks, 1 July, 1543, being designed in Hymer, Lord Monkereth. He was killed in a scuffle with the tutor of Appin, in October, 1547, leaving by Marian, eldest dau. of George, 5th Lord Seton (which lady m. 2ndly, John, 10th Earl of Sutherland,) two sons and two daus.,

WILLIAM, 5th Earl of Menteth.

George, whose son, James, son and heir-apparent of George Graham, in Reidnoche, brother-german of the deceased William, Earl of Menteth, had a charter of the king's lands of Easter Bednoche, in Perthshire, 12 June, 1598. Marion, grand-dau and heiress of George, brought that estate to her husband, John Graham, of Duchray.

Mary, m. to John Buchanan, of Buchanan.

Christian, m. to Sir William Livingston, of Kilayth.

The elder son,

WILLIAM GRAHAM, 5th Earl of Menteth, m. Margaret, eldest dau. of Sir James Douglas, of Drumlanrig, relict of Edward, Lord Crichton, of Sanquhar, and by her (who m. 3rdly, Wauchope, of Nidderly) he had a son,

JOHN GRAHAM, 6th Earl of Menteth; who was served heir to his father, 29 October, 1587; and d. in December, 1598. He m. Mary, 3rd dau. of Sir Colin Campbell, of Glenurchy, by whom he had issue,

WILLIAM, 7th Earl of Menteth.

James, who m. Lady Margaret Erskine, 2nd dau. of James, Earl of Buchan; but d. without male issue. They had a dau.,

MARION, m. to Walter Graham, of Gartur.

Christian, m. to Sir John Blackader, of Tulliallan.

The elder son,

WILLIAM GRAHAM, 7th Earl of Montelith, b. 1589, s. his father in December, 1598, and was served heir to him 7 August, 1610. He m. in 1611, (contract dated at Dundee, 30 January, 1610), Agnes, dau. of Patrick, Lord Gray, a curious account of whom will be found in a letter of her husband printed in Chambers's "Edinburgh Journal," 2 July, 1836. The earl was served heir of David Stewart, Earl of Strathern, of Patrick Graham, Earl of Strathern, and of Malise, Earl of Monteith, 25 May, 1630. In August, 1628, his lordship was constituted justice-general of Scotland; in the November following, made an extraordinary lord of session; and appointed, in 1629, president of the privy council. He had besides, being high in royal favour, charters of various lands and baronies from 1626 to 1632, amongst which was a charter of the lands and barony of Airth, wherein he had the title of Strathern allowed him, being styled Earl of Strathern and Monteith, &c. Subsequently, however, King CHARLES I. and his ministers for Scotland began to view with jealousy his lordship's pedigree, which reached to David, eldest son of King ROBERT II., by Euphemia Ross; and the incautious, although true, acknowledgement in his retours and patent of his being lineally descended from the said David was deemed an admission of his having the preferable title to the throne of Scotland. Popular rumour became busy on the occasion; the earl was accused to King CHARLES I. of having renounced his claim to the crown, with the reservation of the rights of his blood, and of having used the expression—"That he had the reddest blood in Scotland." Drummond of Hawthornden addressed a special memorial to his majesty on the subject, dated December, 1632, wherein he says—"The restoring the Earl of Monteith in blood, and allowing his descent and title to the Earldom of Strathern, is thought to be disadvantageous to the king's majesty, and that a more dangerous blow could not have been given to the nobleman himself." Eventually, the earl's retours and patent were set aside by the court of session, 22 March, 1633, upon the erroneous plea that David, Earl of Strathern, d. s. p., and he being thus deprived of his rightful honours, and his title, the king was pleased to confer upon him, by patent, dated at Whitehall, 21 January following, (in 1633, sealed 28 March, 1633), the title of EARL OF AIRTHE, annexing the same to the Earldom of Monteith, with precedence from the date of the original patent of the Earldom of Monteith, namely 6 September, 1428, to him and his heirs. He was thenceforward styled Earl of Airth and Monteith. His lordship was afterwards deprived of his public offices and retired to his castle of Monteith where he died. He had with other issue, (including James; and his 2nd dau. Margaret, m. Lord Garlies, but left no surviving issue),

JOHN GRAHAM, Lord Kinpont, who joined Montrose with 400 royalists in August, 1644, just before the battle of Tippermuir, but was murdered with two "Irish rebels at the kirke of Collace," three or four days afterwards in September of that year by his friend and companion James Stewart of Ardvorlick. The melancholy fate of this gallant young nobleman, and the singular circumstances attending the birth and history of his murderer (who was pardoned by parliament in 1645,) are the facts on which Sir Walter Scott, has founded his beautiful "Legend of Montrose." Lord Kinpont, who thus d. v. p., m. in April, 1632, Lady Mary Keith, eldest dau. of William, 6th Earl Marischal and had issue,

WILLIAM, who s. his grandfather as 2nd (and last) Earl of Airth and Monteith.

MARY, { of whose lines we shall presently proceed to treat more fully as co-heirs of their brother in the earldom.

ELIZABETH, {

The only son,

WILLIAM GRAHAM, 2nd Earl of Airth and Monteith, b. before January, 1644; m. 1st, Anne Hews, and 2ndly, Catherine, 2nd dau. of Thomas Bruce, of Blairhall, who d. in 1693. This nobleman had charters of certain lands 4 February, 1670 and 1680, and sat in parliament down to 1693. Not having issue by either of his wives, he disposed of the reversion of all his property to his kinsman, the Marquess of Montrose, and his nephews, Sir George Allardice and Sir John Graham, of Gartmore, the latter of whom he charged to inter him and his wife in the family burial place, and to provide a suitable mausoleum, of which, however, in 1784, no trace was to be found. This nobleman dying s. p. 12 September, 1694, the titles went into ABEYANCE between his sisters, and has since remained DORMANT.

The following are the particulars of the descendants of the Ladies Elizabeth and Mary Graham, co-heirs of the Earldoms:

She had a charter, as sole issue of her father, 3 July, 1777, and was, 26 February, 1785, served nearest and lawful eldest heir portioner in general of William, Earl of Airth and Menteith, &c. Her husband assumed the additional surname of ALLARDICE on his marriage; and by him, who was b. 1731-2, and d. 8 April, 1797, she had issue, eight children,

Robert (1st), d. 8 April, 1797.

ROBERT (2nd), of whom presently.

James, 2nd son, in 1800, b. 3 July, 1784; d. unm. at Madras, 3 March, 1804.

David-Stuart, 3rd and youngest son in 1800, b. 3 March, 1787; d. unm. after 1793.

Anne, b. 13 September, 1777; d. 1781.

Une-Cameron, b. 13 September, 1778; m. 25 July, 1802, John Innes, Esq., of Cowie, Kincardineshire, and by him, who d. in April, 1832, had issue (see INNES, of Raemoir House, in BURKE's Landed Gentry).

MARGARET, b. 14 October, 1780; m. in 1809, HUDSON GURNEY, Esq., of Keswick, co. Norfolk, M.P. (see Landed Gentry), and d. 16 December, 1855, her husband surviving to November, 1864.

Mary, twin with Margaret, d. in June, 1799.

Rodney, a dau., b. 29 April, 1782, living 1793.

Mrs. Barclay-Allardice was in September, 1793, divorced from her husband, and m. 5 August, 1796, at Christ Church, Surrey, John Nudd, of that parish. She d. in June, 1833, and was buried at Sprowston, in Norfolk. The eventual eldest son of the former marriage,

ROBERT BARCLAY-ALLARDICE, Esq., of Allardice and Urie, b. 25 August, 1779; was served heir-male to his father, 17 December, 1799, and to his mother, 9 November, 1833, and had a charter of the Barony of Allardice, &c., 2 June, 1800. He m. in 1819, Mary Dalgarno. Mr. Barclay-Allardice claimed in 1839 the Earldom of Airth, and his claim was investigated by the House of Lords. For full particulars refer to the minutes of evidence. He styled himself sole heir of the body of Prince David, son of ROBERT II., King of Scotland. His only child,

MARGARET BARCLAY-ALLARDICE, m. 2 April, 1840, Samuel Ritchie, and had a son and heir,

ROBERT BARCLAY-ALLARDICE, Esq., of Urie and Allardice, b. 19 May, 1841, s. his grandfather in 1854, and d. unm. in that year.

LINE OF LADY ELIZABETH GRAHAM.

LADY ELIZABETH GRAHAM, (see above) m. in 1663 (contract dated 19 December), her relative, Sir William Graham, of Gartmore, co. Perth, who was created a Baronet, 28 June, 1665. She d. 1672, having had issue by him, who d. in December, 1684, an only son, Sir John Graham, of Gartmore, 2nd and last baronet, who was executor of his uncle the last earl, he was cognosed insane in 1696, and d. unm. 12 July, 1708 (see GRAHAM, of Gartmore, in BURKE's Landed Gentry); and a dau., and eventual sole heiress,

MARY GRAHAM, who m. James Hodge, Esq., of Gladsmuir, advocate, and was served heir of her uncle, Sir John Graham,

4 November, 1708. This lady had an only child and heir, whose birth she did not survive more than a year. This dau.,

MARY HODGE, heiress of Gartmore, was b. 1687. She m. at the age of fourteen, 28 February, 1701, her mother's cousin, William Graham, of Dumbarton, writer, younger son of Walter Graham, of Gallingad, brother of Sir William, the 1st baronet. She sold Gartmore to her cousin, Robert Graham, in 1708, for 10,000 marks Scots. She d. before 1740, and her husband between that and 1742. They had issue,

i. James, living in 1708, d. s. p. before 1740.

ii. WILLIAM, b. 1720. He was described as "only heir-male now existing" in 1740, and of full age in 1741, and was in 1744 a student of medicine, at Edinburgh. He assumed the title of Earl of Menteith, and voted as such at the general election of Scottish peers of parliament, from 12 October, 1744, to 5 May, 1761, after which he was ordered by the House of Lords, on a report from the committee of privileges (before which he neglected to appear), not to take upon himself the title until he should substantiate his claims in due course of law. He d. unm. 30 June, 1783, while passing through the parish of Bonhill, by the road side, and was buried there. Sir William Scott, of Ancrum, Bart., was in 1830, served heir-male to this William Graham, in right of his mother, Harriet, dau. of William Graham, Esq., of Gartmore, and in 1839, he claimed this peerage before the House of Lords.

i. Grizel, eldest dau., living 1742-6, d. unm. 12 June, 1774.

ii. MARY, 2nd dau., of whom presently.

iii. Margaret, youngest dau., unm. in 1726; m. John Colquhoun, of the family of Luss, and d. s. p. a widow, 18 or 19 February, 1782.

The eventual heir,

MARY GRAHAM, m. before 1741, 1st, John Bogle, of Glasgow, an officer of excise, at Edinburgh, head of a respectable old family, Lairds of Hutchiston, near Glasgow, whose pedigree is given in the minutes of evidence. His father was seated at Bogles Hole, near Glasgow. Mrs. Bogle d. 20 January, 1779, and was buried at Dumfries. Her husband, who was living at Kirkcudbright, from 1778 till 1 May, 1787, d. an aged man in the latter year, intestate, having had issue, JOHN, only son, only brother of Mary, of whom presently.

Mary, living 1776, d. unm. 12 November, 1821. She lived at Edinburgh, and always insisted on being called "Lady Mary Bogle," or "Lady Grahame Bogle." She was in 1805 served heir of line of her great-grandfather Sir William Graham, of Gartmore, as only surviving child, and so considered herself his only existing descendant in 1819. Calls herself her brother's heir-at-law, and says no one else can have any claim but herself, being the last of her family.

Grizell, living 1776, lately deceased, unm. 1802. She was the only sister of Mary.

The only son,

JOHN BOGLE was a miniature portrait painter of Edinburgh, and afterwards (from 1772), of Panton-square, London. He had a large collection of evidences on this peerage claim, which passed into the hands of Deuchar, the genealogist. He m. 7 August, 1769, May, only dau. of John Wilson, of Spango, Nithsdale, and d. at Edinburgh, about 1803, leaving no issue. His will, dated 9 December, 1786, was proved 28 July, 1803, in London, by his widow and sole executrix, who survived him till about 1823.

From the foregoing pedigree, founded on the evidence submitted to the House of Lords by Mr. Barclay-Allardice, it would appear that the line of Lady Elizabeth Graham is EXTINCT. But the House of Lords, not being satisfied on that point made no decision. The Lord Advocate argued that the Earldom of Airth being attached to the Earldom of Menteith, which was granted to heirs male, could not descend to heirs female, but this question was not decided. We accordingly subjoin, as fully as the information obtained will admit of, the pedigree of another claimant, viz.:

LINE OF JAMES-BOGLE-DENTON-GRAHAM MATTHEWS, Esq.

JOHN BOGLE, one of the family of Bogles Hole (originally "Hold"), near Glasgow, m. MARY GRAHAM, a sister or dau. of the last Earl of Menteith, and during the Rebellion of 1715, having been obliged to leave Scotland on account of his religious opinions, settled in or near Strabane, in the co. Tyrone, Ireland. He acquired a small property called Ballycommon, or Balwaggle, half a mile from Strabane, and d. there. The tombstone of himself and his wife is in the churchyard of Strabane. They had issue, besides Joseph, James (whose son James, had an only dau., m. a Mr. Delap, and had a son, James-Bogle Delap), and another, an eldest son,

SAMUEL BOGLE, who m. Elizabeth Graham (she had a brother, James, whom she survived), and had issue,

ANDREW, his heir

Samuel, who lived near Strabane, took possession of the land, and disposed of it by lottery, when, it is said, his nephew, Mr. Bogle-French won it. Samuel Bogle m., but d. s. p. Mark, d. young.

James, a posthumous child, of Jamaica and of London, m. Miss French, an heiress, and took her name in addition to his own. They had Nathaniel, who m. and had issue; and Mary, Mrs. Smith, mother of Horace Smith (joint author of "Rejected Addresses").

A dau., m. Mr. Baird, and had a dau., Mrs. Moffat, living near Strabane in 1809, and during sixty years previously. Agnes, m. Thomas, eldest son of William Buchanan, Esq., of Hordoch, and had issue.

Samuel Bogle d. suddenly, intestate, and his widow, who m. a Mr. Somerville, continued to reside near Strabane, and she built a house on the estate. The eldest son,

ANDREW BOGLE, M.D., went out to Jamaica, with Mr. Bogle-French, and settled at Black River. He m. Eleanor, dau. of — Richardson, of Killeleagh, co. Down, and d. in Jamaica leaving (with a dau., m. to Mr. McConnell, of Donegall-place, Belfast, and had issue), an only son,

JAMES-ANDREW BOGLE, b. in Edinburgh, m. at St. Andrew's, Newcastle-upon-Tyne, about 1769, Mary Skiddaw, and d. at Lambeth, in April, 1809, aged sixty-three, having had issue, (besides an only son, William, who d. at nine or twelve) an only dau.,

MARY-ELEANOR BOGLE, b. at Whitehaven, Cumberland, who m. at Isleworth, Middlesex, January, 1796, Nicholas Donni-thorne Bishop, Esq., attorney-at-law, of Crossdeep Lodge, Twickenham, co. Middlesex, and d. at Richmond, Surrey, on Christmas-day, 1846, aged seventy-four, leaving by him, who d. 26 December, 1840 (besides an only son, who d. young), an only dau.,

MARY-ELEANOR BISHOP, b. in Essex-street, London, 1 January, 1797; m. in 1824, Richard-Hunt Matthews, Esq., H.E.I.C.S., of Buxar, East Indies, and afterwards of Crossdeep Lodge, Twickenham, and by him (who d. in 1840) she had issue, an only dau., Mary-Eleanor-Graham, and an only son, of whom presently. Mrs. Matthews is possessed of the ancient steel seal of the Earl of Monteith, with the coat of arms, quartering the royal arms of Scotland. She has likewise a large collection of papers on this peerage claim. Her only son, JAMES-BOGLE-DENTON-GRAHAM MATTHEWS, Esq., b. 1 July, 1830; m. at Hanworth, Middlesex, 11 April, 1855, Rosa-Robinson, dau. of W. Reed, Esq., and has a son, ALFRED-GRAHAM, b. 1856, and other issue. This gentleman's grandfather and grandmother petitioned the House of Lords, in 1839, on their own and his behalf, as entitled to the Airth peerage, in opposition to the claim of Mr. Barclay-Allardice, whereupon the House made no decision, and the title has since remained DORMANT.

GRANDISON—BARON GRANDISON.

By Writ of Summons, dated 21 September, 1299.

Lineage.

In the 55th HENRY III.,

OTHO DE GRANDISON attended Prince Edward into the Holy Land; and after that prince ascended the throne as EDWARD I., he was constituted governor of the islands of Guernsey and Jersey. In this reign he appears to have been a person of great note, and to have held some high political employment, amongst others that of secretary to the king. He was knighted, and deputed ambassador to Rome (17th EDWARD I.), when he had the king's letters to the merchants of Luca, to supply him with money there, by bills of exchange. He had previously obtained grants from the crown of the town of Tipperary, and other extensive possessions in Ireland, all which he transferred, with the sanction of the king, to his brother, William de Grandison. In the 24th of the same reign Sir Otho was joined in commission with the bishop of Ely and others, to treat of peace with the French; and he was summoned to parliament, as a baron, 21 September, 1299. The period of his lordship's death is not ascertained, but in the 12th EDWARD II., all those castles, manors, and lands, which he held in Ireland for life, were given, by the king, to Prince Edward, his eldest son, and to his heirs, Kings of England. He d. s. p., when the barony of Grandison became EXTINCT.

GRANDISON--BARONS GRANDISON.

By Writ of Summons, dated 6 February, 1299.

Lineage.

WILLIAM DE GRANDISON (younger brother of Sir Otho de Grandison, secretary to King EDWARD I., and afterwards Lord Grandison), being originally a menial servant to Edmund, Earl of Lancaster, obtained from that prince, in consideration of his own faithful services, and the services of his ancestors, a grant of the manors of Radley and Menstreworth, co. Gloucester. In the 20th EDWARD I., he procured license to make a castle of his house at Asperton, co. Hereford, and in two years afterwards he was in the expedition made into Gascony, where he continued for some time, and while so engaged was summoned to parliament as a baron. He was afterwards engaged in the Scottish wars. His lordship m. Sibilla, youngest dau. and co-heiress of Sir John de Tregoz, and upon partition of the lands of that inheritance, acquired the manors of Burnham, co. Somerset, and Eton, in Herefordshire. He had issue by this lady, three sons and a dau., viz.,

I. PETER, his successor.

II. John, bishop of Exeter.

III. Otho, a distinguished soldier in the reigns of EDWARD II. and EDWARD III., m. Beatrix, dau. and co-heir of Nicholas Malmains, and dying in 1364, had issue,

THOMAS, who s. his uncle, the bishop of Exeter, in the barony of Grandison.

Elizabeth, d. unm.

I. Mabella, m. Sir John Patteshul.

II. Katherine, m. to William de Montacute, Earl of Salisbury.

III. Agnes, m. to Sir John de Northwode, and had a son and heir, Roger de Northwode, who was father of John Northwode, aged thirty in 1376.

His lordship d. before 1335, and was s. by his eldest son,

PETER DE GRANDISON, 2nd baron, summoned to parliament from 23 April, 1337, to 28 March, 1349. This nobleman being implicated in the insurrection of Thomas, Earl of Lancaster, 15th EDWARD II., was obliged to pay 300 marks fine for his pardon. He was afterwards in the wars of France, and attained the rank of banneret. His lordship m. Blanch, one of the daus. of Roger de Mortimer, Earl of March, but had no issue. He d. in 1358, and was s. by his brother,

JOHN DE GRANDISON, bishop of Exeter, 3rd baron, but never summoned to parliament as Lord Grandison, having already a seat in his episcopal dignity. Of this prelate it is related, that he got the wealth of all the clergy in his diocese into his own hands, by inducing them to leave him everything they possessed at their death, for the purpose of laying the same out in charitable uses, in endowing churches, and building hospitals and colleges; trusts which he is said, however, very piously to have performed. He d. in 1369, and was s. by his nephew,

SIR THOMAS GRANDISON, as 4th Baron Grandison, who d. s. p. in the 49th EDWARD III., and the barony is now vested in the representatives of his lordship's aunts and co-heirs.

The late Sir Henry Paston Bedingfeld, having claimed to be one of the co-heirs of the Barony of Grandison, the case was referred by Her Majesty to the House of Lords, and after several hearings, the Committee for Privileges reported, "that it is the opinion of this Committee, that the Barony of Grandison was created in the person of Sir William Grandison, by writ of summons to and sitting in parliament in the reign of King EDWARD the First, and fell into abeyance on the death of Thomas, Lord Grandison, grandson of the said William, Lord Grandison, in the 46th year of the reign of King Edward the Third, between Mabella, who married Sir John Patteshul, Katherine, who married the Earl of Salisbury, and Agnes, who married Sir John Northwode, the three daughters and co-heirs of the said William Lord Grandison, and the heirs of their respective bodies; and that the petitioner, Sir Henry Paston Bedingfeld, has proved his descent as sole heir of the body of Katherine Tuddenham, the second of the four daughters and co-heirs of the said Mabella; and that the Duke of Richmond, Sir John Gordon Sinclair, Baronet, the Duke of Manchester, such of the following five daughters of the late Louisa, Marchioness Cornwallis, namely, Jane Lady Braybrooke, Jemima Countess of St. Germans, the Lady Mary, wife of Charles Ross, Esquire, the Lady Louisa Cornwallis, and the Lady Elizabeth Cornwallis, as are now living, and the heirs of the bodies (if any) of such of them as are deceased, and Lord Wriothlesley Russell, are the co-heirs of the body of Sibella, the eldest daughter and co-heir of the said Mabella; and that the heirs of the body of Elizabeth Neville, who married Sir Richard Strangways, and the heirs of the body of Alice Neville, who married Sir John Conyers, became the co-heirs of the body of Matilda, the third daughter and co-heir of the said Mabella; and the descendants of the said Elizabeth have not been traced beyond the seventeenth century; and that the Duke of Leeds is the heir of the body of the said Dame Alice Conyers; and that descendants from Alice, the fourth daughter and co-heir of the said Mabella, who married Sir Thomas Wake, have been traced into the sixteenth century, and no further; and that the Most Honorable Henry Marquess of Hastings, William Lowndes of Chesham, Esquire, and William Selby Lowndes of Whaddon, Esquire, are the co-heirs of the body of the said Katherine Countess of Salisbury; and that Sir Anchtel Ashburnham, Baronet, is the heir of the body of Agnes, who married Sir John Northwode; and that the said barony is now in abeyance between the following persons; namely,

The petitioner, Sir Henry Paston Bedingfield.

The Duke of Richmond,

Sir John Gordon Sinclair,

The Duke of Manchester,

Such of the aforesaid daughters of the late Marchioness Cornwallis as are living,

The heirs of the bodies of such of the said daughters as are deceased (viz., Catherine-Elizabeth, and Mary-Isabella, daus. and co-heirs of Richard-Cornwallis, Lord Braybrooke; and William, Lord Eliot, son of Jemima, Countess of St. Germans).

The Lord Wriothensley Russell,

The Duke of Leeds,

Henry Marquess of Hastings,

William Lowndes, Esq.,

William Selby Lowndes, Esq.,

Sir Anchtel Ashburnham, Bart., and

The heirs (if any) of the bodies of the said Elizabeth Strangways and Alice Wake."

GRANVILLE—EARLS OF BATH.

By Letters Patent, dated 20 April, 1661.

Lineage.

This noble family claimed descent from Rollo, 1st Duke of Normandy, and its founder in England, ROBERT FITZ-HAMON, was nephew of King WILLIAM THE CONQUEROR, and one of his companions in arms. (See BURKE'S Landed Gentry.) The celebrated

SIR BEVIL GRANVILLE, Knt., of Stow and Bideford, one of the boldest and most successful of the cavalier leaders, the "Bayard" of England, was b. 23 March, 1595. He was educated at Exeter College, Oxford, and made so rapid a progress in learning, that the degree of B.A. was conferred on him at the age of 17. He represented the co. of Cornwall in parliament, 18th JAMES I., 1620 to 1623; again, in the reign of CHARLES I., was member for Launceston, 1625, and for several succeeding parliaments. In 1638, he raised, at his own expense, a troop of horse, with which he accompanied the king in his first expedition against the Scottish rebels, and on that occasion received the honour of knighthood. In 1642, on the first outbreaking of the civil war, he joined the royal standard, and marching into Cornwall, rescued that whole county from the parliament, attacking the partizans of the Commons who had risen in great numbers in the west, and routed them at Bodmin, Launceston, and Stratton. His last and most brilliant action was at Lansdowne hill, near Bath, where he fell in the arms of victory, on 5 July, 1643.* "On the king's part," says Clarendon, in detailing this engagement, "there were more officers and gentlemen of quality slain than common men, and more hurt than slain. That which would have clouded any victory, and made the loss of others less spoken of, was the death of Sir Bevil Granville. He was, indeed, an excellent person, whose activity, interest, and reputation, was the foundation of what had been done in Cornwall; and his temper and affection so public, that no accident which happened could make any impression on him, and his example kept others from taking anything ill, or at least seeming to do so. In a word, a brighter courage and a gentler disposition were never married together to make the most cheerful and innocent conversation." Sir Bevil m. Grace, dau. of Sir George Smythe, of Matford in Heavitree, near Exeter, Knt., and had issue, seven sons and six daus., of whom survived and married,

I. JOHN, b. 1628, of whom presently.

II. BERNARD, b. 1630, father of GEORGE GRANVILLE, LORD LANSDOWNE.

III. DENNIS, b. 1637, dean of Durham, rector of Easington and Elwycke, and chaplain in ordinary to CHARLES II. He m. Ann, 4th dau. of John Cosyn, lord bishop of Durham, but d. without issue.

I. Elizabeth, b. 1621; m. to Sir Peter Prideaux, of Netherton, co. Devon.

II. Grace, b. 1624; m. to Colonel Robert Fortescue, of Fileigh.

III. Bridget, b. 1629; m. 1st, to Sir Simon Leach; and 2ndly, to Sir Thomas Higgon.

IV. Joane, b. 1635; m. to Colonel Richard Thornhill

The eldest surviving son of Sir Bevil,

JOHN GRANVILLE, Esq., who attended CHARLES II. in all his wanderings abroad, was only sixteen years old when he took the command of his father's regiment, and was in all the considerable battles of the west of England, as well as the battle of Newbury, where he was severely wounded. Sir John was chosen negotiator and messenger from the king, to deliver to both Houses of Parliament the king's letters from Breda, and received their acknowledgments for his services in that transaction. Thus pointed out to his country as a principal instrument of the Restoration, he was further rewarded with such honours as his services and those of his family might justly claim. He was, therefore, on the restoration of CHARLES II., created EARL OF BATH, Viscount Lansdowne, and Baron Granville, of Bideford and Kilkhampton; also permitting him to use the titles of Earl of Corboile, Thorigny, and Granville (as his ancestors had done), to him and his posterity. He m. Jane, dau. of Sir Peter Wyche, and dying in 1701, left issue,

I. CHARLES, 2nd Earl of Bath.

II. John, created, by Queen ANNE, 9 March, 1702, BARON GRANVILLE, of Pothoridge, co. Devon, m. Rebecca, dau. of Sir John Child, of Wanstead, in Essex, and widow of Charles, Marquess of Worcester, but had no issue. His lordship was lord warden of the Stanneries. He d. in 1707, when the barony became EXTINCT.

I. Jane, m. to Sir William-Leveson Gower, ancestor of the Duke of Sutherland.

II. Catherine, m. to Craven Peyton, warden of the Mint.

III. Grace, m. to Sir Geo. Carteret, afterwards Lord Carteret, and had issue. Lady Carteret surviving her husband, was herself elevated to the peerage as Countess Granville. Her ladyship's grand-daughter, the Lady Louisa Carteret, m. Thomas Thynne, Viscount Weymouth, and was grandmother of Thomas, Marquess of Bath, and of George, Lord Carteret.

His lordship d. in August, 1701, and was s. by his eldest son,

CHARLES GRANVILLE, 2nd Earl of Bath, who had been summoned to parliament in the lifetime of his father, anno 1689, and had been created a count of the Roman empire by the Emperor LEOPOLD, for his eminent services in the war of Hungary, where he was a volunteer in the army that defeated the Turks before Vienna, in 1683, and was the same year at the taking of Gran. His lordship m. 1st, Lady Martha Osborne, dau. of Thomas, 1st Duke of Leeds, by whom he had no surviving issue. He m. 2ndly, Isabella, dau. of Henry de Nassau, Velt Marshal Auverquerque, commander of the Dutch forces under the Duke of Marlborough, and had an only child,

WILLIAM-HENRY, his successor.

The earl d. in twelve days after his father, being killed by the accidental discharge of his own pistol, at the time he was preparing for the interment of that nobleman. He was s. by his son,

WILLIAM-HENRY GRANVILLE, 3rd Earl of Bath, b. 30 January, 1691-2, but d. ann., of the smallpox, in May, 1711; when the Earldom of Bath and inferior dignities became EXTINCT, while his estates passed to his lordship's aunts (revert to issue of John, 1st earl) as co-heiresses.

Arms—Gu., three suffices or organ rests, or.

* A monument was afterwards erected to him on the spot where he fell, by his grandson, George Granville, Lord Lansdowne; and was repaired, and an iron railing placed round it, by his great-great-grandson, Court Granville, in 1827.

GRANVILLE—BARON LANSDOWNE, OF BIDDEFORD, CO. DEVON.

By Letters Patent, dated 1 June, 1712.

Lineage.

BERNARD GRANVILLE, 2nd surviving son of the famous Sir Bevil Granville, of Stow, by Grace Smythe, his wife, was very young at his father's decease, and made his escape from school to join his brother John in defence of the Scilly islands, besieged by Admiral Blake, to which place he conveyed large reinforcements. He was ever after very active in the service of CHARLES II. during his exile: "When all was concluded for his Majesty's restoration, and his brother Sir John Granville had received the thanks of both houses of parliament for the letters he brought, General Monk thought it proper to send his last despatches by one he could trust, which was Bernard Granville, his first cousin,* who was to inform his Majesty that everything was ready for his reception." He was gentleman of the bedchamber to the Duke of Gloucester during his exile, and after the Restoration, gentleman of the horse and groom of the bedchamber to CHARLES II. He was M.P. for Lostwithiel the 1st of CHARLES II., and served for Launceston, Saltash, and Bodmin, in all the parliaments in that reign; also for Plymouth 1st JAMES II.; also for Saltash again in the reign of WILLIAM till the day of his death. He m. Anne, only dau. and heir of Cuthbert Morley, Esq., of Haunby, co. York, and dying in 1701, was buried at Lambeth, leaving issue,

III. Bernard, of Buckland, co. Gloucester, colonel by commission from Queen ANNE, lieutenant-governor of Hull, M.P. for the boroughs of Camelford and Fowey. He m. Mary, dau. of Sir Martin Wescombe, Bart., consul at Cadiz, who, dying in 1747, was buried at Gloucester Cathedral. He d. in 1723, leaving issue two sons and two daus., viz.,

1 Bernard, his heir, who purchased from the Fleetwoods, the estate of Calwich Abbey, in Staffordshire. He d. unm. 1778, being the last male heir of this ancient family, bequeathing his name and estates to his sister Anne's son, JOHN D'EWES, of whom presently.

2 Bevil, in holy orders, m. Mary-Anne, dau. of Richard Rose, Esq., d. s. p.

1 Mary, b. 1700, m. 1st, Alexander Pendarves, Esq., of Roscrow, in Cornwall; and 2ndly, to the Very Rev. Patrick Delany, D.D., dean of Down, but d. s. p. 1788. This lady,† so justly celebrated for her great literary acquirements, was much esteemed by King GEORGE III., and Queen CHARLOTTE, and resided constantly with their Majesties both at Kew and Windsor.

2 Anne, b. 1707; m. at Gloucester, 1740, John D'Ewes, Esq., of Wellesbourne, co. of Warwick, and had issue: the only dau., Mary, m. John Port, Esq., of Ilam, and was grandmother of Lady Llanover; the 3rd son, the Rev. JOHN D'EWES, took the name and arms of GRANVILLE, on succeeding to his uncle Bernard Granville's estates, but d. without surviving issue in 1826, when the property devolved upon his nephew (the son of his elder brother, Bernard D'Ewes), COURT GRANVILLE, Esq., father of the present BERNARD GRANVILLE, Esq., of Wellesbourne Hall, co. Warwick. (See Landed Gentry.)

I. Anne, m. Sir John Stanley, Bart. of Grangegormam
II. Elizabeth, d. unm.; maid of honour.

The 2nd son,

GEORGE GRANVILLE, Esq., was elevated to the peerage, on 1 January, 1712, as BARON LANSDOWNE, of Biddeford, co. Devon. His lordship m. Lady Mary Villiers, dau. of Edward, Earl of Jersey, and had issue,

Anne, d. unm.

Mary, m. to William Graham, Esq., of Platten, near Drogheda.
Grace, m. to Thomas Foley, Esq., of Stoke, co. Hereford, who was created Baron Foley, of Kidderminster, in 1776.

Elizabeth, d. unm.

Lord Lansdowne was secretary-at-war, and comptroller and treasurer of the household, in the reign of Queen ANNE. He d. 1734, when the Barony of Lansdowne became EXTINCT, and his estates devolved on his dau. as co-heirs.

Arms—Same as those of Granville, Earls of Bath.

* Bernard Granville's mother, and George Monk's mother, were sisters, daus. of Sir George Smythe.

By Writ of Summons, dated 29 December, 1299.

Lineage.

ROGER DE GRENDON, living temp. King STEPHEN, was the first who adopted this surname. He had with other issue,

RICHARD, his heir.

Walchelina, of Bromcote, whose son, William de Bromcote, was father of William de Grendon, lord of Bromcote, whose son and heir Robert de Grendon, living 22nd EDWARD I., had a son, Thomas de Grendon, 18th EDWARD II., who was father of Thomas de Grendon, who left an only dau. and heir, Margaret, who m. 1st,—Charnels, and 2ndly, Thomas Malory.

The eldest son,

RICHARD DE GRENDON, had by Margaret his wife, a son and heir,

SIR ROBERT DE GRENDON, Knt., who m. Avicia, dau. (and in her issue heir) of William de Brae, and had two sons,

ROBERT and Roger. The former,

SIR ROBERT DE GRENDON, Knt., as heir to his maternal grandfather, became possessed of Shenston, a fair lordship in Staffordshire. He was a justice of assize, and in the 34th HENRY III. was constituted sheriff of the cos. Stafford and Salop, and also governor of the castles of Salop, Bruges, and Ellesmere. He contracted matrimony with one Joane le Botiller, but does not seem to have received her as his wife, as appears by a sentence of the spiritual court of Lichfield: he was quit of her and m. Emma, dau. of William Bassett, of Sapcote, and by her had issue,

John, living 55th HENRY II., who had issue, Henry; Thomas; Nicolas; Robert; and Ranulph

RALPH, of whom we treat.

Alicia, m. to John de Clinton.

The 2nd son was

SIR RALPH DE GRENDON, Knt., who in the 26th EDWARD I., had a summons to be at Carlisle on Whitsun eve (with other sundry great men of the time) well furnished with horse and arms to march against the Scots. Three years after he received another command to attend the king at Berwick to march into Scotland. By Johanna, his 1st wife, he had a son and successor, RALPH (Sir), and by his 2nd, A. de Clinton, had three daus., Johanna, m. to Sir Roger Chetwind; Alicia, m. to Sir Philip Chetwind, and was mother of Sir William Chetwind, of Ingestre; and Margaret, m. to John de Freford. The son and heir,

SIR RALPH DE GRENDON, d. 5th EDWARD III., leaving a son ROBERT, his heir; and a dau., Joane, m. to John Rochford, Esq., and was mother of Sir Ralph Rochford, who had a dau. and heir Margery. The son, ROBERT GRENDON, 2nd baron. This being a person of weak intellect, Sir Roger de Chetwind, and Sir Philip de Chetwind, Knts., with John de Freford, who had m. his aunts, Joane, Alice, and Margaret Grendon, alleging that A. de Clinton, 2nd wife of old Sir Ralph de Grendon, father of the late baron, had a joint estate with her husband in all their lands, challenged the whole inheritance, and accordingly entered upon the land; whereupon ROBERT sought the protection of Henry Duke of Lancaster, yielding unto his grace the entire manor of Shenston, near Lichfield, co. Stafford, conditionally, that he would protect him in the possession of Grendon, and certain other lands in other places. In consequence of which arrangements, his uncles and aunts relinquished their pretended claim. He d. about the 22nd EDWARD III., when those lands descended to his nephew, Sir Ralph Rochford, Knt., whereupon Sir Ralph entailed them upon the issue of his own body, by Joane, his wife, dau. of Sir Hugh Meynil, with remainder to his three sisters successively, and then to Sir Richard Stafford, Knt., and his heirs. According to which settlement the possession continued for divers years, until Sir Ralph Rochford's death, when Joane, his widow, marrying 2ndly, Hugh de Ashby, made an agreement with Sir William Chetwynd, Knt. (son and heir of Sir Philip), by which Grendon at length came into the possession of the Chetwynds, and is now held by Sir George Chetwynd, Bart. The barony of Grendon, which fell into ABERNACE amongst the Rochfords, so continues with their representatives, if such exist.

GRENVILLE—BARON GRENVILLE.

By Letters Patent, dated 25 November, 1790.

Lineage.

WILLIAM-WYNDHAM GRENVILLE, D.C.L., F.S.A., and F.R.S. of Wotton-under-Bernwood, co. Bucks, 2nd son of the Right Hon. George Grenville, by Elizabeth, his wife, dau. of Sir William Wyndham, Bart., b. 25 October, 1759, having attained very high reputation as an orator and statesman, and having filled some of the most important ministerial offices during the reign of GEORGE III., was elevated to the peerage 25 November, 1790, by the title of BARON GRENVILLE. Lord Grenville was auditor of the Exchequer, chancellor of the university of Oxford, an elder brother of the Trinity House, one of the governors of the Charter House, and high steward of Bristol. His lordship m. 18 July, 1792, the Hon. Anne Pitt, only dau. of Thomas, 1st Lord Camelford, and sister and sole heiress of Thomas, 2nd and last lord; but d. s. p. 13 January, 1834, when his title became EXTINCT. His widow survived until 13 June, 1864. At her Ladyship's decease, her large estates, in accordance with the wish of her husband, devolved by her will on the Hon. George Fortescue.

Arms—Vert, on a cross, arg., five torteaux.

GRENVILLE—BARON GLASTONBURY.

By Letters Patent, dated 20 October, 1797.

Lineage.

JAMES GRENVILLE, Esq., (son of the Right Hon. James Grenville, uncle to George, 1st Marquess of Buckingham, by Mary, dau. and heiress of James Smyth, Esq., of Harden, co. Herts.) having been sworn of his majesty's most honourable privy council, and constituted one of the lords of the Treasury in 1782, was elevated to the peerage 20 October, 1797, as Baron Glastonbury, of Butley, co. Somerset, with remainder to his brother, General Grenville, who predeceased him in 1823, unm. His lordship d. s. p. in 1826, when the barony of Glastonbury became EXTINCT.

Arms—Vert, on a cross, arg., five torteaux.

GRESLEY—BARON GRESLEY.

By Writ of Summons, dated 10 March, 1308.

Lineage.

In the year 1134,

ROBERT DE GRESLEY, of Manchester, co. Lancaster, having a large proportion of marsh land, at Swineshed, in Lincolnshire, founded an abbey of Cistercian monks there. To this Robert s. his son,

ALBERT DE GRESLEY, who m. 1st, Agnes, dau. of Nigel, Baron of Halton, and 2ndly, a dau. of Thomas Basset. He d. about the year 1185, and was s. by his son,

ROBERT DE GRESLEY, who in the 6th RICHARD I., being then of full age, attended that monarch in the expedition made into Normandy; but taking part with the barons towards the close of King John's reign, his lands were all seized by the crown. Making his peace, however, in the 2nd HENRY III., he had restitution of those lands, which lay in the cos. Oxford, Rutland, Lincolnshire, Lancashire, Norfolk, and Suffolk. He m. a dau. of Henry de Longchamp (brother of William de Longchamp, chancellor to King RICHARD I.), and dying in 1230, was s. by his son,

THOMAS DE GRESLEY, who, in the 26th HENRY III., had a military summons to march into France, but paid 100 marks, besides his ordinary scutage, to be freed from the journey. In the 42nd of the same reign, he had another military summons to march against the Welsh, and the next year he was constituted warden of the king's forest, south of Trent. He d. about the year 1281, and was s. by his son,

THOMAS DE GRESLEY, who, in the 8th EDWARD I., having m. Hawyse, one of the daus. and co-heirs of John de Burgh, son of Hubert, Earl of Kent, had livery of her share of her father's lands: namely, Waukerley, Ringeston, and Porteslade. He d. in 1283, and was s. by his son,

THOMAS DE GRESLEY, who, in the 34th EDWARD I., was made a knight of the Bath, and was summoned to parliament as a baron, from the 1st to the 4th EDWARD II., inclusive. His lordship d. s. p. 1347, when the barony of Gresley became EXTINCT, but his great estates devolved upon his only sister and heiress, JOANE DE GRESLEY, who m. John, son of Roger de la Waire, and brought her noble inheritance into that family.

GREY—BARONS GREY OF WILTON, CO. HEREFORD.

By Writ of Summons, dated 23 June, 1295.

Lineage.

SIR JOHN DE GREY, 2nd son of Henry de Grey, of Thurrock, co. Essex (see GREY, of CODNOR), served the office of sheriff for the cos. Buckingham and Bedford, in the 23rd HENRY III., and had summons to attend the king, in the 26th of the same reign, with horse and arms, upon the expedition then made into Flanders. "In the 35th HENRY III.," says Dugdale, "the Lady Joane Peyvre, widow of Pauline Pevere (a great man in that age), being possessed of all her husband's estate, sold to this John, the marriage of her son, for 800 marks, he undertaking to discharge her of any fine to the king; whereupon he married him to his own daughter; and when this Joane heard that the king had given her in marriage (as she was a widow) to one Stephen de Salinea, an alien, she, by the advice of her friends (being then in London), matched herself to this John de Grey, which being told to the king, he grew much offended, but at length accepted of a fine of 500 marks from him for that transgression." In the 37th HENRY III., Sir John de Grey was made governor of Northampton Castle, and the next year constituted steward of all Gascony, but in three years afterwards, "being an aged knight, much esteemed for his civility and valour, as also chief of the king's council," yet weary of the vanities of the court, he withdrew from public life. In the very next year, however, we find him nominated to the governorship of Shrewsbury Castle, and soon after appointed constable of that of Dover. In the 47th HENRY III., he was sheriff of Herefordshire, and governor of Hereford Castle. The next year he had the custody of all the lands of Anker de Frescheville, in the cos. of Nottingham and Derby; and was one of those barons who undertook that the king should abide the arbitration of LEWIS, King of France, touching the misunderstanding with the barons. Remaining subsequently loyal to the king, he was appointed after the victory of Evesham, sheriff for the cos. of Nottingham and Derby. Sir John de Grey d. in 1265, and was s. by his son,

REGINALD DE GREY, b. 1287, who, in consideration of his faithful services to the king, obtained special livery of all his father's lands, although he had not then done his homage. In the 9th EDWARD I., he was made justice of Chester, and merited so well, that for his manifold services, he had part of the honour of Monmouth conferred upon him by the king; and in further recompense of his services obtained the castle of Ruthyn and other lands. In 22nd EDWARD I., he received command to be at Portsmouth, to attend the king in Gascony, then menaced by the French, and the next year was summoned to parliament as a baron. In two years afterwards, King EDWARD going into Flanders, committed the government of England in his absence to Prince Edward, and appointed Lord Grey the prince's assistant, and the same year his lordship was one of the sureties on the part of the king, for the observance of the charters; after this we find him in the wars of Scotland. His lordship m. Maud, dau. and heiress of William, Lord Fitz-Hugh, by Hawyse, dau. and heiress of Hugh de Longchamp, of Wilton Castle, co. Hereford, which came into the family of Grey by this marriage—by whom he had issue,

John, his successor.

Joane, m. to Ralph, Lord Basset.

The baron, who had been summoned to parliament, from 23 June, 1295, to 26 August, 1307, d. in 1308, and was s. by his son,

JOHN DE GREY, 2nd baron, summoned to parliament, from 9 June, 1309, to 18 September, 1322. In the 10th EDWARD II., he was constituted justice of North Wales, and governor of the castle of Caernarvon. His lordship m. 1st, Anne, dau. of William, Lord Ferrers, of Groby, and had issue,

HENRY, his successor.

He m. 2ndly, Maud, dau. of Ralph, Lord Bassett, and had,

Roger, who was summoned to Parliament, as Lord Grey de Ruthyn, in the 18th EDWARD II., a dignity enjoyed by his descendant, Barbara, the present Baroness Grey de Ruthyn and Marchioness of Hastings.

His lordship d. in 1323, seized, among other possessions, of the manor of Eaton Grey, in Wilts, and the castle of Ruthyn, in North Wales, and was s. by his elder son,

HENRY DE GREY, 3rd baron, summoned to parliament from 30 December, 1324, to 12 September, 1342. This nobleman being abroad in the French wars at the time of his father's death, and therefore not able to come to claim his inheritance so soon as he should, according to custom, have done, King EDWARD III., in the 1st year of his reign, in consideration of his eminent services remitted him a debt he owed to the exchequer. His lordship m. Anne, dau. and heiress of Ralph Bockley, by Elizabeth, his wife, dau. of William Clare (a younger son of Robert, Earl of Clare), and dying 1342, was s. by his only son,

REGINALD DE GREY, 4th baron, summoned to parliament from 24 February, 1343, to 20 November, 1360. His lordship m. Maud, dau. and co-heir of John Botetourt, of Weoly, and dying in 1370, was s. by his son,

SIR HENRY DE GREY, 5th baron, summoned to parliament as "Henry Grey, of Shirland," 1 December, 1376, and as "Henry Grey, of Wilton," from 4 August, 1377, to 20 November, 1394. This nobleman, during the lifetime of his father, was in the immediate retinue of John of Gaunt, in the expedition made by that prince into Gascony, in 40th EDWARD III. His lordship m. Elizabeth, dau. of Thomas, Lord Talbot, and had issue,

RICHARD, his successor.

Lord Grey d. in 1395, and was s. by his son,

RICHARD DE GREY, 6th baron, but never summoned to parliament. This nobleman, at the decease of his father, was but three years of age, so that nothing occurs regarding him, until the 3rd HENRY V., when he appears to have been in the retinue of Thomas, Earl of Dorset, uncle of the king, and governor of Normandy, in an expedition made thither. His lordship m. 1st, Blanche, dau. and co-heiress of Sir Philip de la Vacche, K.G., by whom he had a son,

REGINALD, his successor.

He m. 2ndly, Margaret, dau. of William, Lord Ferrers, of Groby, and had another son, William, aged nineteen, 20th HENRY VI.

His lordship d. in 1442, and was s. by his elder son,

SIR REGINALD DE GREY, 7th baron, summoned to parliament from 13 January, 1445, to 14 October, 1495, as "Reginaldo Grey de Wilton, chevalier." His lordship m. Tacina, sister of Owen Tudor, and dying in 1495, was s. by his son,

JOHN DE GREY, 8th baron, summoned to parliament as "Johanni Grey de Wilton," 16 January, 1497. In the 1st RICHARD III., this nobleman obtained a grant from the crown of the manor of Wilsamstede, co. Bedford; and in the 11th HENRY VII., he fought stoutly at Blackheath, against the Cornishmen, then in rebellion, under James, Lord Audley. In the next year he was in the wars of Scotland, under Giles, Lord D'Aubeny. His lordship m. Anne Grey, dau. of Edmund, Earl of Kent, lord-treasurer, and dying before 1506, was s. by his son,

SIR EDMUND DE GREY, 9th baron, summoned to parliament, as "Edmundo Grey de Wilton, Chl'r," 17 October, 1509. His lordship m. Florence, dau. and co-heir of Sir Ralph Hastings, 3rd brother of William, 1st Lord Hastings, by whom he had issue,

GEORGE,
THOMAS,
RICHARD,
WILLIAM,
Elizabeth, m. to John Brydges, 1st Lord Chandos.

His lordship d. in 1511, and was s. by his eldest son,

GEORGE DE GREY, 10th baron, who d. in minority, and was s. by his brother,

THOMAS DE GREY, 11th baron, at whose decease, also in minority, the title devolved upon his brother,

RICHARD GREY, 12th baron, likewise a minor at his decease, when the title devolved upon his brother,

SIR WILLIAM GREY, 13th baron, summoned to parliament from 3 November, 1529, to 5 November, 1558, as "Willielmo Grey de Wilton, Chl'r." This nobleman was one of the commanders in the expedition made into France in the 36th HENRY VIII., under John, Lord Russell; and in the 1st year of EDWARD VI., being then a field-marshal and captain-general of horse in the army sent into Scotland, he placed himself at its head, and in that position made the first charge against the enemy. In the next year his lordship fortified Haddington, fired Dalketh, and won the castle, spoiling much of the country around Edinburgh; after which, upon the commotions raised in England against the reformation, he marched, at the head of 1500 horse and foot, into Oxfordshire, and immediately restored tranquillity. His lordship was afterwards committed to the Tower as one of the partizans of the Protector Somerset, but was restored to his liberty after the decapitation of that unfortunate nobleman, and the next year made deputy of Calais, and governor of the castle of Guisnes, in Picardy. Lord Grey joined the Duke of Northumberland in his abortive effort to place Lady Jane Grey upon the throne; and it was to him the duke observed, in reference to the multitude of people that stood gazing at them when about to march from London, "Do you see, my Lord, what a confux of people here is drawn together to see us march?—and yet, of all this multitude, you hear not so much as one that wisheth us success."

As governor of the castle of Guisnes, his lordship, after a gallant defence of that fortress against the French, was obliged to surrender it, and became, with all his officers, prisoner to the Duke of Guise, then commander-in-chief of the French army, by whom he was transferred to Marshal Stozzy, and finally passing to Count Rouchefoucault, he continued in captivity until ransomed for 20,000 crowns, which considerably impaired his fortune. "How he came to be attainted," says Dugdale, "I have not seen; but in the 1st ELIZABETH he was restored in blood;" and the next year being then a knight of the Garter, he was constituted governor of Berwick-upon-Tweed, and warden of the east and middle marches towards Scotland. His lordship m. Mary Somerset, dau. of Charles, Earl of Worcester, and had issue,

ARTHUR, his successor.

William.

Honora, m. to Henry Denny, Esq.

Lord Grey d. in 1562, at Cheston, in Hertfordshire, at the house of his son-in-law, Denny; and it was remarked, "that on the same day died the greatest scholar and the greatest soldier of the nobility," namely Henry Manners, Earl of Rutland, and William Grey, Lord Grey, of Wilton. His lordship was s. by his elder son,

SIR ARTHUR GREY, 14th baron, summoned to parliament, as "Arthuro Grey de Wilton, Chl'r," from 30 September, 1566, to 19 February, 1593. This nobleman was lord lieutenant of Ireland in 1580, and acquired great fame by suppressing the rebellion of Desmond. He was subsequently one of the commissioners who sat in judgment on the unfortunate MARY, Queen of Scots, at Fotheringay, and he afterwards defended Secretary Davison from the accusation of delivering the warrant of execution without the knowledge of ELIZABETH, and, in a long speech, justified the foul murder of the Scottish princess. In the 31st ELIZABETH, he was one of the council of war, for the defence of the ports and havens against the celebrated Armada. His lordship m. 1st, Dorothy, natural dau. of Richard, Lord Zouch, of Harringworth, by whom he had an only dau.,

Elizabeth, m. to Sir Francis Goodwin, by whom she had a son,

Arthur Goodwin, who m. Jane, dau. of Sir Richard Wenman, of Thame, and had an only dau. and heiress, Jane, who m. Philip, Lord Wharton.

Lord Grey m. 2ndly, Jane-Sibylla, dau. of Sir Richard Morison, Knt., and Countess Dowager of Bedford, and had issue,

THOMAS, his successor.

William, d. s. p. in 1605.

Bridget, m. to Sir Rowland Egerton, Bart.

His lordship, who was a knight of the Garter, d. in 1593, and was s. by his elder son,

SIR THOMAS GREY, 15th baron, summoned to parliament from 24 October, 1597, to 27 October, 1601. This nobleman being involved in what has been termed "Raleigh's Conspiracy," was arrested 12 July, 1603, and tried with Lord Cobham, at Winchester, 25 and 26 November following. Sir Dudley Carleton says, that after the abject defence of Cobham, "Grey, quite in another key, began with great assurance and alacrity, telling the lords, the judges, and the king's council, their duties in a long speech, and kept them the whole day to subtle traverses and subterfuges; but the evidence that he was acquainted with the surprise of the king, was too conspicuous, by Broke's and Markham's confessions." "The lords," continues Sir Dudley, "were long ere they could agree, and loth to come out with so hard a censure against him; most of them strove with themselves, and would fain, as it seems, have dispensed with their consciences, to have shewn him favour. After sentence, when he was asked what he would say against its being denounced? he replied, 'I have nothing to say, yet a word of Tacitus comes in my mouth:

'Non eadem omnibus decora.'

The house of Wilton have spent many lives in their prince's service, and Grey cannot ask his." His lordship was removed to the Tower, where he d. 6 July. 1614, having received a pardon so far as the remission of the capital part of the sentence: but the barony of Grey of Wilton expired under his lordship's attainder, and his estates became forfeited. Those at Whaddon, in Buckinghamshire, were, after his attainder, leased out to his widow, and after his death granted in fee to the favourite George Villiers, Duke of Buckingham. Wilton Castle, on the banks of the Wye, in Herefordshire, had been sold in the reign of ELIZABETH, to the Hon. Charles Brydges, ancestor to the Dukes of Chandos, and upon the decease of the 1st duke it was, together with other large estates in the neighbourhood, sold to Guy's Hospital. Lord Grey having d. s. p., and his only brother, William, previously, also without issue, his sister of the whole blood, Bridget, wife of Sir Rowland Egerton, of Egerton, in Cheshire, became his heir. Her ladyship's interest in the estates, according to Carte, was purchased by Villiers for £11,000, and the procuring a baronetcy for Sir Rowland. Villiers was subsequently himself created Baron Whaddon, the mansion of the Greys.

From Sir Rowland Egerton, and Bridget Grey, his lady, descended lineally,

Sir Thomas Egerton, the 7th baronet, who was elevated to the peerage, 15 May, 1784, as Baron Grey, of Wilton Castle, co. Hereford, and advanced, 26 June, 1801, to the dignities of Viscount Grey de Wilton and EARL OF WILTON, with remainder to the 2nd and younger sons of his dau. Eleanor, who had m. in 1794, Robert, Viscount Belgrave, afterwards Marquess of Westminster, and the said honours, at the Earl's decease in 1814, were inherited by his grandson (according to the limitation),

The Hon. Thomas Grosvenor, who assumed the name of Egerton, and became EARL OF WILTON.

GREY—BARONS GREY, OF ROTHERFIELD, CO. OXFORD.

By Writ of Summons, dated 26 January, 1297.

Lineage.

ROBERT DE GREY, 4th son of Henry de Grey, of Thurrock (see BARONS GREY, of Codnor), obtained from his brother, Walter de Grey, archbishop of York, a gift of the major part of the lordship of Rotherfield, co. Oxford, and was s. by his son,

WALTER DE GREY, to whom the same prelate extended his bounty by a grant of all his lands in Gilestord, in Kent, Bright-helmstone, in Sussex, with Herdewyke and Coges, co. Oxford which he had by assignment from Joan and Alice, the daus. and co-heirs of Robert de Arsic, Baron of Coges, and likewise the residue of the manor of Rotherfield, together with divers other lordships. This Walter d. in 52nd HENRY III., and was s. by his son,

ROBERT DE GREY, who m. Arice, dau. of William de St. Lis, and dying in 1295, was s. by his son,

JOHN DE GREY, then twenty-four years of age, who, soon after doing his homage, had livery of his inheritance; and in the 25th EDWARD I., had summons to the parliament then held at Westminster, as a baron. This nobleman appears to have taken part in the Scottish wars of EDWARD I. His lordship m. Margaret, dau. and co-heiress of William de Odingsells, of Maxtock, co. Warwick, and dying 5th EDWARD II., was s. by his son,

JOHN DE GREY, 2nd baron, one of the founders of the order of the Garter, b. 1300, who in the 15th EDWARD II., making proof of his age, had livery of his lands; and in the 1st EDWARD III., was in the wars of Scotland. In the 6th of the same reign, upon some difference between his lordship and William le Zouch, of Haryngworth, another great baron, which was heard before the king, Lord Grey, under the irritation of the moment, drew his knife upon Lord Zouch in the royal presence, whereupon both lords were committed to prison; but the Lord Zouch was soon afterwards released, while Lord Grey was remanded, and his lands seized upon by the crown. He was, however, within a short time, upon making submission, restored to favour: and in three years afterwards we find his lordship in Scotland upon the king's service, being of the retinue with Henry, Earl of Lancaster. From this period, for several years, he was engaged in the French wars, and in the 20th of EDWARD's reign, he obtained license to fortify his houses at Rotherfield Grey, co. Oxford, and Sculcotes, co. York, with embattled walls of lime and stone. The next year there being a tournament held at Eltham, in Kent, amongst other accoutrements prepared for that military exercise, his lordship had a hood of white cloth, embroidered with dancing men, in blue habits, buttoned before with large pearls, presented to him by the king. In the 26th EDWARD III., he was one of the commissioners in the cos. Oxford and Berks, for arraying and arming all men of ability within those shires, and leading them against the king's enemies, invasion being at that time threatened by the French. In the next year he was steward of the king's household, and had summons to parliament from the 1st to the 29th EDWARD III. inclusive. His lordship m. 1st, Katherine, dau. and co-heiress of Bryan Fitz-Alan, of Bedall, co. York, and had issue,

JOHN, his successor.

Maud, m. 1st, to John de Botetourt, of Weoley, and 2ndly, to Thomas de Harcourt.

He m. 2ndly, Arice, dau. and co-heir of John, Lord Marmion, and had two sons, John and Robert, who both assumed their mother's name of Marmion (see BARONS MARMION). Lord Grey d. in 1359, and was s. by his eldest son,

JOHN DE GREY, 3rd baron, summoned to parliament as "Johanni de Grey de Rotherfeld," from 20 November, 1360, to 4 October, 1373. His lordship had issue,

JOHN, who m. Elizabeth, dau. of Sir Richard de Poyninga, Knt., and dying before his father, left issue, BARTHOLOMEW, who s. his grandfather.

ROBERT, who s. his brother.

Richard, d. s. p.

Robert, who d. without male issue, in the 41st EDWARD III.

Lord Grey d. in 1378, and was s. by his grandson,

BARTHOLOMEW DE GREY, 4th baron, but never summoned to parliament. This nobleman, dying in 1376, unm., the title and estates devolved upon his brother,

ROBERT DE GREY, 5th baron, summoned to parliament in the 1st RICHARD II., but not afterwards. His lordship m. Elizabeth, dau. and co-heir of William de la Planchette, of Haversham, co. Bucks, and by her (who afterwards became the 2nd wife of John, 3rd Lord Clinton), he left at his decease in 1387, an only dau. and heiress,

JOANE, who m. in 1401, John, Baron d'Eyncourt, and by him left, at her decease, two daus., viz.,

Alice, m. 1st, Ralph Boteler, of Sudeley, who d. s. p., and 2ndly, William, Lord Lovel.

Margaret, m. Ralph, Lord Cromwell, of Tatshall, and d. s. p.

The barony of Grey, of Rotherfield, vested, eventually, in John, Lord Lovel, son and heir of the above-mentioned Alice d'Eyncourt, by William, Lord Lovel, and passed, at his decease, to his son Francis, Viscount Lovel, K.G., under whose attainder, in 1487, it EXPIRED.

Arms—Same as Grey, of Codnor.

GREY—BARON GREY, OF CODNOR, CO. DERBY.

By Writ of Summons, dated 6 February, 1299.

Lineage.

In the 6th year of King RICHARD I., that monarch conferred the manor of Thurrock, co. Essex (afterwards called Thurrock Grey), upon

HENRY DE GREY, which grant was confirmed by King JOHN, who vouchsafed, by special charter, to permit the said Henry de Grey to hunt the hare and fox in any land belonging to the crown, save the king's own demesne-parks. In the 1st HENRY III. he had also a grant of the manor of Grimston, co. Nottingham, and having afterwards m. Isolda, niece and heiress of Robert Bardolf, shared in the inheritance of his lands. By this lady Henry de Grey had issue, RICHARD, of whom presently.

John, some time justice of Chester, progenitor of the Greys of Wilton, and Greys of Ruthyn.

William, of Landford, co. Notts, and Sandiacre, co. Derby.

Robert, of Rotherfield.

Walter, archbishop of York. This prelate lies buried in the cathedral church of York, under a tomb of curious Gothic workmanship, having the bishop's effigy at full length, with his crozier lying at the bottom part.

Henry.

RICHARD DE GREY, of Codnor, co. Derby, the eldest son, having adhered to King JOHN, had the lands of John de Humea, in Leicestershire, and Simon de Cancei, in Lincolnshire, two of the rebellious barons, conferred upon him; and in the 10th HENRY III he was made governor of the Isles of Guernsey, Jersey, Alderney, and Sark; of which, in the 36th of the same king, he had a grant, in fee farm, for 400 marks, to be paid yearly into the king's exchequer. In which year the king, intending a pilgrimage to the Holy Land, and causing the bishops of Worcester and Chichester to preach a similar course to the people, this Richard and John, his brother, came forward, although, generally speaking, the discourses of the prelates had but little effect, which so pleased the king, that he embraced them in his arms, kissed them, and called them brothers. In a few years afterwards (42nd HENRY III.), we find Richard de Grey constable of Dover Castle and warden of the Cinque Ports, and being both diligent and trusty in those offices, discovered much treasure, which the Poictovins (then in high favour with the king), had ready to convey into France. "But about this time," says Dugdale, "there being no little contest, touching Athelmure, the king's brother, by the mother, then elect bishop of Winchester; divers of the great barons opposing him, in regard he was of that party, against whom they took high exception, for misleading the king, and consuming the wealth of the land. Whereupon he fled to Rome, and by false suggestions, procured the pope's letters for his institution, which were sent by Walescho, a grey friar, who landed at Dover. The barons grew so incensed, that they forthwith sent Hugh Bigot, then justice of England, thither, to inquire, by what authority he was suffered to come on shore; who went to this Richard (then constable of the castle), and said, 'Have you been trusted by the people of England, as a faithful warden of the ports, and suffered this person to land, without our knowledge, to the manifest violation of your oath? We think you, not only unworthy of this place any longer, but to be farther questioned, for so great a transgression, tending to the public damage of the whole realm.' And thereupon took the custody of the castle, and of all the ports into his own hands." Subsequently to this period Richard de Grey arrayed himself under the baronial standard, and being, with his son John, in the army of young Simon de Montfort, at Kenilworth, was surprised in the night-time by a party from Prince Edward's army, and taken prisoner, with several other barons. For this treason his lands were seized upon by the crown; but were afterwards restored, upon the payment of a fine under the decree, denominated "Dictum de Kenilworth." Richard de Grey m. Lucia, dau. and heiress of the John de Humea mentioned above, and (with two daus., Agnes, m. to Sir William Fitz-William; and Isabel m. William, son of Henry de Fauconberg), had a son,

JOHN DE GREY, who m. Lucy, dau. of Reginald, Lord Mohun, d. in 1271, and was s. by his son,

HENRY DE GREY, who being in the king's army in Wales, in the 10th EDWARD I., had scutage from all his tenants, in the co. Norfolk, Suffolk, Kent, Nottingham and Derby, that held of him by military service, and had summons, in the 22nd of the same monarch, amongst other great men, to repair forthwith to the king, to consult about the urgent affairs of the realm, as also to be at Portsmouth, upon the first of the ensuing September, with horse and arms, to attend the king in his expedition into Gascony. After which he had summons to parliament as a baron, from 6 February, 1299, to 6 August, 1308. His lordship was, for several years, actively engaged in the French and Scottish wars: in the latter of which he formed one of the immediate retinue of Prince Edward. He m. Lady Eleanor, dau. of Courtenay, Earl of Devon, and d. 1308, having had two sons, RICHARD, his heir, and Nicholas, of Rydale, co. York. The elder son,

RICHARD DE GREY, 2nd baron, summoned to parliament from 4 March, 1309, to 3 February, 1335. This nobleman was seneschal of Gascony in the 6th EDWARD II. In the 12th of the same reign he was in the wars of Scotland, and again the next year, when he was in the retinue of Thomas of Brotherton, Earl of Norfolk. In four years after, he was constituted steward of the duchy of Aquitaine, and within two years appointed constable of Nottingham Castle. In the 7th EDWARD III., he had summons to attend the king at Newcastle, with horse and arms, to march against the Scots, but had a special dispensation from the service in consequence of his bodily infirmities. By Johanna, his wife, his lordship had issue,

JOHN, his successor.

Robert, of Charlton-Grey, co. Somerset, which, with other lands, he inherited from Robert Fitz-Payn, and in consequence assumed the surname of Fitz-Paine. He m. Elizabeth, dau. and co-heir of Sir Guy de Bryan, and left an only dau. and heiress, ISABEL, who m. Richard, Lord Poyninga.

Richard, Lord Grey, d. in 1335, and was s. by his elder son,

JOHN DE GREY, 3rd baron, b. 1308, summoned to parliament from 1st April, 1335, to 8 September, 1392, as "Johanni Grey de Codenore." This nobleman, during the lifetime of his father, attained distinction in the Scottish wars, and, after his accession to the title, was engaged in those of Flanders; and so eminent were his services esteemed by the king, that his lordship received, about the 20th year of EDWARD's reign, from the hands of the monarch himself, a hood of white cloth, embroidered with blue men, buttoned before with great pearls; and being to perform divers military exercises in a tournament at Canterbury, had certain accoutrements of Indian silk, whereon the arms of Sir Stephen Cosyngton, Knt., were painted, bestowed upon him by the king. In two years afterwards, he again went into France, continuing in the retinue of Henry, Earl of Lancaster; and in four years subsequently, we find him joined in commission with Lord D'Eincourt, to array all the knights, esquires, and other able persons residing in the counties of Nottingham and Derby, and to conduct them to such places as should be needful for the defence of the realm, there being an invasion threatened at that time by the French. In the 29th EDWARD III., his lordship was once more in France, as he was again in the 33rd. But after all these military services, he obtained license, in the 39th EDWARD III., to go on a pilgrimage; and in the 45th of the same reign, being then very aged, and not able to endure the fatigues of travelling, he had a special dispensation from the king (wherein his great and manifold services were gratefully acknowledged), to exempt him from coming to parliament and councils, and likewise from being charged with setting forth any soldiers whatsoever in the wars of that king, his heirs, or successors. His lordship m. Alice de Insula, and had issue,

HENRY, m. Johanna, dau. of Reginald, Lord Cobham, of Sterborough, and dying in the lifetime of his father, left his son,

RICHARD, who inherited the title.

John.

Alice, m. to William de Everingham, of Laxton, Notts.

John, Lord Grey, of Codnor, Knight of the Garter, d. about the year 1392, and was s. by his grandson,

RICHARD DE GREY, 4th baron. This nobleman, who was in the French wars in the 17th and 21st RICHARD II., was made admiral of the king's fleet from the mouth of the Thames to the northward, in the 2nd HENRY IV., and soon afterwards constituted joint-governor of the castle of Roxborough, in Scotland, with Sir Stephen le Scrope. In the next year he was again in France upon the king's service; and in the 8th of the same monarch, his lordship was constituted constable of the castle of Nottingham, and chief ranger of Shirewood Forest, for life. After this we find him constantly employed upon confidential missions to the courts of France and Scotland, and he had summons to parliament, as "Richardus Grey de Codenore," from 13 November, 1393, to 3 September, 1417, being also a knight of the Garter. His lordship m. Elizabeth, dau. and co-heir of Ralph, Lord Bassett, of Sapcoate, and had issue,

JOHN, his successor.

Henry, successor to his brother.

William, bishop of Ely, d. 1478.

Elizabeth, m. to Sir John Zouche.

Eleanor, m. to Thomas Newport, of Bradford.

Lucy, m. to Sir Rowland Lenthall.

His lordship d. in 1418, and was s. by his elder son,

JOHN DE GREY, 5th baron, summoned to parliament from 26 February, 1420, to 3 August, 1428, as John Grey, of Codnor. This nobleman d. s. p. 9th HENRY VI., and was s. by his brother,

HENRY DE GREY, 6th baron, summoned to parliament, as Henry Grey, of Codnor, from 27 November, 1430, to 3 December, 1441. His lordship m. Margaret, dau. and co-heir of Sir Henry Percy, of Athol, by whom (who m. after his decease, Sir Richard Vere, Knt.), he had an only son, his successor, at his decease in 1443,

HENRY DE GREY, 7th baron, summoned to parliament, from 9 October, 1459, to 14 October, 1495, as "Henrico Grey, Militi," but never with the addition of Codnor. This nobleman much affecting the study of chemistry, obtained, in the 3rd EDWARD IV., a license from the crown to practise the transmutation of metals. His lordship d. in 1495, and, leaving no legitimate issue, his estates reverted to his aunts,

Elizabeth, wife of Sir John Zouche, of Codnor;
Eleanor, wife of Thomas Newport;
Lucy, wife of Sir Rowland Lenthall; amongst whom the barony of Grey, of Codnor, fell into ABBEVANCE, as it continues with their descendants.

Richard Grey, to whom he devised the manor of Radcliffe-upon-Trent, co. Notts.
Henry Grey, from whom the Greys of Langley, co. Leicester, descended.

Arms—Barry of six, arg. and az., in chief three torteaux.

NOTE.—"The last Lord Grey, of Codnor," says Leland, "left three daughters, whereof one was married to Sir Rowland Lenthall, of Nottinghamshire; another to Newport, in Shropshire; and the third to one Zouche, a younger brother of the house of the Lord Zouches. These three had the Lord Greys' lands in copartion, whereof the lordship of Allesford, in Kent, and How Hundred, was parte. There were some of the Lord Greys, of Codnor, buried at Allesford Freres."

"Lenthall, dying without issue male, left two daughters, whereof one, called Catherine, was married to one of the Lord Zouches; the other to Cornwall, baron of Burford; and so came they to be co-partners in the Lord Grey of Codnor's lands."

GREY—BARONS GREY, OF GROBY, MARQUESSSES OF DORSET, DUKE OF SUFFOLK.

Barony, by Writ of Summons, dated 26 September, 1300.
Marquessate, created 18 April, 1475.
Dukedom, created 11 October, 1551.

Lineage.

SIR EDWARD GREY, Knt. (eldest son of Reginald, Lord Grey, of Ruthyn, by Joan, his 2nd wife, dau. and heir of Sir William de Astley, son and heir of Thomas, 7th Lord Astley), m. Elizabeth Ferrers, grand-dau. and heir of William Ferrers, Lord Ferrers, of Groby, and was summoned to parliament in her right, as Baron Ferrers, of Groby, from 14 December, 1446, to 2 January, 1449, and as LORD GREY, OF GROBY, from 23 September, 1449, to 26 May, 1455. That his lordship bore, in 1446, the former title is evident, from a special dispensation, which he obtained 6 November in that year, from John Stafford, then archbishop of Canterbury, whereby, in consequence of the distance of the manor house of Groby from the parish church, and "foulness of the ways thereto," he had license to christen the child, of which his lady was then pregnant, by the vicar of his chapel. The dispensation being addressed thus—"Nobili viro Edmundo Domino de Ferrers de Groby." His lordship had issue,

JOHN (Sir), his successor.

Edward, who m. Elizabeth Talbot, eldest dau. of Thomas, Lord L'Isle, and was created Viscount L'Isle, &c. 1492.

Reginald, slain at the battle of Wakefield, 31 December, 1460.
Anne, m. to Sir Edward Hungerford.

He d. 18 December, 1457, and was s. by his eldest son,

SIR JOHN GREY, 2nd baron, but never summoned to parliament, who m. Elizabeth Widville, dau. of Richard Widville, K.G., 1st Earl Rivers, and by her (who d. 1492) had issue,

THOMAS (Sir), his successor.

Richard (Sir), beheaded, 1483.

Sir John Grey, who was b. 1435, fell 17 February, 1460, at the battle of St. Albans, fighting under the colours of Lancaster. His widow becoming subsequently a suitor to King EDWARD IV., for some lands which had been given to her in jointure, the king was so enamoured of her beauty and gracefulness, that he, upon his part, became a suitor to the lady. But she, it is said, wisely answered him when he became importunate, "that as she did account herself too base to be his wife, so she did think herself too good to be his harlot." The result is well known. The king married her, and thereby incurred the wrath of the Earl of Warwick, which had nearly lost him his crown. In consequence of this great alliance her eldest son,

SIR THOMAS GREY, was created, 4 August, 1471, Earl of

Huntingdon, and advanced, 18 April, 1475, to the MARQUESSATE OF DORSET, only "per Cincturam Gladii et Capse Honoris impositionem." On which day he sat in his habit at the upper end of the table, among the knights, in St. Edward's chamber; and in the 22nd EDWARD IV., had livery of his lands without making proof of his age. But on the death of King EDWARD he was attainted of high treason, 1st RICHARD III., owing to his near relationship to the young King EDWARD V.; he was, however, fortunate enough to make his escape into Brittany, and joined the Earl of Richmond, who, after the battle of Bosworthfield, having ascended the throne, as HENRY VII., sent for the Marquess of Dorset, and restored him to all his honours. His lordship subsequently enjoyed the favour of the king, although at one time he was committed to the Tower. In the 7th HENRY VII. he was with the army sent to assist the Emperor MAXIMILIAN against the French; and in four years afterwards we find him one of the commanders who vanquished Lord Audley and the rebels at Blackheath. His lordship m. 1st, Anne, dau. and heir of Henry Holland, Duke of Exeter, and 2ndly, Cecilia, dau. and heir of William, Lord Bonville and Harrington, and had issue,

i. Edward, d. s. p.

ii. Anthony.

iii. Thomas, his successor.

iv. Richard, m. Florence Pudsey, who had a son Henry, who d. s. p.

v. John, m. Anne, dau. of William Barlow, and d. s. p.

vi. Leonard, created Viscount Graney of the kingdom of Ireland, executed 31st HENRY VIII.

vii. George, in holy orders.

i. Cecily, m. to John Sutton, Lord Dudley.

ii. Bridget.

iii. Anne.

iv. Dorothy, m. 1st, to Robert, Lord de Brooke, and 2ndly, to William, Lord Mountjoy.

v. Elizabeth, m. to Gerald Fitz-Gerald, 9th Earl of Kildare.

vi. Margaret, m. to Richard Wake, of Blaworth.

vii. Eleanor, m. to Sir John Arundel, of Lanherne, co. Cornwall.

viii. Mary, m. to Walter, Viscount Hereford.

The Marquess, who was a knight of the Garter, d. in 1501, and was s. by his eldest son,

THOMAS GREY, who was summoned to parliament 17 October, 1509, as Lord Ferrers, of Groby, but in the second parliament, in 1511, as MARQUESS OF DORSET. This nobleman, in the 3rd HENRY VIII., was commander-in-chief of the army sent about the beginning of May into Spain, consisting of ten thousand men, whereof a moiety were archers, who, along with their bows and arrows, carried halberds, which they pitched on the ground until their arrows were shot, and then resumed them to charge the enemy. In this expedition were also his lordship's brothers, Lord Thomas Howard, son and heir of the Earl of Surrey, and the Lords Brooke, Willoughby, and Ferrers. This armament returned, however, to England, without performing any service. It was designed as an augmentation of the forces of the Emperor FERDINAND in the invasion of Guyenne, but that monarch proposing another designation, not warranted by the commission which the general had received, he thought it his duty to re-embark, not, however, before he had lost some of his soldiers by sickness, and suffered indisposition himself. In two years afterwards the marquess and his brothers were with the Duke of Suffolk in France, at a joust at St. Denis, where he acquired singular honour, as also in those celebrated tournaments, the 12th HENRY VIII., at the interview, in Picardy, between the English and French monarchs. In the 14th of the same reign his lordship was sent to Calais, to attend the Emperor, CHARLES V., into England, who was at that period so sumptuously entertained by King HENRY, being himself lodged in Black Friars, and his train in the king's (then newly beautified,) palace at Bridewell. "This Thomas, Marquess of Dorset, was esteemed the best general of those times for embattling an army, always observing the number, strength, and experience of his camp, and the nature and extent of the place, as well as the time, ground, persons, and quality of his enemies. And he was ever careful of good pay, lest his soldiers mutinied; of good diet and quarters, lest they failed; and of order, discipline, and temperance, lest they should be confounded by sudden attacks, or enfeebled by sickness and distemper. His speech was soldier-like, plain, short, smart, and material; and notwithstanding the times could not endure his virtues, nor he their vices; he died full of honour at court, and applause in the country, with this monument from the king, (HENRY VIII.) 'That honest and good man.' The collegiate church of Astley, co. Warwick, (founded by Thomas, Lord Astley, whose heiress general m. the ancestor of this marquess,) a most rare and beautiful piece of workmanship, having fallen down, a new chancel was erected by the parishioners. When, on opening

* This dignity he relinquished upon being created Marquess of Dorset.

the vault where the body of the marquess was laid, a large and long coffin of wood was found, which, at the curious desire of some, being burst open, the body, which had lain there seventy-eight years, appeared perfect in every respect, neither perished nor hardened, but the flesh, in colour, proportion, and softness, alike to any ordinary corpse newly interred. The body was about five feet eight inches in length, the face broad, and the hair yellow. All which seemed so well preserved from the strong embalming thereof." The marquess was one of those lords who, in the 22nd HENRY VIII., signed the celebrated letter to Pope Clement, touching the king's divorce: and was also one who subscribed the forty-four articles of impeachment against Cardinal Wolsey. His lordship m. 1st, Eleanor, dau. of Oliver, Lord St. John, but had no issue. He m. 2ndly, Margaret, dau. of Sir Robert Wotton, Knt., of Bocton, in Kent, by whom he had (with other issue),

- i. HENRY, his successor.
- ii. Edward, d. s. p.
- iii. Thomas, beheaded, 23 April, 1554.
- iv. John, of Pirgo, co. Essex, from whom the present Earl of Stamford derives.
- i. Mary, s. p.
- ii. Catherine, m. Henry, Earl of Arundel.
- iii. Elizabeth, m. 1st. Thomas, Lord Audley, of Walden; and 2ndly, George Norton.
- iv. Anne, m. to Sir Henry Willoughby, of Wollaton, Notts.

This eminent personage d. in 1530, and was s. by his eldest son, HENRY GREY, 3rd Marquess of Dorset, who in the 1st EDWARD VI., was constituted lord high constable of England, for three days only, by reason of the solemnity of the king's coronation. In the fourth of the same reign, he was made justice in eyre of all the king's forests, and the next year warden of the east, west, and middle Marches, towards Scotland. His lordship was created DUKE OF SUFFOLK, 11 October, 1551, and installed a knight of the most noble order of the Garter. He m. 1st, Katherine, dau. of William, Earl of Arundel, but by her had no issue. His gra. m. 2ndly, Frances Brandon, eldest dau. and co-heir of Charles, Duke of Suffolk, by Mary, dowager Queen of France, and sister of King HENRY VIII., by whom he had JANE, who m. Lord Guildford Dudley, and having aspired to the crown, at the decease of EDWARD VI., suffered decapitation for high treason, with her husband, Lord Guildford Dudley. In Walpole's Catalogue of Noble Authors, he terms the Lady Jane Grey, "this admirable young heroine," and the fairest ornament of her sex. "The works of this lovely scholar's writing," he says "are four Latin epistles; three to Bullinger, and one to her sister, the Lady Katherine, which was written the night before her death, in a Greek Testament, in which she had been reading, and sent to her sister. Her conference with Feckenham, Abbot of Westminster, who was deputed to convert her to the Catholic religion. A letter to Dr. Harding, her father's chaplain, who had apostatised a prayer for her own use, under imprisonment. Four Latin verses written in prison, with a pin." Her speech on the scaffold; and various others, of which mention is made by Baker and Hollingshed.

Katherine, m. 1st, Henry, Lord Herbert, eldest son of William, Earl of Pembroke, from whom she was divorced. Her ladyship m. 2ndly, Edward Seymour, Earl of Hertford, but not having the permission of Queen ELIZABETH, she was committed, as well as her husband, to the Tower, where she d. 26 January, 1567; having had, by her 2nd husband, three sons: Edward, the eldest, who d. young; Thomas, the youngest, who m. Isabel, dau. of Edward Onley, Esq., of Catesby, co. Northampton, and died without issue—and

EDWARD, Lord Beauchamp, who m. Honora, dau. of Sir Richard Rogers, Knt., and left two sons, William, Marquess of Hertford, and Francis, Lord Seymour, of Trowbridge; the elder son, WILLIAM, MARQUESS OF HERTFORD, m. 1st, Lady Arabella Stuart; and 2ndly, Lady Frances Devereux, by the latter of whom he had a son HENRY, LORD BEAUCHAMP, whose dau., and eventual heiress, Elizabeth, having m. Thomas Bruce, 1st Earl of Ailesbury, had issue,

CHARLES, Earl of Ailesbury, whose eldest dau. and co-heir, Mary, m. Henry Brydges, Marquess of Carnarvon; afterwards 2nd Duke of Chandos, and her grand-dau. ANNA-ELIZA, who m. 16 April, 1796, Richard, 2nd Marquess of Buckingham and Chandos, was sole representative of this branch of the Grey family; and of Frances, eldest dau. of Charles Brandon, Duke of Suffolk, and his wife Mary, Queen Dowager of France, sister of King HENRY VIII.

Mary, m. to Martin Keyes, Groom Porter to Queen ELIZABETH, and d. s. p. 1578.

Upon the demise of King EDWARD VI., the Duke of Suffolk, at the instigation of Dudley, Duke of Northumberland, (father of Lord Guildford Dudley,) proclaimed his dau. the LADY JANE GREY, QUEEN OF ENGLAND, upon the allegation that the deceased monarch had so designated her ladyship in his will. This attempt proving abortive, the unhappy lady and her youthful husband, with her father-in-law, the ambitious Northumberland, were brought to the block, while Suffolk himself was reserved for a subsequent fate, for joining in Wyatt's rebellion, he made an effort to raise the people in the co. of Warwick and Leicester, but being pursued by the Earl of Huntington, at the head of some forces, he was obliged to conceal himself within a hollow tree, in his park, at Astley, when being betrayed by Underwood, one of the keepers in whom he had confided, he was delivered up to his enemies, and beheaded on Tower Hill, 23 February, 1554; being also attainted, his honours, viz., the Dukedom of Suffolk, the Barony of Grey, of Groby, the Marquessate of Dorset, and the Baronies of Astley, Bonville and Harrington, became EXTINCT.

Arms—Barry of six, arg. and az., three torteaux in chief, and a label of three points, ermine.

GREY — EARL OF TANKERVILLE, AND BARONS GREY, OF POWIS.

Barony by Writ of Summons, dated 15 November, 1482.

Lineage.

EDWARD DE CHERLTON, Lord Powys, whose ancestor had been summoned to parliament in that dignity, in the 7th EDWARD II., d. in 1422, leaving two daus., his co-heirs, (between whom the barony fell into abeyance,) namely,

JOAN, m. to Sir John de Grey, of whom we are about to treat.

JOYCE, m. to John, Lord Tiptoft, and had issue,

JOHN, created Earl of Worcester, who was attainted of treason, 10th EDWARD IV., 1478.

The husband of the elder dau.,

SIR JOHN DE GREY, Knt., who was son of Sir Thomas Grey, of Berwyke, co. Northumberland, by Jane, dau. of John, Lord Mowbray, was a very eminent military character in the time of HENRY V. In the 2nd of that monarch's reign, he was with the king at the siege of Caen, and behaved himself so valiantly, that he had a grant of the castle and lordship of Tilye, in Normandy, then forfeited by Sir William Harcourt, an adherent of the king's enemies. He was subsequently sent with a guard into Powisland, where Sir John Oldcastle, the chief of the Lollards, had been taken, to bring that unfortunate personage before parliament. The next year, (6th HENRY V.,) being again in the French wars, we find him Captain of Maunt, and obtaining, in further consideration of his services, a grant of the EARLDOM OF TANKERVILLE, in Normandy, to hold by homage, and delivery of a bassinet, or helmet, at the castle of Roan, on the feast of St. George, yearly. Continuing in those wars, his lordship had several further grants, and was made governor of the castle of Tournay. But he was soon after slain, (at the battle of Baugy Bridge,) in fording a river, near the castle of Beaufort, with the Duke of Clarence, and divers others of the English nobility. His lordship was s. by his son,

SIR HENRY GREY, Knt., as Earl of Tankerville. This nobleman being young at the time of his father's decease, (9th HENRY V.,) had not livery of his lands until the 20th HENRY VI., yet the 4th year of that reign, he was knighted, by John, Duke of Bedford: at which time, the king himself received the same honour, at Leicester. He m. Antigone, natural dau. of Humphrey Plantagenet, Duke of Gloucester, and dying in the 28th HENRY VI., (1449,) left issue,

RICHARD, his successor.

Humphrey, who d. without issue.

Elizabeth, m. to Sir Roger Kynaston, Knt., from whom lineally descended,

John Kynaston, Esq., who claimed the Barony of Grey de Powis, in 1731. He d. in 1733, and was s. by his elder surviving son,

Edward Kynaston, Esq., who d. s. p. in 1772, and was s. by his brother,

Roger Kynaston, Esq., who m. Mary, only child of Henry Powell, Esq., of Worthen, co. Salop, and dying in 1788, was s. by his eldest son,

John Kynaston, who assumed, by sign manual, the additional surname of POWELL. This gentleman claimed unsuccessfully, in 1800, the Barony of Powis. He was subsequently created a baronet in 1818. (See KYNASTON, BURKE'S Peerage and Baronetage.)

The elder son,

RICHARD GREY, Earl of Tankerville, adhering to the house of York, was attainted, with divers others, in the 38th HENRY VI. He was with the Earl of Warwick at the siege of Alnwick Castle, in the 2nd EDWARD IV. "It does not appear," says Nicolas, "that this nobleman was ever summoned to parliament, but strong evidence exists that he sat in that assembly as a baron of the realm, in 1455." His lordship m. Margaret, dau. of James, Lord Audley, and dying 6th EDWARD VI., left issue,

JOHN, of whom hereafter.

And a (presumed) dau.,

Elizabeth, who m. Sir John Ludlow, of Hodnet, co. Salop, and had issue, ANNE, m. to Thomas Vernon, Esq., of Stokesley, from whom descended through his dau., Eleanor Vernon, who m. Francis Curzon, Esq., of Kedleston, Sir Nathaniel Curzon, Bart., who opposed the claim of Mr. Kynaston, to the Barony of Powis, and from whom the Lords Scarisale derive.

Alice, m. to Humphrey Vernon, Esq., (brother of the above Thomas), from whom descended,

Sir Henry Vernon, Bart., (so created in 1660.) who left a dau. Elizabeth (who m. Robert Cholmondeley, Esq., and was ancestor of the HERBES of HODNET), and a son,

Sir Thomas Vernon, 2nd baronet, who d. in 1684, leaving two daus., Diana and Harriot, who both d. unm., and a son, his successor,

Sir Richard Vernon, 3rd baronet, at whose decease unm., his title and line became EXTINCT.

The Earldom of Tankerville, fell not only by the attainder of the earl, but France being lost to the English crown, it shared a similar fate. His lordship's son,

JOHN GREY, who obtained livery of his lands, in the 20th EDWARD IV., without making proof of his age, was summoned to parliament as a baron, under the designation of "Johanni Grey de Powes," from 15 November, 1482, 22 EDWARD IV., to 16 January, 1497, 12th HENRY VII. His lordship m. Anne Herbert, dau. of William, Earl of Pembroke, and dying in 1497, was s. by his son,

JOHN GREY, 2nd Baron Grey, of Powis, who m. Margaret, dau. of Edward, Lord Dudley, and dying in 1504, was s. by his son.

SIR EDWARD GREY, 3rd Baron Grey, of Powis, summoned to parliament, from 3 November, 1529, to 23 January, 1552. This nobleman accompanied the Duke of Suffolk, 15th HENRY VIII., in the expedition then made into France, and was at the taking of Bray and other places, won, at that time, from the French. His lordship m. Anne Brandon, dau. and co-heir of Charles, Duke of Suffolk, by whom he had no issue. He had illegitimate children by one Jane Orwell, namely, Edward, Anne, Jane, and — Grey, upon whom he entailed the greater part of his estates, composing the Barony of Powis. His lordship d. in 1552, when the Barony of Grey de Powis fell, it is supposed, into ABEYANCE, but between whom, has not been determined. Sir Harris Nicolas, in his Synopsis of the Peerage (an admirable and much improved edition of which has been produced by Mr. Courthope, Somerset Herald, under the title of "the Historic Peerage"), deems the BARONY OF GREY DE POWIS created by the summons of EDWARD IV., not a continuation of that of CHERLETON OF POWIS, but a new and distinct peerage, and if he be right, the former is EXTINCT.

GREY—BARONS L'ISLE, VISCOUNTS L'ISLE.

Parony, by Letters Patent, dated in 1475.

Viscounty, by Letters Patent, dated 28 June, 1483.

Lineage.

SIR EDWARD GREY, Knt., 2nd son of Edward Grey, Lord Ferrers, of Groby, having m. Elizabeth Talbot, eldest dau. of John Talbot, Viscount L'Isle, and sister and co-heir of Thomas Talbot, last Viscount L'Isle of that family, was created in the 15th EDWARD IV., BARON L'ISLE, the patent reciting to the effect of the preamble in that granted to John Talbot (see Talbot, Viscount L'Isle), and further stating, "that the said John Talbot had issue, Thomas, late Viscount L'Isle, and Elizabeth, then the wife of Edward Grey, Lord L'Isle, and Margaret, late the wife of George Vere; that the manor of Kingston L'Isle, descended to Thomas, late Viscount L'Isle, and that he dying s. p., the manor descended to Elizabeth and Margaret, as his heirs, and Margaret, dying without issue, Edward Grey, Lord L'Isle, and Elizabeth, his wife, were seised in fee of the manor, in right of Elizabeth, and had issue, John and others; the king, therefore, considering the premises, and that Warine L'Isle before mentioned, by reason of the lordship and manor of Kingston L'Isle, aforesaid, had the dignity of Baron and Lord de L'Isle, &c., recognized the right to the dignity of Edward Grey, and the heirs of his body, by the aforesaid Elizabeth, and granted the said barony to him, and the heirs of his body by the said Elizabeth." His lordship was subsequently created VISCOUNT L'ISLE, also by patent, dated 28 June, 1483. This nobleman in the 14th EDWARD IV., was retained by indenture to serve the king, in his "Duchy of Normandy and realm of France," for one whole year, with seven spears and fifty archers. In the 4th HENRY VII., he was one of the commissioners for choosing archers in the co. Warwick, for the relief of the Duchy of Brittany. By the heiress of Talbot (who d. 8 September, 1487), his lordship had issue,

JOHN, his successor.

Anne, m. to John Willoughby.

Elizabeth, m. 1st, to Edmund Dudley, so notorious in the reign of HENRY VII., and had, with other issue,

JOHN DUDLEY, created VISCOUNT L'ISLE (see Dudley, Viscount L'Isle).

Muriel, m. to Henry Stafford, Earl of Wiltshire, and d. s. p.

The viscount had a 2nd wife, Jane, who survived him, but he had no issue by her. He d. in 1492, and was s. by his son,

JOHN GREY, 2nd Viscount L'Isle, who m. Muriel Howard, dau. of Thomas, Duke of Norfolk, and dying in 1512, left an only dau. and heiress, ELIZABETH GREY.

Upon the decease of Lord L'Isle, the Viscounty of L'Isle expired, but the barony must have devolved upon his dau., as his sole heiress, and likewise tenant of the manor of Kingston L'Isle. This lady was contracted to Charles Brandon (afterwards Duke of Suffolk), who was therefore created Viscount L'Isle, but refusing when at majority to fulfil the contract, the patent was cancelled. She afterwards m. Henry Courtenay, 2nd Earl of Devon, but d. s. p. before 1526, leaving her aunt Elizabeth, her father's only surviving sister, her heir, and who being seised of the manor of Kingston L'Isle, and heir general of John Talbot, Viscount L'Isle, is presumed to be legally entitled to the Barony of L'Isle, both under that patent, of 28 June, 1443, and under that to Edward Grey, her father; at her decease both these qualifications devolved upon her son (by her 1st husband), John Dudley,* but who never enjoyed the dignity: he was, however, created Viscount L'Isle (see Dudley, Lord L'Isle).

GREY—EARLS OF KENT, VISCOUNT GOODERICH, OF GOODERICH CASTLE, CO. HEREFORD, EARL OF HAROLD, CO. BEDFORD, MARQUESS OF KENT, DUKE OF KENT, MARQUESS DE GREY.

Earldom of Kent, 3 May, 1465.

Marquessate of Kent, and minor honours, 14 December, 1706.

Dukedom, 28 April, 1710.

Marquisate, 9 May, 1740.

Lineage.

EDMUND GREY, 4th Lord Grey, of Ruthyn, having espoused the cause of the Yorkists, after the battle of Northampton, obtained from King EDWARD IV., the estate of Amptill, co. Bedford, and other lands, which had belonged to the Lord Fanhope, and was subsequently made lord treasurer of England. Leland gives the following account of this nobleman's conduct upon that occasion. "In the time of the civil war betwixt King HENRY VI. and King EDWARD IV., there was a

* Sir John Dudley, sold the manor of Kingston L'Isle, to Mr. Hyde, from whom it passed in lineal succession to John Hyde, Esq., who d. seised thereof, in May, 1745, and his widow sold the same in the following year to Abraham Atkins, Esq., of Clapham, in Surrey, whose case, as claimant to the Barony of L'Isle, as possessor of the manor of Kingston L'Isle, and consequently assignee of John Talbot, 1st Viscount L'Isle, was drawn up by the Hon. Hume Campbell, in 1790, under the title of "Case of the Barony of L'Isle."

battle fought without the south suburbs of Northampton. The Lord Fanhope took totally King HENRY's part. The Lord Grey, of Ruthyn, did the same in countenance; but a little afore the field, he practised with King EDWARD. Others saying that he had a title to the Lord Fanhope's lands at Antehille, and thereabout, or depraving him with false accusations, so wrought with King EDWARD, that he, with all his strong band of Walchemen, fell to King EDWARD's part, upon promise, that if EDWARD won the field, he should have Antehille, and such lands as Fanhope had there. EDWARD won the field, and Grey obtained Antehille, cum pertinentiis, &c.* His lordship appears to have attained in a very great degree the favour of King EDWARD, who besides conferring the treasurer'ship upon him, created him (he then bearing the titles of Lord Hastings, Wesford, and Ruthyn), EARL OF KENT, with limitation to his heirs male. Which dignity was confirmed by King RICHARD III., and afterwards by HENRY VII., so that his lordship seems to have played the part of the vicar of Bray, long before that celebrated divine is supposed to have existed; and to have reposed in equal security upon a bed of white or red roses. The earl m. Katherine Percy, dau. of Henry, Earl of Northumberland, and had surviving issue,

Anthony, d. unm. v. p.

GEORGE, his successor.

John.

Elizabeth, m. to Sir Robert Greystock, Knt., son and heir of Ralph, Lord Greystock.

Anne, m. to John, Lord Grey, of Wilton.

His lordship d. in 1489, and was s. by his eldest surviving son,

GEORGE GREY, 5th Baron Grey de Ruthyn, and 2nd Earl of Kent, who, being a military commander of high reputation, was one of the principal persons in the army, sent the 7th HENRY VII. into France, under Jasper Tudor, Duke of Bedford, to the assistance of the Emperor MAXIMILIAN, but which army returned in a short time, without achieving any memorable action, by reason that MAXIMILIAN, for want of money, was unable to make his appearance. The earl was afterwards the chief commander against the Cornish men, who had risen under Lord Audley, and defeated those insurgents at Blackheath. His lordship m. 1st, Anne, dau. of Richard Wiltville, Earl Rivers, and widow of William, Viscount Bouchier, by whom he had an only son, RICHARD, his successor. He m. 2ndly, Katherine Herbert, dau. of William, Earl of Pembroke, and had issue,

HENRY (Sir), of Wrest, who inherited as 4th earl.

Anthony, of Branspeth, whose grandson, the Rev. ANTHONY GREY, rector of Burbache, inherited as 9th earl.

The earl d. in 1504, and was s. by his eldest son,

RICHARD GREY, 6th Baron Grey de Ruthyn, and 3rd Earl of Kent, K.G. This nobleman attended King HENRY VIII., at the siege of Therouenne; but becoming an inveterate gamester, he wasted the whole of his estate, and d. in poverty at the sign of the George, in Lombard-street, within the city of London, anno 1523. He m. Elizabeth, dau. of Sir William Hussey, Knt., chief justice of the King's Bench, and sister of John, Lord Hussey, but having no issue, the honours devolved upon his half brother,

SIR HENRY GREY, of Wrest, co. Bedford, who should have been 7th Baron Grey de Ruthyn, and 4th Earl of Kent, but from the narrowness of his estate he declined assuming the peerage. He m. Anne, dau. of John Blanesbasset, Esq., by whom he had an only son,

Sir Henry Grey d. in 1562, and was s. by his grandson,

REGINALD GREY, 8th Baron Grey de Ruthyn, and 5th Earl of Kent, which honours, having by frugality much improved his fortune, he assumed in 1571, and sat as one of the peers on the trial of the Duke of Norfolk in two years afterwards. His lordship m. Susan, dau. of Richard Bertie, Esq., and Katherine, Duchess of Suffolk, but dying s. p. in 1572-3 was s. by his brother,

SIR HENRY GREY, as 9th Baron Grey de Ruthyn, and 6th Earl of Kent. This nobleman was one of the peers on the trial of the unhappy Mary of Scotland (29th ELIZABETH), and "evinced," says Dugdale, "much more zeal for her destruction than befitting a person of honour." His lordship m. Mary, dau. of Sir John Cotton, and widow of Edward, Earl of Derby, by whom he had no issue, and dying in 1615, was s. by his brother,

CHARLES GREY, 10th Baron Grey de Ruthyn, and 7th Earl of Kent. His lordship m. Susan, dau. of Sir Richard Cotton, of Bedhampton, co. Hants, and had issue,

HENRY, his successor.

Susan, heir to her brother, m. Sir Michael Longueville, and her son,

CHARLES LONGUEVILLE, was confirmed in the barony of Grey de Ruthyn, in 1640. His lordship d. in 1643, leaving an only dau. and heiress,

SUSAN LONGUEVILLE, Baroness Grey de Ruthyn, who m. Sir Henry Yelverton, Bart., and from this marriage descended, BARBARA YELVERTON, Baroness Grey de Ruthyn, who d. 18 November, 1858, when the honours she possessed in her own right devolved on her son the present MARQUESS OF HASTINGS.

The earl d. in 1625, and was s. by his son,

HENRY GREY, 11th Baron Grey de Ruthyn, and 8th Earl of Kent, who m. Elizabeth, dau. and co-heir of Gilbert Talbot, Earl of Shrewsbury, but d. in 1639 s. p.; when the Barony of Grey de Ruthyn, devolved upon his sister, Susan, Lady Longueville, and has since been enjoyed by her descendants; while the Earldom of Kent passed according to the limitation to his distant relation (revert to children of George, 2nd earl).

THE REV. ANTHONY GREY, rector of Burbache, co. Leicester, as 9th Earl of Kent. This nobleman resisted strenuously the claim of Charles Longueville, to the Barony of Grey de Ruthyn, upon the plea, "that when a barony by writ was once involved in an earldom, it should wait upon such earldom, and might not be subsequently transferred to another family, by a dau. and heiress, so long as the earldom continued in the male." But the decision was against his lordship, and it established the point, that an earldom, or other superior dignity, does not attract a barony in fee. The earl m. Magdeline, dau. of William Purefoy, Esq., of Caldecote, co. Warwick, by whom he had, with other issue,

HENRY, his successor.

His lordship d. in 1643, and was s. by his eldest son,

HENRY GREY, 10th Earl of Kent, who m. 1st, Mary, dau. of Sir William Courteen, Knt., by whom he had a son,

Henry, who d. young, in the earl's lifetime.

His lordship m. 2ndly, Amabel, dau. of Sir Anthony Benn, recorder of London, and widow of the Hon. Anthony Fane, a younger son of Francis, Earl of Westmoreland, by whom he had issue,

ANTHONY, his successor.

Elizabeth, m. to Banastre Maynard, 3rd Lord Maynard.

The earl d. in 1651, and his lady, who, from her numerous acts of benevolence, was called the "Good Countess," lived to the advanced age of ninety-two, surviving her husband forty-seven years. The earl was s. by his only son,

ANTHONY GREY, 11th Earl of Kent. His lordship m. Mary, dau. and heiress of John, 1st Baron Lucas, of Shendfeld, co. Essex, which lady was created, 7 May, 1663, BARONESS LUCAS, of Crudwell, co. Wills, with remainder to her heirs male by the said earl; failing which, "the title not to be suspended, but to be enjoyed by such of the dau. and co-heirs, if any shall be, as other indivisible inheritances, by the common law of this realm, are usually possessed." The earl had issue by her ladyship,

HENRY, his successor.

Amabel, who d. unm.

His lordship d. in 1702, and was s. by his only son,

HENRY GREY, Lord Lucas (a dignity which he had inherited at the decease of his mother in 1700), as 12th Earl of Kent. His lordship was created, 14 December, 1708, VISCOUNT GOODRICH, of Goodrich Castle, co. Hereford; Earl of Harold, co. Bedford, and MARQUESS OF KENT. On 22 April, 1710, his lordship obtained a dukedom, as DUKE OF KENT, and in three years afterwards was installed a knight of the Garter. At the demise of Queen ANNE, he was one of the lords entrusted with the administration of the kingdom, until the arrival of his majesty, King GEORGE I., by whom he was received with so much favour as to have several of the most honourable and important places and offices at court conferred upon him. Nor was he less esteemed by King GEORGE II., at whose coronation he carried St. Edward's staff, and was afterwards constituted lord-lieutenant and custos-rotulorum of the county of Bedford. His grace m. 1st, Jemima, eldest dau. of Thomas, Lord Crewe, of Steane, by whom he had, with two other sons who both d. young.

i. ANTHONY, Earl of Harold, who was summoned to parliament as Lord Lucas, of Crudwell, in 1719, and the next year appointed one of the lords of the bedchamber. His lordship m. Lady Mary Tufton, dau. of Thomas, Earl of Thanet; but d. s. p. in 1723. His death is mentioned as having arisen from an ear of barley which his lordship had inadvertently put into his mouth, by which he was choked.

ii. Henry, d. in the twenty-first year of his age, in 1717.

i. Amabel, m. John, Viscount Glenorchy, son and heir of John Campbell, Earl of Breadalbane; and dying in 1727, left an only dau.,

Lady Jemima Campbell, who m. Philip, 2nd Earl of Hardwicke, and had two daus.,

Amabel, who s. as Baroness Lucas, and was created Countess de Grey.

Mary-Jemima, m. to Thomas Robinson, 2nd Lord Grantham, and had issue,

Thomas-Philip, EARL DE GREY, who d. 1869, leaving two daus., Anne-Florence, Baroness Lucas, and Mary-Gertrude, m. to Capt. Henry Vyner.

Frederick-John, created Viscount Goderich and Earl of Ripon, father of the present EARL DE GREY.

ii. Jemima, m. to John, 3rd Lord Ashburnham, and became great grandmother of Bertram, present Earl of Ashburnham.

iii. Anne, m. to Lord Charles Cavendish, brother of William, Duke of Devonshire.

iv. Mary, m. to Dr. Gregory, dean of Christ Church.

His grace m. 2ndly, Sophia, dau. of William, Duke of Devonshire, by whom he had a son, who d. in infancy, and a dau.,

Anne-Sophia, m. to the Right Rev. John Egerton, Lord Bishop of Durham.

The duke having arranged the marriage of his grand-dau., Lady Jemima Campbell, with the Hon. Philip York, son and heir of Philip, Lord Hardwicke, was created MARQUIS DE GREY 9 May, 1740, with limitation to himself and his issue male; and in default thereof to the said Lady Jemima Campbell, and her issue male. His grace d. at Wrest House, in Bedfordshire, 6 June, in the following year, when all his honours became EXTINCT, save the MARQUISATE DE GREY and the BARONY OF LUCAS, which devolved upon his aforesaid grand-dau., then Lady Jemima York, at whose decease, in 1770, without male issue, the MARQUISATE also became EXTINCT; but her ladyship's eldest dau., Lady Amabel York, who m. in 1772, Alexander, Lord Polwarth (created a British peer, as Lord Hume, of Berwick,) s. to the BARONY OF LUCAS, and was created, 6 October, 1816, COUNTESS DE GREY, with remainder in default of male issue, to her sister, Jemima, Dowager-Baroness of Grantham, and her male issue.

His lordship d. in 1675, and was s. by his eldest son,

FORDE GREY, 3rd Lord Grey, of Werke. This nobleman joining in the rebellion of the Duke of Monmouth, commanded the horse at Sedgemoor, where he is accused of having treacherously deserted his post, and of flying at the first charge; certain it is, that he subsequently made terms for himself, and preserved his life by giving evidence against his associates. After the Revolution, his lordship obtained the favour of King WILLIAM, and was created by letters patent, dated 11 June, 1695, Viscount Grey, of Glendale, and EARL OF TANKERVILLE. He was afterwards a lord of the Treasury, sworn of the privy council, and in 1700, lord privy-seal. He m. Mary, dau. of George, Lord Berkeley, and had an only dau.,

GREYSTOCK—BARONS GREYSTOCK.

By Writ of Summons, dated 23 June, 1295.

Lineage.

This barony the Earl of Ranulph de Meschines gave to one Lyolf, or Lyulphe, and King HENRY I. confirmed the same unto Phorne, son of the said Lyulphe, whose posterity took their surname from the place, and were called de Graystock. Phorne was s. by his son Ivo, who was father of Walter; his son, RANULPH d. 12th King JOHN, and was s. by his son William, whose son and successor,

THOMAS DE GREYSTOCK obtained a royal charter, 20th HENRY III., to hold a weekly market and yearly fair. This Thomas m. Christian, dau. of Roger de Viteripont, the first of that name of Appleby Castle, and was s. by his son,

ROBERT DE GREYSTOCK, who dying in the 38th HENRY III., was s. by his brother,

WILLIAM DE GREYSTOCK, who paying £100 for his relief, and doing his fealty, had livery of the lands of his inheritance. This William had a military summons to attend the king at Chester, 42nd HENRY III., in order to restrain the hostilities of the Welsh. He m. Mary, the eldest dau. and co-heir of Roger de Merlay, an eminent baron of the north, by whom he acquired the manor of Morpeth, in Northumberland, and had issue, two sons, JOHN, and William, and a dau., Margaret, m. to Sir Robert de la Val, Knt. This feudal lord d. in 1288, and was s. by his elderson,

JOHN DE GREYSTOCK, who in the 22nd EDWARD I., had summons with other great men, to attend the crown to advise upon certain important affairs of the nation, and in pursuance of that advice, went with the king into Gascony, the French monarch having then invaded those territories; where distinguishing himself in arms, he was the next year summoned to parliament as a baron, and subsequently to all the parliaments of his time. In two years afterwards, we find his lordship again in the wars of Gascony, and then in the retinue of Anthony Bec, bishop of Durham, and patriarch of Jerusalem. In the 28th and 29th EDWARD I., he was in the wars of Scotland. His lordship d. without issue in 1305, when he settled his manor and barony of Greystock upon his cousin, RALPH, son of William Fitz-Ralph, Lord of Grimthorpe, in Yorkshire, son of the baron's aunt, Jeane; his brothers and uncles being then all dead, without issue male, which

RALPH FITZ-WILLIAM, in the 10th EDWARD I., paid a fine to the king of 100 marks for license to marry Margery, widow of Nicholas Corbet, and dau. and heir of Hugh de Bolebec; and in the 24th of the same reign, as brother and heir of Geoffrey Fitz-William, of Yorkshire, had livery of the said Geoffrey's lands upon doing his homage. This nobleman was much engaged in the wars of Scotland; and in the 7th EDWARD II., we find him governor of Berwick, and joined in commission with John, Lord Moubray, and others, in the wardenship of the marches. He was the next year governor of Carlisle, and founded a chantry at Tinemouth, for the soul of John, Lord Greystock, his kinsman, and all his ancestors. His lordship d. in 1316, having had summons to parliament as a baron, under the designation of "Ralp Fitz-William," from 23 June, 1295, to 6 October, 1315. He was s. by his 2nd but eldest surviving son,

ROBERT FITZ-RALPH, 2nd baron, but never summoned to parliament, who m. Elizabeth, dau. of — Nevill, of Stainton, co. Lincoln, and dying the year after his father, was s. by his son,

RALPH DE GREYSTOCK, b. 1298, which surname he assumed, and was summoned to parliament by that designation, from 15 May, 1321, to 17 September, 1322. His lordship, by virtue of a special dispensation from the Pope, m. Alice,* dau. of Hugh, Lord Audley, they being within the 3rd and 4th degrees of consanguinity; and had an only son, WILLIAM. Lord Greystock having been a principal in seizing Sir Gilbert de Middleton, in the castle of Mitford, for treason, was soon afterwards poisoned, while at breakfast, through the contrivance of that person. He was s. by his son, WILLIAM DE GREYSTOCK, 4th baron, b. 1321, summoned to parliament from 20 November, 1348, to 16 December, 1357.

This nobleman served in France under the Black Prince. He obtained permission to make a castle of his manor house, at Greystock, and was constituted governor of Berwick; but during his governorship, being commanded to attend, personally, King EDWARD into France, Berwick fell into the possession of the Scots, whereupon the king was much offended; it being clearly proved, however, that Lord Greystock was absent on no other occasion, he obtained his pardon at the request of Queen Philippa. His lordship m. 1st, Lucy de Lucie, dau. of Lord Lucie, from whom he was divorced, without issue. He m. 2ndly, Joane, dau. of Lord Fitz-Hugh, by whom (who m. after his decease, Anthony de Lucie, and Sir Matthew Redman, Knt.), he had issue, RALPH, his successor, William and Robert, and a dau., Alice, m. Sir Robert de Harrington, and d. s. p. He d. 10 July, 1359, and was s. by his eldest son,

RALPH DE GREYSTOCK, 5th baron, summoned to parliament from 28 November, 1375, to 5 October, 1417, as "Radulfo Baroni de Greystok." This nobleman was constituted in the 50th EDWARD III., governor of Loughmaban Castle, in Scotland, and one of the commissioners for guarding the west marches. Moreover, in the 1st RICHARD II., he was joined in commission with Henry, Duke of Northumberland, and others, for guarding the east and west marches, and the next year he assisted the earl in taking the castle of Warwick, of which the Scots had possessed themselves, by surprise. In the 4th RICHARD II., his lordship had the direction of the military expedition against the Scots; but was made prisoner by George, Earl of Dunbar, at Hoseridge, in Glendall. His ransom cost 3,000 marks. His brother William went as a hostage for him to Dunbar, and d. there of the pestilence. After his enlargement he was again constituted one of the commissioners for guarding the west marches. His lordship m. Catherine, dau. of Roger, Lord Clifford, and dying in 1417, had, with a dau., Maud, m. to Endo, son and heir of John, 4th Lord Welles, a son,

SIR JOHN DE GREYSTOCK, 6th baron, b. 1369, summoned to parliament from 24 August, 1419, to 5 July, 1435. This nobleman was constituted, 9th HENRY V., governor of Roxborough Castle, in Scotland, for four years, with an allowance of £1,000 per annum in time of peace, and £2,000 in war. In the 1st HENRY VI., he was joined in commission, with the bishop of London, and others, to treat of peace with JAMES, King of Scotland; and was twice subsequently in a similar commission. In the 13th of the same reign his lordship was one of the chief commanders sent with the forces to the relief of Berwick, then besieged by the Scots. He m. Elizabeth, eldest dau. and co-heir of Robert Ferrers, of Wemmo, by Elizabeth his wife, sole dau. and heir of William Boteler, Lord of Wemmo, and had issue, RALPH, his successor, with three other sons, William, Richard, and Thomas, and a dau., Elizabeth, m. to Roger Thornton, whose only child and heiress, Elizabeth Thornton, m. Sir George Lumley, Lord Lumley, from whom the present Earl of Scarborough collaterally descends. Lord Greystock d. in 1436, and was s. by his eldest son,

SIR RALPH DE GREYSTOCK, 7th baron, summoned to parliament from 29 October, 1436, to 15 September, 1485. This nobleman, who was frequently in commissions to treat with the Scots, m. GUELPH—DUKE OF CUMBERLAND.

By Letters Patent, dated 27 July, 1762.

Lineage.

PRINCE WILLIAM AUGUSTUS, 2nd son of his Majesty King GEORGE II., was created a peer of Great Britain by his grandfather, GEORGE I., 27 July, 1762, as Baron of the Isle of Alderney, Viscount Trematon, in Cornwall, Earl of Kennington, Marquess of Berkhampton, and DUKE OF CUMBERLAND. His royal highness, who adopted early in life the profession of arms, attained a very high military reputation for courage, conduct and ability. He was with his father at the battle of Dettingen, and there displaying great gallantry, receiving a wound in the brunt of the engagement. In this conflict the British arms were victorious; but, subsequently, sustained a defeat under his royal highness at Fontenoy, owing, in a great measure, to the valour of the Irish Brigade, which formed the rear-guard of Marshal Saxe's army. It was upon that memorable occasion that the English monarch is said to have exclaimed in the bitterness of his fortune, "curst be those laws that array my own subjects against me." The duke, in 1746, commanded the English troops against the CHEVALIER, and terminated that very formidable rebellion by his decisive victory of Culloden.

The duke who was a knight of the most noble order of the Garter, d. unm. in 1765, when all his honours became EXTINCT.

HAMILTON—EARL OF RUGLEN.

By Letters Patent, dated 14 April, 1697

Lineage.

LORD JOHN HAMILTON, 4th son of William and Anne, Duke and Duchess of Hamilton, bapt. at Hamilton 26 January, 1665, was created a peer of Scotland, by the titles of EARL OF RUGLEN, Viscount of Riccartoun, and Lord Hillhouse, by patent, dated 14 April, 1697, to him and the heirs male of his body; which failing, to the heirs whatsoever of his body; and he took the oaths and his seat in parliament, 19 July, 1698. On the death of his brother, Charles, Earl of Selkirk, in 1739, that title and the Barony of Crawford-John, in Lanarkshire, devolved on him; but the Barony of Riccartoun then went, in terms of the entail, to Lord Archibald Hamilton, his youngest brother, the Earl of Ruglen, who was thenceforward styled the Earl of Selkirk and Ruglen; d. at Edinburgh, 3 December, 1741, in the eightieth year of his age, and was buried at Cramond. He was s. in the title of Selkirk and Barony of Crawford-John by his grandnephew, Dunbar Hamilton, of Baldoon, and in the title of Ruglen and his other extensive property by his eldest dau. His lordship m. 1st (contract dated 21 June, 1694), his cousin-german, Lady Anne Kennedy, only dau. of John, 7th Earl of Cassilis, by his 1st wife, Lady Susan Hamilton, and by her had issue,

HARCLA—BARON HARCLA, EARL OF CARLISLE.

Barony, by Writ of Summons, dated 15 May, 1321.

Earldom, by Charter, dated 25 March, 1322.

Lineage.

ANDREW DE HARCLA (son of Michael de Harcla, sheriff of Cumberland, from the 13th to the 16th EDWARD I. inclusive), having distinguished himself in the Scottish wars, was constituted by King EDWARD II., governor of the castle of Carlisle, warden of the marches, and elevated to the peerage, by writ of summons, dated 15 May, 1321, as BARON HARCLA; in which year his lordship had the good fortune to completely rout the insurgents under Thomas Plantagenet, Earl of Lancaster, at Boroughbridge, and to seize the earl himself, whom he conveyed a prisoner to the king at York, and had soon afterwards executed at Pontefract. In consideration of this eminent service, his lordship was created an earl, under the title of EARL OF CARLISLE, by the girding of a sword, accompanied by a charter in which it was covenanted, that for the better support of the dignity, he should have to himself, and the heirs male of his body, lands and rents in the cos. of Cumberland and Westmoreland, of 1,000 marks per annum value, and 500 marks per annum more in the marches of Wales, and until such provision should be made, that he should receive 1,000 marks per annum out of the exchequer. Besides these substantial records of royal favour, this charter, for the first time in such a grant, set forth in the preamble, a detail of the merits of the dignified person: it was dated at Pontefract, 25 March, 15th EDWARD II., anno 1322. "Thus elevated," says Dugdale, "from a mean condition, for he was merely a knight of small fortune, he grew so lofty, that he began to manifest the hatred publicly, which he had long privately borne, towards Hugh le Despencer (the greatest and most powerful favourite of his time), whom the king had recently advanced to the Earldom of Winchester." This feeling towards Despencer led the earl to make private overtures to the Scots, which being communicated to the king, he was seized (by Anthony de Luci) at Carlisle, and brought to trial there, by virtue of a commission, dated at Knaresborough, 27 February, 16th EDWARD II., and directed to Edmund, Earl of Kent, John, Lord Hastings, Sir Ralph Basset, Sir John Peche, Sir John Wisham, and Geoffrey le Scrope, Esq. Before this court, his lordship was accused of having conspired with James Douglas, a Scot, whereby the king, for lack of his assistance, was defeated in a battle, near the abbey of Bland, in Yorkshire; so that he was necessitated for the security of his person, to fly to York; and the earl being found guilty, sentence was then and there pronounced against him: viz.—"That his sword should be taken from him, and his gilt spurs hacked from his heels. That he should then be drawn and hanged by the neck; his heart and bowels taken out of his body, burnt to ashes and winnowed; his body cut into quarters; one to be set on the principal tower of Carlisle Castle; another upon the tower at Newcastle-upon-Tyne; a third upon the bridge at York; and the fourth at Shrewsbury; while his head was to be placed upon London Bridge;" which judgment was executed upon the unhappy nobleman accordingly, on the morrow after St. Chad's day (3 March) 1322, and all his honours became, of course, forfeited.

His lordship had a brother, John de Harcla, who d. the same year, seized of the manor of Whitehall, co. Cumberland, leaving a son and heir, ANDREW, then three years of age.

HARCOURT — BARONS HARCOURT, OF STANTON HARCOURT, CO. OXFORD, VISCOUNTS HARCOURT, EARLS HARCOURT.

Barony, by Letters Patent, dated 3 September, 1711.

Viscounty, by Letters Patent, dated 24 July, 1721.

Earldom, by Letters Patent, dated 1 December, 1749.

Lineage.

This ancient and eminent family traced its pedigree to BERNARD, a nobleman of the royal blood of Saxony, who acquired, in 876, when ROLLO, the Dane, made himself master of Normandy, the lordships of Harcourt, Cailleville, and Beaufdel, in that principality. Bernard's son,

TORP, called "the Rich," had three sons. The eldest, Tourade, is said to be the ancestor of Beaumont or Bellemont, Counts of Meilent, in France, and Earls of Leicester. The 2nd son,

TURCHETIL, Seigneur de Turqueville and Turquerange, was governor to WILLIAM II., Duke of Normandy. His eldest son,

ANCHETIL, Sire de Harcourt, being lord of that place was the first to assume the surname. Of his seven sons, the eldest, Anguerrand or Errand de Harcourt, attended William, Duke of Normandy at the Conquest, and returned to Normandy in 1078. The 2nd son,

ROBERT DE HARCOURT, built the castle of Harcourt in Normandy, A.D. 1100. He had besides three younger sons,

WILLIAM, his heir.

Richard (Sir), a Knight Templar.

Philip, dean of Lincoln, who assisted at the coronation of HENRY II., d. 1162.

The eldest son,

WILLIAM DE HARCOURT was Lord of Harcourt, Cailleville, Beaufcel, and lord of the manor of Stanton-under-Bardon, co. Leicester: he had issue,

Robert, Seigneur and Baron de Harcourt, &c., ancestor of the Dukes de Harcourt, peers of France and of the Counts d'Aumale, Counts de Tankerville, Viscounts de St. Sauveur and other branches of that illustrious house.

Ivo, of whom we treat.

Simon, m. Adeliza, dau. and co-heir of Osbert de Arden, of Kingsbury, co. Warwick, and d. s. p.

Beatrice, m. to Robert de Basset.

Of the above sons,

IVO DE HARCOURT had, with a younger, Sir John, an elder son and heir,

SIR ROBERT DE HARCOURT, Knt., sheriff of the cos. of Warwick and Leicester in 1199-1201 and 1202, in which last year he died. He m. Isabel, only child and heir of Richard de Camville, by Milcent his wife, cousin to Adeliza, King HENRY I.'s 2nd consort. By this lady Sir Robert had issue,

WILLIAM (Sir), his heir.

Oliver, who joined Lewis, Prince of France, and his party, against King JOHN, but was made prisoner at the battle of Lincoln, 1217.

John, seated at Rodeley, co. Leicester, m. Hawis, dau. of Sir William Burdet.

HARINGTON—BARONS HARINGTON.

By writ of Summons, dated 30 December, 1324.

Lineage.

The family of Harington derived their surname from Haverington, co. Cumberland, a lordship which they very anciently possessed; but from the time of EDWARD I. their chief seat and residence was at Aldingham, in Lancashire, which manor was acquired by

ROBERT DE HARINGTON, with his wife Agnes, sister and heir of William de Cancefield, or Cavefield, son and heir of Richard de Cancefield, by Alice his wife, sister and heir of Michael Flameng, Lord of Aldingham. He had with a younger son, Robert, an elder son,

JOHN DE HARINGTON, who, in the 34th EDWARD I., amongst the rest of those stout young soldiers which were then to attend the king into Scotland, received the honour of knighthood, with Prince Edward, by bathing and other sacred ceremonies. Sir John had a military summons, in the 4th EDWARD II., for the Scottish wars. In the 12th of the same reign he had a charter of free-warren in all his demesne-lands in the cos. York and Lancaster, and in the 14th EDWARD III., a license to impark 600 acres of wood, moor, and marsh, within the precincts of his lordship of Aldingham. He was summoned to parliament as a baron, from 30 December, 1324, to 13 November, 1345. His lordship m. Margaret, dau. of Sir Richard Baringham, Knt., and had an only son, ROBERT, who d. v. p., leaving issue, by his wife Elizabeth, one of the daus. and co-heirs of John de Multon, of Egremond.

JOHN, successor to his grandfather.

Robert, from whom descended the Lords Harington, of Exton.

Simon, ancestor of the Haringtons, of Bishton.

Lord Harington d. in 1348, and was s. by his grandson,

JOHN DE HARINGTON, 2nd baron, summoned to parliament from 14 February, 1348, to 10 March, 1349. This nobleman d. in 1363, seized of the third part of the manor of Multon, co. Lincoln, of the manors of Aldingham, Thirnum, and a moiety of the manor of Ulveston, in Lancashire, of the manor of Austwyke, co. York, and of those of Millum, Mosearghe, Haverington, with its members, and a third part of the manor of Egremond, in Cumberland. He d. 1363, and was s. by his son, then in minority,

ROBERT DE HARINGTON 3rd baron, summoned to parliament from 4 August, 1377, during the remainder of his life. This nobleman received the honour of knighthood at the coronation of RICHARD II., and was the same year employed in that monarch's service at Calais. His lordship m. Isabel, dau. and co-heir of Sir Nigel Loring, K.G., and had issue,

JOHN (Sir), his successor.

WILLIAM, successor to his brother.

He d. in 1405, and was s. by his elder son,

SIR JOHN DE HARINGTON, 4th baron, summoned to parliament under the misnomer of ROBERT,* from his accession to the peerage until 3 September, 1417. This nobleman was in the expedition made into France in the 3rd HENRY V.; and the next year, being retained by indenture to serve the king in those wars, he received £295 in hand, towards his wages, upon that account. But soon after, purposing to travel into foreign parts, he declared his testament, 8 June, 1417, bequeathing his body to be buried wheresoever he should happen to die, and leaving to Elizabeth his wife, one-half of all his silver vessels; after which he survived not a year, for the probate of that will bears date 27 April, next ensuing year. Leaving no issue, his lordship was s. by his brother,

SIR WILLIAM DE HARINGTON, 5th baron, K.G., summoned to parliament from 26 February, 1421, to 6 September, 1439. This nobleman served the office of sheriff for Yorkshire, and was governor of the castle at York, in the 10th HENRY V., he was afterwards several years engaged in the wars of France in the reigns of HENRY V. and HENRY VI. His lordship m. Margaret,

* The name of Robert de Harington occurs regularly in the summonses to parliament, from 1st RICHARD II. to 4th HENRY V.; but as Robert, the last baron d. in 1405 (twelve years before the latter period), and as John, Baron Harington, is stated in the rolls of parliament to have been present 22 December, 8th HENRY IV., 1406, it may be inferred that all the writs after the 7th HENRY IV. were directed to this baron, and that the christian name of Robert on the rolls, after that year, was an error.—NICOLAS the sister of Thomas, son of Sir Robert Nevill, of Thornby, Knt., and had an only child,

ELIZABETH (who d. v. p.), m. to William, Lord Bonville, and had a son,

WILLIAM BONVILLE, who, in her right, became Lord Harington, d. v. p., leaving a dau.,

CECILY BONVILLE, who m. 1st, Thomas Grey, Marquess of Dorset, and 2ndly, Henry Stafford, Earl of Wiltshire.

Lord Harington d. in 1457, leaving his grandson, WILLIAM BONVILLE, above-mentioned, his heir. CECILY BONVILLE, the dau. and heiress of the said William, having m. Thomas Grey, 1st Marquess of Dorset, for her 1st husband, she conveyed the Baronies of Bonville and Harington to the noble house of Grey, where they continued until the attainder in 1554 of Henry Grey, Duke of Suffolk, grandson of the said Cecily Bonville, and the said Thomas, Marquess of Dorset, when those dignities, along with his grace's other high honours, became forfeited. By her 2nd husband, Henry Stafford, Earl of Wiltshire, Cecily Bonville had no issue.

JOHN HARINGTON, 2nd baron, at whose decease in the following year (1614), the Barony of Harington, of Exton, became extinct, and his lordship's estates devolved upon his sisters. The Countess of Bedford, Dugdale says, notwithstanding her large fortune, wasted by her profuseness, not only her own estate, but some portion of her husband's. Pennant, in describing the pictures at Woburne Abbey, notices "a full length of that fantastic lady, Lucy, Countess of Bedford, dressed in as fantastic a habit, with an immense veil distended behind her. Her ladyship was a patroness of literature, and there are several Epistles of Daniel, the poet, and the celebrated Doctor John Donne, dedicated to her."

Nicholas Stone, statuary to King JAMES I., made a tomb for her father, mother, brother, and sister, and for which the countess paid him £1020, and had it erected at Exton.

HARLEY—EARL OF OXFORD.

By Letters Patent, dated 24 May, 1711.

Lineage.

The family of Harley can be traced to a period antecedent to the Conquest, and its station was then so eminent, that the great house of Harlai, in France, deduces its origin from the Harleys of England.

SIR ROBERT DE HARLEY (eldest son of Sir Richard de Harley, Knt., who d. about the 13th EDWARD II.) m. Margaret, eldest dau. and co-heir (with her sister, Elizabeth, wife of Sir Richard de Cornwall, son of Richard, Earl of Cornwall, King of the Romans, brother of King HENRY III.) of Sir Bryan de Brampton; by which marriage he acquired a great estate and the seat of Brampton Castle, which continued for centuries the chief residence of his descendants. His great-grandson,

SIR JOHN HARLEY, of Brampton Castle, received the honour of knighthood from EDWARD IV., on the field of battle, at Gaston, near Tewkesbury, 9 May, 1471, and was sheriff of Shropshire in the 21st year of the same monarch. From him lineally descended

THOMAS HARLEY, Esq.,* of Brampton Castle, who was born about the year 1543, and obtained a grant from King JAMES I. of the honour and castle of Wigmore, co. Hereford. He m. Margaret, dau. of Sir Andrew Corbet, Knt., of Morton Corbet; and 2ndly, Anne, dau. of Walter Griffith, Esq., of Burton Agnes, and dying in 1631, was s. by his only surviving son,

SIR ROBERT HARLEY, K.B., M.P. for the co. Hereford. This gentleman had a grant, 12 September, 1626, of the office of master and worker of moneys to be coined in the tower of London during his life, with a salary of £4,000 a-year; but, after the murder of the king, refusing to coin with any other than the die of the deceased monarch, he was removed by parliament. Sir Robert m. 1st, Anne, dau. of Charles Barrett, Esq., of Belhouse, Essex; 2ndly, Mary, dau. of Sir Francis Newport; by neither of whom, however, had he any issue to survive; and 3rdly, Brilliana (so christened from Brill, of which her father was governor at the time of her ladyship's birth), dau. of Edward, Viscount Conway, by Dorothy, dau. of Sir John Tracy, of Todington, co. Gloucester, and sister to Mary, wife of the celebrated General Sir Horace Vere, Lord Vere, of Tilbury (by which alliance the Harleys became connected with the Veres, Earls of Oxford, Holles's, Earls of Clare, and other ancient families). Lady Brilliana Harley was celebrated for her gallant defence of Brampton Castle, during the civil wars, when invested, in 1643, by the rebels, whom she forced to raise the siege after seven weeks of unavailing hostility. Her ladyship dying, however, in the October following, the besiegers returned to the castle, which, after a second gallant resistance, being forced to surrender, was burnt to the ground. Sir Robert Harley d. 6 November, 1656, and was s. by his eldest son,

COLONEL SIR EDWARD HARLEY, member for the co. Hereford in the parliament which restored CHARLES II., by whom he was appointed governor of Dunkirk. Sir Edward m. 1st, in 1654, Mary, dau. of Sir William Burton, of Parkgate, by whom he had two daus., Brilliana, wife of Alexander Popham, Esq., and Martha, wife of Samuel Hutchins, Esq.; and 2ndly, Abigail, dau. of Nathaniel Stephens, Esq., of Essington, co. Gloucester, by whom he had (with other issue),

* Jane, sister of this Thomas Harley, of Brampton, m. Roger Mynors, Esq., of Treago, ancestor of Peter Richards-Mynors, Esq., of Treago.

ROBERT, of whom presently, as Earl of Oxford.

Edward, of Eyewood, co. Hereford, M.P., recorder of Leominster, and one of the auditors of the Imprest, m. Sarah, 3rd dau. of Thomas Foley, Esq., of Whitley, co. Worcester, and had,

EDWARD, who s. to the Earldom of Oxford.

Robert, M.P., recorder of Leominster, d. unm. in 1774.

Abigail, m. to the Hon. John Verney, master of the Rolls.

Colonel Sir Edward Harley d. 8 December, 1700, and was s. by his eldest son,

ROBERT HARLEY, Esq., b. 5 December, 1661. This gentleman was first returned to parliament for Tregony, in Cornwall; and afterwards, in 1690, for the town of Radnor, which he continued to represent so long as he remained a commoner. On 11 February, 1700-1, Mr. Harley was elected speaker of the House of Commons. In 1704, he was sworn of the privy council, and constituted one of the principal secretaries of state, filling the speaker's chair at the same time. In 1710, he was appointed chancellor of the Exchequer. About this period Mr. Harley had a miraculous escape from assassination, having been stabbed with a pen-knife by the Marquess of Guiscard, then under examination before a committee of the privy council at Whitehall. On 24 May, 1711, the right hon. gentleman was elevated to the peerage, by the titles of Baron Harley, of Wigmore, co. Hereford, EARL OF OXFORD, and EARL OF MORTIMER, with remainder, in default of male issue, to the heirs male of his grandfather, Sir Robert Harley, knight of the Bath; and 29 May, in the same year, his lordship was constituted lord high treasurer of England. The earl m. 1st, Elizabeth, dau. of Thomas Foley, Esq., of Whitley Court, co. Worcester, by whom he had,

EDWARD, his successor.

Abigail, m. to George, Earl of Kinnoull; and d. in 1750.

Elizabeth, m. to Pergrine Hyde, Duke of Leeds.

His lordship m. 2ndly, Sarah, dau. of Thomas Middleton, Esq., but had no other issue. On 10 June, 1715, Lord Oxford was impeached by the Commons of high treason, and was committed to the Tower by the House of Lords, where he suffered imprisonment until 1 July, 1717, when he was acquitted, after a public trial by his peers. His memory is celebrated by Pope in the following lines:—

"A soul supreme, in each hard instance tried,
Above all pain, all anger, and all pride,
The rage of power, the blast of public breath,
The lust of lucre, and the dread of death."

The earl d. 21 May, 1724, and was s. by his only son,

EDWARD, 2nd earl. This nobleman devoted himself much to literature; and the country is much indebted to him for the celebrated collection so well known as the Harleian Miscellany, purchased by parliament from the countess in 1764, after the earl's decease, and deposited in the British Museum. His lordship m. 31 October, 1713, Lady Henrietta Cavendish Holles, only dau. and heir of John Holles, last Duke of Newcastle of that family (the dignity expired in 1713), by whom he had an only dau. and heir, Margaret-Cavendish, who m. in 1734, William, 2nd Duke of Portland. The earl dying without male issue, 16 June, 1741, the honours devolved, according to the reversionary clause in the patent, upon his first cousin,

EDWARD HARLEY, Esq., M.P. for the co. Hereford, as 3rd earl (refer to children of Col. Sir Edward Harley). His lordship m. in 1725, Martha, eldest dau. of John Morgan, Esq. of Tredegar, co. Monmouth, by whom (who d. in 1774) he left,

I. EDWARD, his successor.

II. John, D.D., bishop of Hereford, and dean of Windsor; b. 29 September, 1728; m. 23 February, 1770, Rosch, dau. of Gwynne Vaughan, Esq. of Treburry, co. Radnor; and dying 7 January, 1785, left,

1 EDWARD, who inherited as 5th earl.

2 John, in holy orders; b. 31 December, 1774; d. unm. 20 October, 1815.

1 Frances, d. 25 November, 1848, aged seventy-six.

2 Martha, d. 25 January, 1824.

III. Thomas, b. 24 August, 1730; an alderman of London, M.P. for that city, and lord mayor in 1769; m. 15 March, 1752, Anne, dau. of Edward Bangham, and had five daus., co-heirs to his fortune, viz.,

1 Martha, m. 30 December, 1779, to George Drummond, Esq. of Stanmore; and d. in 1788.

2 Anne, m. to George, 2nd Lord Rodney; and d. in 1840.

3 Sarah, m. to Robert, 9th Earl of Kinnoull; d. in 1837.

4 Elizabeth, m. 8 October, 1783, to David Murray, Esq.; and d. 9 July, 1824.

5 Margaret, m. to Sir John Boyd, Bart.; and d. 20 November, 1830.

Alderman Harley d. 1 December, 1804; his wife d. 16 January, 1798.

IV. William, in holy orders, prebendary of Worcester; d. 9 July, 1769.

i. Sarah, d. unm., 1737.

ii. Martha, m. 20 April, 1764, Charles Milborne, Esq., of Wonaston. The Priory, Abergavenny, co. Monmouth, and had an only dau. and heir, Mary, wife of Thomas Swinerton, Esq., of Butterton, co. Stafford.

His lordship d. 11 April, 1765, and was s. by his eldest son,

EDWARD, 4th earl, b. 2 September, 1726. His lordship m. 11 July, 1761, Susannah, eldest dau. of William Archer, Esq. of Welford, co. Berks; but d. without issue in 1790, when the family honours devolved upon his nephew (revert to the Hon. and Right Rev. Dr. John Harley, bishop of Hereford).

EDWARD, 5th earl, b. 20 February, 1773; m. 3 March, 1794, Jane-Elizabeth, dau. of the Rev. James Scott, A.M., rector of Stokin, co. Southampton, by whom (who d. 20 November, 1824) he had issue, EDWARD, Lord Harley, b. 20 January, 1800; d. s. p. 1 January, 1828.

ALFRED, last earl.

JANE, m. 17 August, 1835, Henry Bickersteth, Esq., afterwards Lord Langdale, and had a dau., Jane-Frances, m. 16 December, 1867, to Alexander, Count Teleki de Szék. Lady Langdale resumed her maiden name of Harley, after the death of her brother, the last Earl of Oxford.

Charlotte-Mary, m. to General Bacon.

Anne, m. in 1835, to the Cavalière San Giorgio, deceased.

Franca, m. in 1835, to Henry-Vernon Harcourt, Esq., who d. 25 February, 1853.

His lordship d. in January, 1840, and was s. by his son,

ALFRED, 6th earl, b. 10 January, 1809; who m. 17 February, 1831, Miss Eliza Nugent, but d. s. p. 19 January, 1853, when the honours became extinct.

HASTANG—BARON HASTANG.

By Writ of Summons, dated 19 December, 1311.

Lineage.

Of this family whose chief seat was at Lemington, co. Warwick, and thence called Lemington Hastang, was

ATROP HASTANG, who gave to the canons of Nostell, co. York, the churches of Lemington and Newbold; and bestowed on the canons of Kenilworth, the church of Whitnash. To this Atrop s. his son,

ATROP HASTANG, who was s. by his son,

HUMPHREY HASTANG, who, joining the rebellious barons against King JOHN, had his lands seized, but returning to his allegiance, they were restored in the 1st HENRY III. This Humphrey was s. by his son,

ROBERT HASTANG, who m. Joane, dau. and co-heir of William de Curli. This Robert gave a mark in gold, in 1st HENRY III., for resplinting his knighthood. But afterwards taking part with Montford, Earl of Leicester, he was one of those who held out the castle of Kenilworth, for which his lands were seized, and given to Sir James de Aldithley and Sir Hugh de Turbervill. He had restitution of them, however, upon paying a fine under the "Dictum de Kenilworth." Robert de Hastang was s. by his son,

ROBERT DE HASTANG, who in the 10th EDWARD II., was constituted one of the commissioners to treat with Robert de Brus, and his party in Scotland, upon a truce betwixt both realms; and was summoned to parliament as a baron in 5th EDWARD II.; his son,

JOHN DE HASTANG, 2nd baron, does not appear from the existing rolls, to have been summoned to parliament; his son, (it is presumed)

THOMAS DE HASTANG, 3rd baron, had summons 25 February, and 20 November, 1342, but his name does not afterwards occur in the list of summonses. His lordship m. Maud, widow of John Strange of Knockyn, and had a son,

SIR JOHN DE HASTANG, who m. 1st, Blanch — but had no issue, and 2ndly, Maud, dau. of Sir William Trussel, Knt., by whom he left at his decease, 1360, two daus., his co-heirs, Maud, m. to Ralph de Stafford, of Grafton.

Joane, m. to Sir John Salisbury, Knt.

In the representatives of those ladies, the Barony of Hastang is now vested.

Arms—Az., and a chief gu., over all a lion rampant, or.

HASTINGS—BARONS HASTINGS, EARLS OF PEMBROKE.

Barony, by Writ of Summons, dated 14 October, 1264.

Earldom, by Letters Patent, dated 13 October, 1339.

Lineage.

This noble family derived its surname from Hastings, (one of the Cinque Ports) in Sussex, the lastage of which they farmed for a considerable period from the crown.

ROBERT, Portreve of Hastings, was s. by

WALTER DE HASTINGS, who held the office of steward to King HENRY I., by Sergeantie, in respect of his tenure of the manor of Ashele, in the county of Norfolk, viz., by the service of taking charge of the naperie, (table linen,) at the solemn coronation of the kings of this realm. This Walter, by Hadewise, his wife, had a son,

HUGH DE HASTINGS, Lord of Fillongley, co. Warwick, who m. Erneburga, dau. of Hugh de Flamville, and niece and heir of Robert de Flamville, of Aston-Flamville, co. Leicester, by whom he acquired that manor, as well as Gristing, in Norfolk, and the stewardship of the abbey of St. Edmundsbury, and had two sons and a dau., viz.,

WILLIAM, his successor.

Richard, a priest, rector of Barewell, in Leicestershire.

Mahant, to whom he gave the manor of Arke, in Devonshire, on her marriage with Robert de Wyford; from this lady descended,

Sir Geoffrey de Anke, or Hanke, who, temp. HENRY III., conveyed that estate, in marriage with his dau., to Michael Davyll.

Hugh de Hastings was s. by his elder son,

WILLIAM DE HASTINGS, steward to HENRY II., who m. 1st, Maude, dau. of Thurstan Banaster, and had two sons,

i. Henry, who d. s. p.

ii. WILLIAM, of whom we treat.

William de Hastings m. 2ndly, Ida, dau. of Henry, Earl of Ewe, and had a son,

THOMAS, ancestor of the Earls of Huntingdon.

The 2nd son,

WILLIAM DE HASTINGS, m. 1st, Margery, dau. of Roger Bigot, Earl of Norfolk, and had, (with a dau. Ida, m. to Stephen de Segrave) a son,

HENRY DE HASTINGS, who, upon paying a fine of 50 marks, and doing his homage, had livery of his lands in the co. Warwick, Leicester, Salop, Bedford, Norfolk, and Suffolk. This Henry m. Ada, 4th dau. of David, Earl of Huntingdon, and of Maud, his wife, dau. of Hugh, and one of the sisters and co-heirs of Ranulph, Earl of Chester; and through her he eventually shared in the great estates of the Earls of Chester. By this lady he had issue, HENRY, his successor, and two daus., Margery and Hilaria, who, at the time of his decease, were in the nunnery of Alnston, and their tuition was then committed to William de Cantelupe. This Henry de Hastings attending King HENRY into France, in the 26th of that monarch's reign, was taken prisoner at the great defeat which the English army then sustained at Zante, but was soon afterwards released. In a few years subsequently he accompanied Richard, Earl of Cornwall, with divers other of the principal nobility, into France, whither the said earl proceeded at that period with a splendid retinue, but for what purpose does not appear. About the close of the same year (1260) Henry de Hastings d. and was s. by his son,

HENRY DE HASTINGS, then in minority, whose wardship was granted to Guy de Lusignan, King HENRY III.'s half brother. This Henry, in the 44th HENRY III., had a military summons to be at Shrewsbury, with horse and arms, to march against the Welsh; and the next year had a similar summons to be at London. But very soon afterwards we find him in arms with Simon de Montfort, Earl of Leicester, and other turbulent spirits, against the king, and with those excommunicated by the archbishop of Canterbury. After which he became one of the most zealous of the baronial leaders, and distinguished himself at the battle of Lewes, wherein the king was made prisoner, received the honour of knighthood at the hands of Montfort; and was constituted governor of Scarborough and Winchester castles. This stout baron was s. at his decease in 1249, by his son,

HENRY DE HASTINGS, who m. Eve, sister, and at length co-heir, of George de Cantlupe, Baron of Bergavenny, and had issue,

JOHN, his successor.

Edmund, who had summons to parliament, as a baron, from 29 December, 1299, 28th EDWARD I., to 26 July, 1313, 7th EDWARD II., but nothing is known of his descendants.

And three daus. Audra, Lora, and Joane. This feudal lord was summoned to parliament, as BARON HASTINGS, 14 December, 1264. He d. in 1268, and was s. by his son,

JOHN HASTINGS, 2nd baron, summoned to parliament as LORD HASTINGS, from 23 June, 1295, to 22 May, 1313, although in right of his mother, and the tenure of the castle of Bergavenny, he was unquestionably BARON OF BERGAVENNY. This nobleman was in the expedition to Scotland in the 12th EDWARD I., and in three years afterwards attended Edmund, Earl of Cornwall, regent of the kingdom during the king's sojourn in Gascony, into Wales. He was subsequently in an expedition to Ireland, and again in Scotland, 28th EDWARD I., where he performed military service for five knights' fees. The next year he continued in the Scottish wars, under Edward, Prince of Wales, and in the 31st EDWARD I. he assisted at the celebrated siege of Kaelaverock. His lordship had afterwards, 34th EDWARD I., a grant from the king of the whole co. Menteth, with the isles, as also of all the manors and lands of Alan, late Earl of Menteth, then declared an enemy and rebel to the king. He was likewise seneschal of Aquitaine, and one of the competitors, in 1290, for the crown of Scotland, in right of his descent from Ada, dau. of David, Earl of Huntingdon, brother of MALCOLM and WILLIAM, Kings of Scotland. His lordship m. 1st, Isabel, dau. of William de Valence, Earl of Pembroke, half brother of King HENRY III., and sister and co-heir of Aymer de Valence, Earl of Pembroke, by whom (who d. 3 October, 1305) he had, with other issue,

JOHN, his successor.

Elizabeth, m. to Roger, Lord Grey, of Ruthyn.

Lord Hastings m. 2ndly, Isabel, dau. of Hugh Despencer, Earl of Winchester, and had two other sons, viz., Hugh, (Sir) of Gressing Hall, co. Norfolk, who m. Margery, dau. of Sir Jordan de Foliot, and sister and co-heir of Sir Richard Foliot, and Thomas. From the elder son lineally descended EDWARD HASTINGS, of whom in the sequel, as competitor with Lord Grey de Ruthyn, for the arms of Hastings. His lordship d. in 1313, and was s. by his eldest son,

JOHN HASTINGS, 3rd baron, summoned to parliament as LORD HASTINGS, from 26 November, 1313, to 20 February, 1325. This nobleman was actively engaged in the wars of Scotland from the 4th to the 12th EDWARD II., and the next year, upon the insurrection of the lords, when they banished the two Spencers, his lordship being one of their adherents, deserted the barons, and joined the king at Cirencester. Moreover, he was the same year again in the Scottish wars; and in the 16th EDWARD II., he was made governor of Kenilworth Castle. Lord Hastings married Julian, grand-dau. and heir of Thomas de Leybourne, Baron Leybourne, which lady m. 2ndly, Thomas le Blount, and 3rdly, William de Clinton, Earl of Huntingdon. His lordship d. in 1325, and was s. by his son,

LAURENCE HASTINGS, 4th baron, then but five years of age, who, upon attaining majority, was, by royal favour, by letters patent dated 13 October, 1339, declared EARL OF PEMBROKE; and about the same time, was in the expedition made into Flanders. The next year he attended King EDWARD III., in the notable adventure at sea against the French, where he participated in the glory of the victory achieved near Slugs. He was afterwards constantly in the French wars, wherein he displayed great valour. The earl m. Agnes, dau. of Roger Mortimer, Earl of March, and dying in 1348, was s. by his only son,

JOHN HASTINGS, 2nd Earl of Pembroke, K.G., who, in the 46th EDWARD III., being selected for his experience and valour, was sent lieutenant into Aquitaine, and arrived at the port of Rochel, then besieged by the French, on the eve of St. John the Baptist. But no sooner had he got his ships within the harbour, than being suddenly attacked by the Spanish fleet, before he had been able to form his line of battle, he suffered so signal a defeat that few of his men escaped. His squadron was entirely consumed, himself and his principal officers made prisoners, and treasure to the amount of 20,000 marks, which King EDWARD had sent over to maintain the war, became a prize to the enemy. He subsequently endured four years' harsh captivity in Spain, from which he was eventually released through the interference of Bertrand Clekyn, Constable of France, but died on his journey from Paris (whither he had removed from Spain) to Calais, being considered to have been poisoned by the Spaniards, 16 April, 1375. His lordship m. 1st, the Lady Margaret Plantagenet, 4th dau. of King EDWARD III., by whom he had no issue. He m. 2ndly, Anne, dau. and at length sole heir of Sir Walter Manny, K.G., by Margaret, Duchess of Norfolk, by whom he had an only son,

JOHN, his successor.

This John, Earl of Pembroke, according to Dugdale, in the 43rd EDWARD III., having obtained the king's license for so doing, made a feoffment of all his castles, lordships, manors, &c., in England and Wales, to certain uses. Which feoffment upon his decease, was, by the feoffees, delivered to the king's council at Westminster to be opened; when it was found, that in case he died without issue of his body, the town and castle of Pembroke should come to the king, his heirs and successors; and the castle and lordship of Bergavenny, with other lands in England and Wales, to his cousin, William de Beauchamp (his mother's sister's son), in fee, provided he should bear the arms of Hastings, and endeavour to obtain the title of Earl of Pembroke—in default thereof, then to his kinsman, William de Clinton, upon similar conditions. This Earl of Pembroke was the first English subject who followed the example of King EDWARD III., in quartering of arms; as may be seen in his escutcheon on the north side of that monarch's tomb, in Westminster Abbey, wherein he beareth quarterly, Or, a maunch, gules, for HASTINGS, and Barry, arg. and az., an orle of martlets, gules, for VALENCE. His lordship d. in 1375, and was s. by his son,

JOHN HASTINGS, 3rd Earl of Pembroke, then but two years and a half old. At the coronation of RICHARD II., this nobleman (not having attained his fifth year) claimed to carry the great golden spurs; and proving his right to that honourable service, it was adjudged that by reason of his minority, another should be appointed in his behalf; viz., Edmund Mortimer, Earl of March, whose dau. Philippa, he m. although very young. The 13th RICHARD II., that monarch keeping his Christmas at Woodstock, his lordship, only then seventeen years of age, adventuring to tilt with Sir John St. John, was so severely wounded, by an unlucky slip of Sir John's lance, in the abdomen, that he died almost immediately, 30 December, 1391, when leaving no issue, the Earldom of Pembroke became extinct. At his lordship's thus premature decease, REGINALD, LORD GREY DE RUTHYN, (grandson of Roger, Lord Grey, and his wife, Elizabeth Hastings, dau. of John, 2nd Baron Hastings,) was found to be his heir of the whole blood. And Hugh, Baron Hastings, eldest son of Hugh Hastings, of Gressing Hall, co. Norfolk, (eldest son of the said John, 2nd Baron Hastings, by his 2nd wife, Isabel, dau. of Hugh de Spenser, Earl of Winchester) his heir of the half blood; between the son of this Lord Hastings of Gressing Hall, Edward Hastings, and Reginald Lord Grey, there was a memorable competition in the court military, before the constable and marshals of England, for the right of bearing the arms of Hastings, which lasted the full period of twenty years, and was eventually decided against Hastings, who, besides being condemned in the heavy costs of £950 17s. 1d. was imprisoned sixteen years for disobeying the judgment.

"Unless the BARONY OF HASTINGS," says Nicolas, "be considered the same as Bergavenny," (and he proves that it was totally unconnected with the feudal tenure of the castle of Bergavenny,) "it must be vested in the descendants and representatives of the said Edward Hastings."

NOTE.—The superstition of the period attributed the untimely fate of the last and youthful Earl of Pembroke to a divine judgment upon the family, in regard that Aymer de Valence, Earl of Pembroke, his ancestor, was one of those who passed sentence of death upon Thomas Plantagenet, Earl of Lancaster, at Pontefract: for it was observed, that subsequently to that judgment, none of the Earls of Pembroke saw his father, nor any father of them took delight in seeing his children.

HASTINGS—BARON HASTINGS, OF GRESSING HALL, CO. NORFOLK.

By Writ of Summons, dated 25 February, 1342.

Lineage.

JOHN HASTINGS, 2nd Lord Hastings, (grandfather by his 1st wife of Laurence Hastings, Earl of Pembroke,) m. for his 2nd wife, Isabel, dau. of Hugh Despencer, Earl of Winchester, and had, with a younger son,

HUGH HASTINGS, of Gressing Hall, co. Norfolk, whose grand-son,

HUGH HASTINGS, of Gressing Hall, having distinguished himself in arms in Flanders, was summoned to parliament as a baron by King EDWARD III., 25 February, 1342. In the 20th of the same reign, being designated the king's cousin, his lordship was constituted lieutenant of Flanders, and commander of all the king's forces there, against the French. At this period, he took 300 prisoners, and brought them all to England. In 1359, Lord Hastings was in the wars of Gascony, and in some years afterwards, he attended John Duke of Lan-enter, into Spain; but further nothing is mentioned of this nobleman, because neither himself nor any descendants were subsequently summoned to parliament. His son and eventual heir,

EDWARD HASTINGS, who assumed the title of LORD HASTINGS AND STOTVILLE, but by what authority remains to be established, is the person mentioned in the account of the Hastings, Earls of Pembroke, as having twenty years' litigation with the Lord Grey de Ruthyn, regarding the right to bear the arms of Hastings (viz.: or, a maunch, gu). This celebrated cause was heard and decided in the court military, by the constable and marshal of England, and it went finally against Hastings, who was also condemned in heavy costs, and imprisoned sixteen years for disobeying the judgment of the court. Edward Hastings, having likewise questioned the entail of John Hastings, 2nd Earl of Pembroke, by which the Bergavenny and other estates passed to William de Beauchamp. "Beauchamp invited," says Dugdale, "his learned counsel to his house in Pater-Noster-Row, in the city of London; amongst whom were Robert Charlton (then a judge), William Pinchebek, William Brenchesley, and John Catesby (all learned lawyers); and after dinner, coming out of his chappel, in an angry mood, threw to each of them a piece of gold, and said, 'Sirs, I desire you, forthwith to tell me, whether I have any right and title to HASTINGS' lordships and lands? whereupon Pinchebek stood up (the rest being silent, fearing that he suspected them), and said, 'No man here, nor in England, dare say that you have any right in them, except HASTINGS do quit his claim therein; and should he do it, being now under age, it would be of no valilitie.'" Perhaps," (continues the same authority), "there had been some former entail, to settle them upon the heir male, of the family; but whatever it was, HASTINGS apprehended the injury thereby done to him, to be so great, that with extreme anguish of mind, at his latter end, he left God's curse and his own, upon his descendants, if they did not attempt the vindication thereof."

Nicolas considers the Barony of Hastings, which had belonged to the Earls of Pembroke, to be vested in the representatives of this Edward Hastings.

HASTINGS—BARON HASTINGS, OF LOUGHBOROUGH, CO. LEICESTER.

By Letters Patent, dated 19 January, 1558.

Lineage.

GEORGE HASTINGS, 1st Earl of Huntingdon, m. Lady Anne Herbert, widow of Sir Walter Herbert, Knt., and dau. of Henry Stafford, Duke of Buckingham, by whom he had, with several other children, FRANCIS, his successor in the Earldom of Huntingdon, and

SIR EDWARD HASTINGS, a very eminent person in the time of Queen MARY. In the 4th EDWARD VI., he served the office of sheriff for the cos. Warwick and Leicester; and the same year, he was sent with his brother, the Earl of Huntingdon, to dislodge the French from a position which they had taken up between Bologne and Calais. Upon the accession of MARY, he was constituted receiver of the honour of Leicester, parcel of the Duchy of Lancaster, cos. Leicester, Warwick, Northampton, and Nottinghamshire; and being the same year made a privy councillor to the queen, and master of her horse, was appointed collector-general to all her revenues within the city of London, and the cos. of Middlesex, Essex, and Hertfordshire. He obtained a grant at this time of the manor of Bosworth, co. Leicester; and was subsequently made a knight of the Garter. In the 4th and 5th of PHILIP and MARY, Sir Edward was constituted lord-chamberlain of the household, and was elevated to the peerage, by letters patent, dated 19 January, 1558, as BARON HASTINGS, of Loughborough, co. Leicester. His lordship d. at Stoke Pogis, co. Bucks (where he had built a chapel, and founded and endowed an hospital), in 1558, when, as he left no male issue, the barony became EXTINCT.

HATTON—BARONS HATTON OF KIRBY, CO. NORTHAMPTON, VISCOUNTS HATTON, OF GRETTON.

Barony, by Letters Patent, dated 29 July, 1643.

Viscounty, by Letters Patent, dated 17 January, 1682.

Lineage.

This family which derived its surname from the lordship of Halton, in Cheshire, deduced its pedigree from Nigel, Baron of Halton, in that co., and constable to the old Earls of Chester.

The principal branch of the Hattons, in the days of Queen ELIZABETH, was,

CHRISTOPHER HATTON, Esq., son of William Hatton, Esq., of Holdenby, and grandson of John Hatton, who s. to Holdenby on the death of his mother, Elizabeth, sister and heir of William Holdenby, of Holdenby, and relict of Henry Hatton, Esq., a cadet of an ancient Cheshire family. He was then of Holdenby, co. Northampton, "who," says Dugdale, "being a private gentleman of the Inns of Court, was for his activity and comeliness, taken into favour." "Besides those accomplishments," continues the same author, "and the grace of dancing, he had likewise the addition of a strong and subtle capacity, so that, soon learning the discipline and garb of the times and court, he first became one of the queen's gentlemen pensioners; afterwards gentleman of the privy chamber, captain of the guard, vice chamberlain, and one of the privy council, lastly, Lord Chancellor of England, and a knight of the most noble order of the Garter."

Of this eminent person, the following character is given. "He had a large portion of gifts and endowments; his features, his gait, his carriage, and his prudence, strove to set him off. Everything he did, was so exactly just and discreet, and what he spoke so weighty, that he was chosen to keep the queen's conscience, as her chancellor, and to express her sense as her speaker. The courtiers that envied him, were forced by his superior power to own themselves in error; and the serjeants, who at first refused to plead before him, could not at length but confess his abilities. His place was above his law, but not above his parts, which were infinitely pregnant and comprehensive. His station was great, but his humility was greater; giving an easy access to all addresses. He was so just, that his sentence was a law to the subject, and so wise, that his opinion was an oracle with the queen." Sir Christopher Hatton d. a bachelor, 20 November, 1591, of a broken heart, it is stated, in consequence of his royal mistress having demanded rigorously, an old debt, which he owed her. His adopted (his sister Dorothy's son, by her husband, John Newport, Esq.), his nephew,

SIR WILLIAM NEWPORT, Knt., who thereupon assumed the name of HATTON. This gentleman m. Elizabeth, dau. and heiress of Sir Francis Gawdy, chief justice of the court of Common Pleas, and left at his decease 12 March, 1596, an only dau., FRANCES, who m. Robert Rich, Earl of Warwick. Upon his decease, the greater part of the estates of the Lord Chancellor Hatton, devolved by virtue of an entail upon the the great-great nephew of that eminent individual.

SIR CHRISTOPHER HATTON, K.B., who m. Alice, dau. of Thomas Fanshaw, Esq., of Ware Park, and dying, 11 September, 1619, was s. by his son,

SIR CHRISTOPHER HATTON, who was made a knight of the bath at the coronation of King CHARLES I., and afterwards distinguishing himself by his ardent zeal in the royal cause, he was elevated to the peerage 29 July, 1643, as BARON HATTON, of Kirby, co. Northampton. Upon the restoration of King CHARLES II., his lordship was sworn of the privy council, and constituted governor of Guernsey. Lord Hatton m. Elizabeth, eldest dau. and co-heir of Sir Charles Montague, and niece of Henry, Earl of Manchester, by whom he had issue,

CHRISTOPHER, his successor.

Charles.

Mary.

Jane.

Alice.

He d. in 1670, and was s. by his eldest son,

CHRISTOPHER HATTON, 2nd baron. This nobleman like his father, was governor of Guernsey, and while in that government had one of the most singular escapes from death probably upon record. During his residence at Cornet Castle, the magazine of powder caught fire at midnight by lightning; and his lordship while sleeping in his bed, was blown out of the window, and remained for some time struggling on the ramparts, without sustaining any injury. His lady, and several of her female attendants perished: but one of his children, an infant, was found the next day alive, sleeping in its cradle, under a beam. His lordship was advanced in 1682, to the dignity of Viscount HATTON, of Gretton, co. Northampton. He m. 1st, Lady Cecilia Tufton, dau. of John, Earl of Thanet, and had one surviving dau.,

ANNE, who m. Daniel Finch, 2nd Earl of Nottingham, and 6th Earl of Winchelsea, and had, with three elder sons,

The Hon. EDWARD FINCH, who assumed the additional surname of HATTON, and his grandson, GEORGE FINCH-HATTON, Esq., inherited in 1826, the Earldoms of Winchelsea and Nottingham (see BURKE'S Peerage).

The viscount m. 2ndly, Frances, only dau. of Sir Henry Yelverton, of Gaston Mauduit, co. Northampton, Bart., by whom he had no surviving issue. He m. 3rdly, Elizabeth, dau. and co-heir of Sir William Haleswood, of Maidwell, co. Northampton, and had three sons, William, Charles, and John, and three daus., Elizabeth, Penelope, and Anne. His lordship d. in 1706, and was s. by his eldest son,

WILLIAM HATTON, 2nd viscount, who dying s. p. in 1760, was s. by his brother,

HENRY-CHARLES HATTON, 3rd viscount, at whose decease, the Barony and Viscounty of Hatton became EXTINCT. The estates eventually devolved upon the Hon. Edward Finch Hatton mentioned above.

HAUSTED—BARON HAUSTED.

By Writ of Summons, dated 20 July, 1332.

Lineage.

JOHN DE HAUSTED, in the 1st year of EDWARD II., obtained a grant to himself and the heirs of his body, of the manor of Deusangre, and divers other lands in the co. Northumberland; he was subsequently engaged in the wars of Scotland, and was invested with the power of receiving into protection all those who in the co. Northumberland, and parts adjacent, submitted to the authority of the king. In the 15th of the same monarch he had the castle and honour of Clare, co. Suffolk, committed to his charge; and after the accession of EDWARD III. he was made seneschal of Gascony. For all these services he obtained a grant of 200 marks sterling, to be received yearly during his life out of the customs of Bordeaux, until such time as provision should be made for the payment thereof within this realm: and he was summoned to parliament as a baron from 20 July, 1332, to 22 January, 1336. He d. in 1337 leaving a son and heir, HAY—BARONS HAY, OF SAWLEY, VISCOUNTS DONCASTER, EARLS OF CARLISLE.

Barony, by Letters Patent, dated 29 June, 1615.

Viscounty, by Letters Patent, dated 5 July, 1618.

Earldom, by Letters Patent, dated 13 September, 1622.

Lineage.

Amongst the natives of Scotland who accompanied King JAMES I. into England was a gentleman of the name of Hay, whom Sir Anthony Weldon thus describes: "The king no sooner came to London, but notice was taken of a rising favourite, the first meteor of that nature appearing in our climate; as the king cast his eye upon him for affection; so did all the courtiers, to adore him, his name was

MR. JAMES HAY, a gentleman that long lived in France, and some say of the Scottish guard to the French king; this gentleman coming over to meet King JAMES, and share with him in his new conquest (according to the Scottish phrase), it should seem had some further acquaintance with the then leiger embassadour in Scotland for the French monarch, who coming with his majesty into England, presented this gentleman as a well accomplished person to the king, in such high commendation as engendered such a liking as produced a favourite; in thankful acknowledgement whereof, he did him many fair offices for the present, and coming afterwards an extraordinary ambassador to our king, made him the most sumptuous feast at Essex House, that ever was seen before, never equalled since, in which was such plenty, and fish of that immensity, brought out of Muscovia, that dishes were made to contain them (no dishes in all England before could n'er hold them), and after that a costly voydee, and after that a mask, of choyse noble-men and gentlemen, and after that a most costly banquet, the king, lords, and all the prime gentlemen then about London being invited thither. Truly, he was a most compleat, and well accomplished gentleman, modest and court-like, and of so fair a demeanour, as made him be generally beloved; and for his wisdom, I shall give you but one character for all: he was ever great with all the favourites of his time, and although the king did often change, yet he was (semper idem), with the king and favourites, and got by both; for although favourites had that exorbitant power over the king, to make him grace and disgrace whom they pleased, he was out of that power, and the only exception to that general rule; and for his gettings, it was more than almost the favourites of his time, which appeared

In those vast expenses of all sorts, and had not the bounty of his mind exceeded his gettings, he might have left the greatest estate that ever our age or climate had heard of; he was, indeed, made for a courtier, who wholly studied his master, and understood him better than any other."

"He was employed in very many of the most weighty affairs, and sent with the most stately embassies of our times, which he performed with that wisdom and magnificency, that he seemed an honour to his king and country, for his carriage in state affairs." This celebrated favourite having, by the influence of his royal master, obtained Honora, sole dau. and heir of Edward, Lord Denny, in marriage, had a grant of the name and title of LORD HAY, with precedence next to the barons of England, but no place or voice in parliament. On 29 June, 1615, he was, however, advanced to the dignity of a baron of the realm, under the title of LORD HAY, of Sauley, co. York, without any solemn investiture, his lordship being the first ever so created, the lawyers then declaring that the delivery of the letters patent was sufficient without any ceremony. He was the next year sent ambassador to the court of France. In March, 1617, his lordship was sworn of the privy council, and created Viscount Doncaster, 5 July, 1618, preparatory to his proceeding upon an embassy into Germany. In 1622 he was again employed as ambassador in France, and was advanced 13 September in that year to the EARLDOM OF CARLISLE. Besides all these high honours and trusts he was master of the great wardrobe, gentleman of the robes to King JAMES I., and knight of the most noble order of the Garter. He was also first gentleman of the bed-chamber to King CHARLES I. His lordship m. as already stated, Honora, only dau. and heiress of Edward, Lord Denny, and after her decease he m. the Lady Lucy Percy, youngest dau. of Henry, Earl of Northumberland. He d. 25 April, 1636, and was s. by his only surviving son,

JAMES HAY, 2nd Earl of Carlisle, who m. Lady Margaret Russell, dau. of Francis, Earl of Bedford, but d. s. p. in 1660, when all his honours became extinct.

HEPBURN—EARL OF BOTHWELL.

By Letters Patent, dated 17 October, 1483.

Lineage.

SIR PATRICK HEPBURN, of Hales, eldest son of Sir Adam Hepburn, of Hales, was created a peer of Scotland, by the title of LORD HALES, under which designation he sat among the nobility in the parliament, 16 October, 1467. He left issue,

i. ADAM, 2nd Lord Hales.

ii. George, dean of Dunkeld, and treasurer of the diocese of Moray.

i. Margaret, m. to Patrick, 3rd Lord Haliburton, of Dirlston.

ii. Eupheme, m. to Andrew Macdowall.

The elder son,

ADAM HEPBURN, 2nd Lord Hales, is mentioned as a paramour of Mary of Guelders, dowager of King JAMES II., in 1462. He m. Helen, eldest dau. of Alexander, 1st Lord Home, and by her (who m. 2ndly, Alexander, 10th Lord Erskine) had,

i. PATRICK, 3rd Lord Hales.

ii. Adam (Sir), of Craigs, master of the king's stables, m.

Elizabeth, dau. and co-heir of Walter Ogistoun, of Ogistoun.

iii. George, provost of Bothwell and Lincluden, fell at the battle of Flodden, 9 September, 1513.

iv. John, prior of St. Andrews, founder of St. Leonard's College, 1512.

v. James, rector of Dalry, bishop of Moray, 1516, buried in the cathedral of Elgin.

i. Margaret, m. to Alexander, 1st Earl of Glencairn.

ii. Agnes, m. to William, 1st Lord Livingstone.

iii. Elizabeth, m. to Alexander, master of Home.

iv. Helen, m. to John, 3rd Lord Somerville.

The eldest son,

PATRICK HEPBURN, 3rd Lord Hales, led the Hepburns in the vanguard against the unfortunate monarch, JAMES III., at the battle fought near Bannockburn, 11 June, 1483, where his majesty fell. For his services on that occasion, the new king created his lordship EARL OF BOTHWELL, 17 October, 1483, and conferred upon him the office of high admiral of Scotland for life. The earl m. Lady Janet Douglas, only dau. of James, 1st Earl of Morton; and d. about the year 1507, having had issue,

i. ADAM, 2nd Earl of Bothwell.

ii. John, bishop of Brechin. iii. Patrick, bishop of Moray.

i. Janet, m. to George, 4th Lord Seton.

ii. Mary, m. to Archibald, Earl of Angus.

iii. Margaret, m. to Henry, Lord Sinclair.

The eldest son,

ADAM HEPBURN, 2nd Earl of Bothwell, high admiral of Scotland, who commanded the reserve at the battle of Flodden, and advanced to support the king's attack with such gallantry, that the standard of the Earl of Surrey was endangered; but the fortune of the day changing, Bothwell fell, with his royal master and the flower of Scottish chivalry, on that disastrous day. His lordship m. Agnes Stewart, natural dau. of James, Earl of Buchan, and by her (who m. 2ndly, Robert, 5th Lord Maxwell) left at his decease, in 1513, a son and successor,

PATRICK HEPBURN, 3rd Earl of Bothwell, who d. in 1556, leaving by Margaret Home, his wife, one son and one dau. namely,

JAMES, his heir.

Jean, m. 1st, to John Stewart, prior of Coldingham, natural son of JAMES V.; and 2ndly, John, master of Caithness, by both she had issue.

The son and successor, the too famous

JAMES HEPBURN, 4th Earl of Bothwell, b. in 1536, who played so conspicuous a part in Scottish history, during the reign of the ill-fated MARY STUART, was created by her majesty, 12 May, 1567, a few days after the affair of Craigmole Bridge, and two days prior to their marriage, MARQUESS OF FIFE, and DUKE OF ORKNEY. He had previously been married to Lady Jean Gordon, 2nd dau. of George, 4th Earl of Huntley, from whom he was divorced; and who m. 2ndly, Alexander, 11th Earl of Sutherland; and 3rdly, Alexander Ogilvy, of Boyne. Immediately after his grace's marriage to the queen, an association of the principal nobility was formed against him, and her majesty compelled to dismiss her favourite. Bothwell retreated to the Orkneys, and driven thence, committed some outrages on the trade of Denmark. He was finally taken, and immured in the castle of Malmoe, in Norway, where he d. insane, after ten years' confinement, about the end of 1575, before he had attained the 40th year of his age—a melancholy example of "vaulting ambition, which o'erleaps itself." He was forfeited by the parliament of Scotland, 29 December, 1567, and his titles and vast possessions fell under the attainder.

Arms—Gu., on a chev., arg., two lions pulling at a rose, of the 1st.

HERBERT — BARONS HERBERT, OF HERBERT, AND OF CHEPSTOW, EARLS OF PEMBROKE, EARL OF HUNTINGDON.

V. SIR WILLIAM AP THOMAS, Knt.

The 5th son,

SIR WILLIAM AP THOMAS, alias HERBERT, Knt., who resided at Raglan Castle, in the reign of HENRY V., and was knighted in the French wars of that monarch, m. 1st, Gwladys, widow of Sir Roger Vaughan, Knt. who fell at Agincourt, by the side of HENRY V., and dau. of Sir David Gam, knighted by HENRY V. at Agincourt; and 2ndly, Margaret, dau. of Thomas ap Griffith, by whom he had issue, Margaret, wife of Sir Henry Woogan, Knt., of Wiston, co. Pembroke. Sir William ap Thomas was buried with his 1st wife, Gwladys, in the centre of the chapel of Abergavenny, under a richly carved alabaster monument, and had issue by her, three sons, viz.,

- I. WILLIAM HERBERT, 1st EARL OF PEMBROKE, his heir.

II. Thomas Herbert, of Troy House, near Monmouth.

III. Richard Herbert (Sir), of Colebrooke, co. Monmouth, ancestor of the LORDS HERBERT, of Chisbury, the HERBERTS of Muckross, co. Kerry, &c.

The eldest son,

SIR WILLIAM DE HERBERT, Knt., was Lord of Raglan, co. Monmouth, an estate which he derived from Maud, his grand-mother, dau. and heiress of Sir John Morley, Knt. He was a staunch supporter of the house of York, and for his fidelity and services King EDWARD IV., soon after his accession, constituted him chief justice and chamberlain of South Wales, and made him likewise steward of the castle and lordship of Brecknock, and of all other the castles of Humphrey, Duke of Buckingham, in the same part of the principality. Sir William was summoned to parliament, as BARON HERBERT, of Herbert, 26 July, 1461, and by letters patent, bearing date 3 February following, wherein his manifold services and eminent deserts are recorded, (such as hazarding his life in numerous conflicts against King HENRY VI. and the Lancastrians, particularly against Henry Holland, Duke of Exeter, Jasper Tudor, Earl of Pembroke, James Butler, Earl of Wiltshire, &c.), reducing castles, fortresses, &c., obtained a grant in general tail of the castle, town, and lordship of Pembroke, with all its appurtenances. His lordship had subsequently other extensive grants; was constituted chief justice of North Wales for life, and created EARL OF PEMBROKE, 8 September, 1468. He was afterwards appointed chief forester of Snowdon, and constable of Conway Castle. In the August ensuing the earl won the castle of Harlow, one of the strongest forts in Wales, by assault, and he was shortly after elected a knight of the Garter.

Upon the breaking out of the insurrection anno 1469, 9th EDWARD IV., in the north, on behalf of the Lancastrians, headed by Sir John Coniers, Knt., and Robert Hillyard, who called himself Robin of Riddesdale, the Earl of Pembroke was despatched by the king, with his brother, Sir Richard Herbert, of Colebrooke, in command of 18,000 Welshmen, to meet the rebels, but being deserted by Humphrey Stafford, Earl of Devonshire, who had joined him with 6,000 archers at Banbury, he was compelled to give the insurgents battle with an inferior force, and experienced a signal defeat at Danesmoore, Northamptonshire, when himself and his brother fell into the hands of their enemies, and were immediately executed at Northampton, in 1469, with Richard Widville, Lord Rivers, and his son, by order of the Duke of Clarence, and the Earl of Warwick, who had recently revolted from the banner of York. His lordship m. 1st, Anne, dau. of Sir Walter Devereux, and sister of Walter, Lord Ferrers, of Chartley. The lady's father covenanted, (10 August, 27th HENRY VI.) to give her 500 marks as a fortune; to find meat and drink for Sir W. Herbert and 40 of his men and horses; and to supply the bride with "apparel competent pertaining to her degree." By her he had issue,

WILLIAM, his successor. Walter (Sir).
George (Sir), of St. Julians, otherwise St. Gillians, upon Uske, co. Monmouth, who s. eventually to a portion of the estates of the Earl of Pembroke; and his descendant, the inheritor of those estates, Mary Herbert, m. the celebrated Edward, Lord Herbert, of Chirbury. From the Herberts of St. Julians and Major descended, as heir general, Mrs. JANE HAWKINS, of Tredunnoch.
Philip, of Lanyhangel.
Cecille, m. to Lord Greystock.
Maud, m. to Henry Percy, Earl of Northumberland.
Katherine, m. to George Grey, Earl of Kent.
Anne, m. to John Grey, Lord Powys.
Isabel, m. to Sir Thomas Cokesey, Knt.
Margaret, m. 1st, to Thomas Talbot, Viscount L'Isle, and 2ndly, to Sir Henry Bodringham, Knt.

William, 1st Earl of Pembroke had, besides his issue by Anne, his wife, two sons who have been generally considered illegitimate, viz.,

1. SIR RICHARD HERBERT, Knt., of Ewys and of Grove Radnor, co. Hereford, father, with other issue, of an eldest son, SIR WILLIAM HERBERT, K.G., EARL OF PEMBROKE, so created 12 October, 1551, who had two sons,
 1. Sir Henry Herbert, K.G., 2nd Earl of Pembroke, ancestor of Thomas, 8th Earl of Pembroke, and 5th Earl of Montgomery, who was father, with younger issue, of Henry, 9th Earl of Pembroke and 6th Earl of Montgomery, progenitor of George, 13th and present Earl of Pembroke, and 10th Earl of Montgomery.
 - William, Earl of Carnarvon, so created 3 July, 1793, ancestor of Henry, 4th and present Earl of Carnarvon.
2. Sir Edward Herbert, Knt., of Powys Castle, co. Montgomery, the inheritance of the Greys and Cherletons, Barons of Powys, through the marriage of John de Cherleton with Hewys, heir general of the sovereigns of Powys Wenwynwyn. (refer to Cherleton of Powys) purchased by him 29th Elizabeth, from Edward Grey, natural son of Edward, 3rd Baron Grey, of Powys. The eldest son of Sir Edward Herbert, viz., Sir William Herbert, Knt., was created BARON POWIS, of Powis Castle, 2 April, 1629, and the grandson and heir of the latter, viz., William, 3rd Lord Powis, was created 4 April, 1674, EARL OF POWIS, and 24 March, 1686, MARQUESS OF POWIS; his son William, 2nd Marquess of Powis, had issue,
 1. WILLIAM, 3rd and last Marquess of Powis, who d. unm., when his honours became extinct.
 2. Edward Herbert, who d. before his brother, father of a dau. and heir, Barbara, heiress of her uncle, who m. Henry Arthur Herbert, Esq., created Baron Powis, of Powis Castle, Viscount Louth, and EARL POWIS, 27 May, 1748; his son George, 2nd Earl of Powis, i. s. p., when the estates vested in his sister and heir, Lady Henrietta Antonia, who m. Edward, Lord Clive, created 13 August, 1794, EARL OF POWIS, and was mother, by him, of Edward, 2nd Earl of Powis, father of Edward-James Herbert, 3rd and present Earl of Powis.
3. Sir George Herbert, Knt., of Swansea, ancestor of the Herberts of Swansea.

William, 1st Earl of Pembroke was s. by his eldest son,

WILLIAM HERBERT, 2nd Earl of Pembroke. King Edward IV. wishing to confer the Earldom of Pembroke upon his son, Prince Edward, this nobleman made a resignation* thereof to the crown, and was created in stead EARL OF HUNTINGDON, by charter, bearing date, at York, 4 July, 1479 (Thomas Grey, Earl of Huntingdon, having previously resigned that title on obtaining the Marquessate of Dorset). In the 1st RICHARD III., his lordship was constituted Justice of South Wales, and in the February ensuing, he entered into covenants with that king, to take Dame Katherine Plantagenet, his dau., to wife, before the feast of St. Michael following; as also to make her a certain jointure, and the king to settle lands and lordships of a large annual value upon them, and the heirs male of their bodies. The king further undertaking to be at the expense of the wedding. But this lady dying in her early years, the marriage did not take effect. His lordship afterwards m. Lady Mary Wicliffe, dau. of Richard, and sister and co-heir of Richard, Earl Rivers, by whom he had an only dau. and heiress, ELIZABETH HERBERT, who m. Sir Charles Somerset, Knt., illegitimate son of Henry Beaufort, 3rd Duke of Somerset of that family, which Charles was created in 1514, EARL OF WORCESTER, and from this union the present Ducal family of BEAUFORT derives.

In the 3rd year of HENRY VII., his lordship obtained from the crown a confirmation of the Earldom of Huntingdon. He d. 1491, when the Barony of Herbert, created by the writ of

* Resolutions of the House of Lords in 1640 and 1678, declare that no surrender of a patent can be a bar to a claim of the dignity so surrendered; but previously such surrenders were not uncommon.

EDWARD IV., devolved upon his dau., and the Earldom of Huntingdon is considered to have become EXTINCT, although the charter of EDWARD IV. would appear to create a dignity descending to heirs general.

iii. John Herbert, of Llacherne, co. Carmarthen, m. Janet, dau. of Jenkin Llwyd Vychan, of Pwldyfarth, co. Pembroke, and had daus. and co-heirs.

iv. Thomas Herbert, Esq., of Abergavenny, b. 1462, and buried at Abergavenny, 1529, father of Richard Herbert, Esq., b. 1488, and d. 1557, ancestor, it is stated, of SIR THOMAS HERBERT, Bart., author of Herbert's Travels.

The eldest son,

SIR RICHARD HERBERT, Knt., of Colebrook and Tefaldwyn, the Welsh name of the town of Montgomery, who resided at Montgomery Castle, was steward of the lordships and marches of North Wales, East Wales, and Cardiganshire, temp. HENRY VIII., and was buried in St. Nicholas Church, Montgomery, formerly a chapel of Chirbury, the upper monument in the chancel, being erected to him. By his 1st wife, Margaret, dau. and heir of Griffith ap Rhys ap Philip ap David, of Llwynhowel, he had issue, a son and dau.,

EDWARD HERBERT, of whom presently.

Anne, m. Humphrey ap Howell, of Ynysmaengwyn, co. Merioneth, deputy sheriff to John Sandown, high sheriff for Merionethshire in 1525, derived from Einion ap Griffith, of Corsygedol, and was by him mother of 1 John Wynne ap Humphrey, of Ynysmaengwyn, whose heir-general is William-Thomas-Howland Powell, Esq., of Nanteos, co. Cardigan.

2 Lewis Gwyn, m. Anne, 2nd dau. of Hugh Gwyn, of Llwyngriffri.

3 Jane, m. Griffith Nanney, Esq., of Nanney, co. Merioneth, represented by the Vaughans of Nanney, Barons, extinct.

4 Elizabeth, m. Morgan Lloyd, Esq., of Crogen, in Edeirion, co. Merioneth, and was mother of an eldest surviving son, David ap Morgan Lloyd, living 17 January, 1594, when he signed his visitation pedigree by Lewis Dwn. By Gwenhyfar his wife, dau. of Jenan ap Griffith, of Botweni, co. Merioneth, derived from Owen Gwyndd, Prince of North Wales, he was father of an only son, MORGAN LLOYD, Esq., of Crogen, who m. Margaret, dau. of Peter Meyrick, Esq., of Ucheldre, co. Merioneth, and had numerous issue. This gentleman sold Crogen to Maurice Wynne, Esq., son of Sir John Wynne, of Gwydyr, co. Carnarvon, Baronet.

The only son,

EDWARD HERBERT, Esq., resided at Montgomery Castle, and subsequently at Blackhall, Montgomery, which he built in his old age on the north-east side of the town of Montgomery, a mansion of great extent, which was destroyed by fire, and the site is now only indicated by the foss. This gentleman, a courtier, a gallant soldier, and repressor of turbulence in his neighbourhood, d. at the age of about eighty, and was buried in Montgomery Church. He left besides several daus., four sons,

1. RICHARD HERBERT, his successor.

ii. Mathew Herbert, of Dolgeog, a seat bestowed on him by his father, on his return from the Low Countries.

iii. Charles Herbert, who, after his return from the Low Countries, m. an heiress, and was father, with other children, of an eldest son, Sir Edward Herbert, attorney-general.

iv. George Herbert, of New College, Oxford, a person of great piety, who d. in middle age.

The eldest son,

RICHARD HERBERT, Esq., of Llyssyn, allter Llysmâwr, Montgomery, m. Magdalen, dau. of Sir Richard Newport, Knt., of High Ercall, co. Salop, by Margaret, his wife, dau. and heir of Sir Thomas Bromley, Knt. By this lady, who d. 1627, (having m. 2ndly, Sir John Danvers, Knt., brother of Henry Earl of Danby), Richard Herbert, who d. 1597, and was buried in the south transept of the Llysmâwr chancel, in Montgomery church, where there is a monument to him, had issue,

1. SIR EDWARD HERBERT, of whom presently.

ii. Richard Herbert, who served with reputation as an officer in the Low Countries, where he d., and was buried at Bergen-op-Zoom.

iii. William Herbert, an officer who d. in the Low Countries.

iv. Charles Herbert, Fellow of New College, Oxford, d. young.

v. Rev. George Herbert, an accomplished scholar and public orator of the university of Cambridge, rector of Bamerton, near Salisbury, he d. between 1630 and 1640. His poems were printed at London in 1635, under the title of The Temple; and his Priest to the Temple, in 1652. Lord Bacon dedicated to him a translation of some psalms into English verse.

vi. Henry Herbert, gentleman of the king's privy chamber, and master of the revels, whose only son,

HENRY HERBERT, Lord Herbert, of Chirbury, so created, 26 April, 1691, d. in 1709, leaving a son, Henry, 2nd Lord Herbert, of Chirbury, who d. s. p., when his honours expired.

1. Elizabeth, m. Sir Henry Jones, of Albemarle.

ii. Margaret, m. John Vaughan, son and heir of Owen Vaughan, of Llwydiart.

iii. Frances, m. Sir John Browne, Knt., of Lincolnshire, and had issue.

The eldest son was the celebrated

EDWARD HERBERT, 1st Lord Herbert, of Chirbury, of whom we shall speak in the words of that chivalrous and eminent person himself. "My father was Richard Herbert, Esq., son of Edward Herbert, Esq., and grandchild of Sir Richard Herbert, Knt., of Colebrook, in Monmouthshire, of all whom I shall say a little. And first, of my father, whom I remember to have been black-haired, and bearded, as all my ancestors of his side are said to have been, of a manly or somewhat stern look, but withal very handsome, and well compact in his limbs, and of a great courage, whereof he gave proof, when he was so barbarously assaulted by many men, in the churchyard at Lanervil, at what time he would have apprehended a man who denied to appear to justice; for defending himself against them all, by the help only of one John ap Howell Corbet, he chased his adversaries, until a villian coming behind him, did over the shoulders of the others, wound him on the head behind, with a forest bill, until he fell down, though recovering himself again, notwithstanding his skull was cut through to the pia mater of the brain, he saw his adversaries fly away, and after, walked home to his house at Llyssyn, where after he was cured, he offered a single combat to the chief of the family, by whose procurement it was thought the mischief was committed; but he disclaiming wholly the action as not done by his consent, my father desisted from prosecuting the business further. My grandfather was of a various life; beginning first at court, when, after he had spent most part of his means, he became a soldier; and made his fortune with his sword, at the siege of St. Quintens in France, and other wars, both in the north, and in the rebellions happening in the times of King EDWARD VI., and Queen MARY, with so good success, that he not only came off still with the better, but got so much money and wealth, as enabled him to buy the greatest part of that livelihood which is descended to me. My grandfather was noted to be a great enemy to the outlaws and thieves of his time, who robbed in great numbers in the mountains of Montgomeryshire, for the suppressing of whom he went often, both day and night, to the places where they were; concerning which, though many particulars have been told, I shall mention one only. Some outlaws being lodged in an alehouse, upon the hills of Llandinam, my grandfather and a few servants coming to apprehend them, the principal outlaw shot an arrow against my grandfather, which stuck in the pommel of his saddle; whereupon my grandfather coming up to him with his sword in his hand, and taking him prisoner, he shewed him the said arrow, bidding him look what he had done; whereof the outlaw was no farther sensible, than to say, he was sorry that he left his better bow at home, which he conceived would have carried his shot to his body; but the outlaw being brought to justice, suffered for it. My grandfather's power was so great in the country that divers ancestors of the better families now in Montgomeryshire were his servants, and raised by him. He delighted also much in hospitality; as having a very long table twice covered every meal, with the best meats that could be gotten, and a very great family. It was an ordinary saying in the country at that time, when they saw any fowl rise, fy where thou wilt, thou wilt light at Blackhall; which was a low building, but of great capacity, my grandfather erected in his age; his father and himself, in former times, having lived in Montgomery Castle. Notwithstanding, yet these expenses at home, he brought up his children well, marrying his daughters to the better sort of persons near him, and bringing up his younger sons at the university; from whence his son

Matthew went to the Low Country wars; and, after some time spent there, came home and lived in the country, at Dolegeog, upon a house and fair living, which my grandfather bestowed upon him. His son also, Charles Herbert, after he had passed some time in the Low Countries, likewise returned home, and was after married to an inheretrix, whose eldest son, called Sir Edward Herbert, Knt., is the king's attorney-general. His son, George, who was of New College, in Oxford, was very learned, and of a pious life, died in a middle age of a dropsy. My grandfather died at the age of fourscore, or thereabouts and was buried in Montgomery church, without having any monument made for him, which yet for my father is there set up in a fair manner. My great grandfather, Sir Richard Herbert, was steward, in the time of King HENRY VIII., of the lordships and marches of North Wales, East Wales, and Cardiganshire and had power, in a marshal law to execute offenders; in the using thereof he was so just, that he acquired to himself a singular reputation; as may appear upon the records of that time, kept in the paper chamber at Whitehall, some touch whereof I have made in my history of HENRY, of him I can say little more, than that he likewise was a great suppressor of rebels, thieves, and outlaws, and that he was just and conscionable. He lieth buried likewise in Montgomery; the upper monument of the two placed in the chancel being erected for him. My great-great-grandfather, Sir Richard Herbert, of Colebrook, was that incomparable hero, who (in the history of Hall and Grafton, as it appears), twice passed through a great army of northern men alone, with his poleax in his hand, and returned without any mortal hurt. This Sir Richard Herbert lieth buried in Abergavenny, in a sumptuous monument for those times: whereas his brother, the Earl of Pembroke,* being buried in Tintern Abbey, his monument together with the church, lie now wholly defaced and ruined. This Earl of Pembroke had a younger son, who had a daughter, which married the eldest son of the Earl of Worcester, who carried away the fair castle of Ragland, with many thousand pounds yearly, from the heir male of that house, which was the second son of the said Earl of Pembroke, and ancestor of the family of St. Gillians, whose daughter and heir I after married, as shall be told in its place. My mother was Magdalen Newport, daughter of Sir Richard Newport, and Margaret, his wife, daughter and heir of Sir Thomas Bromley, one of the privy council, and executors of King HENRY VIII. By these ancestors I am descended of Talbot, Devereux, Grey, Corbet, and many other noble families, as may be seen in their matches, extant in the many fair coats the Newports bear. The names of my brothers and sisters were, Richard, William, Charles, George, Henry, Thomas, Elizabeth, Margaret, and Frances (I was myself the eldest). My brother Richard, after he had been brought up in learning, went to the Low Countries, where he continued many years with much reputation, both in the wars, and for fighting single duels, which were many; insomuch, that between both, he carried as I have been told, the scars of four-and-twenty wounds upon him to his grave, and lieth buried in Bergen-op-zoom. My brother William, also a person of great bravery, died a military man in the Low Countries. My brother Charles was fellow of New College, Oxford, where he died young. My brother George,† was so excellent a scholar, that he was made the public orator of the university of Cambridge. Henry came to court, and was made gentleman of the king's privy chamber, and master of the revels; by which means, as also by a good marriage, he attained to great fortunes for himself and posterity to enjoy. Thomas was a naval officer, who won a very high reputation, but finding himself, after many eminent services, as he thought undervalued, he retired to a private and melancholy life, being much discontented to find others preferred to him; in which sullen humour having lived many years, he died, and was buried in London in St. Martin's, near Charing Cross. Elizabeth, my eldest sister, was married to Sir Henry Jones, of Albemarle. Margaret was married to

* In the 9th EDWARD IV. an insurrection, headed by Sir John Coniers and Robert Riddesdale, in favour of HENRY VI., having broken out, this earl and his brother, Sir Richard Herbert, being sent to suppress it, were joined by the Earl of Devonshire, but a dispute arising between the two earls, the Earl of Devon separated from Pembroke, who, engaging the enemy at Dunsmoore, near Edgecote, in Northamptonshire, was defeated and taken prisoner, with his brother, and both were put to death, with Richard Widville, Earl Rivers, father of the queen, by command of the Duke of Clarence and the Earl of Warwick, who had revolted from Edward.

† George took orders, and was rector of Bemerton, near Salisbury. He died between 1630 and 1640. His poems were printed at London in 1633, under the title of The Temple and his Priest to the Temple, in 1652. Lord Bacon dedicated to him a translation of some psalms into English verse.

John Vaughan, son and heir of Owen Vaughan, of Llywdiart. Frances, my youngest sister, was married to Sir John Brown, Knt., of the county of Lincoln, who had by her divers children; the eldest son of whom, although young, fought divers duels, in one of which it was his fortune to kill one Lee, of a great family in Lancashire. I shall now come to myself. I was born at Eytton, in Shropshire, in 1581; but as our limits prevent our proceeding farther, so much in detail—we shall state at once that Mr. Herbert married about the time that he had attained his fifteenth year, his kinswoman, Mary, dau. and heir of Sir William Herbert of St. Gillians, co. Monmouth, (the lady had been enjoined by the will of her father to marry a Herbert), then twenty-one years of age, and had issue, RICHARD, Edward, Beatrix, and Florence. About the year 1608 he resolved to travel, and for that purpose came to court and obtained license to go beyond sea. In his sojourn upon the continent he became a proficient in military exercises, and a most accomplished cavalier. He was made a knight of the Bath at the coronation of King JAMES I., and was afterwards of that monarch's council for military affairs, and his Majesty's ambassador to Lewis XIII. of France, to mediate for the relief of the Protestants of that kingdom, in which service he continued more than five years; managing the high trust with so much fidelity and discretion, that he was advanced to the dignity of a baron of Ireland, (where had a fair estate), by the title of Lord Herbert, of Castle Island; and afterwards proving himself a faithful servant of King CHARLES I., in the council and the field, his lordship was created a peer of England by letters patent, dated 7 May, 1629, as BARON HERBERT of Chirbury, co. Salop. "This noble lord," (says Dugdale), "was author of that learned Philosophical Tract (in Latin), de Veritate, printed in 1658, and since, as I have heard, translated into sundry languages." As also of these others—

Arabella, d. unm.

Alicia, m. John Buzzard, Esq., of Barby Manor, M.P., elder brother of Paul Buzzard, Esq., of Walthampton, ancestor of the Buzzards, Baronets.

His lordship d. 13 May, 1655, and was s. by his eldest son,

EDWARD HERBERT, 3rd Lord Herbert, of Chirbury. This nobleman, like his predecessors, was zealously attached to the fortunes of King CHARLES I., and had the gratification to witness the restoration of the monarchy. His lordship m. 1st, Anne, dau. of Sir Thomas Middleton, Knt., of Chirk Castle, co. Denbigh, and 2ndly, Elizabeth, dau. and co-heir of George Brydges, 6th Lord Chandos, but by her (who m. 2ndly, William, Earl of Inchiquin and 3rdly, Charles, Lord Howard of Esrick), he had no issue, and the honours, at his lordship's decease, 9 December, 1678, devolved upon his brother, HENRY HERBERT, 4th Lord Herbert, of Chirbury, who m. Lady Catherine Newport, dau. of Francis, Earl of Bradford, but having no issue, the Irish barony, and that of Herbert, of Chirbury, at his lordship's decease, 21 April, 1691, became EXTINCT.

The HERBERTS of Muckross, co. Kerry, descended from Sir Richard Herbert, of Colebrook, brother of the 1st Earl of Pembroke of the 1st creation, are now the male representatives of the noble house of Herbert.

Barony, by Letters Patent, dated 2 April, 1629.
 Earldom, by Letters Patent, dated 4 April, 1674.
 Marquessate, by Letters Patent, dated 24 March, 1687.

Lineage.

The Hon. Sir EDWARD HERBERT, Knt., of Red Castle, anciently called Poole Castle, but now Powis Castle,* 2nd son of William Herbert, 1st Earl of Pembroke, of the existing peerage, m. Mary, only dau. and heiress of Thomas Stanley, Esq., of Standen, co. Hertford, master of the Mint in 1570, by whom he had issue,

Anne, m. to William, son and heir of Sir William Stanley, of Horton, co. Chester.

Catherine, m. to Sir William Massey, of Puddington, in Cheshire.

The eldest son,

WILLIAM HERBERT, was made a knight of the Bath, at the coronation of King JAMES I., and elevated to the peerage, as BARON POWIS, of Powis Castle, 2 April, 1629. His lordship m. Eleanor, dau. of Henry Percy, Earl of Northumberland, and had issue, PERCY, who was created a baronet in the lifetime of his father, 16 November, 1622.

Katherine, m. 1st, to Sir Robert Vaughan, Knt., of Lydiard, co. Montgomery; and 2ndly, to Sir James Palmer, Knt., of Dorney Court, Bucks, father of Roger, Earl of Castle-maine.

Lucy, m. to William Abington, Esq., of Hinlop, co. Worcester.

His lordship d. at the advanced age of eighty-three, 7 March, 1665, and was s. by his son,

SIR PERCY HERBERT, Bart., 2nd Lord Powis. This nobleman m. Elizabeth, dau. of Sir William Craven, an alderman of London, and sister of William, Earl Craven, by whom he had,

WILLIAM, his successor.

His lordship d. in 1667, and was s. by his son,

WILLIAM HERBERT, 3rd Lord Powis, who was created 4 April, 1674, EARL OF POWIS, 24 March, 1687, Viscount Montgomery, and MARQUESS OF POWIS. This nobleman attaching himself to the fortunes of his royal master, withdrew with his Majesty into France, at the revolution, and was subsequently created by the fallen monarch Marquess of Montgomery, and Duke of Powis, but those dignities were never recognized in England. His lordship was outlawed for not returning within a certain period, and submitting to the new government. He m. Lady Elizabeth Somerset, dau. of Edward, Marquess of Worcester, and had issue,

WILLIAM, his successor.

Mary, m. 1st, to Richard, son of Carril, Viscount Molineux, in Ireland; and 2ndly, to Francis, 4th Viscount Montague.

Winifred, m. to William Maxwell, 5th Earl of Nithsdale.

The marquess d. at St. Germain, 2 June, 1696, and his son,

WILLIAM HERBERT, was restored to the dignities of Viscount Montgomery, and Earl and Marquess of Powis, and took his seat in the House of Lords, 8 October, 1722. His lordship m. Mary, dau. and co-heir of Sir Thomas Preston, Bart., of Furness, co. Lancaster, by whom she had issue,†

* This castle, anciently the seat of inheritance of the Chertons and Greys, Barons Powis, was purchased by the Herberts, in the reign of ELIZABETH.

† Of this marriage (that of William Herbert, 2nd Marquess, and Mary, dau. of Sir Thomas Preston) there was issue also several daus., the eldest, Lady Mary, who is represented in her portrait, at Powys Castle, as "Minerva," was conspicuous in her time. She was engaged deeply in the Mississippi scheme, and dreamt of millions; aimed at being royal consort to the late Pretender: failed in her plans, and with another noble adventurer, retired to Spain, in search of the gold in the mines of Asturias. She fell under the satire of Pope—

"The crown of Poland, venal twice an age,
 To just three millions stinted modest Gage,
 But nobler scenes Maria's dreams unfold;
 Hereditary realms, and worlds of gold.
 Congenial souls! whose life one av'rice joins,
 And one fate buries in the Asturian mines."

WILLIAM, his successor.

Edward, who m. 7 July, 1734, Henrietta, dau. of the Earl of Waldegrave, and dying in November of that year, left his lady euicinte, who was delivered of a dau., BARBARA HERBERT, who m. HENRY-ARTHUR HERBERT, Esq., created LORD HERBERT, of Chirbury, in 1743, and Earl of Powis, in 1748 (see that dignity). Lady Henrietta Herbert m. 2ndly, Mr. Beard, the comedian.

Mary, m. Joseph, Count Gage, brother of the 1st Viscount Gage.

Anna, m. Henry, 6th Lord Arundel, of Wardour.

Charlotte, m. 1st, Edward Morris, Esq.; and 2ndly, Edward Williams, of Yeslyn, Esq.

Theresa, m. Sir R. Throckmorton, Bart.

The marquess d. in 1745, and was s. by his elder son,

WILLIAM HERBERT, 3rd Marquess of Powis. This nobleman dying unm. in 1748, the Marquessate and Earldom of Powis, with his other honours, became extinct; but he devised the whole of his estates to the husband of his niece, Henry-Arthur, Lord Herbert of Chirbury.

Arms—Per pale, az. and gu., three lions rampant, arg., a crescent for difference.

HERBERT—BARONS HERBERT, OF CHIRBURY.

By Letters Patent, dated 28 April, 1694.

Lineage.

HENRY HERBERT, only son and heir of Sir Henry Herbert, gentleman of the king's chamber, and master of the revels, and nephew of the celebrated Edward, Lord Herbert of Chirbury, was elevated to the peerage by King WILLIAM III., 28 April, 1694, as BARON HERBERT, of Chirbury. His lordship m. Anne, dau. and co-heir of Mr. Alderman Ranney, of the city of London; and dying in 1709, was s. by his only son,

HENRY HERBERT, 2nd baron. This nobleman m. Mary, dau. of John Wallop, Esq., of Farley, co. Southampton; but dying in 1738 s. p., this Barony of Herbert of Chirbury became EXTINCT.

Arms—Per pale, az. and gu., three lions rampant, arg., armed and langued, or.

HERBERT—EARL OF TORRINGTON.

By Letters Patent, dated 29 May, 1689.

Lineage.

EDWARD HERBERT, grand-nephew of the celebrated William Herbert, Earl of Pembroke and Huntingdon, had three sons; Richard, ancestor of the Lords Herbert of Chirbury; Matthew, of the Earls of Powis; and Charles, father of Sir Edward Herbert, an eminent lawyer, and attorney-general to CHARLES I., who d. 1657, leaving issue,

ARTHUR HERBERT, Esq., who was elevated to the peerage by King WILLIAM III., 29 May, 1689, as BARON TORRINGTON, co. Devon, with remainder, failing his issue male, to his brother Charles. His lordship, who was brought up to the naval service, had the command of a fleet, temp. CHARLES II., before Tangier, and afterwards against Algiers; but being removed from his commission by King JAMES II., he retired into Holland, and was graciously received by the Prince of Orange. "He was a man of good understanding, but profusely luxurious, and on every occasion so sullen and peevish, that it was plain he valued himself much, and expected the same from others; and it was thought, his private quarrel with Lord Dartmouth, for having more of the king's confidence than himself, was the root of his resentment against his Majesty. The reputation he had gained with the people in England, and his skill in sea affairs, made it necessary to endeavour to keep him in good temper, so far as homage and observance could do it." His lordship was admiral of the Dutch fleet, on the coming over of the Prince of Orange, and was subsequently first commissioner of the Admiralty, and commander-in-chief of the British fleet. In 1690, he engaged the French fleet, near Beechy Head, but although he fought most gallantly against a superior force, yet not achieving a victory, subjected him to considerable reprehension, deprivation of his command, and committal to the Tower. He was eventually tried by court-martial, and acquitted, but never again employed. His lordship m. 1st, Miss Anne Hadley; and 2ndly, Anne, dau. of Sir William Airmine, and widow of Sir Thomas Woodhouse, but having no issue, the Earldom of Torrington and minor dignity, at his lordship's decease, 14 April, 1716, became EXTINCT, his brother Charles having predeceased him s. p.

Arms—Per pale, az. and gu., three lions rampant, arg., a mullet for difference.

HERBERT—BARONS HERBERT, OF CHIRBURY, EARLS OF POWIS, &c., BARONS HERBERT, OF CHIRBURY AND LUDLOW.

Barony, by Letters Patent, dated 21 December, 1743.
Earldom, &c., by Letters Patent, dated 27 May, 1748.
Barony, with special remainder, by Letters Patent, dated 7 October, 1749.

Lineage.

SIR WILLIAM AP THOMAS of Raglan Castle, left issue, with an elder son, William, Earl of Pembroke and Huntingdon (see those titles), a younger son, Sir Richard, of Colebrooke and Montgomery, from whose eldest son descend the HERBERTS of MCCRUM in IRELAND, whilst Sir Richard, the 2nd son, steward of the Welsh marches, was father of Edward Herbert, Esq., who had three sons, Richard, ancestor of the Lords Herbert of Chirbury of the 1st and 2nd creation; MATTHEW and Charles, grandfather of the Earl of Torrington (see that title).

MATTHEW HERBERT, Esq., M.P. for Monmouth, 5th ELIZABETH, was father of Sir Matthew, created a baronet in 1660, but d. s. p., and of Francis, of Oakley Park, whose eldest son, Richard, marrying Florence, sister and co-heir of Edward and Henry, 3rd and 4th Lords Herbert of Chirbury, was father of

HENRY-ARTHUR HERBERT, Esq., who, (becoming heir male to the Chirbury family on the death of Henry, 2nd baron of the 2nd creation, in 1738), was created Baron Herbert of Chirbury, 21 December, 1743, and was advanced, 27 May, 1748, to the Barony of Powis, of Powis Castle, the Viscounty of Ludlow, and the EARLDOM of Powis. He m. Barbara, only dau. of Lord Edward Herbert, and niece of William, 3rd and last Marquess of Powis, and s., under the will of that nobleman, to his large estates. The earl obtained another peerage, 16 October, 1749, as BARON HERBERT OF CHIRBURY AND LUDLOW, with remainder, failing the heirs male of his own body, to his brother Richard, and the heirs male of his body, in default of which, to Francis Herbert, Esq., of Ludlow, and the heirs male of his body. His lordship d. in 1772, and was s. by his son,

GEORGE-EDWARD-HENRY-ARTHUR HERBERT, 2nd Earl of Powis, who d. s. p. in 1801, when the Barony of Herbert of Chirbury, the Earldom of Powis and its minor dignities, with the Barony of Herbert of Chirbury and Ludlow (his lordship's uncle having predeceased him wife), to whom the last barony was in reversion), became EXTINCT, while the earl's estates passed to his sister, Lady Henrietta-Antonia Herbert, who m. in 1784, Edward, Lord Clive, of the kingdom of Ireland, which nobleman was advanced subsequently to the EARLDOM of POWIS, Barony of Herbert, of Chirbury, &c., and from him they have descended to the present earl.

HERBERT—BARON HERBERT, OF CASTLE ISLAND.

See HERBERT, Baron Herbert of Chirbury.

HERON—BARON HERON.

By Writ of Summons, dated 13 November, 1393.

Lineage.

SIR WILLIAM HERON, of Applinden, grandson of Odonel Heron (3rd son of William, the last baron by tenure) and grand nephew of the Lord Heron of Ford, having m. Elizabeth, widow of John de Falvesley, dau. and heiress of William, Baron Say, and cousin and heiress of Thomas de Brewose, had summons to parliament, from 13 November, 1393, to 25 August, 1404, as "Willielmo Heron, Chl'r," although it is certain that he was generally considered as Lord Say, jure uxoris; for in a charter of 1st HENRY IV., to which he was a witness, he is styled "Willielmo Heron, Dominus de Say, Seneschallus Hospitalis Regis." This nobleman was a gallant soldier and an eminent diplomatist. He d. 30 October, 1404, a. p., when, if his barony be deemed a distinct dignity from that of Say, it became EXTINCT.

Arms—Gu., a chevron between three herons, arg.

HERON—BARON HERON.

By Writ of Summons, dated 8 January, 1371.

Lineage.

About the beginning of King JOHN's reign,

JORDAN HAIRUN, possessed a barony in Northumberland, which he held by the service of one knight's fee, as his ancestors had done from the time of King HENRY I., who enfeoffed them thereof. His grandson,

WILLIAM HERON, in the 32nd HENRY III., was made governor of Bamburgh Castle, co. Northumberland, and in the 39th of the same reign was governor of the castle of Pickering, in Yorkshire, and warden of the forests north of Trent. The next year he filled the office of sheriff of Northumberland, and was constituted governor of Scarborough Castle. He m. Mary, dau. and heir of Odonel de Ford, d. 1256, and was s. by his son,

WILLIAM HERON. This feudal lord was one of the barons on the part of the king at the battle of Lewes; and was summoned by EDWARD I., with the other northern barons to meet him at Norham, with horse and arms, when he went to give judgment between the competitors for the crown of Scotland. William Heron m. Christian, dau. and heir of Roger de Notton, and had issue,

WALTER, who m. Alicia de Hastings, and dying before his father, left an only dau. and heir, EMMELINE, m. to John, Lord D'Arcy, steward of the household to EDWARD III., and who, on the decease of her grandfather, was his heir, whereby the Darcy family became possessed of the ancient Barony of Heron, and of the manors of Silkeston and Notton, co. York.

ROGER, of whom presently.

Odonel.

At the decease of his father, his elder brother having d. previously, as stated above, the representation of the family devolved upon

ROGER HERON, who inherited the manors of Ford and Bokenfield, co. Northumberland; and with his brother Odonel, attended EDWARD I., as one of his knights, to the siege of Stirling Castle. In the 10th EDWARD II. he was governor of Bamburgh Castle, and was s. at his decease by his son, WILLIAM HERON. This feudal lord obtained license in the 12th EDWARD III., to make a castle of his house at Ford—and was summoned to parliament, as a baron, 8 January, 1371, but never afterwards. The Barony of Heron became, therefore, at his decease, EXTINCT.

Arms—Gu., a chevron between three herons, arg.

HERVEY—BARON HERVEY, OF KIDBROKE, CO. KENT.

By Letters Patent, dated 7 February, 1628.

Lineage.

WILLIAM HERVEY, Esq., of Ickworth, co. Suffolk (said to have descended from Robert Fitz-Hervey, a younger son of Hervey, Duke of Orleans, who came over with the CONQUERORS), d. in 1538, leaving, with other issue,

JOHN HERVEY, ancestor of the Marquesses of Bristol, and SIR NICHOLAS HERVEY, of the privy-chamber to King HENRY VIII., and ambassador from that monarch to the emperor's court at Ghent. This eminent person m. 1st, ELIZABETH, dau. of Sir Thomas Fitz-Williams, and widow of Sir Thomas Mauleverer, by whom he had an only son,

THOMAS (Sir), knight-marshal to Queen Mary.

Sir Nicholas m. 2ndly, Bridget, dau. and heiress of Sir John Wiltshire, of Stone Castle, co. Kent, and relict of Sir Richard Wingfield, of Kimbolton Castle, co. Huntingdon, by whom he had two sons, viz.,

HENRY, his successor.

George, ancestor of the Herveys, of Marshal, in Essex.

Sir Nicholas was s. by his elder son,

HENRY HERVEY, who m. Jane, dau. of James Thomas, Esq., and had a son and heir,

WILLIAM HERVEY, Esq., of Kidbrooke, co. Kent, who obtained great eminence as a military character in the reigns of Queen ELIZABETH, King JAMES I., and King CHARLES I. Mr. Hervey first signalized himself in the memorable conflict with the Armada, having boarded one of the galleons, and killed the captain, Hugh Moncade, with his own hand. He was subsequently knighted; and being employed successfully in Ireland, was created a baronet, 31 May, 1619, and in the following year elevated to the peerage of that kingdom, in the dignity of Baron Hervey, of Ross, co. Wexford. His lordship, continuing his eminent public services, was created a peer of England, 7 February, 1628, as BARON HERVEY, of Kidbrooke, co. Kent. He m. 1st, Mary, relict of Henry, Earl of Southampton, and dau. of Anthony, Viscount Montacute, by whom he had no issue. His lordship m. 2ndly, Cordelia, dau. and co-heir of Brian Anley, Esq., of Lewisham, in Kent, and had issue, William, killed in Germany.

John, who d. in Ireland.

Henry, d. young.

ELIZABETH, m. to John Hervey, Esq., of Ickworth, who d. in 1679, s. p. when his estate devolved upon his brother, Sir Thomas Hervey, whose eldest surviving son, John Hervey, was created Baron Hervey, of Ickworth, and Earl of Bristol, dignities enjoyed by the present Marquess of Bristol.

Lord Hervey d. in June, 1642, and his sons having pre-deceased him, the Irish Barony of Hervey, of Ross, with the baronetcy and English Barony of Hervey, of Kidbrooke, became extinct, while his estates devolved upon his only surviving child, ELIZABETH HERVEY.

HILL—BARON HILL, OF ALMAREZ AND HAWKESTONE.

By Letters Patent, dated 17 May, 1814.

Lineage.

SIR ROWLAND HILL (2nd son of Sir John Hill, 3rd baronet, of Hawkestone, co. Salop, by Mary Chambré, his wife), b. 11 August, 1772, having adopted the profession of arms, attained the rank of general, and having eminently distinguished himself during the Peninsular war, was rewarded with the Grand Cross of the Bath, and subsequently elevated to the peerage, 17 May, 1814, as Baron Hill, of Almaraz, and of Hawkestone, co. Salop. His lordship obtained a second patent, dated 16 January, 1816, conferring a similar dignity, with the additional designation of Hardwick, and in remainder to the male issue of his deceased brother, John Hill, Esq., of Hawkestone. Lord Hill was commander-in-chief from 1828 until 1842, when he resigned; upon which occasion he was raised to a Viscounty, with remainder similar to that of his last barony. Viscount Hill d. unm. 10 December, 1842, when the Barony of Hill of Almaraz became extinct, but his other honours devolved on his nephew, SIR ROWLAND HILL, Bart., the 2nd Viscount Hill. (See Extant Peerage.)

Arms—Erm., on a fesse, sa., a castle triple towered, arg.

HILTON—BARON HILTON, OF HILTON, CO. DURHAM.

By Writ of Summons, dated 23 June, 1295.

Lineage.

ROBERT DE HILTON, of Hilton Castle, co. Durham, was summoned to parliament, as a baron, in the 23rd, 24th, and 25th EDWARD I. His lordship m. Margaret, one of the three co-heirs of Marmaduke de Thwenge, by whom he acquired large estates, and left two daus.,

Isabel, m. to Walter de Pedwardyn.

Maud, m. to Sir John Hotham, Knt.

At his lordship's decease the Barony of Hilton fell into ABYSSANCE between those ladies, as it continues amongst their representatives, should any exist.

* * * The castle of Hilton stands low and sequestered in the Vale of Wear, three miles to the west of Wearmouth Bridge, co. Durham, on the old road to Newcastle. Here for twenty-three descents, extending over six centuries, dwelt in high renown the famous Barons of Hilton, a race of gentlemen of the first consideration. Of the title of "Baron," so constantly bestowed on each successive Lord of Hilton, a few words may not be inappropriate. The designation does not appear to have had any reference to a peerage honour, but was given by the general courtesy of the country, either from respect to the immortal existence of the family in a gentle state, long before the creation of barons by writ, or else with reference to the rank which the Hiltons undoubtedly held, of "Barons of the Bishopric," sitting with a sort of provincial peerage, in the great council of their ecclesiastical Palatine. Certain it is, that the name of Hilton always stands first in every episcopal commission, and that popular respect never failed to concede to its chief the precedence of nobility. In 1669, Mr. Arden, complaining to Miles Stapleton, Esq., of the unseemly pride of Dean Carleton and his daus., adduces, as a superlative instance of it, that "the Dean himself had taken a place above Baron Hilton at the quarter sessions, to the great disgust and reluctance of the county gentry; and that, moreover, the young Carletons had crowded themselves into a pew in the cathedral before Baron Hilton's daughters."

The origin of the Hiltons is lost in the obscurity of distant ages. Every ancient house has its fabulous age, and the Hiltons are not without their ill contrived Williams and Adams, who flourished under Saxon Athelstans, and Edwys; their Lancelots, who died at Hastings, or Feversham, in 1066, and their Henry, whom the Conqueror gifted with broad lands on the Wear.

ROMANCE, Knight of Hilton, the genuine "homo propositus" of the family, held three knights' fees in 1166, and was, probably, by no means the first settler, as his lands were held of "ancient feoffment." His successor, Alexander, appears in a deed of compact, with the prior and convent of Durham, relative to the chapel of Hilton in 1172.

JOHN HILTON, the last Baron of Hilton, was a man of mild and generous disposition, though of reserved habits, and is remembered, with personal respect, as the final representative of a great and ancient house. He sat in parliament for the borough of Carlisle, but took little part in public affairs. His death occurred in 1746. His sisters and co-heiresses were,

- i. Dorothy.
- ii. Anne, m. to Sir Richard Musgrave, Bart., of Hayton Castle, and d. in 1766. Her heir general is,
SIR WILLIAM-GEORGE HYLTON-JOLLIFFE, Bart., co-heir of the blood of Hylton.
- iii. Elizabeth, who m. Thomas Younghusband, Esq., and d. in 1761, leaving an only dau., who m. twice, but had no issue.
- iv. Catherine, m. John Brisco, D.D., of Crofton, co. Cumberland, and was mother of Sir John Brisco, Bart., of Crofton Hall.

HILTON—BARON HILTON.

By Writ of Summons, dated 27 January, 1332.

Lineage.

ALEXANDER DE HILTON, who served in the Scottish wars under Ralph, Lord Neville, had summons to parliament as a baron, from 27 January, 1332, to 22 January, 1336. He left an only dau. and heiress, Elizabeth, who m. Roger Widdrington, and his descendant William, the last Lord Widdrington, was his heir male and heir general. Lord Widdrington was attainted in 1716, when his honours became forfeited. Lord Widdrington d. s. p., leaving his nephew, Thomas Eyre, Esq., of Hassop (son of his sister Mary) his heir; but he also dying issueless, the representation of Elizabeth Hilton, dau. and heir of Alexander Baron Hilton, became vested in Charles Towneley, Esq., in right of his grandmother, Mary Widdrington, aunt of the last Lord Widdrington. By the death of Mr. Towneley s. p., his only sister, Cecilia, or the heir general of her body, became heir of the Barony of Hilton. She m. 1st, Charles Strickland, Esq., of Sizergb, and 2ndly, Gerard Strickland, Esq., and had issue by both husbands. Her eldest son by the former, Thomas Strickland, inherited the Standish estates on the death of his uncle Edward, in 1807, and assumed the surname and arms of Standish (see BURKE'S Landed Gentry).

Arms—Arg., two bars, az., and fleur-de-lis, or.

HOESE OR HUSEE—BARON HOESE OF BEECHWORTH, CO. SURREY.

By Writ of Summons, dated 20 November, 1348.

Lineage.

ROGER HOESE, or HUSEE, son of John Husee, presumed to be of the same family as the Lords Hoese of Herting, in Sussex, having distinguished himself in the wars of Scotland, was summoned to parliament as a baron, from 20 November, 1348, to 10 March, 1349. His lordship d. in 1361, seised, amongst other lands, of the manor of West Beechesworth, and Heggercourt, co. Surrey; Ringstede, in Dorsetshire; a moiety of Burton Sacy, co. Southampton; and Northinkton, and Kingston Deverell, in Wilts. Roger d. 1361, leaving JOHN, his brother and heir, then set. forty, whereupon the barony became EXTINCT. The said brother,

SIR JOHN HUSEE, of Beechworth castle, had livery of his inheritance. The only dau. of this Sir John, Alice, is said, by Collins, to have m. Richard de Wallop, ancestor of the Earls of Portsmouth, and the lady is called heir of Robert Husee, her brother; but Vincent mentions her as sister of Sir John, and dau. of course, of Roger, Lord Husee. It would appear by both authorities, however, that the Earls of Portsmouth represent this branch of the old baronial house of HOESE or HUSEE.

Arms—Barry of six, ermine and gules.

HOESE—BARON HOESE.

By Writ of Summons, dated 23 June, 1296.

Lineage.

GEOFFREY DE HOESE, son of Henry Hosatus, or de Hoese, a justice itinerant and sheriff co. Oxon, d. 1199, and was s. by his son and heir,

HENRY HOESE, who d. 1213; his son and heir,

HENRY HOESE, had livery of his lands 1213, and was living 1253.

HENRY DE HOESE, Lord of Harting, co. Sussex, 1165, elder brother of Geoffrey, above-named, was father of

GEOFFREY DE HOESE, whose son and heir,

HENRY DE HOESE, d. 1234, leaving a son and heir,

MATTHEW DE HOESE, who d. 1262, and was s. by his son,

HENRY DE HOESE, who d. 1289; his son and heir was,

HENRY HOESE. This feudal lord had summons 22nd EDWARD I., 8 June in that year, to attend the king, with divers other persons of note, to advise concerning the important affairs of the realm; and the next year he was summoned to parliament as a Baron, under the designation of "Henrico Husee," and from that period to 10 October, 1325 (19th EDWARD II.). His lordship, who was engaged in the wars of Scotland, d. in 1332, and was s. by his son,

HENRY HOESE, 2nd baron, summoned to parliament, from 18 August, 1337, to 10 March, 1349. This nobleman, 21st EDWARD III., on the marriage of Henry, his son and heir, with Elizabeth, the dau. of John de Bohun, settled certain estates upon him and her, and their issue (in default), to Richard, another son, with remainder to the issue of himself, by Catherine, his then wife, and in default of such issue, on Elizabeth, his dau. His lordship d. 1349, leaving Henry, his grandson and heir (son of Mark, his eldest son, who pre-deceased him). But neither this Henry nor any one of his descendants was ever summoned to parliament.

HOLAND—BARONS HOLAND.

By Writ of Summons, dated 29 July, 1314.

Lineage.

That this family was of great antiquity in the county of Lancaster is evident from the register of Cokersand Abbey, to which religious house some of its members were benefactors in King JOHN's time. The first person of the name of any note was

ROBERT DE HOLAND, who was in the wars of Scotland, 31st EDWARD I., and who owed his advancement to his becoming secretary to Thomas, Earl of Lancaster, for previously he had been but a "poor knight." In the 1st EDWARD II. he obtained large territorial grants from the crown, viz., the manors of Melburne, Newton, Osmundeston, Swarkeston, Chelardeston, Normanton, and Wybeleston, in the county of Derby, and the same year had a military summons to march against the Scots. In the 8th EDWARD II. he was first summoned to parliament as a baron; and in the 10th and 12th, he was again in the wars of Scotland, in which latter year he had license to make a castle of his manor house of Bagworth, co. Leicester. Upon the insurrection of his old master, Thomas, Earl of Lancaster (15th EDWARD II.) his lordship promised that nobleman, to whom he owed his first rise in the world, all the aid in his power; but failing to fulfil his engagement, Lancaster was forced to fly northwards, and was finally taken prisoner at Boroughbridge, when Lord Holand rendered himself to the king at Derby, and was sent prisoner to Dover Castle. For which duplicity he became so odious to the people, that being afterwards made prisoner a second time, anno 1328, in a wood, near Henley Park, towards Windsor, he was beheaded on the nones of October, and his head sent to Henry, Earl of Lancaster, then at Waltham Cross, co. Essex, by Sir Thomas Wyther, and some other private friends. His lordship m. Maud, one of the daus. and co-heirs of Alan le Zouch, of Aahby, and had issue, iii. Alan, who had the manors of Dalbury and Weeksworth, co. Derby.

iv. Otho, a person of great valour in the reign of EDWARD III., and one of the original knights of the Garter. He fell into disgrace, however, by suffering the Earl of Ewe (a prisoner at war), who had been committed to his custody, to go at large armed, and was committed to the Marshalsea, after being examined in the presence of the lord chancellor and other noblemen. He d. soon after in Brittany (33rd EDWARD III.), where he was engaged in his military capacity, and having no issue, his elder brother, Sir Robert Holland, by his last will, became his heir.

1. Jane, m. 1st, Sir Edmund Talbot of Beshall, who was constituted steward of Blackburnshire, 28th EDWARD I., by Henry de Lacy, Earl of Lincoln, and was, 32nd EDWARD I., 1303, in the great expedition against Scotland. In the preceding year he received the honour of knighthood by bathing and other ceremonies along with Prince Edward, afterwards EDWARD II. From this marriage derived the Talbots of Beshall, co. York, represented by John Hughes Lloyd, Esq., commander R.N., son of the late Richard Hughes Lloyd, Esq., of Plymoe, Gwerclas, and Beshall. Jane Holland, Lady Talbot m. 2ndly, Sir Hugh Dutton, Knt., of Dutton, co. Chester.

11. Mary, m. Sir John Tempest, Knt., of Bracewell, co. York.

Robert, Lord Holland, was s. by his eldest son,

SIR ROBERT HOLLAND, 2nd baron, summoned to parliament from 25 February, 1342, to 6 October, 1372. This nobleman was engaged for several years in the French wars of King EDWARD III., part of the time under Thomas de Beauchamp, Earl of Warwick, and the remainder in the retinue of his brother, Thomas Holland. His lordship d. in 1373, leaving his grand-dau. (dau. and heir of his eldest son Robert, who had pre-deceased him), MAUD HOLLAND, then seventeen years of age, his sole heir; who m. John Lovel, 5th Lord Lovel, of Tichmarsh, and carried the Barony of Holland into that family (see Lovel, Barons Lovel, of Tichmarsh).

Lineage.

SIR THOMAS DE HOLLAND, 2nd son of Robert de Holland, Lord Holland, having been engaged from the 14th to the 20th EDWARD III., in the wars of France, and in the last year commanded the van of Prince Edward's army at the famous battle of Cressy, was made a knight of the Garter, and summoned to parliament as a baron. At the siege of Caen, Sir Thomas had the good fortune to make prisoner of the Earl of Ewe, then constable of France, whom he delivered up to King EDWARD, for the sum of 4000 florens; and he (Sir Thomas) subsequently assisted at the siege of Calais. His lordship m. Joane Plantagenet, celebrated for her beauty, under the name of "the Fair Maid of Kent," only dau. of Edmund Plantagenet, surnamed "of Woodstock," Earl of Kent, 2nd son of King EDWARD III. This distinguished woman inherited, upon the decease of her brother, John, 3rd Earl of Kent, that dignity, with the Barony of Woodstock, honours of her father, and the Barony of Wake, a dignity of her mothers; from which latter peerage she styled herself "LADY OF WAKE."

In the 28th EDWARD III., his lordship was made lieutenant, and captain-general of the Dukedom of Brittany, and he was constituted, in two years afterwards, governor of the islands of Jersey and Guernsey. He had summons to parliament as LORD HOLLAND, from the 27th to the 31st EDWARD III., but in the 34th (anno 1360), he assumed the title of EARL OF KENT, and was so summoned, 20 November, in that year, in right of his wife, for it does not appear that he had any other sort of creation. In this year his lordship was appointed the king's lieutenant and captain-general in France and Normandy. He did not long, however, enjoy that high office, for he d. 28 December, in the same year, leaving issue by the great heiress of Kent (who m. after his lordship's decease, Edward the Black Prince, and was mother of King RICHARD II.), three sons and a dau., viz.,

THOMAS, his successor.

Maud, m. 1st, Hugh, 3rd son of Hugh, Earl of Devon, and 2ndly, Walteran, Earl of St. Paul.

Thomas Holland, Earl of Kent, was s. by his eldest son,

THOMAS HOLLAND, 2nd Earl of Kent, Baron Woodstock, Baron Wake, and Baron Holland. This nobleman was engaged in the French wars in the immediate retinue of his gallant step-father, Edward, the Black Prince, and attained distinction at the battle of Castile. Upon the accession of his half-brother, King RICHARD II., his lordship obtained a grant of £200 per annum out of the exchequer, and was constituted general warden of all the forests south of Trent. In the 9th of the same reign, at the decease of his mother Joane, Princess of Wales, he had special livery of all the lands of her inheritance; having had previously his grant out of the exchequer extended to £1000 a year. He was also constituted marshal of England, but he was afterwards discharged of that office, which was conferred upon Thomas Mowbray, Earl of Nottingham: and appointed governor of Carisbroke Castle for life. His lordship m. Alice Fitz-Alan, dau. of Richard, Earl of Arundel, by whom he had, with other issue, Allanore, m. 1st, to Roger Mortimer, Earl of March, and 2ndly, to Edward Cherleton, Lord Powis. The senior co-representative of Allanore, Countess of March, is the ex-Duke of Modena. Among the other co-representatives are the Duke of Buckingham, the Earl of Jersey, the Duke of Sutherland, &c. Margaret, m. 1st, to John Beaufort, Earl of Somerset and Marquess of Dorset, and 2ndly, to Thomas Plantagenet, Duke of Clarence, son of King HENRY IV. Joane, m. 1st, to Edward, Duke of York, 2ndly, to William, Lord Willoughby, 3rdly, to Henry, Lord Scrope, of Masham, and 4thly, to Sir Henry Bromfielde, afterwards Lord Vesel, and d. s. p. 1431.

Eleanor, m. to Thomas Montacute, Earl of Salisbury. The co-representatives of this marriage are WILLIAM LOWNDES, Esq., of Chesham, Bucks, WILLIAM SELBY-LOWNDES, Esq., of Whaddon, Bucks, and the MARQUESS OF HASTINGS.

Elizabeth, m. to Sir John Nevill, Knt., son and heir apparent of Ralph, 1st Earl of Westmoreland. Of Elizabeth, Lady Nevill, one of the co-representatives is SIR ROWLAND FARRINGTON, Bart.

The earl d. 25 April, 1397, and was s. by his eldest son,

THOMAS HOLLAND, 3rd Earl of Kent. This nobleman, upon the attainder of Thomas de Beauchamp, Earl of Warwick, 22nd RICHARD II., had a grant in special tail of the castle, manor, and lordship of Warwick, with sundry other manors: having been created DUKE OF SURREY, the preceding year, by his uncle, King RICHARD, sitting in Parliament, with the crown upon his head. He was also constituted marshal of England, and about the same time appointed lieutenant of Ireland. The Earl was likewise a knight of the Garter. But all his honours terminated with the power of his unhappy and royal kinsman; for being engaged in a conspiracy to subvert the government, after the accession of the Duke of Lancaster, as HENRY IV., he was taken prisoner and beheaded, with the Earl of Salisbury, by the populace, at Cirencester, in 1400, when his head was sent to London, and placed upon the bridge there, and parliament passed an act of attainder, by which his honours and lands became FORFEITED. His lordship m. Joane Stafford, dau. of Hugh, Earl of Stafford, but had no issue. Notwithstanding the attainder (although no reversal is upon record), the earl's brother and heir, EDMUND HOLLAND, appears to have succeeded to the Earldom of Kent, and, of course, to the Baronies of Woodstock, Wake, and Holland. He had, subsequently, a special livery of certain castles, manors, and lands, which had devolved upon him by virtue of an old entail made of them by his ancestors. In the 9th HENRY IV. his lordship was appointed one of the commissioners to treat of peace between the king and the Duke of Brittany, and was constituted lord admiral of England. But soon after that besieging the castle and isle of Briak, in Brittany, he received a mortal wound in his head by an arrow from a cross-bow, 15 September, 1407. His lordship m. in 1406, Lucy, dau. of the Duke of Milan, but having no legitimate issue, his sisters, or their representatives, became his heirs (revert to the children of Thomas, 2nd earl), and amongst those, the Baronies of Woodstock, Wake, and Holland, are in ABEYANCE, supposing them unaffected by the attainder of Thomas, Duke of Surrey. With Edmund, Earl of Kent, who was a knight of the Garter, that earldom expired in the Holland family.

* It is said by some that this Thomas, being steward of the household to William de Montacute, Earl of Salisbury, married his mistress, viz., Joane, daughter of Edmund, and sister and heir of John, Earls of Kent. But herein there is a mistake: for by his petition to Pope Clement VI., representing that the said Earl of Salisbury had a purpose to have wedded her, had not a precontract with her by him been formerly made, and carnal knowledge ensued: also that nevertheless the same earl, taking advantage of his absence in foreign parts, made a second contract with her, and unjustly withheld her. His holiness, upon a full hearing of the cause, gave sentence for him; in which the Earl of Salisbury acquiesced.

Lineage.

JOHN DE HOLLAND, 3rd son of Thomas de Holland, Earl of Kent, by the celebrated heiress, Joane Plantagenet, "the Fair Maid of Kent" (see Holland, Earls of Kent), was in the expedition made into Scotland in the 29th EDWARD III., and after the accession of his half-brother, King RICHARD II., was constituted Justice of Chester. From which period we seldom find him out of some great public employment. In the 7th RICHARD he attended the king in the expedition then made into Scotland, when having some dispute with Ralph de Stafford, elder son of the Earl of Stafford, he slew the said Ralph with his dagger, and fled to sanctuary at Beverley. But the king becoming highly incensed at this foul murder, caused the assassin to be indicted and outlawed for the crime, and seized upon all his lands and offices.

It is said that the Princess Joane, his mother, hearing that the king had vowed that Holland should suffer according to law, sent earnestly to him, imploring his favour (she being their common parent), and that upon return of the messenger to Wallingford, where she then was, finding that her request availed not, she became so absorbed in grief that she died within five days. De Holland, however, eventually made his peace through the mediation of the Duke of Lancaster, and other noblemen, and was pardoned by the Earl of Stafford. The year after this unfortunate affair he was retained to serve the king in his Scottish wars for 40 days, and the next year being in Castile with the Duke of Lancaster, he tilted at Besances with Sir Reginald de Roy, in the presence of the King of Portugal, being then constable of the duke's host. About this time, being also in the wars of France, he obtained a grant of 500 marks per annum during his life. And, at length, in expiation of the murder he had the misfortune to commit, he came to an agreement with the Earl of Stafford to find three priests to celebrate divine service every day, to the world's end, for the soul of Ralph Stafford, in such places as the king should appoint. In the 11th of the same reign he was again in the wars of France, as also in Spain, with John of Gaunt, Duke of Lancaster, and upon his return was created EARL OF HUNTINGDON, at the especial desire of the commons in parliament assembled, having therewith a grant of £20 per annum out of the profits of the county: as also lands of 2000 marks per annum, to himself and Elizabeth, his wife, and to the heirs male of their bodies. Shortly after which he was made admiral of the king's fleet westwards, and constituted governor of the castle, town, and bastille of Brest, in Brittany, for three years, where he accordingly went to reside. He subsequently obtained large grants from the crown, and was constituted great chamberlain of England for life. His lordship was one of those nobles who impeached the Duke of Gloucester, in the parliament held at Nottingham, and he is accused of having assisted at the execution of his grandfather, Richard, Earl of Arundel. He was advanced in 1397 to the DUKEDOM OF EXETER, by King RICHARD, in open parliament, being at the time captain of Calais; and he accompanied that monarch soon afterwards into Ireland. Upon the accession, however, of the Duke of Lancaster, as HENRY IV., his grace was doomed to a reverse of fortune, and parliament adjudged that he should lose his honours and lands. He retained, however, the Earldom of Huntingdon, which, with his whole estate, he might probably have continued to enjoy, had he not joined with his brother, the Earl of Kent, in a conspiracy to overturn the new government. The plot having, however, failed, he endeavoured to escape beyond sea, but was driven back by contrary winds to the coast of Essex, where he landed, and was made prisoner by the populace while at supper at the house of a friend. He was immediately conveyed to Chelmsford, and thence to Plessey, where he was beheaded by the common people on the very spot where the Duke of Gloucester had suffered in the reign of his brother, King RICHARD. His grace d. in 1400, and was subsequently attainted. He had m. the Lady Elizabeth Plantagenet, dau. of John of Gaunt, and had issue,

HOLLAND—DUKES OF EXETER.

By Letters Patent, dated 6 January, 1443.

Lineage.

JOHN HOLLAND, 2nd but eldest surviving son of John Holland, Earl of Huntingdon and Duke of Exeter (attainted and beheaded in 1400), was restored in blood, as heir to his father and brother, in the 4th HENRY V., and the next year made general of all the men at arms and archers at that time employed in the king's fleet at sea, in which capacity he assisted at the siege of Caen. He did not, however, make proof of his age until the ensuing year, when it was stated by the witnesses then examined, that the abbot of Tavestoke, co. Devon, being one of his godfathers, gave him, immediately after the baptism, a cup of gold, with a circle about it, framed after the fashion of a lily, and with ten pounds in gold therein, and to the nurse twenty shillings. That the prior of Plimpton, being the other godfather, gave him twenty pounds in gold; and that Joane, the wife of Sir John Pomeroy, Knt., carried him to the church to be christened: her husband, and Sir John Dymham, Knt. conducting her by the arms. Likewise, that twenty-four men did precede them, bearing twenty-four torches, which torches, as soon as the name was given, were kindled.

This John Holland was engaged, during the whole reign of HENRY V., in active warfare upon the French soil, and displayed extraordinary skill and valour. He was at the siege of Roan; and the next year, upon the taking of Pontoise by the Captain de la Bouche, he intercepted those of the garrison who endeavoured to get to Paris; and he was in that great fight against the French who came to raise the siege of Freney, wherein 5000 were slain and 600 made prisoners. He was subsequently commissioned to reduce all the castles and strong places in Normandy that continued to hold out against the king; and he was soon after, in consideration of his eminent services, constituted constable of the Tower of London. In the reign of HENRY VI., he continued his gallant career in France, and assisted, in 1431, at the coronation of that monarch, then solemnized at Paris. In the 11th of the same reign, he had a grant of the office of marshal of England, to hold during the minority of John, son and heir of John, late Duke of Norfolk; and two years afterwards, being sent ambassador to the city of Arras, to treat of peace with the French, he had license to carry with him gold, silver, plate, jewels, robes, twenty-four pieces of woollen cloth, and other things, to the value of £6000 sterling. In the 14th he was joined in commission with the Earl of Northumberland for guarding the east and west marches towards Scotland, and at the same time constituted admiral of England and Aquitaine. He was afterwards in a commission to try all manner of treasons and sorceries which might be hurtful to the king's person; and was created, by letters patent, dated at Windsor, 6 January, 1442-3, DUKE OF EXETER, with this special privilege, "that he and his heirs male should have place and seat in all parliaments and councils, next to the Duke of York and his heirs male."

His grace was constituted lord high admiral of England, Ireland, and Aquitaine, for life, in the 24th HENRY VI., his son Henry being joined in the grant, and, the next year, made constable of the Tower of London, his son, Henry, being, in like manner, joined with him. HENRY HOLLAND, 2nd Duke of Exeter, who, in the 28th HENRY VI., in consideration of his father's services, had livery of all his castles, manors, and lands, both in England and Wales, although at that time he had not accomplished his full age; after which, (33rd HENRY VI.) the Yorkists then prevailing, his grace having fled to sanctuary at Westminster, he was forced thence, and sent prisoner to Pontefract Castle. We find him, however, at the battle of Wakefield, sharing the triumph of the Lancastrians: when King HENRY VI., being re-established in power, his grace's fidelity was rewarded by a grant of the office of constable of Fotheringay Castle. But the tide again turning, the duke fled from Towton-Field, with the Duke of Somerset and some others, to York, where the king and queen then were, and thence proceeded with the royal fugitives into Scotland. In the parliament assembled upon the accession of King EDWARD IV., his grace, with the other leading Lancastrians, was attainted; but nothing further is recorded of him until he appeared again in arms under the red banner of Lancaster, at Barnet-Field, where his party sustained so signal a defeat. In this conflict the Duke of Exeter fought with extraordinary courage and resolution, and being severely wounded, was left for dead, from seven o'clock in the morning until four in the afternoon, when, being conveyed to the house of one of his servants, called Ruthland, he had the assistance of a surgeon, and was then carried for sanctuary to Westminster: but in the 13th EDWARD IV., 1473, he was found dead in the sea between Calais and Dover; by what accident, however, was never ascertained. Comines reports that he saw this unhappy nobleman in such deep distress, (after the defeat at Barnet, it is presumed,) that he ran on foot, bare-legged, after the Duke of Burgundy's train, begging his bread for God's sake, but that he uttered not his name; and that when he was known, the duke conferred upon him a small pension. His grace m. Anne, dau. of Richard, Duke of York, and sister of King EDWARD IV., by whom, according to Sandford, he had an only dau., ANNE, m. to Thomas Grey, Marquess of Dorset. From his lady the Duke of Exeter was divorced, at her suit, and his dukedom fell under the attainder, in 1461, twelve years before his melancholy death. Thus terminated the career of one of the staunchest partizans of the house of Lancaster, although brother-in-law to King EDWARD, the successful monarch of the house of York. Such was the heart-rending dissension which that terrible quarrel had sown amongst the nearest and dearest connections, and such the misery and wretchedness it entailed upon a great majority of the most illustrious houses in England.

Earldom, by Letters Patent, dated 2 November, 1624.

Dukedom, by Letters Patent, dated 14 May, 1694.

Lineage.

The first of this family who became of note was

Sir WILLIAM HOLLES, an alderman of London, and lord mayor in 1640. This opulent citizen left three sons, viz.,

session. Its descent is traditionally deduced from Sir Thomas Holland, Knt., who is supposed to have settled, with a brother, in the northern principality during a period of civil convulsion. "I have reason," says Pennant, "to suppose them to have been William and Thomas, the two youngest sons of John Holland, Duke of Exeter, who d. in 1446, and left to each of them an annuity of forty pounds." (DUGDALE'S BARONAGE, II. 81.)—"Pierce Holland, 11th in descent from Sir Thomas, made a settlement at Kynmel by his marriage with Katharine, dau. to Richard ap Evan ap Dafydd Fychan, and Alice, his wife, heiress of the place, dau. of Gryffydd Lloyd. In the last century (the 17th), one of his descendants had two daus. Colonel Carter, an officer in the service of the parlement, made choice of Catherine, the youngest, and took the estate with her. A wag said that he had chosen the best piece of Holland in the country. He left the eldest sister, Mary, to Colonel Price, of Rhiwlas, a royalist."

From Sir Thomas Holland, also derived the Hollands of Bern, in Anglesey, acquired by the marriage of John Holland, 6th in descent from Sir Thomas, with Ellen (living 1525), heiress of Bern, dau. and co-heir of Ithel ap Howel, of Bern, derived from Llywarch ap Bran, Lord of Menai. The heir general of this marriage is the present Richard-Trygarn Griffith, Esq., of Carreglwyd, Trygarn, and Bern, father of an only child and heiress presumptive, MARIA GRIFFITH, who, by royal sign manual has assumed the name of Conway.

Thomas (Sir), who succeeded to a considerable estate, but squandered the whole, and d. in prison.

WILLIAM, of whom presently.

Francis, d. s. p.

The 2nd son,

WILLIAM HOLLES, inherited the manor of Houghton, co. Nottingham, and took up his abode there. He m. Anne, dau. and co-heir of John Denzell, Esq., of Denzell, in Cornwall, and had, with other issue, DENZELL, who m. Anne, sister of John Sheffield, Lord Sheffield, and dying before his father, left a son (who eventually s. to the estates).

JOHN HOLLES, of Houghton, who was elevated to the peerage by King JAMES I., 9 July, 1616, (through the influence of the Duke of Buckingham, to whom he paid £10,000,) in the dignity of BARON HOUGHTON, of Hou Mon, and was created, under the same powerful patronage, for the additional sum of £5,000, EARL OF CLARE,* 2 November, 1624. His lordship m. Anne, dau. of Sir Thomas Stanhope, of Shelford, co. Nottingham, and had surviving issue,

JOHN, his successor.

DENZELL, created BARON HOLLES, of Tield, (see that dignity.) Eleanore, m. to Oliver Fitz-William, Earl of Tyrconnel, in Ireland.

Arabella, m. to Thomas Wentworth, 1st Lord Strafford.

His lordship d. 4 October, 1637, and was s. by his eldest son,

JOHN HOLLES, 2nd earl, who m. Elizabeth, eldest dau., and one of the co-heirs of the celebrated General Sir Horatio Vere, Lord Vere, of Tilbury, and had issue, GILBERT, his successor.

Anne, m. to Edward Clinton, Lord Clinton, eldest son of Theophilus, 4th Earl of Lincoln, and was mother of Edward, 5th Earl of Lincoln.

Elizabeth, m. to Wentworth, Earl of Kildare.

Arabella, m. to Sir Edward Bositer, Knt., of Somerley, co. Lincoln.

Susan, m. to Sir John Lort, Bart., of Stackpole Court, co. Pembroke.

Diana, m. to Henry Bridges, son and heir of Sir Thomas Bridges, of Keynsham, co. Somerset.

Penelope, m. to Sir James Langham, Bart., of Cottesbroke, co. Northampton.

Of this nobleman, Lord Clarendon says, "he was a man of honour and of courage, and would have been an excellent person, if his heart had not been too much set upon keeping and improving his estate." His lordship appears to have lived in retirement at his country houses during the usurpation. He survived to witness the restoration of the monarchy, and dying 2 January, 1665, was s. by his son,

GILBERT HOLLES, 3rd Earl of Clare. This nobleman opposed strongly the measures of the Stewarts, and was a strenuous supporter of the revolution. He m. Grace, dau. of William Pierpont, of Thoresby, co. Nottingham, 2nd son of Robert, Earl of Kingston, and had issue,

JOHN, who s. to the honours.

William, who fell at Lulworth, in the twenty-first year of his age.

Denzell, d. unm.

Elizabeth, m. to Sir Christopher Vane, Knt., who was created Baron Barnard, of Barnard Castle, co. Durham. From this marriage HARRY-GEORGE, present DUKE OF CLEVELAND, is 5th in lineal descent.

Mary, m. to Hugh Boscawen, Esq.

Ann.

Grace, m. to Sir Thomas Pelham, Bart., created afterwards Baron Pelham, of Loughton, co. Sussex, and had, with other issue, a son THOMAS, who inherited the greatest part of the Holles estates, and had the honours of the family partly revived in his person, (see Pelham-Holles, Earls of Clare).

His lordship d. 16 January, 1689, and was s. by his eldest son,

JOHN HOLLES, 4th Earl of Clare. This nobleman having m. Margaret Cavendish, 3rd dau. and co-heir of Henry, 2nd Duke of Newcastle, inherited the greater part of his grace's estates upon his decease in 1691, and was created 14 May, 1694, Marquess of Clare and DUKE OF NEWCASTLE. He likewise s. to the fortune of his kinsman, Denzell, Lord Holles of Ifield, and thus became one of the richest subjects in the kingdom. His grace enjoyed several high offices at court, and was a knight of the Garter. He d. from the effects of a fall while stag-hunting, 15 July, 1711, leaving an only dau.,

LADY HENRIETTA CAVENDISH HOLLES, who m. in 1713, Edward, Lord Harley, son and heir of Robert, Earl of Oxford, to whom she conveyed a very considerable estate, and by whom she had an only surviving dau.,

LADY MARGARET CAVENDISH HARLEY, who m. William Bentinck, 2nd Duke of Portland, K.G.

* This dignity had been just before refused to Robert Rich, Earl of Warwick, on a solemn declaration by the crown lawyers, that it was a title peculiar to the royal blood, and not to be conferred upon a subject.

At the decease of the Duke of Newcastle all his honours became extinct. He had adopted his nephew, THOMAS PELHAM, eldest son of Thomas, Lord Pelham, who s. to a portion of his great estates, and assumed the surname and arms of HOLLES (see Pelham Holles, Earl of Clare).

Barony, by Letters Patent, dated 29 December, 1706.

Earldom, by Letters Patent, dated 26 October, 1714.

Dukedom, by Letters Patent, dated 11 August, 1715.

Lineage.

SIR THOMAS PELHAM, Bart., was elevated to the peerage, 29 December, 1706, as BARON PELHAM, of Loughton, co. Sussex. He had m. previously, Lady Grace Holles, youngest dau. of Gilbert, 3rd Earl of Clare, and dying in 1712, was s. by his eldest son,

THOMAS PELHAM-HOLLES, as 2nd Baron Pelham. This nobleman having been adopted by his uncle, John Holles, 4th Earl of Clare, and 1st Duke of Newcastle, assumed the additional surname and arms of HOLLES, upon the decease of his grace, and was created 26 October, 1714, Viscount Pelham, of Houghton, and EARL OF CLARE. His lordship was advanced the next year to the dignities of Marquess of Clare and DUKE OF NEWCASTLE, with remainder, default of male issue, to his brother, the Right Honourable Henry Pelham. His grace, under the three first sovereigns of the house of Brunswick, fulfilled the several posts of lord chamberlain of the household, secretary of state, first lord of the Treasury, and one of the lords justices, during the temporary absences of Kings GEORGE I. and II. The duke was likewise chancellor of the university of Cambridge, a privy councillor, and a knight of the Garter. His grace m. Harriet Godolphin, dau. of Francis, Earl of Godolphin, by Henrietta, his wife, dau. of the celebrated John Churchill, Duke of Marlborough, but had no issue.

The duke was created, in 1756, DUKE OF NEWCASTLE UNDER LYNE, with special remainder to his nephew, Henry Fiennes-Clinton, 9th Earl of Lincoln, K.G., son of his grace's sister, the Honourable Lucy Pelham, by Henry, 7th Earl of Lincoln; and he was also created, 4 May, 1762, BARON PELHAM, of Stanmere, in Sussex, with remainder to his kinsman, Thomas Pelham, Esq., of Stanmere (grandson of Henry Pelham, younger brother of the 1st Lord Pelham), which honours devolved, at his grace's decease, in 1768, according to the said limitations, and are now enjoyed by the DUKE OF NEWCASTLE and the EARL OF CHICHESTER (see those dignities in BURKE's Extant Peerage and Baronage), while all his own honours, including the Dukedom of Newcastle, in remainder to his brother, the Right Honourable Henry Pelham (that gentleman having predeceased his grace, leaving daus. only) became extinct.

HOLLES—BARONS HOLLES OF IFIELD, CO. SUSSEX.

By Letters Patent, dated 20 April, 1661.

Lineage.

THE HON. DENEILL HOLLES, 2nd son of John, 1st Earl of Clare, by Anne, eldest dau. and co-heir of John Denail, of Darnall, in Cornwall, serjeant-at-law, was elevated to the peerage, at the Restoration, by letters patent, dated 20 April, 1661, as BARON HOLLES, of Ifield, co. Sussex. This nobleman, in the beginning, opposed the assumed prerogative of CHARLES I. and his ministers; carrying up the impeachment against Laud; suffering a severe imprisonment, and being marked by the king in that wild attempt of accusing the five members. When brought before the privy council, with Sir Henry Hammond and others, in those times of arbitrary power, Mr. Holles deputed himself with a more than ordinary degree of firmness, and as characteristic of the epoch, we give the following passage from his examination. "Why did you sit above some of the privy council, so near the speaker's chair?"

"I seated myself there, some other times before, and took it as my due, there and in any place whatsoever, on account of my noble birth, as son of the Earl of Clare!" continuing to state, "that he came into the house, with as much zeal as any other person to serve his majesty: yet, finding his majesty was offended, he humbly desired to be the subject, rather of his mercy than of his power." To which the treasurer Weston answered, "You mean rather of his majesty's mercy than of his justice." Mr. Holles replied emphatically, "I say of his majesty's power." Subsequently discovering the designs of the republican party, and disgusted with them, he exerted himself zealously, at the decease of Cromwell, in furtherance of the restoration; and for some time after the accomplishment of that great event, accepted employments and embassies from the court. In 1663, his lordship was ambassador extraordinary to France, and afterwards plenipotentiary to the treaty of Breda; but he again joined the ranks of opposition, and maintained the consistency of his patriotic character.

Burnet thus describes this patriotic personage:—"He was a man of courage,* and as great pride. The head of the presbyterian party for many years, and who, during the whole course of his life, never once changed side. He had indeed the soul of an old stubborn Roman in him; was a faithful, but a rough friend; and a severe, but open enemy. His sense of religion was just; his course of life regular; and his judgment, where passion did not bias him, sound enough. He was well versed in the records of parliament, and argued well but too vehemently; for he could not bear any contradiction."

His lordship m. 1st, Dorothy, only dau. and heiress of Sir Francis Ashley, of Dorchester, by whom he had one surviving son, FRANCIS, who was created a baronet. He m. 2ndly, Jane, eldest dau. and co-heir of Sir John Shirley, of Ixville, in Sussex; and 3rdly, Esther, 2nd dau. and co-heir of Gideon de Lou, lord of the manor of Columbiere, in Normandy, but had no other issue. He d. 17 February, 1679-80, and was s. by his son,

SIR FRANCIS HOLLES, Bart., of Winterbourne St. Martin, co. Dorset, as 2nd Lord Holles. His lordship m. 1st, Lucy, youngest dau. of Sir Robert Carr, of Sleaford, co. Lincoln, Bart., by whom he had two daus., who both d. young. He m. 2ndly, Anne, eldest dau. and co-heir of Sir Francis Pile, Bart., of Compton Beauchamp, co. Berks, and had a son, DENZILL, his successor, and a dau. Jane, who d. in infancy. His lordship d. 1 March, 1689-90, and was s. by his son, DENEILL HOLLES, 3rd baron. This nobleman d. unm. in his nineteenth year, anno 1694, when the Barony of Holles, of Ifield, with the baronetcy became extinct, while his lordship's estates devolved upon his heir-at-law, John Holles, Duke of Newcastle.

HOO—BARON OF HOO, CO. BEDFORD, AND OF HASTINGS, CO. SUSSEX.

By Letters Patent, dated 2 June, 1447.

Lineage.

Of this family, whose chief seat was at Hoo, in Bedfordshire, were divers persons of note, prior to its elevation to the peerage.

ROBERT DE HOO, obtained the king's charter, 20th EDWARD I., for a weekly market, and an annual fair, at his manor of Knebbeworth, co. Hertford. As also free-warren in all his demesne lands, within his respective lordships of the above-mentioned Knebbeworth, and Harpenden, in the same shire; of Hoo and other estates in the co. of Bedford; of Clopton, in Cambridgeshire, and Sivethorpe, co. Oxford. The next of the family we meet with,

SIR THOMAS HOO, Knt., had similar grants for fairs and markets, upon his different estates, in the 11th EDWARD III. He was s. by his son,

SIR WILLIAM HOO, Knt., who, in the 10th RICHARD II., assisted Michael de la Pole, Earl of Suffolk, in effecting his escape to Calais, in which garrison Sir William afterwards served (8th HENRY IV.) under John, Earl of Somerset, then captain thereof. Sir William Hoo m. Alice, dau. and heir of Sir Thomas St. Maur (by Jane, his wife, dau. and heir of Nicholas Malmains), and was s. by his son,

SIR THOMAS HOO, who, having been employed in the suppression of a rebellion in Normandy, obtained a grant, 20th HENRY VI., in consideration of his special services, and great expenses in the wars, of £11 a year during his life, out of the revenues in the co. York. In the 24th of the same reign, having again distinguished himself in the French wars he was elevated to the peerage, by letters patent, dated 2 June, 1447, by the titles of LORD HOO, of Hoo, co. Bedford, and of HASTINGS, co. Sussex, with remainder to the heirs male of his body. Moreover, he was made a knight of the most noble order of the Garter. His lordship m. 1st, Elizabeth, dau. and heir of Sir Thomas Felton, Knt., by whom he had an only son, Thomas, who d. in his father's life-time without issue. He m. 2ndly, Elizabeth, dau. and heir of Sir Nicholas Wichingham, Knt., by whom he had an only dau., Anne, who m. Sir Geoffrey Bullen, Knt., sometime Lord Mayor of London. His lordship m. 3rdly,

Allanore, dau. of Leo, Lord Welles, and sister and co-heir of Richard, Lord Welles, by whom he had issue, Allanore, m. to Sir James Carew, Knt., of Beddington, co. Surrey.

Jane, m. to Sir Roger Copley, Knt., from which marriage Sir Joseph-William Copley, Bart., of Sprotborough, co. York, maternally descends.

Elizabeth, m. to Sir John Devenish, Knt., of Hellingleigh, in Sussex, and their descendant, and eventually co-heir general, ELIZABETH, dau. of WILLIAM DEVENISH, Esq., m. Henry Walrod, Esq., of Sea, co. Somerset, and is represented by the present BETHELL WALROD, Esq., of Dalford, co. Devon.

Lord Hoo d. about the year 1453, and thus leaving no male issue, the Barony of Hoo became EXTINCT.

Arms—Quarterly, sa., and arg.

HOOD—BARON BRIDPORT, VISCOUNT BRIDPORT.

Barony, by Letters Patent, dated 13 June, 1796.

Viscounty, by Letters Patent, dated 16 June, 1800.

Lineage.

ALEXANDER HOOD, a very eminent naval officer, having served as rear-admiral, under Lord Howe, at the relief of Gibraltar, in 1782, was invested with the military order of the Bath; and having, as second in command, contributed to the ever-memorable victory of the 1st June, 1794, was rewarded with a peerage of Ireland, in the dignity of Baron Bridport, of Cricket St. Thomas. In 1795, his lordship achieved a splendid victory over the French fleet, and was made, in consequence, a peer of Great Britain, 13 June, 1796, as BARON BRIDPORT, of Cricket St. Thomas, co. Somerset. On 16 June, 1800, he was advanced to the dignity of VISCOUNT BRIDPORT, being then vice-admiral of Great Britain, and general of marines. His lordship m. 1st, Maria, dau. of the Rev. Dr. West, prebendary of Durham; and 2ndly, Maria-Sophia, dau. and heiress of Thomas Bray, Esq., of Edmonton, but dying s. p., 3 May, 1814, his English honours, namely, the Barony and Viscounty of Bridport, became EXTINCT, while the barony in the Irish peerage devolved according to a special limitation in the patent on his great nephew, SAMUEL HOOD, who became 2nd BARON BRIDPORT. (See BURKE's Extant Peerage.)

Arms—Az., a fret, arg., on a chief, or, three crescents, sa.

HOPTON—BARON HOPTON OF STRATTON, CO. CORNWALL.

By Letters Patent, dated 4 September, 1643.

Lineage.

ROBERT HOPTON, Esq., of Wytham, co. Somerset, m. Jane, dau. and heir of Rowland Keymish, Esq., of Wardry, co. Monmouth, and left a son,

SIR RALPH HOPTON, who was made a knight of the Bath, at the coronation of King CHARLES I., and became afterwards one of the most zealous supporters of that unfortunate monarch. Sir Ralph represented Welles, in parliament in 1642, when, perceiving the course of public affairs, he took up arms in the royal cause, and obtained distinction at Sherbourne Castle, Lancaster, Saltash, and Bradock, but particularly at Stratton, in Cornwall, when, in consideration of the gallant part he had in that victory, he was elevated to the peerage, 4 September, 1643, as BARON HOPTON, of Stratton; with limitation, in default of male issue, to his uncle, Sir Arthur Hopton, Knt., and the heirs male of his body. His lordship was subsequently constituted general of the ordinance, in his Majesty's armies throughout the whole realm of England, and dominion of Wales. Lord Hopton m. Elizabeth, dau. of Arthur Capel, of Hadham, co. Hertford, Esq., and widow of Sir Justinian Leven, Knt., but had no issue. During the usurpation, his lordship retired to Bruges, where he d. in 1652, when (his uncle having predeceased him also without issue) the Barony of Hopton of Stratton became EXTINCT.

Sir Arthur Hopton, upon whom the title was entailed, d. about the year 1650, s. p., when his four sisters, or their representatives became his heirs. Those sisters were,

Rachel, m. to — Morgan, Esq.
 Mary, m. 1st, to — Hartop, Esq., and 2ndly, to Sir Henry Mackworth, Bart.
 Catherine, m. to John Windham, Esq.
 Margaret, m. to Sir Baynam Throgmorton, Bart.
Arms—Erm., on two bars, az., six mullets, or.

HOWARD—BARONS HOWARD.

By Writ of Summons, dated 16 October, 1470.

Lineage.

The first of this very eminent family, mentioned by Dugdale, after a fruitless inquiry to discover a more ancient founder,

SIR WILLIAM HOWARD, was chief justice of the court of Common Pleas from 1297 to 1308. This learned person had large possessions in Wigenhale, in the north-west parts of the county of Norfolk; and he had summons in the 23rd EDWARD I. amongst the rest of the judges, and the king's learned council, to the parliament then held at Westminster, as also to those parliaments of 25th, 28th, and 32nd of EDWARD I., and 1st EDWARD II. Sir William m. 1st, Alice, dau., and eventually heir of Sir Edward Fitton, Knt., by whom he had two sons, JOHN and WILLIAM. He m. 2ndly, Alice, dau. of Sir Robert Ufford, but had no issue. He was s. by his elder son,

SIR JOHN HOWARD, of Wigenhall, who, in the 34th EDWARD I., being one of the gentlemen of the king's bedchamber, obtained the wardship of the lands and heir of John de Crokedale, a person of note in Norfolk: and on the accession of King EDWARD II., had orders to attend his coronation at Westminster, the Sunday next after the feast of Saint Valentine. He subsequently distinguished himself in the wars of Gascony and Scotland; and was sheriff of the cos. Norfolk and Suffolk, from the 11th to the 16th EDWARD II. inclusive. Sir John m. Joan, sister of Richard de Cornwall, and dying in 1331, was s. by his son,

SIR JOHN HOWARD, who, in the 9th EDWARD III., was constituted admiral and captain of the king's navy from the mouth of the Thames northward, and the next year had an assignation of £153 7s. 6d. for the wages of himself, with his men-at-arms and archers in that service. This gallant person m. Alice, dau. of Sir Robert de Boys, ancestor and heir of Sir Robert de Boys, of Fersfield, in Norfolk, by which marriage the whole inheritance of the Boyces came into the Howard family. He had issue,

ROBERT (Sir), of Fersfield. This gentleman was committed in the 2nd RICHARD II., to the Tower, for detaining Margery de Narford, from Alice, Lady Nevil, her gran mother, with whom, on her petition to the king and council, she had been appointed to remain till the cause of divorce between her and John de Brewer should be determined in the court of Rome. This Sir Robert Howard m. Margaret, dau. of Robert, Lord Scles, of Newcella, and, at length, one of the heirs of that family, by whom he left at his decease (1388), prior to the death of his father,

JOHN, successor to his grandfather.
 Margaret, m. to William de Lisle.

Sir John Howard was s. by his grandson,

SIR JOHN HOWARD, who was sheriff of the cos. Essex and Hertford, 2nd HENRY IV., and again in the 3rd and 7th HENRY V., and in the 9th of the latter reign he was one of the knights of the shire for the co. Cambridge. He m. 1st, Margaret, dau. and heir of Sir John Plaiz, of Tofte, in Norfolk, and of Stansted Mountfitchet, in Essex, by whom he had issue,

JOHN (Sir), who m. Joan, dau. of Sir Richard Walton, and sister and heir of John Walton, Esq. of Wivenhoe, in Essex, by whom, dying in the life-time of his father, he left an only dau. and heir, ELIZABETH, who m. John de Vera, Earl of Oxford, whereby the Barony of Scles centered in the Veres.

Margaret, m. 1st, to Sir Constantine Clifton, of Buckenham Castle, co. Norfolk, and 2ndly, to Sir Gilbert Talbot.

Sir John Howard m. 2ndly, Alice, dau. and heir of Sir William Tendring, of Stoke Neyland, co. Suffolk, and had two sons, viz.,

ROBERT (Sir), who m. Margaret, eldest dau. and eventually co-heir of Thomas de Mowbray, Duke of Norfolk, by Elizabeth, his wife, dau. and co-heir of Richard Fitz-Alan, Earl of Arundel, and cousin and co-heir of John Mowbray, Duke of Norfolk. By this marriage the inheritance of those great families became eventually vested in that of the Howards, and by Isabel, the other co-heir in that of Berkeley. Sir Robert dying before his father, left issue by this great heiress,

JOHN, successor to his grandfather.

Margaret, m. to Sir William Daniel, Baron of Rathwire, in Ireland.

Catherine, the 2nd wife of Edward Nevil, Lord Abergavenny.

Henry, who, by the gift of his father, had Wigenhall, and other manors, in the co. Norfolk, m. Mary, dau. of Sir Henry Hussey, and left an only dau. and heiress, ELIZABETH HOWARD, who m. Henry Wentworth, Esq., of Codham, in Essex.

Sir John Howard was s. by his grandson,

SIR JOHN HOWARD, an eminent Yorkist, distinguished not only by his birth and possessions, but by the various places of high trust which he filled during the reigns of EDWARD IV. and RICHARD III. He was first summoned to parliament as a baron 16 October, 1470, and had summons from that period as LORD HOWARD until 15 November, 1582. In the next year he was created Duke of Norfolk, and made earl marshal of England. The ultimate fall of this nobleman, at Bosworth-field, under the banner of RICHARD III., is so well known that it is hardly necessary to mention it here. From the creation of the Dukedom of Norfolk, in the Howard family, the Barony of Howard continued merged therein, and was included in the numerous forfeitures and restorations which attended that dignity until the demise of Edward Howard, 11th Duke of Norfolk, in 1777, when, with several other baronies, it fell into ABEYANCE between the two daus. and co-heirs of his grace's brother, Philip Howard, Esq., of Buckenham, co. Norfolk, namely, WINIFREDE, LADY STOURTON, and ANNE, LADY PETRE, thus:—

HENRY HOWARD, created Baron of Castle Rising, and Earl of Norwich, m. Anne, dau. of Edward, Marquess of Worcester, and left issue, HENRY, who s. his uncle as Duke of Norfolk.

Thomas, who m. Elizabeth-Maria, only dau. and heir of Sir Henry Savile, Bart., of Copley, co. York, and had issue,

THOMAS, who s. his uncle as Duke of Norfolk.

EDWARD, who s. his brother as Duke of Norfolk, and d. s.p. in 1777.

Philip, m. 1st, Winifrede, dau. of Thomas Stonor, Esq., and had an only surviving dau.,

WINIFREDE, m. to William, Lord Stourton, by whom she was mother of CHARLES-PHILIP, Lord Stourton. (See BURKE's Peerage).

Mr. Philip Howard m. 2ndly, Harriet, dau. and co-heir of Edward Blount, Esq., and had an only surviving dau.,

ANNE, who m. Robert-Edward, LORD PETRE, and was mother of Robert-Edward, Lord Petre. (See BURKE's Peerage).

Upon the decease of Edward Howard, 11th Duke of Norfolk, in 1777, without issue, as stated above, the Barony of Howard separated from the dukedom and fell into ABEYANCE between his grace's nieces, as it still continues between their descendants, the LORDS PETRE AND STOURTON.

Arms—Gu., on a bend, between six cross-crosslets, fitchée, arg., an escutcheon or, charged with a demi-lion rampant, pierced through the mouth by an arrow, within a double treasure flory, counterflory of the first.

HOWARD—VISCOUNTS HOWARD, OF BINDON, CO. DORSET.

By Letters Patent, dated 13 January, 1559.

Lineage.

THOMAS HOWARD, 3rd Duke of Norfolk, m. 1st, the Lady Anne Plantaganet, one of the daus. of King EDWARD IV., by whom he had an only son, Thomas, and another son, who both d. young. His grace m. 2ndly, Lady Elizabeth Stafford, dau. of Edward, Duke of Buckingham, by whom he had issue,

HENRY, the celebrated EARL OF SURREY, who suffered decapitation in 1547, leaving a son, THOMAS, who inherited the honour of the house of Norfolk.

THOMAS, of whom presently.

Mary, m. to Henry Fitz-Roy, Duke of Richmond, natural son of King HENRY VIII.

The 2nd son,

LORD THOMAS HOWARD, was restored in blood (his father having been attainted, and only saved from execution by the death of King HENRY VIII.), in the 1st year of Queen MARY, and was elevated to the peerage 13 January, 1559, as VISCOUNT

HOWARD, of Bindon,* co. Dorset. His lordship m. 1st, Elizabeth, younger dau. and co-heir of John, Lord Marney, by Christian, dau., and eventually sole heiress of Sir Roger Newburgh, of East Lulworth, co. Dorset. By this lady Lord Bindon acquired very considerable estates in Dorsetshire, amongst which was the manor of Bindon, and had issue,

HENRY, his heir.

THOMAS, who s. his brother.

Lord Bindon m. 3rdly, Mabel, dau. of Nicholas Burton, Esq., of Carshalton, in Surrey, by whom he had a dau., Frances, m. 1st, to Henry Pranel, Esq., of Barkway, co. Hertford; 2ndly, to Edward Seymour, Earl of Hertford; and 3rdly, to Lodowick Stuart, Duke of Richmond, but had no issue. His lordship m. 4thly, Margaret, dau. of Henry Manning, Esq. of Greenwich. He d. 5 April, 1582, and was s. by his eldest son,

HENRY HOWARD, 2nd viscount, who espoused Frances, dau. of Sir Peter Mewias, Knt., of Essex, by whom he had an only dau., Douglass, who m. Sir Arthur Gorges, Knt. His lordship d. in 1590, and was s. by his brother,

THOMAS HOWARD, 3rd viscount, who was installed a knight of the Garter in May, 1606. His lordship m. Grace, dau. of Bernard Duffield, Esq., but d. s. p. in 1610, when the Viscounty of Bindon became EXTINCT. His lordship devised his estate to his kinsman, Thomas, Earl of Suffolk, and entailed it on Henry, Viscount Howard, Giles Howard, Henry, Earl of Northampton, William, Lord Howard, and their heirs.

Arms—Same as the other noble house of Howard.

HOWARD—EARL OF NORTHAMPTON.

By Letters Patent, dated 13 March, 1604.

Lineage.

HENRY HOWARD, the celebrated EARL OF SURREY, beheaded on Tower Hill, 19 January, 1547, left by Frances his wife, dau. of John de Vere, Earl of Oxford,

THOMAS, who was restored to the Dukedom of Norfolk

HENRY, of whom presently.

Jane, m. to Charles Neville, Earl of Westmoreland.

Margaret, m. to Henry, Lord Scrope, of Bolton.

Catherine, m. to Henry, Lord Berkeley.

The 2nd son,

HENRY HOWARD, who, with his three sisters, was restored in blood, in the first parliament of Queen ELIZABETH, during the remainder of that reign, having but a limited fortune, lived in retirement, and made little figure; but upon the accession of King JAMES he rose rapidly into honour, wealth, and power. He was first sworn of the privy council, soon afterwards constituted warden of the Cinque Ports, and constable of Dover Castle, and elevated to the peerage, 13 March 1604, in the dignities of Baron Howard, of Marnhill, and EARL OF NORTHAMPTON. The next year he was made one of the commissioners for exercising the office of earl marshal, and installed a knight of the Garter, and in 1608 he was appointed lord privy seal.

"The character of this nobleman," says Banks, "is unnoticed by the Baronagians in general, though other authors represent him as the most contemptible and despicable of mankind; a wretch, that it causes astonishment to reflect, that he was the son of the generous, the noble, and accomplished Earl of Surrey! He was a learned man, but a pedant, dark and mysterious, and consequently far from possessing masterly abilities. He was the grossest of flatterers; as his letters to his friend and patron, the Earl of Essex, demonstrate. But while he professed the most unbounded regard for Essex, he yet paid his suit to the treasurer Burghley; and on the fall of Essex, insinuated himself so far into the confidence of his mortal enemy, Cecil, as to become the instrument of the secretary's correspondence with the King of Scots, which passed through his hands. Wherefore, this circumstance, his intriguing spirit, and the sufferings of his family, for MARY, Queen of Scots, may, in some measure, account for the very great favour he experienced on the accession of King JAMES I."

His lordship d. unm., 15 June, 1614, at the palace he had erected at Charing Cross, (the present Northumberland House,) when the Barony of Howard, of Marnhill, and the Earldom of Northampton, became EXTINCT.

Arms—GU., on a bend between six crosslets, stichée, arg., an escutcheon, or, charged with a demi-lion, vulnérated in the mouth with an arrow, all within a double tressure counterflory, gu., a crescent for difference.

HOWARD—VISCOUNT STAFFORD, EARLS OF STAFFORD.

By Letters Patent, dated 12 September, 1640.

Lineage.

The Barony of Stafford having been surrendered by Roger Stafford, the last male heir of that illustrious family, to King CHARLES I., (see Stafford, Barons Stafford, Earls Stafford, &c.) that monarch created by letters patent, dated 12 September, 1640,

SIR WILLIAM HOWARD, K.B., (younger son of Thomas, Earl of Arundel,) and his wife, Mary Stafford, only sister and heiress of Henry Stafford, Lord Stafford, who d. in 1637, BARON and BARONESS STAFFORD, with remainder to the heirs male, of their bodies, failing of which, to the heirs female; and in two months after, 11 November, his lordship was advanced to the VISCOUNTY OF STAFFORD. The unjust fate of this nobleman is so well known, that it were a waste of time and space to particularise it here, further than his having been tried at Westminster Hall, for high treason, as a participator in the mock popish plot, and his becoming the last victim of Titus Oates and his perjured associates. His lordship suffered death by decapitation, on Tower Hill, 29 December, 1680, and having been attainted, his honours became FORFEITED, while the barony of his lady was placed pretty much in a similar situation, owing to the bar raised by that penal act, to the inheritance of her children. The viscount left issue,

HENRY, of whom presently.

John, m. 1st, Mary, dau. of Sir John Southcote, Knt., of Mersham, co. Surrey, and had issue, WILLIAM, who s. his uncle.

JOHN-PAUL, who s. his nephew.

Mary, m. to Francis Plowden, Esq., 2nd son of Edmund Plowden, Esq., of Plowden, co. Salop, and had issue, an only dau. and heiress, MARY PLOWDEN, who m. Sir George Jerningham, Bart., and was mother of Sir William Jerningham, whose son and heir Sir George-William Jerningham, Bart., was restored in 1824, to the BARONY OF STAFFORD created in 1640, by the reversal of the iniquitous attainder of Viscount Stafford, in 1638. (See BURKE's Extant Peerage).

John Howard m. 2ndly, Theresa, dau. of Robert Strickland, Esq., and had a son and dau., Edward and Harriott.

Francis, m. Eleanor, dau. of Henry Stanford, Esq., and had a son,

Henry, who d. s. p.

Isabella, m. to John Paulet, Marquess of Winchester.

Anastasia, m. to George Holman, Esq., of Warkworth, co. Northampton.

After the decease of the viscount, the viscountess was created, 5 October, 1688, Countess of Stafford, for life (a dignity that expired at her decease in 1693). Upon the same day that her ladyship had this new honour, her eldest son,

HENRY STAFFORD HOWARD, was created Earl of Stafford, with remainder, in default of male issue, to his brothers. Upon the abdication of King JAMES II., his lordship, following the fortunes of the fallen monarch, retired into France, and there m. 3 April, 1694, Claude-Charlotte, eldest dau. of Philibert, Count de Gramont, and Elizabeth, dau. of Sir George Hamilton, Knt., but dying in 1619, s. p. was s. by his nephew,

CHARLES-WILLIAM HOWARD, 7th Earl of Suffolk, as 2nd Earl of Bindon. This nobleman m. Arabella, dau. and co-heir of Sir Samuel Astry, Knt., but had no issue. His lordship, who was lord-lieutenant and custos rotulorum of the co. Essex, d. in February, 1722, when the Earldom of Suffolk devolved upon his uncle, and the Barony of Chesterford and Earldom of Bindon became EXTINCT.

HOWARD—DUKES OF NORFOLK.

The DUKEDOM OF NORFOLK came into the Howard family by the creation of JOHN HOWARD, Earl Marshal and Duke of Norfolk, 28 June, 1483. The said John Howard was son and heir of Sir Robert Howard, by Margaret, his wife, dau. of Thomas Mowbray, 1st Duke of Norfolk of that family, and cousin, and ultimately co-heir of John Mowbray, 4th and last Duke of Norfolk, of the Mowbrays. The Dukedom of Norfolk has since been frequently forfeited by the Howards; but as it has now continued uninterruptedly for two centuries in the family, it is deemed more correct to place it amongst extant honours than in this work; the reader is therefore referred to BURKE'S Extant Peerage for a full detail of the family of Howard, Dukes of Norfolk.

A few words, however, as to the parentage of Sir William Howard, the judge, and the origin of the name of Howard may not be irrelevant here:—The name is certainly identical with the Saxon name Herward or Hereward, and Robert, the grandfather of the judge, was called Robert, filius Haward, in a fine of the 12th HENRY III.; and in an undated charter made by him, he described himself as Robert Herward. Herward was a well known name amongst the Saxons, and besides Earl Hereward, many chiefs of note bore that appellation.

In no less than five charters, all relating to property in Norfolk formerly possessed by the Howard family, Sir William, the judge, is described as the son of John Howard, and, in one, his mother is named as Lucia Germund, and as the widow of John. Copies of all these charters, from the originals at Norfolk House, are still preserved at Corby Castle, the seat of Philip Henry Howard, Esq. In a charter made by Richard Fitz-William de Wigenhall to a convent in Norfolk, a copy of which is also now at Corby Castle, two of the witnesses are John Howard and William his son. In the first writs addressed to William as a judge, the name is written either Hayward or Haward, and the word Howard does not appear in the enrolments until after the accession of EDWARD II.

John Howard, the father of the judge, was the son of Robert Howard or Herward. There are several charters preserved in which Robert was either a grantor or a witness; and in a fine of the 12th of HENRY III. he is judicially described as Robertus, filius Haward. In his own charters, he is sometimes named Robert Herward, Robert Haward, and Robert Howard.

Howard or Herward, the father of Robert, who describes himself solely by his name of Harward or Herward, in a grant which he made to the church of St. Mary at Lynn, in the time of HENRY II., a charter made with the consent of Wiburg his wife, directed that prayers should be said for the repose of the soul of his father Haward, and of the soul of his grandfather Haward. In this charter, the original of which was, in the 17th century, in the possession of the de Veres, Earls of Oxford, and a copy of which is at Corby, after the last-named Haward, there is inserted the word "exul," meaning either the banished man, or the exile. The pedigree is thus carried up to Haward or Herward, the exile, who must have lived in the time of, or shortly after, the Norman Conquest.

HOWARD — EARLS OF NOTTINGHAM, EARLS OF EFFINGHAM, CO. SURREY.

Earldom of Nottingham, by Letters Patent, dated 22 Oct., 1596.

Francois, m. to Edward, Earl of Hertford, and d. s. p. in 1598.

Martha, m. to Sir George Bouchier, Knt., 3rd son of John, Earl of Bath.

His lordship d. in 1573, and was s. by his eldest son,

SIR CHARLES HOWARD, 2nd Baron Howard, of Effingham, so celebrated for his glorious defeat of the formidable armada. This eminent person was initiated, in the life-time of his father, in the affairs of state, having been deputed by Queen ELIZABETH on a special embassy to CHARLES IX. of France. On his return he was elected to parliament by the county of Surrey, and was made general of horse, in which capacity he distinguished himself in suppressing the rebellion raised by the Earls of Northumberland and Westmoreland. The following year he was sent with a fleet of men of war to convey the Lady Anne of Austria, dau. of the Emperor MAXIMILIAN, going into Spain, over the British seas. In 1574, he was installed a knight of the Garter, and appointed lord chamberlain of the household, and in 1586, his lordship was one of the commissioners for the trial of MARY, Queen of Scotland. Having succeeded the Earl of Lincoln, as lord high admiral of England, Lord Howard of Effingham, achieved his historic fame by the defeat and dispersion of the Spanish Armada in 1588. For this great service his royal mistress not only rewarded him with a pension, but ever after considered him as a person born for the especial preservation of her realm. His next achievement was the conquest of Cadiz, for which he was created, 22 October, 1596, EARL OF NOTTINGHAM. Upon the accession of King JAMES I., his lordship was continued in the post of lord admiral, and constituted for the occasion of that monarch's coronation lord high steward of England. We afterwards find the earl taking a prominent part at the nuptials of the Princess Elizabeth with the Elector Palatine, which is thus recorded by Arthur Wilson:—"In February (1612) following the death of Prince Henry, the prince palatine, and that lovely princess, the Lady Elizabeth, were married on Bishop Valentine's day, in all the pomp and glory that so much grandeur could express. Her vestments were white, the emblem of innocency; her hair dishevelled, hanging down her back at length, an ornament of virginity; a crown of pure gold upon her head, the cognizance of majesty, being all over beset with precious gems, shining like a constellation; her train supported by twelve young ladies in white garments, so adorned with jewels, that her path looked like a milky way.

She was led to church by her brother, Prince Charles, and the Earl of Northampton. And while the archbishop of Canterbury was solemnizing the marriage some convulsions and lightnings of joy appeared in her countenance, that expressed more than an ordinary smile, being almost elated to a laughter, which could not clear the air of her fate, but was rather a forerunner of more sad and dire events; which shews how slippery nature is to toll us along to those things that bring danger, yea sometimes destruction with them.

"She returned from the chapel between the Duke of Lenox, and the Earl of Nottingham, lord high admiral, two married men. The city of London (that with high magnificence feasted the prince palatine and his noble retinue,) presented to the fair bride a chain of oriental pearl, by the hand of the lord mayor and aldermen, (in their scarlet and gold chain accoutrements,) of such a value as was fit for them to give, and her to receive. And the people of the kingdom in general being summoned to a contribution for the marriage of the king's daughter, did shew their affections by their bounty. And though it be the custom of our kings to pay their daughter's portions with their subjects' purses, yet an hundred years being almost passed since such a precedent, it might have made them unwilling (if their obedience had not been full ripe,) to recal such obsolete things, as are only in practice now by the meanest of the people."

In 1619, the earl resigned the office of lord admiral. He was now eighty-three years of age, and desirous of repose; but not caring to lose the precedence which that dignity gave him, he obtained from the king, according to Collins, by special patent, the privilege of taking place, as his ancestor (John, Lord Mowbray, Earl of Nottingham) had done in the time of RICHARD II. His lordship m. 1st, Katharine Carey, dau. of Henry, Lord Hunsdon, and had issue,

WILLIAM, who was summoned to parliament in his father's lifetime. He m. Anne, dau. and sole heir of John, Lord St. John, of Bletsoe, but d. before his father, leaving an only dau. and heiress,

Barony, by Letters Patent, dated 7 July, 1604.

Earldom, by Letters Patent, dated 3 July, 1605.

Lineage.

SIR GEORGE HOME, Knt., 3rd son of Alexander Home, of Manderston, and great-grandson of Sir David Home, of Wedderburn, having accompanied King JAMES I. into England, was elevated to the English peerage, 7 July, 1604, as BARON HUME, of Berwick. He had previously succeeded Lord Elphinston in the treasurership of Scotland, and was created a peer of that kingdom, 3 July, 1605, in the dignity of EARL OF DUNBAR. His lordship, who was in great favour with his royal master, was a knight of the Garter, chancellor of the Exchequer, and master of the wardrobe. He is characterized by the Archbishop of St. Andrews "as a person of deep wit, few words; and in his majesty's service, no less faithful than fortunate. The most difficult affairs he compassed without any noise, never returning when he was employed, without the work performed that he was sent to do." He m. Catherine, dau. of Sir Alexander Gordon, of Gight, and had two dau., his co-heirs, viz.,

I. ANNE, m. Sir James Home, of Coldingknows.

HUME OR HOME—EARL OF MARCHMONT.

By Letters Patent, dated 23 April, 1697.

Lineage.

SIR PATRICK HUME OR HOME, of Polwarth, b. 13 January, 1641, the eldest son of Sir Patrick Home, Bart., of Polwarth, and the descendant of Sir David Home, 2nd son of Sir Thomas Home, of Home, s. his father 1648, and became one of the most conspicuous characters of the age. After enduring imprisonment and long-continued persecution for his opposition to the measures of the court, he at length effected his escape to Holland, and thence accompanied the Prince of Orange to Britain in 1688, when he took his seat in the convention as member for the county of Berwick. The forfeiture passed against him in 1685 was rescinded by parliament, he was sworn a privy councillor, nominated a commissioner for the then projected union, and created a peer of Scotland, by the title of Lord Polwarth, "to him and the heirs male of his body, and to their heirs," by patent, dated at Kensington, 26 December, 1690, when the king assigned to him an orange, proper, ensigned with an imperial crown, to be placed as a surcoat in his coat of arms. He was appointed sheriff of Berwickshire, 2 October, 1692; one of the extraordinary lords of session, 28 November, 1693; constituted high chancellor of Scotland 2 May, 1696, and created EARL OF MARCHMONT, Viscount of Blasonberrie, Lord Polwarth, of Polwarth, Redbraes and Greenlaw, by patent, dated at Kensington, 23 April, 1697, to him and his heirs male whatsoever; and the same year he was appointed one of the commissioners of the Treasury and Admiralty. His lordship m. Grizel, dau. of Sir Thomas Ker, of Cavers, and by her (who d. at Edinburgh, 11 October, 1703, and was buried in the Canongate churchyard) had issue,

Patrick, Lord Polwarth, who d. s. p.

Robert, who d. s. p. 27 October, 1692.

ALEXANDER, 2nd Earl of Marchmont.

Andrew, of Kimmerghame, co. Berwick, who was appointed a lord of session, on the resignation of his brother, 25 November, 1711, and d. in 1730. He m. Elizabeth, dau. of John Douglas, Esq., by whom he had a son, John, an officer in the army, murdered at Roscrea, in Ireland, 28 September, 1738, without issue, by his wife, a dau. of Drummond, of Blair; and two daus., Elizabeth, m. to Charles St. Clair, of Herdmanston, and d. 12 March, 1784, leaving a son, Andrew St. Clair, to whose son, Charles, the title of Lord Sinclair was adjudged by the House of Lords, 1782; and Helen, m. in June, 1735, to Andrew Wauchope, of Niddrie Marischal, chief of one of the oldest families in the shire of Edinburgh, and had three sons (see Landed Gentry).

Grizel, b. at Redbraes Castle, 25 December, 1665; m. 17 September, 1692, to George Baillie, M.P. of Jerriswood, one of the lords of the Treasury, who d. at Oxford, 6 August, 1738, aged seventy-five. She d. 6 December, 1746, in the eighty-first year of her age, and was buried at Mellerstain. Christian, d. in 1688, aged about twenty-one, in Holland. Margaret, who d. unm.

Lord Marchmont d. in 1740, and was s. by his son,

HUGH HOME, 3rd Earl of Marchmont, b. at Edinburgh, 15 February, 1708, who soon gained distinction by his learning and the brilliancy of his genius. His lordship was a leading parliamentary debater, and held in high estimation by his contemporaries, among whom were Chatham, Walpole, Lyttelton, and Wyndham. Lord Cobham gave his bust a place in the Temple of Worthies, at Stow; and Pope thus mentions his lordship, in the well-known inscription in the grotto at Twickenham:

"There the bright flame was shot through Marchmont's soul!"

In 1747, the earl was appointed first lord of police, and in 1764, keeper of the great seal of Scotland. He m. 1st, in May, 1731, Miss Anne Western, of London, and by her (who d. at Redbraes, 9 May, 1747), had one son and three daus.,

Patrick, Lord Polwarth, who d. young.

HUNGERFORD—BARONS HUNGERFORD.

By Writ of Summons, dated 7 January, 1426.

Lineage.

WALTER DE HUNGERFORD, who m. Maud de Heytesbury, was father of

WALTER DE HUNGERFORD, living A.D., 1306, who had two sons,

ROBERT, and Walter.

The elder son,

SIR ROBERT DE HUNGERFORD, who, in the 1st year of EDWARD III., was constituted one of the commissioners to inquire and certify to the barons of the Exchequer what lands and tenements, &c., Hugh le Despencer, Earl of Winchester, and Hugh, his son (with others who suffered death in the last year of King EDWARD II.'s reign), were possessed of. This Sir Robert, who was distinguished by his piety, gave to the warden of the hospital of St. John, at Calne, lands of considerable value, to maintain a priest to pray for the soul of Joane, his wife, for the health of his own soul, and those of his parents, benefactors, and all the faithful deceased. But in the event of the said warden failing to fulfil the trust thus reposed in him, the said lands were to devolve upon his brother WALTER. Sir Robert m. Geva, widow of Adam de Skokke, d. s. p. 1354, and was s. by his said brother,

SIR WALTER DE HUNGERFORD, who m. Elizabeth, dau. of Sir Adam Fitz-John, of Cherill, Wilts, and was s. by his son,

SIR THOMAS DE HUNGERFORD, of Farley, who, in the 30th EDWARD III., was escheator for the co. Wilts; and in the 51st of the same reign, filled the chair of the House of Commons as Speaker, being the first person elected to that high office; the Commons not having had previously such an officer. In the 3rd RICHARD II., Sir Thomas obtained a confirmation of the office of forester of Selwood, which he had formerly acquired from Roger de Sturton. In the 6th of the same monarch he purchased from Elizabeth, the widow of Edward, Lord Spenser, the manor of Heytesbury, called the West Court, together with the hundred of Haytesbury. The next year having fortified his house at Farle Montford, co. Somerset, without license, he obtained a pardon for the same, and soon after procured a charter for free warren in all his demesne lands. Sir Thomas m. Joane, dau. and co-heir of Sir Edmund Husey, Knt., of Holbrook, and d. 3 December, 1398, having had issue,

- I. Rhodolph,
- II. Thomas,
- III. John,
- IV. WALTER, of whom we treat.

The 4th son,

SIR WALTER HUNGERFORD, Knt., in consideration of his eminent services obtained, upon the accession of King HENRY IV., a grant of £100 per annum, to be received out of the lands of Margaret, Duchess of Norfolk. In three years afterwards Sir Walter was engaged in the wars of France, and, subsequently, for his expenses in those wars, and especially at Calais, where he acquired great honour by encountering a knight of France, he had a further grant of 100 marks per annum, payable out of the town and castle of Marlborough, in Wilts, and the same year was constituted sheriff of that co. In the 13th HENRY IV., upon the death of Joane, his mother, he had livery of the manors of Heytesbury and Tesfount-Ewyas, co. Wilts, and of Farle-Mountfort, and others in Somersetshire, his homage being respited. In the 4th HENRY V. Sir Walter was constituted admiral of the whole fleet under John, Duke of Bedford, and during that and the next two years he appears to have been entirely engaged in the wars of France. In the latter year, being at the time steward of the king's household, and in his service at the siege of Roan, he obtained a grant in special tail, of the Barony of Homet, in Normandy, which had formerly been enjoyed by Sir William de Montney, Knt.; rendering to the king and his heirs one lance, with a fox-tail hanging thereat yearly, upon the feast day of the exaltation of the Holy Cross; and finding ten men at arms and twenty archers, to serve him, or his lieutenant during his wars with France. About this time Sir Walter was chosen a knight of the Garter. Continuing to acquire fresh laurels on the French soil, this gallant soldier obtained a further grant for his services in the 9th of the same reign, of the castle of Neville, and territory of Breant, in Normandy, with divers other lands, which had been the possessions of Sir Robert de Breant, Knt. Sir Walter was one of the executors to the will of HENRY V., and in the 2nd of the ensuing reign he was constituted, by advice of the lords then sitting in parliament, steward of the household to the young king; and in two years afterwards he was appointed treasurer of the Exchequer. In the 6th HENRY VI., bearing then the title of "Sir Walter Hungerford, Knt., Lord of Heightresbury and Homet, and treasurer of England," he gave to the dean and canons of the Free-Royal-Chapel of St. Stephen, within the king's palace at Westminster, divers houses and shops in the parish of St. Anthony, within the city of London, in consideration whereof, they covenanted to make him partaker of all their masses and suffrages, during his life, and after his death to celebrate his obit annually, with Placebo and Dirige, and mass of Requiem, and to make distribution thereat, of twenty pence to the dean, to every canon twelve pence, to every vicar six pence, to every clerk four pence, and to the verger six pence. In three years afterwards, being still lord treasurer of England, his lordship had license to transport 3,000 marks for the ransom of Sir Walter Hungerford, his son, then a prisoner in France. His lordship m. 1st, Catherine, one of the daus. and co-heirs of Thomas Peverell, by his wife, Margaret, dau. of Sir Thomas Courtenay, Knt., by whom he had issue,

I. Walter (Sir), who d. in Provence, before his father.

II. ROBERT (Sir), of whom presently.

III. Edmund (Sir), m. Margaret, dau. and co-heir of Edward Burnell, and grand-dau. and co-heir of Hugh, Lord Burnell, between whom and her sisters, the Barony of Purnell fell into ABEYANCE in 1420, and so remains with their representatives. He d. in 1484, having had issue, two sons,

1 THOMAS (Sir), ancestor of the HUNGERFORDS of DOWN AMPNEY, co. Gloucester, whose eventual heiress, Bridget (dau. of Sir Anthony Hungerford, of Down Ampney), m. Edmund Dunch, Esq., the HUNGERFORDS of WINDRUSH,* co. Oxford; the HUNGERFORDS of BLACK BOULTON, also in Oxfordshire, and afterwards of FARLEY CASTLE, Berks.

2 EDWARD (Sir), m. Anne, dau. of Edward Grey, Lord Ferrers, of Groby, and was ancestor of the HUNGERFORDS, of Cadenham, co. Wilts, whose descendant, Sir George Hungerford, m. Frances, dau. of Lord Seymour, of Trowbridge, and d. in 1714, leaving two sons, whose issue became extinct, and four daus., 1 Ann, who m. Edward Luttrell, and was mother of Southcott Hungerford Luttrell, Esq.; 2 Frances, who m. John Keate, Esq., and had a son, John Hungerford Keate, Esq., who m. Penelope, dau. and heir of Henry Fleming, D.D., and had a dau. and eventual heiress who m. George Walker, Esq., of Calne, who assumed the surname of Hungerford, and had a dau., HENRIETTA-MARIA-ANNA HUNGERFORD, wife of the Hon. JOHN CREWE. 3 Catharine, who m. Henry Blanke, Esq., and had with other issue a dau., Frances, m. to Robert Duke, Esq., of Lake; and 4 Mary.

3 Walter, m. Margaret, dau. of Sir John St. Leger.

1 Philippa, m. to Sir Thomas Seymour.

2 Margaret, m. to John Ferrers, of Plowden, Wilts.

3 Lettice.

4 Anne, m. to Henry Barker.

5 Jane, m. to James Ryall.

6 Christiana

I. Elizabeth, m. to Sir Philip Courtenay, of Powderham.

II. Margaret, m. to Sir Walter Rodney, Knt.

Lord Hungerford m. 2ndly, Eleanor, Countess of Arundel, dau. of Sir John Berkeley, Knt., but had no issue. He was summoned to parliament as a Baron, from the 4th to the 26th of King HENRY VI.'s reign inclusive. By his testament bearing date 1 July, 1449, wherein he styleth himself Lord Hungerford, Heytesbury, and Homet, he directs his body to be buried in a certain chapel in the cathedral church at Salisbury, in which he had founded a perpetual chantry for two chaplains, and wherein Catherine, his 1st wife, lay buried; and after some pious bequests, he leaves to Allanore, Countess of Arundel, his then wife, all his plate, both of silver and gold, and likewise all those other goods and chattels, which were hers while she was unmarried. To Sir Robert Hungerford, his son, his best Dorset of Arras. To the Lady Margaret, wife of his said son, his best legend of the lives of saints, written in French, and covered with red cloth. To Robert Hungerford, Lord Molines, his grandson, his best pair of cuirasses, with all belonging thereto; to be made choice of by him, out of the armory at Farley-Hungerford. To his son, Sir Edmund Hungerford, Knt., a cup of gold, with a cover, and a sapphire on the head thereof. To Elizabeth, his dau., a cup of gold. To Margaret, his other dau., a bed of silk, of black and green colour. And because his much honoured lord, the Viscount Beaumont, was lineally

* The last male heir of the Windrush branch was the late John Peach Hungerford, Esq., M.P., of Dingley Park, co. Northampton, who d. 4 June, 1809, aged ninety, having devised his estates to Henry Hungerford Holdich, Esq., who has assumed the additional surname of Hungerford (see BURKE'S Landed Gentry—HUNGERFORD, of Dingley Park).

descended from the Dukes of Lancaster, he bequeathed unto him a cup of silver, with a cover bordered with gold, with which cup the most noble Prince John, Duke of Lancaster, was often served; and in which he did use to drink so long as he lived. And lastly, for the better advancement of Arnulph and William Hungerford (sons of the said Sir Robert Hungerford, Knt., his son), in their marriages, and Mary, dau. of the said Sir Robert, he bequeaths to them 700 marks sterling. His lordship d. in 1449, and was s. by his eldest surviving son,

SIR ROBERT HUNGERFORD, Knt., as 2nd Baron Hungerford, summoned to parliament from 3 September, 1450, to 26 May, 1455. Of this nobleman very honourable mention is made regarding his services in France, during the life-time of his father, under the Regent Bedford. In the 17th HENRY VI. he inherited the estates of his aunt, Alianore Talbot, the only sister of his mother, and the co-heir of Thomas Peverell. His lordship m. Margaret Botreaux, only dau. and heir of William, Lord Botreaux, (who d. in 1477), and had issue,

ROBERT, his successor, who inherited the Barony of Botreaux, in right of his mother.
Arnulph. William.
Catharine, m. to Richard Lord Delaware.
Mary.

Lord Hungerford d. in 1458, and was s. by his eldest son,

ROBERT HUNGERFORD, 3rd Baron Hungerford, who had been summoned to parliament (having m. the heiress of Molines), in the life-time of his father, as LORD MOLINES, from 13 January, 1445 to 20 January, 1453, but never summoned as Baron Hungerford. This nobleman served in the French wars, under the great captain, Sir John Talbot, the gallant and renowned Earl of Shrewsbury, and was with him at the unfortunate battle of Chastillon, where that illustrious soldier lost his life, and Lord Molines became a prisoner. Whereupon Alianore, Countess of Arundel, some time wife of his grandfather, Walter, Lord Hungerford, bestowed upon him all the wool then in her manor of Heytesbury, valued at 100 marks, towards the payment of his ransom, provided that he came alive out of prison. By which, and considerable supplies from Margaret, Lady Hungerford and Botreaux, his mother, he obtained his freedom, after an incarceration of seven years and four months. In the 38th HENRY VI., his lordship, in consideration of his services and his sufferings, obtained license to transport 1,500 sacks of wool into any foreign parts, without payment of custom for the same: as also to travel beyond sea, and to take as many with him in his company, with gold, silver, and other necessities, as should be suitable to his degree. Upon this occasion, his lordship travelled into Italy. But returning before long, he espoused the Lancastrian interests, and fought under the red banner at Towton-field, from which conflict, after the defeat of his party, he fled to York, where he joined King HENRY, and thence accompanied the monarch into Scotland. His lordship was, in consequence, attainted by the parliament assembled in the 1st EDWARD IV. Notwithstanding which, King EDWARD regarded his wife, Alianore, and his younger children, with such feelings of compassion, that he committed them to the care of Lord Wenlok, to whom he had granted the attainted lord's estates, for a fitting support. In three years afterwards, the Lancastrians again making head, Lord Hungerford was in their ranks at the battle of Hexham, and being made prisoner, he was conveyed to Newcastle, and there beheaded, anno 1463. He was buried in the cathedral church of Salisbury. His lordship m. Eleanor, dau. and heir of William, Lord Molines, and had issue,

THOMAS (Sir), of whom presently.
Walter, ancestor of the LORDS HUNGERFORD, OF HEYTESBURY, see that dignity.
Leonard.
Fridiswide, who became a nun at Sion.

Upon the attainder of Robert, Lord Hungerford and Molines, these honours became EXTINCT. His lordship's widow m. Sir Oliver Manningham. His eldest son,

SIR THOMAS HUNGERFORD, sided for a while with Richard Nevil, Earl of Warwick, who then espoused the cause of EDWARD IV., but afterwards falling off, and exerting his influence for the restoration of King HENRY VI., he was seized, and tried for his life at Salisbury, in the 8th EDWARD IV., and having had judgment of death as a traitor, was executed the next day. Sir Thomas m. Anne, dau. of Henry, Earl of Northumberland, by whom (who m. 2ndly, Sir Laurence Raynesford, Knt., and 3rdly, Sir Hugh Vaughan, Knt.), he had an only dau. and heiress,

MARY HUNGERFORD, who m. EDWARD HASTINGS, son and heir apparent of William, 1st Lord Hastings, of Ashby-de-la-Zouche. This Mary, the attainders of her father and grandfather having been reversed in the first parliament of King HENRY VII., had restitution of the honours and estates of her family, and in consequence bore the title of Lady Hungerford, Botreaux, and Molines. Her ladyship's son and successor, George Hastings, was created EARL OF HUNTINGDON, in which earldom, those baronies became merged until the death of Francis, 10th earl, in 1789, without issue, when they became vested in Elizabeth, his sister and heir, wife of John, Earl of Moira, of the kingdom of Ireland, and they are now enjoyed by her ladyship's great-grandson, HENRY, present and 4th MARQUESS OF HASTINGS.

HUNGERFORD — BARON HUNGERFORD, OF HEYTESBURY, CO. WILTS.

By Writ of Summons, dated 8 June, 1536.

Lineage.

THE HON. SIR WALTER HUNGERFORD, 2nd son of Herbert, 3rd Baron Hungerford, who was attainted and beheaded in 1463, having joined the banner of the Earl of Richmond, shared in the triumph of Bosworth, and participated in the spoils of conquest. We find him subsequently again in arms for his royal master, against Perkin Warbeck, and the Cornish men, who had risen in his behalf, and he was eventually of the privy council, to King HENRY VIII. He m. Jane Bulstrode, and had issue,

EDWARD, (Sir), his successor.
Elizabeth, m. to Sir John Bouchier.

He d. 1516, and was s. by his son,

SIR EDWARD HUNGERFORD, Knt., of Heytesbury, co. Wilts, who m. Jane, dau. of John Lord Zouche of Harringworth, and was s. by his only son,

SIR WALTER HUNGERFORD, of Heytesbury, who was summoned to parliament as BARON HUNGERFORD, OF HEYTESBURY, 8 June, 1536. His lordship m. 1st, Susanna, dau. of Sir John Danvers, Knt., and had issue,

I. WALTER (Sir), of whom presently.

Lord Hungerford m. 2ndly, Alicia, dau. of William, Lord Sandys, by whom he had,

Edward (Sir), gentleman pensioner to Queen ELIZABETH, m. 1st, Jane, relict of William Foster, and 2ndly, Cicely, dau. of Sir John Tufton, and d. s. p. in 1608. His widow m. Thomas, Earl of Rutland.
Mary, m. 1st, to Thomas Baker, Esq., and 2ndly, Thomas Shaa.
Anne.

This nobleman in the 31st HENRY VIII., being attainted in parliament, was beheaded on Tower Hill, with Cromwell, Earl of Essex, 29 July, 1541, when the Barony of Hungerford of Heytesbury, EXPIRED. The crimes laid to his lordship's charge, were "retaining a chaplain, called William Bird, who had called the king a heretic.—Procuring certain persons to ascertain, by conjuration, how long the king should live;—and having been guilty of unnatural offences." The attainder of Lord Hungerford was reversed by Queen MARY in favour of his children, to all intents and purposes, save the enjoyment of the peerage. The eldest son,

SIR WALTER HUNGERFORD, Knt., of Farley Castle, m. 1st, Ann Bassett, and 2ndly, Anne, dau. of Sir William Dormer, Knt., and had issue, Edmund, d. s. p.

Susan, m. 1st, to Michael Ernley, Esq., of Cannings, co. Wilts; 2ndly, to John Moring; and 3rdly, to Sir Crew Reynolds.
Lucy, m. 1st, to Sir John St. John, of Lydiard; and 2ndly, to Sir Anthony Hungerford.
Jane, m. to Sir John Carne, Knt., of Ewenny, co. Glamorgan.

On the branch of the family settled at Black Bourton, co. Oxford, Farley Castle eventually devolved and was one of the great possessions of SIR EDWARD HUNGERFORD, knight of the Bath, surnamed "the Spendthrift," by whose boundless extravagance the family property, immense though it was, was utterly destroyed (See Vicissitudes of Families, 1st series). He d. in 1711, having had a son, Edward, who d. before him without surviving issue, and a dau. RACHEL, m. to Clotworthy, VISCOUNT MASSERENE. "Thus terminated," says Sir Richard Hoare, "the glory and good fortune of the Hungerford family. Even the name has become extinct in England though I have reason to think it survives in Ireland." Sir Richard Hoare was correct in his surmise; a very flourishing offshoot of the family still remains in Ireland, one branch being seated at the Island, near Clonakilty, co. Cork, and the other at Cahirmore, near Roscarbery, in the same co. Colonel Richard Hungerford of the Island, is called "cousin" in the will dated 24 May, 1729, of one of his English kinsmen, and Capt. Thomas Hungerford, who d. 1680, is described on his monument in Roscarbery Cathedral, as "descended of Sir Edward Hungerford of Down Ampney, in the co. Gloucester."

HUNTERCOMBE—BARON HUNTERCOMBE.

By Writ of Summons, dated 23 June, 1296.

Lineage.

In the 35th HENRY III., WILLIAM DE HUNTERCOMBE, having m. Isabel, one of the daus. and co-heirs of Robert de Muschamp, had livery of the lands of her inheritance, and in some years after had summons to be at Chester, well fitted with horse and arms, to oppose the hostilities of the Welsh. And in the 54th of the same reign he was signed with the cross, in order to accompany Prince Edward in a voyage to the Holy Land. He d. the next year, seised of the manor of Huntercombe, co. Oxford, and other estates, and was s. by his son,

SIR WALTER DE HUNTERCOMBE, Knt., who, in the 5th EDWARD I., answered £50 for his relief of the moiety of the Barony of Muschamp, which he then possessed. In the 10th year of the same reign we find him in an expedition made into Wales. In the 22nd he had summons to attend the king at Portsmouth, with horse and arms, thence to sail into Gascony, and the next year (23 June, 1295), he was summoned to parliament as a Baron. In the 25th his lordship was in the expedition made into Scotland, and the 26th he was made governor of Edinburgh Castle. In the 27th he was constituted lieutenant of Northumberland, and for several years subsequently he continued with the army in Scotland. In the 35th he petitioned parliament, setting forth his being in all the Scottish wars, first at Berwick, with twenty light horse; afterwards at Strivelin, with thirty-two in the retinue of the Earl Warren; next at La Vaire Chapelle, with thirty in the retinue of the bishop of Durham; lastly, at Galloway, with sixteen. And since that, in the last battle, that he sent eighteen, though absent himself, being then warden of the marches towards Northumberland. And his lordship prayed that his scutage for all these expeditions might be remitted, which request was accordingly conceded. Lord Huntercombe m. Alice, one of the daus. and co-heirs of Hugh de Bolebec, of Bolebec, co. Northumberland, and also co-heir of Richard de Montfichet, by reason that Margery, the mother of the said Hugh, was one of the sisters and co-heirs of the said Richard. His lordship d. in 1312, s. p., when his nephew, Nicholas, son of Richard de Newbaud, and Gunnora, his sister, succeeded to his lands, and the Barony of Huntercombe became EXTINCT.

HUNTINGFEILD—BARONS HUNTINGFEILD.

By Writ of Summons, dated 6 June, 1294.

Lineage.

In the time of King STEPHEN, WILLIAM DE HUNTINGFEILD, with the consent of Roger, his son and heir, gave the whole Isle of Mendham, co. Suffolk, and divers other lands, to the monks of Castle Acre, co. Norfolk. He d. in 1155, and was s. by his said son and heir,

ROGER DE HUNTINGFEILD, who was s. by his son,

WILLIAM DE HUNTINGFEILD, who being made constable of Dover Castle in the 5th King JOHN, obliged himself, by oath in the king's presence, faithfully to preserve the safe custody of that fortress, so that it should not be surrendered to any person, save the king himself, or the lord chamberlain, Hubert de Burgh, and as hostages for his loyalty, delivered up his son and dau., the former to remain in the hands of the Earl of Arundel, the latter in those of the Earl Ferrers. In the 8th of JOHN this William de Huntingfeild, paid a fine of two marks and two palfreys, for the wardship of the heir and lands of Osbert Fitz-Hervie, and the next year obtained a grant of all the possessions of Roger de Huntingfeild, his brother, which had been seized by the crown by reason of the interdict. In the following year we find him justice-itinerant for Lincoln, and afterwards sheriff for the counties of Norfolk and Suffolk; for four successive years subsequently, however, he became eminent amongst the barons who extorted the Great Charters from JOHN, and was one of the twenty-five chosen to enforce their observance, for which conduct he came under the excommunication of the Pope, and had his lands in Lincolnshire seized by the crown, and transferred to Nichola de Haya during the king's pleasure. In the reign of HENRY III., he seems to have made his peace, for he then journeyed to the Holy Land with a license from the crown. This feudal lord m. Alice de St. Liz, and had issue,

ROGER, his successor.

Alice, m. to Richard de Solers, whom she survived, and her father, in the 15th JOHN, she being then a widow, gave to the king six fair Norway goshawks for license to have the disposal of her in marriage, and for an assignation of her dowry out of the lands of her deceased husband.

His lordship was s. at his decease, in 1240, by his son,

ROGER DE HUNTINGFEILD, who, in the 26th HENRY III., paid a fine of 200 marks, to be exempted from the expedition then making into Gascony. He m. Joane, one of the daus. and co-heirs of William de Hoberugg, and dying in 1252, was s. by his son,

WILLIAM DE HUNTINGFEILD, who, at the battle of Evesham, 49th HENRY III. was one of the principal barons in hostility to the crown. He d. in 1282, and was s. by his son,

ROGER DE HUNTINGFEILD, who, in the 22nd EDWARD I., had summons, with other eminent persons, to attend the king with all despatch to advise about the important affairs of the realm; and soon after received command to be at Portsmouth well fitted with horse and arms, to sail into Gascony. He was summoned to parliament as a baron, 8 June, 1294 and 26 January, 1297, but never afterwards. His lordship m. Joyce, dau. of John de Engaine, and dying in 1301, was s. by his son,

WILLIAM DE HUNTINGFEILD, 2nd baron, who does not appear from the existing enrolments to have been summoned to parliament. This nobleman was engaged in the Scottish wars, temp. EDWARD I. and EDWARD II., and d. in 1313, being then possessed of the manor of Bekesworth, co. Cambridge, and the manors of Mendham and Huntingfeild, co. Suffolk, as also divers lordships and lands in other shires. His wife Sibell survived him, and m. William, Lord Latimer. His lordship was s. by his son,

ROGER DE HUNTINGFEILD, 3rd baron. This nobleman m. Cecilia, dau. of Sir Walter de Norwich, Knt., and dying in 1337, was s. by his son,

SIR WILLIAM DE HUNTINGFEILD, 4th baron, summoned to parliament from 15 November, 1351, to 20 January, 1376. His lordship served in the French wars in the 33rd and 34th EDWARD III., being latterly of the retinue of Henry, Duke of Lancaster. He d. in 1377, s. p., leaving his aunt Alice, dau. of William, his grandfather, and widow of Sir John Norwich, Knt., his heir; but according to another inquisition, the said Alice, and Sir John Copledick, grandson, of Johanna, dau. of the said William, his grandfather, by Sybilla, his 2nd wife, were his heirs.* Amongst whose descendants, if the writ of EDWARD I. be that which created the dignity, the Barony of Huntingfeild is now in ADEYANCE.

* COURTHOPE'S Historic Peerage.

HUSSEY — BARON HUSSEY, OF SLEFORD, CO. LINCOLN.

By Writ of Summons, dated 5 January, 1534.

Lineage.

SIR WILLIAM HUSSEY, Knt., an eminent lawyer in the time of EDWARD IV., after filling the office of attorney-general, and having been called by writ to the degree of serjeant at law, was constituted lord chief justice of the court of King's Bench, in the 17th of that monarch's reign, when he received an allowance of 140 marks, for greater state. He was living temp. HENRY VII., as is evident by this inscription over his arms, in the semicircular or bow window, of Grey's Inn Hall, viz.,

"W. House miles capitalis iusticiarius de banco regis, temp. R. HENRY VII."

In one of the windows of the chapel, belonging to the same inn, are his arms impaling those of his wife, with the following inscription,

"Will. Hussey miles capitalis iustic. ad placita coram rege, et Elizabetha uxor ejus filia Thomæ Berkeley arm."

The lady mentioned above, was of the Berkeleys of Wymondham, and Sir William had issue by her,

JOHN, his successor.

Robert (Sir), whose grandson, Sir Edward Hussey, Bart., of Honington, co. Lincoln. (so created by King JAMES I.) was grandfather of Sir Thomas Hussey, with whom the baronetcy expired. Sir Thomas left two surviving daus. his co-heirs, viz.,

Elizabeth, m. to Richard Ellis, Esq., and d. s. p.

Sarah, m. to Robert Appreece, Esq., of Washingley, co. Huntingdon, and had issue,

THOMAS APPREECE, whose son and heir,

THOMAS-HUSSEY APPREECE, Esq., of Washingley, was created a baronet, 4 June, 1782.

William, from whom descended the Husseys of Yorkshire.

Elizabeth, m. to Richard Grey, Earl of Kent.

Mary, m. to William, Lord Willoughby.

The eldest son,

SIR JOHN HUSSEY, Knt., in the 2nd HENRY VII., was in arms for the king at the battle of Stoke, against John, Earl of Lincoln, and his adherents; and in the 13th HENRY VIII., was made chief butler of England. In the 21st of the same reign, he was one of the knights of the king's body; and being summoned as BARON HUSSEY, of Sleaford, co. Lincoln (where he had erected a noble mansion), to the parliament begun at Westminster, 3 November, in that year, was admitted into the house 1 December following; but his lordship's name does not occur in the list of summonses for that year, nor before 6 January, 1534, yet it is clear that he was summoned; for the year after (22nd HENRY), he had, under the title of Lord Hussey, a grant of the custody of the manor of Harewoole, co. York; and he was one of the lords, who at that time signed the declaration to the Pope, regarding the king's divorce. In 1533, being then a lord of the council, he had a grant of the wardship and marriage of Thomas, the son and heir of Christopher Wymbush, deceased; but in a few years afterwards, engaging in the common insurrection, (anno 1537,) when the feuds and differences about religion broke out, he was attainted of high treason; his manor of Sleaford, with lands adjacent, worth £5,000 a year, confiscated, and he himself beheaded at Lincoln, when the Barony of Hussey, of Sleaford, EXPIRED. His lordship m. 1st, Anne Grey, dau. of George, Earl of Kent, and had issue,

Giles, } who both d. s. p.

Thomas, }

Bridget, m. 1st, to Sir Richard Morrison, Knt., by whom she had issue,

Charles, whose son, Sir Charles Morrison, Bart., of Cashibury, co. Herts, left an only dau., and heiress, ELIZABETH, who m. Arthur, LORD CAPEL, OF HADHAM, from whom the present EARL OF ESSEX descends, and inherits Cashibury Park.

Elizabeth, m. 1st, to Henry Norris, Esq., and 2ndly, to Henry Clinton, Earl of Lincoln.

Mary, m. to Barth Hales, Esq.

Jane-Sibilla, m. 1st, to Edward, Lord Russell, and 2ndly, to Arthur, Lord Grey, of Wilton.

Bridget, Lady Morrison, m. 2ndly, Henry, Earl of Rutland; and 3rdly, Francis, Earl of Bedford, but had issue by neither.

Elizabeth, m. to — Hungerford, Esq.

Anne, m. 1st, to Sir Humphrey Browne, Knt., one of the justices of the Court of Common Pleas; and 2ndly, to — Dimock, Esq.

Dorothy, m. to — Dockwray, Esq.

Lord Hussey m. 2ndly, Margaret, dau. and heir of Sir Simon Blount, of Mangotsbury, co. Gloucester, and had issue,

WILLIAM (Sir), of whom presently.
Giles (Sir), of Caythorpe, co. Lincoln.
Gilbert (Sir). Reginald.
Elizabeth.

The attainder of his lordship was reversed in parliament, the 5th ELIZABETH, and his children restored in blood, but neither the estate nor honour granted to the heir, which heir,

SIR WILLIAM HUSSEY, was sheriff of the co. Lincoln, in the 22nd HENRY VIII. He m. Ursula, dau. and co-heir of Sir Robert Lovell, Knt., and left two daus., viz.,

Margaret, m. to Richard D'Isney, Esq., of Norton D'Isney, co. Lincoln, ancestor by her of the D'Isneys of Swinderby, co. Lincoln, and of the Hyde, co. Essex.

Anne, m. to William Geil, Esq., of Darley, co. Derby.

Sir William d. in the 3rd and 4th PHILIP and MARY.

HYDE—BARONS HYDE OF HINDON, EARLS OF CLARENDON, BARONS HYDE OF WOTTON BASSETT, VISCOUNTS HYDE, OF KENILWORTH, EARLS OF ROCHESTER.

Barony of Hyde, of Hindon, by Letters Patent, dated 3 November, 1660.

Earldom of Clarendon, by Letters Patent, dated 20 April, 1661.

Barony of Hyde, of Wotton Bassett, and Viscounty of Hyde, of Kenilworth, by Letters Patent, dated 23 April, 1681.

Earldom of Rochester, by Letters Patent, dated 29 November, 1682.

Lineage.

SIR EDWARD HYDE, Knt., a person eminently learned in the law, and as eminent for his attachment to the CHARLES, was made chancellor of the Exchequer and a privy councillor, by the first monarch of that name; and having shared the fortunes of the second was declared by his Majesty, while in exile at Bruges, in Flanders, lord high chancellor of England, in the year 1657, which office he held until 1667, when he was succeeded by Sir Orlando Bridgman. Sir Edward was elevated to the peerage by letters patent, dated 3 November, 1660, as Baron Hyde, of Hindon, co. Wilt., and created 20 April, 1661, Viscount Cornbury, and EARL OF CLARENDON.^{*} His lordship obtained celebrity, not only as a lawyer and a statesman, but as a man of letters. By command of King CHARLES II., he wrote his popular History of the Rebellion, and he produced several other works, which are enumerated in Walpole's Catalogue of Royal and Noble Authors. "One may pronounce," says Walpole, "on my Lord Clarendon, in his double capacity of statesman and historian, that he acted for liberty, but wrote for prerogative;" and Burnet characterizes him, "as a good minister, indefatigable in business, but little too magisterial, and not well enough acquainted with foreign affairs." "He was a good chancellor," continues the same authority, "and impartial in the administration of justice; but a little too rough. He had a levity in his wit, and a loftiness in his carriage, that did not well become the station he was in; for those that addressed him, and those that thought themselves neglected he was apt to reject with contumely, and some disparagement of their services, which created him many enemies, and at last procured his fall." Upon his disgrace the earl retired into France, and d. at Roan, in Normandy, 19 December, 1674. His lordship m. Frances, dau. and eventually sole heir, of Sir Thomas Aylesbury, Bart., and had four sons, and two daus., viz.,

I. HENRY, Viscount Cornbury, his successor.

II. Laurence, master of the robes to King CHARLES II., who was advanced to the peerage, 23 April, 1681, as Baron Hyde, of Wotton Bassett, co. Wilt., and Viscount Hyde, of Kenilworth, co. Warwick, and was created EARL OF ROCHESTER, 29 November, 1682. This nobleman concurred in the revolution of 1688, and was constituted lord-lieutenant of Ireland, in 1700. He was a person of great natural parts, and esteemed as a statesman, incorruptible: indeed his disposition was deemed too warm to be insincere. He m. Henrietta Boyle, dau. of Richard, Earl of Burlington, and had issue,

HENRY, his successor.

Anne, m. to James, Duke of Ormonde.

Henrietta, m. to James, Earl of Dalkeith, eldest son of James, Duke of Monmouth, and from this marriage the Dukes of Buccleuch descend.

Mary, m. to Francis Seymour, Lord Conway, ancestor of the extant Marquesses of Hertford.

Catherine, d. unm.

His lordship d. in 1711, and was buried in Westminster Abbey. He was s. by his son, HENRY, 2nd Earl of Rochester, of whom hereafter, as 4th EARL OF CLARENDON.

III. Edward, student at law, d. unm.

IV. James, drowned on board the "Gloucester" frigate, in his passage to Scotland, with several other persons of distinction, in the train of the Duke of York.

I. ANNE, m. to JAMES, DUKE OF YORK, afterwards King JAMES II. This lady was maid of honour to the princess royal, and her marriage with the duke was concealed until her pregnancy compelled an avowal. The prince is accused of using both promises and menaces, to deter her from claiming him as a husband, but her ladyship had the spirit to declare, that it should be known she was his wife, be the consequences what they might.

II. Frances, m. to Sir Thomas Knightley, K.B., of Hartingfordbury, co. Herts.

Edward, Earl of Clarendon, was s. at his decease in 1709, by his eldest son,

HENRY HYDE, 2nd Earl of Clarendon, who in the 1st year of King JAMES II., was lord privy seal, but retired from office the next year. At the Revolution, he refused to act with the new government, and lived subsequently, in retirement. His lordship m. 1st, Theodosia Capel, dau. of Arthur, 1st Lord Capel, by whom he had an only son, EDWARD, Viscount Cornbury, his successor. He m. 2ndly, Flower, dau. and sole heir of William Backhouse, Esq., of Sallowfield, but had no issue. His lordship d. 31 October, 1709, and was s. by his son,

EDWARD HYDE, 3rd Earl of Clarendon. This nobleman, in the lifetime of his father, was master of the horse to Prince George of Denmark, and in the reign of Queen ANNE, his lordship was governor of New York. He m. Catherine, dau. of Henry, Lord O'Brien, eldest son of Henry, Earl of Thomond, which Catherine, at the decease of her mother, became BARONESS CLIFTON. By this lady he had issue, EDWARD, Viscount Cornbury, who d. unm., aged twenty-two, 12 February, 1712-13.

* CLARENDON. This title, first enjoyed by Sir Edward Hyde was derived from a spacious park, near Salisbury, formerly the site of a royal palace, but more remarkable, as the place where King HENRY II. summoned the great council of peers and prelates, in 1164, from which emanated the celebrated regulations, so well known as "The Constitutions of Clarendon," by which the clergy were made amenable to the jurisdiction of the civil power. From those regulations arose the subsequent hostility between HENRY II. and Thomas à Becket.

Catherine, d. unm.

Theodosia, m. 24 August, 1713, John Bligh, Esq., M.P. (afterwards Earl of Darnley), and from this marriage the extant Earl of Darnley derives, who enjoys the Barony of Clifton, through this lady.

His lordship d. 31 March, 1723, and his only son having d. previously, the honours devolved upon his kinsman (revert to Laurence, 2nd son of Edward, 1st earl).

HENRY HYDE, 2nd Earl of Rochester, as 4th Earl of Clarendon. This nobleman was joint treasurer of Ireland with Arthur, Earl of Anglesey. His lordship m. Jane, youngest dau. of Sir William Leveson-Gower, and sister of John, Lord Gower, by whom he had surviving issue, HENRY, Viscount Cornbury, who was summoned in his father's lifetime, 22 January, 1760, and placed in his father's Barony of Hyde, of Hindon. He d. in 1763, before his father.

Jane, m. to William Capel, 3rd Earl of Essex, and had four daus. of whom two lived to maturity, viz., CHARLOTTE, who became heir to her grandfather, Henry, Earl of Clarendon and Rochester. Her ladyship m. the Hon. Thomas Villiers, 2nd son of William, 2nd Earl of Jersey, which Thomas was elevated to the peerage 31 May, 1766, as Baron Hyde, of Hindon, and created EARL OF CLARENDON, 8 June, 1776. From this marriage descends VILLIERS, EARL OF CLARENDON (see BURKE'S Peerage).

Mary, m. in 1768, to Admiral the Hon. John Forbes, 2nd son of George, 3rd Earl of Granard.

Catherine, m. to Charles, Duke of Queensberry and Dover. This lady was the celebrated Duchess of Queensberry, the patroness of Gray, the poet.

The earl d. 1763, and his only son deceasing in the same year before him, the Barony of Hyde, of Hindon, the Viscounty of Cornbury, the Earldom of Clarendon, the Barony of Hyde, of Wotton Bassett, the Viscounty of Hyde, of Kenilworth, and the Earldom of Rochester, all became EXTINCT.

INGHAM—BARON INGHAM.

By Writ of Summons, dated 16 June, 1323.

Lineage.

In the 2nd year of King JOHN,

JOHN DE INGHAM, of Ingham, co. Norfolk, having m. Albreda, one of the daus. and co-heirs of Walter Wateran, paid a fine of 60 marks, and one palfrey to the king, for livery of the third part of his barony, and for the relief due thereupon, excepting the serjeanty of the forest, which William de Nevill then had. He d. in the 5th of the same reign, and was s. by his son,

OLIVER DE INGHAM, who d. in the 10th EDWARD I., possessed of estates in the cos. Norfolk, Southampton, Dorset, and Wilts, and was s. by his son,

JOHN DE INGHAM, of Ingham, who was s. by his son,

OLIVER DE INGHAM, of Ingham, who was summoned to parliament as a Baron, in the 2nd EDWARD III., and from that period to the 16th of the same reign. This nobleman was a very eminent person during the martial times in which he lived. In the beginning of EDWARD II.'s reign he was in the wars of Scotland, and we find him for several years afterwards actively engaged in that kingdom. In the 14th EDWARD II., he was constituted governor of the castle of Ellesmere, in Shropshire, and upon the breaking out of the insurrection under Thomas, Earl of Lancaster, he marched with the king to Cirencester, Gloucester, Shrewsbury, and other places. The next year he was made governor of the castle at Devizes, in Wilts, and sheriff of Cheshire; and in two years afterwards seneschal of Aquitaine, when he proceeded thither at the head of 7,000 men. Upon the deposition of EDWARD II., his lordship was appointed one of the twelve guardians of the young King EDWARD III., and soon after constituted justice of Chester for life. In this reign (EDWARD III.), his patent for the seneschalsy was renewed, and he obtained a grant of 500 marks sterling for his support in that service. His lordship had issue,

Elizabeth, m. to John Curson, and d. before her father, leaving a dau.,

MARY CURSON, m. to Stephen de Tumble, and d. s. p.

Joane, m. 1st, to Roger le Strange, Lord Strange of Knockyn, by whom she had no issue; she m. 2ndly, Sir Milce Stapleton, K.G., of Bedale, co. York, by whom she had issue: their line terminated after several generations in two daus., Elizabeth, m. 1st, Sir Philip Calthorp; 2ndly, Sir John Fortescue, chief justice of England; and 3rdly, Sir Edward Howard, lord high admiral of England; and Joan, m. 1st, Christopher Harcourt, Esq., of Stanton Harcourt, 2ndly, Sir John Hudleston.

Lord Ingham d. 1344, when the Barony of Ingham fell into ABEYANCE between his grand-dau., Mary Curson, and his dau., Joane, Lady Strange, his co-heirs.

IPRE—EARL OF KENT.

Creation of King STEPHEN, anno 1141.

Lineage.

WILLIAM DE IPRE, said to be an illegitimate son of Philip, Earl of Ipre, in Flanders, having distinguished himself previously in arms, joined in 1137, the banner of King STEPHEN, then reared in Normandy against the Empress Maud, and continuing actively engaged in that prince's cause, was created by him in 1141, EARL OF KENT; in which year he commanded one of the divisions of King STEPHEN's army at the battle of Lincoln, where the king's forces experienced a signal defeat, and the monarch himself became a prisoner. The earl, however, effected his retreat, and recruiting his army, encountered, subsequently, the empress at Winchester, where he retrieved the fortunes of his royal master, and restored him to

* Richard, 5th Viscount Irvine, m. Lady Anne Howard, 3rd dau. of Charles, 3rd Earl of Carlisle, but by her (who m. 2ndly, in 1737, Col. James Douglas) had no issue. Of this lady there is a portrait in Parke's Walpole. She was a poetess, and printed the following works:—In 1759, A Character of the Princess Elizabeth; An Ode to George III., in 1761; An Answer to some Verses of Lady Mary Wortley Montague, printed in a Supplement to Pope's Works; A Poetical Essay on Mr. Pope's Characters of Women. For this last her ladyship was thus noticed in Duncumbe's Feminead—

"By generous views, one peeress more demands
A grateful tribute from all female hands;
One, who to shield them from the worst of foes,
In their just cause dar'd Pope himself oppose.
Their own dark forms, deceit and envy wear,
By Irwin touch'd with truth's celestial spear."

freedom and a crown. In the heat of these feuds his lordship is accused of burning the Abbey of Wherwell, co. Southampton, because the nuns had harboured some of the partisans of the empress, but after peace was restored, he made restitution by founding the Cistercian Abbey, at Borley, in Kent, anno 1144. Upon the death of King STEPHEN, the Earl of Kent, then a widower, departed from England, and assuming the cowl in the Abbey of Laon, in Flanders, d. there about the year 1162. The earl had a son, who is said to have been cruelly murdered by the ministers of Theodoric, Earl of Flanders; in consequence of which, upon the decease of his lordship, the Earldom of Kent became EXTINCT; while his estates passed, according to "Hasted's History of Kent," to his only sister, Matilda, wife of Norman Fitz-Dering, ancestor of the Baronets Dering, of Surrenden Dering, co. Kent.

JEFFREYS—BARONS JEFFREYS, OF WEM, CO. SALOP.

By Letters Patent, dated 15 May, 1685.

Lineage.

The family of Jeffreys of Acton, near Wrexham, Denbighshire, a "race," observes Pennant, "which, after running uncontaminated from an ancient stock, had the disgrace of producing George Jeffreys, Chancellor of England," is a junior branch of the honourable stem of Jones, of Lwynon, in the same county and vicinity, still flourishing, after a succession of twenty generations, at that seat. Their progenitor was TUDOR TREVOR, Lord of Hereford, a powerful chieftain at the close of the 10th and beginning of the 11th centuries, who m. A.D. 907, Angharad, dau. of Howel Ddâ, King of South Wales, and had issue,

I. GRONWY AP TUDOR TREVOR, Lord of Hereford, who d. without male issue.

II. LUDDEKN, ap Tudor Trevor, Lord of both Maelors and Oswestry, progenitor of 1 Mostyns, of Mostyn, co. Flint, baronets, whose heir-general is Edward-Price-Lloyd Mostyn, 2nd Lord Mostyn; 2 Mostyns of Lluesog and Segroyt, represented by the present THOMAS-ARTHUR-BERTIE MOSTYN, Esq., of those places; 3 Mostyns, of Talacre, baronets, and Mostyns, Lords Vaux; 4 Trevors, of Brynkynallt, from whom derives maternally LORD ARTHUR-EDWIN HILL, of Brynkynallt, who has assumed the name and arms of Trevor; 5 Trevors of Allington, ancestors of Trevors, of Trevallyn, from whom descends with other co-heirs Boscowen Trevor Griffith, Esq., of Trevallyn Hall; 6 Lloyd of Leighton Knowles; 7 Lloyd, of Penley; 8 Wynn, of Eyarth; 9 Pennant, of Downing; 10 Pennant, Lord Penrhyn; 11 Dymoke, of Penley Hall; 12 Eyton, of Eyton; 13 Eyton, of Rhubon; 14 Edwards, of Kilhendre; 15 Edwardes, of Shrewsbury, baronets; 16 Vaughan, of Burlton.

III. DINGAD AP TUDOR TREVOR, of whose line we have to treat.

The 3rd son,

DINGAD AP TUDOR TREVOR, was grandfather of CYNRIC AP RHIWALLON AP DINGAD, Lord of Whittington, slain A.D. 1073, who by Judith his wife, dau. of Ivor Hên, Lord of Rhôs, had issue,

I. Ednyfed ap Cynric, progenitor of 1 the Denbighshire house of Beraham; 2 Broughton, of Broughton, from whom derived as co-heirs, 1 the present Whitehall Dodd, Esq., of Llannech and Cloverley Hall; 2 Davies, of Gwysanney, represented as heir-general by Philip Davies Cooke, Esq., of Owston, Gwysanney and Havod-y-wern; 3 Broughton, of Marchwiell; 4 Powel, of Alrhey.

II. Hwfa ap Cynric, father of a dau. and heir, Angharad, who m. Cynric ap Iorwerth, Lord of Brynfenigle, and was by him, mother of a son, Ednyfed Vychan, Lord of Brynfenigle, ancestor of the Morgans, of Goulden Grove; Williams-Bulkeleyes, baronets; Lloyd, of Plymog, Gwerclas and Bashall, and THE ROYAL HOUSE OF TUDOR.

III. NINIAU AP CYNRIC.

IV. Llewelyn ap Cynric, d. s. p., m.

The 3rd son,

NINIAU AP CYNRIC, was grandfather of IORWERTH VYCHAN, of Lwynon, co. Denbigh, ap Ieuan ap Niniau, who had issue,

1. Griffith ap Jorwerth Vychan, of Llwynon, who m. Margaret, dau. of Rhys Vychan, and had with other issue, an eldest and 4th son.

Jorwerth ap Griffith, from whom derived 12th in descent, John Jones, Esq., of Llwynon, set. fifteen, A.D. 1657, father of two sons, JOHN, Thomas, seated at Plas Hên, co. Montgomery, whose son, John Jones, of Plas Hên, had a dau. and eventual heir, Mary, mother by her husband, John Hughes, Esq., of Pen-y-Clawdd, co. Denbigh, of the late William Hughes, Esq., of that place (see BURKE's Landed Gentry). From the elder son, John Jones, Esq., of Llwynon, derive 1 Thomas-Love-Duncombe Jones Parry, Esq., of Madryn Castle, paternal representative of Jones, of Llwynon; 2 Robert-Lloyd-Jones Parry, Esq., of Aberdinant; 3 Thomas-Parry-Jones Parry, Esq., of Llwynon; 4 Lieut.-Colonel William-Parry Yale, of Plas-yn-Yale, co. Denbigh, who assumed the name of Yale, in substitution of that of Parry.

The 4th son of Griffith ap Jorwerth, viz.,

David Goch ap Griffith, was ancestor of Roberts, of Havod-y-bwch, co. Denbigh, whose eventual heiress, Mary, dau. of Hugh Roberts, Esq., of Havod-y-bwch, m. David Lloyd, Esq., of Hendwr and Tyfô, in Edeirnion, co. Merioneth, son of Thomas Lloyd, of Tyfô, by Susan, dau. and heir of Nathaniel Jones, Esq., of Hendwr. Of this marriage, there was issue a son and two daus.,

1 Gwyn Lloyd, Esq., of Hendwr and of Gwersyllt Park, co. Denbigh, who m. 12 March, 1746, Sarah, sister of Sir Rowland Hill, Bart., of Hawkestone, and d. s. p. leg. 19 March, 1774.

1. Catherine, co-heir of Hendwr, Tyfô and Gwersyllt, d. unm., set. ninety, March, 1767.

11. Mary, co-heir and eventually sole heir of Hendwr, Tyfô and Gwersyllt, d. unm., set. ninety-five, and buried 8 April, 1798.

11. Hwfa ap Jorwerth Vychan, of Havod-y-wern, ancestor of the house of Havod-y-wern, whose heir-general is the present Philip Davies Cooke, of Owston, Gwysanney and Havod-y-wern, Esq.

III. IORWERTH VYCHAN AP IORWERTH VYCHAN.

The 3rd son,

IORWERTH VYCHAN AP IORWERTH WAS ANCESTOR OF HUGH AP ROBERT, of Acton, co. Denbigh, who m. Janet, eldest dau. and co-heiress of Madoc Lloyd ap Llewelyn, of the line of Tudor Trevor, and was father of JEFFREY AP HUGH, of Acton, whose son,

JOHN JEFFREYS, Esq., one of the judges of the North Wales circuit, m. Margaret, dau. of William Lloyd, Esq., of Highton, co. Flint, and was father of

JOHN JEFFREYS, Esq., of Acton, and Ryeton, living in 1654. Of this gentleman there was preserved at Acton a good portrait, painted in 1690, the eighty-second year of his age. He survived all his children. By Margaret, his wife, dau. of Sir Thomas Ireland, Knt., of Beausay, near Warrington, co. Lancaster, he had issue, besides GEORGE, his 5th son, of whom presently, an eldest son, John Jeffreys, Esq., of Ryeton, who m. Dorothy, dau. of Sir Griffith Williams, of Penrhyn and of Marle, co. Carnarvon, Baronet, so created, 17 June, 1661, and dying in 1670, set. thirty-four, was by her father of a son Griffith Jeffreys. A brother of George Jeffreys, was dean of Rochester, and d. on his road to visit the chancellor, when confined in the Tower. Another brother, Sir Thomas Jeffreys, was a knight of Alcantara, of whom there was a fine full-length portrait at Acton, in the costume and cross of the order, in reference to whom, it is observed by Pennant, that for the honour of the descendants of Tudor Trevor, the proofs of Sir Thomas's descent were admired even by the proud Spaniards, among whom he had long resided at Alicante and Madrid, rendering himself so acceptable to the Spanish ministry as to be recommended to our Court to succeed Lord Lansdowne, a promotion which was stopped by the revolution. Another son, the youngest, was canon of Canterbury, and grandfather of Dr. Jeffreys, residentiary of St. Paul's, in 1799. The 5th son of John Jeffreys,

SIR GEORGE JEFFREYS, Baronet, elevated to the peerage, 16 May, 1685, as BARON JEFFREYS, of Wem, co. Salop, was the infamous "JUDGES JEFFREYS." The rudiments of education he acquired at a school in the country, whence he removed to Westminster, and thence became student of the Middle Temple. He was subsequently a practising barrister, in good business, although it is asserted that he was never regularly called to the bar. His first official employment was that of a Welsh judge, from which he was promoted in 1690 to the chief justiceship of Chester. In 1691, he was created a baronet, and in two years afterwards sworn of the privy council, and constituted lord chief justice of the court of King's Bench. The conduct of this iniquitous Judge has rendered his memory odious, and made his name the most opprobrious epithet by which the bench can be assailed. His deeds in the west, after the suppression of Monmouth's rebellion, have been so indelibly imprinted in blood, that the tide of time washes over them without removing a single stain; and so long as the English language finds a tongue JEFFREYS will be a synonyme for everything unjust, cruel, and tyrannical. In 1685 he was constituted lord high chancellor, and in the same year he presided as lord steward of England, at the trial of Lord Delamere, who was acquitted. Upon the landing of the Prince of Orange, Jeffreys attempted to withdraw in disguise from the kingdom, and for that purpose had got on board a Newcastle collier, which was to convey him to Hamburgh, but he was discovered, seized, brought before the lords of the council, and by them committed to the Tower, where he remained until his decease in 1689. By his wife, he had one surviving son, JOHN, his successor, and two daus., viz., Margaret, m. to Sir Thomas Stringer, of Durance, Middlesex.

Sarah, m. to George Harnage, colonel of marines, 3rd son of Edward Harnage, Esq., of Belwardyne.

His lordship m. 2ndly, Lady Jones, widow of Sir John Jones, of Fonmon, in Glamorganshire, and dau. of Sir Thomas Bloodworth. Lord Jefferys was s. by his son,

JOHN JEFFREYS, 2nd baron, who m. Lady Charlotte Herbert, dau. and heir of Philip, Earl of Pembroke, by whom he had an only surviving dau.,

Henrietta-Louisa, who m. Thomas, 1st Earl of Pomfret, and was mother of

GEORGE, 2nd Earl of Pomfret. (See BURKE's Peerage.)

His lordship d. in 1703, when the Barony of Jeffreys of Wem became extinct. His widow m. Viscount Windsor.

Arms—Erm., a lion rampant and a canton, sa., with a mullet for difference.

JENKINSON—EARL OF LIVERPOOL.

By Letters Patent, dated 28 May, 1796.

Lineage.

SIR ROBERT JENKINSON, of Walcot (son and heir of Sir Robert Jenkinson, of Walcot, co. Oxford, and the heir of the celebrated Anthony Jenkinson, employed by Queen ELIZABETH on many delicate missions, and twice as her ambassador in Russia), represented the co. of Oxford in the first and other parliaments of CHARLES I., and was created a baronet 16 May, 1661. Sir Robert was the friend of Sir Mathew Hale and the philosopher Robert Boyle. He m. Mary, dau. of Sir John Bankes, of Kingston Hall, co. JERMYN—BARONS JERMYN, OF ST. EDMUNDSBURY, CO. SUFFOLK, EARL OF ST. ALBANS.

Barony by Letters Patent, dated 8 September, 1643.

Earldom, by Letters Patent, dated 27 April, 1660.

Lineage.

SIR THOMAS DE JERMYN, m. Agnes, sister and co-heir of Thomas de Rushbroke, with whom he acquired the manor of Rushbroke, co. Suffolk. From this Sir Thomas descended

SIR THOMAS JERMYN, of Rushbroke, treasurer of the household to King CHARLES I., who had two sons,

1. Thomas, father of Thomas, 2nd baron.

2. HENRY, of whom we treat.

The 2nd son,

HENRY JERMYN, master of the horse to the queen, having devoted himself with a more than ordinary degree of zeal to the fortunes of his royal master, during the civil wars, was elevated to the peerage, 8 September, 1643, as BARON JERMYN, of St. Edmundsbury, co. Suffolk, with remainder, in default of male issue, to his elder brother, Thomas Jermyn. His lordship subsequently attended the queen into France, and presided over her majesty's small establishment for a great many years. While abroad he was employed in several embassies by King CHARLES II., and in consideration of all his faithful services, his lordship, immediately upon the Restoration, was created, by letters patent, dated at Breda, 27 April, 1660, EARL OF ST. ALBANS. He was soon after made a knight of the Garter, and constituted lord chamberlain of the household. His lordship d. unm. in 1693, when the Earldom of St. Albans became EXTINCT, and the Barony of Jermyn devolved upon (his deceased brother Thomas's son,) his nephew.

THOMAS JERMYN, 2nd Baron Jermyn. This nobleman was governor of Jersey. By Mary, his wife, he had issue,

A dau. —, m. to Thomas Bond, Esq., and d. in the life-time of her father.

Mary, m. to Sir Robert Davers, Bart.

Merellina, m. 1st, to Sir William Spring, and 2ndly, to Sir William Gage, Bart., of Hengrave, but had no issue.

Penelope, m. to Grey-James Grove, Esq.

Delarivierre, m. to Sir Symonds D'Ewes, Bart.

He d. in 1703, when the Barony of Jermyn, of St. Edmundsbury, became EXTINCT.

Arms—Sa., a chevron, between two mullets, in pale, arg.

JERMYN—BARON JERMYN, OF DOVER.

By Letters Patent, dated 13 May, 1698.

Lineage.

HENRY JERMYN, next brother of Thomas, 2nd Lord Jermyn, of St. Edmundsbury, was himself elevated to the peerage, 13 May, 1698, as BARON JERMYN, of Dover. His lordship d. s. p. in 1708, when the barony became EXTINCT—and his estates devolved upon his nieces, the daus. of the above mentioned brother.

Arms—Same as JERMYN, Earl of St. Albans, with the requisite difference.

JERVIS—EARL OF ST. VINCENT.

By Letters Patent, dated 23 June, 1797.

Lineage.

JOHN JERVIS, Esq., 2nd son of Swynfen Jervis, Esq., a lawyer of eminence (descended from James Jervis, of Chatskyl, co. Stafford, living temp. HENRY VIII.), by Elizabeth, dau. of George Parker, Esq., of Park Hall, was b. at Meaford, 19 January, 1734, and having entered the royal navy at a very early period of life (in his tenth year), attained the highest honours of that gallant profession, and was elevated to the peerage, 23 June, 1797, by the titles of Baron Jervis, of Meaford, co. Stafford, and EARL OF ST. VINCENT, as a reward for the splendid victory he had achieved, in that year, over the Spanish fleet off Cape St. Vincent. His lordship was nominated first lord of the Admiralty in 1801; and created, 27 April, in the same year, VISCOUNT ST. VINCENT, with remainder, in default of male issue, to his nephews, William-Henry Ricketts, and Edward-Jervis Ricketts successively, and afterwards to these gentlemen's sister, Mary, Countess of Northesk, and her male descendants. The earl m. in 1783, Martha, dau. of Lord Chief Baron Parker, which lady d. s. p. in 1816. His lordship d. 13 March, 1823, when the earldom and barony expired, but the viscounty devolved upon his younger nephew (the elder, Captain William-Henry Ricketts, of the royal navy, having been unfortunately drowned 26 January, 1805, leaving only daus.), EDWARD-JERVIS, 2nd viscount, who was 2nd son of William-Henry Ricketts, Esq., of Canaan, in the island of Jamaica, by the deceased earl's sister, Mary, who d. in 1823. His grandson is CARNEGIE-ROBERT-JOHN JERVIS, present and 3rd Viscount.

Arms—Sa., a chev., erm., between three martlets, arg.

JOHNSTONE—MARQUESS OF ANNANDALE.

By Letters Patent, dated 4 June, 1701.

Lineage.

This family can be traced, through ancestors of baronial and knightly rank, to the reign of ALEXANDER II., King of Scotland, when

HUGO DE JOHNSTONE flourished, and was proprietor of large estates in East Lothian. He was father of

SIR JOHN DE JOHNSTONE, of the co. Dumfries, who made a donation of a portion of his lands in East Lothian to the monastery of Soltra in 1285. His son

JOHN DE JOHNSTONE, was witness to a charter of lands in Annandale, granted by Thomas Randolph, Earl of Moray, before the year 1332. His son

GILBERT DE JOHNSTONE, d. about 1360, and was s. by his son,

SIR JOHN DE JOHNSTONE, a man of great note in the reign of King ROBERT II. He was Warden of the west marches in 1371, and fought valiantly against the English Borderers in 1378. He d. in 1383, and was s. by his son.

SIR JOHN JOHNSTONE, of Johnstone. He was nominated by the Earl of Douglas the chief Warden of the marches, one of the sureties for keeping a truce with the English in 1398. He d. in 1420, and was s. by his son,

SIR ADAM JOHNSTONE, of Johnstone. He assisted at the victory gained over the English at Sark in 1448. He was instrumental in suppressing the rebellion of the Douglasses against the king in 1455, for which service the king granted him the lands of Pedinaine in Lanarkshire. By his 1st wife he had a son JOHN, his heir. His 2nd wife was Lady Janet Dunbar, only dau. of George Dunbar, 11th Earl of March, and maternally descended from the royal family of Scotland, and from the Anglo Saxon kings through Robert Bruce, the competitor for the crown, by whom he had a son MATTHEW, of Pedinaine, ancestor to the Johnstones, Baronets of Westerhall, the Johnstones of Alva, and the Johnstones, Baronets of Hackness. The Johnstones of Elphinstone claim a descent from Sir Adam through their ancestor, Sir Gilbert Johnstone, who m. the heiress of Elphinstone before 1472. But his filiation is not proved. Sir Adam d. in 1455, and was s. by his eldest son,

SIR JOHN JOHNSTONE, of Johnstone, who was one of the Wardens of the marches in 1459. He d. before 1484. He m. Mary, eldest dau. of John, 4th Lord Maxwell, by whom he had issue,

- I. JAMES, his heir.
- II. John, of Wamphrey, whose line became EXTINCT, when the estate reverted to the family of Johnstone.

His son,

JAMES JOHNSTONE, of Johnstone, was father of

ADAM JOHNSTONE, of Johnstone, who was father of

JAMES JOHNSTONE, of Johnstone, who had a charter of the lands of Whiteriggs and Melkiehouse, in 1516. He d. in 1529, and left with other issue, a son,

JOHN JOHNSTONE, of Johnstone. He had various charters of lands in 1542, 1545, and 1550. He fought at the battle of Pinkie in 1547. He was appointed commissioner to settle disputes in the borders in 1552, and d. in 1553. He m. 1st, Elizabeth Jardine by whom he had issue,

JAMES, his heir.

Robert.

Dorothea, wife of John Maitland, of Auchincastle.

Margaret, wife of C. Irving, of Bonshaw.

He m. 2ndly, Nicola Douglas, dau. of Douglas of Drumlanrig, by whom he had James and John. His eldest son, James Johnstone, d. s. p., in 1559, leaving by his wife, Margaret Hamilton, a son, JOHN, successor to his grandfather, and two daus., Margaret, wife of Sir Robert Douglas, of Cashogle; and Jean, wife of Sir William Levingstone, of Jerviswood.

JOHN JOHNSTONE, of Johnstone, s. his grandfather in 1568. He was appointed by King JAMES VI., Warden of the west marches, and Justice-general in 1570. He d. in 1586. By his wife, Margaret, dau. of Sir Walter Scott, of Buccleugh, he had issue a son, JAMES, and three daus. Margaret, wife of James Johnstone of Westerhall, and d. s. p.; Elizabeth, wife of Alexander Jardine, of Applegirth; and Grizel, wife of Sir Robert Maxwell, of Orchardton. His son,

SIR JAMES JOHNSTONE, of Johnstone, was knighted at the coronation of Queen ANNE of Denmark, and was appointed Warden of the west marches in 1596. He was murdered by John, Lord Maxwell, in 1608. He m. Sarah, sister of John,

Lord Herries (who afterwards m. John Fleming, Earl of Wigton and Hugh Montgomery, Viscount Airds), by whom he had an only son,

JAMES JOHNSTONE, of Johnstone, who in 1633, was created by King CHARLES I., Lord Johnstone, of Lochwood, to him and his heirs male. The same monarch created him, in 1643, Earl of Hartfell to him and his heirs male. He d. in 1653. He m. 1st, Lady Margaret Douglas, eldest dau. of William, 1st Earl of Queensberry, by whom he had issue,

- I. JAMES, 2nd Earl of Hartfell.

II. William, } both of whom d. s. p.

III. Thomas, }

- I. Mary, wife 1st, of Sir George Graham, of Netherby; and 2ndly, of Sir George Fletcher, of Huttonhall.

II. Janet, wife of Sir William Murray, of Stanhope, Bart.

III. Margaret, wife of Sir Robert Dalzell, of Glenae.

He m. 2ndly, Elizabeth, dau. of Sir Samuel Johnstone, of Elphinstone; and 3rdly, 1647, Lady Margaret Hamilton, 3rd dau. of Thomas, 1st Earl of Haddington, widow of David, Lord Carnegie. He was s. by his only son,

JAMES JOHNSTONE, 2nd Earl of Hartfell. The Earldom of Annandale became EXTINCT in 1658, on the death of James Murray, 2nd earl. And in 1661, the Earl of Hartfell made a surrender of his title to King CHARLES II., who also in 1661, granted a new patent to "James, Earl of Annandale and Hartfell, Viscount Annand, Lord Johnstone of Lochwood, Lochmaben, Moffatdale, and Evandale, and to the heirs male, whom failing to the eldest heirs female of his body, and the eldest heirs male of the body of such heirs female, with the original precedence of the Earldom of Hartfell." He m. Lady Henrietta Douglas, 4th dau. of William, 1st Marquis of Douglas, by whom he had issue,

- I. WILLIAM, his successor.

II. John, who d. s. p.

I. Mary, wife in 1670, of William, 18th Earl of Crawford, and 2nd Earl of Lindsay.

II. Margaret, wife of Sir James Montgomery, of Skelmorley.

III. Harriet, wife in 1634, of Sir John Carmichael, of Bonnytown.

IV. Anne.

The earl d. in 1672, and was s. by his son,

WILLIAM JOHNSTONE, 3rd Earl of Annandale and Hartfell. He was a minor. In 1679 Sir James Johnstone, of Westerhall, was cited as his nearest of kin. He was lord of the Treasury, and president of the parliament of Scotland in 1695. He was high commissioner to the general assembly of the church of Scotland in 1701. He was created 4 June, 1701, MARQUESS OF ANNANDALE, Earl of Hartfell, Viscount Annand, Lord Johnstone of Lochwood, Lochmaben, Moffatdale, and Evandale, to him and his heirs male, whatever. In 1703, he was president of the privy council. In 1704, he was made a knight of the Thistle. In 1705 one of the principal secretaries of state. In 1714, keeper of the privy seal. In 1715 he was lord lieutenant of the cos. of Dumfries, Kirkcudbright and Peebles. He d. 1721. He m. 1st, in 1682, Sophia, dau. and heir of John Fairholm, of Craigiehall, by Sophia, dau. of Joseph Johnston, of Hilton, by whom he had issue,

- I. JAMES, 2nd marquis.

II. John, d. young.

III. William, d. unm., 1721.

I. Henrietta, wife of Charles, 4th Earl of Hopetoun, of whom hereafter.

He m. 2ndly in 1718, Charlotte, only dau. and heir of John Vanden Bempde, and by her (who m. 2ndly, Colonel John Johnstone, 2nd son of Sir William Johnstone, Baronet, of Westerhall, by whom he had issue, Sir Richard Vanden Bempde Johnstone, Baronet of Hackness-hall, and Charles), he had issue,

- I. GEORGE, 3rd marquis.

II. John, d. unm., 1742.

The marquis was s. by his eldest son,

JAMES JOHNSTONE, 2nd Marquis of Annandale, who dying unm. in 1730, was s. by his half brother,

GEORGE JOHNSTONE, 3rd Marquis of Annandale, who d. unm. in 1792, in the seventy-second year of his age. On the death of the Marquis his large property was divided. The great landed estates of the Annandale family devolved on his grand-nephew, James Hope, 3rd Earl of Hopetoun. The large accumulation of personal property was divided amongst his next of kin, while the Vanden Bempde fortune, which he had inherited from his mother the Marchioness, devolved on her son by her 2nd marriage, Sir Richard Vanden Bempde Johnstone, Bart. With the 3rd Marquis of Annandale, EXPIRED the male line of Sir John Johnstone, of Johnstone, the eldest son of Sir Adam Johnstone, of Johnstone, who d. in 1755; and consequently the representative of Matthew Johnstone, of Pedinaie, Sir Adam's 2nd son, became head of the house of Johnstone. This was Sir James Johnstone, 4th Baronet, of Westerhall, who became claimant of the dignity of Marquess of Annandale; as that title had been granted to the 1st Marquess and his heirs male whatsoever. We therefore proceed to trace the descent of the knightly family of Johnstone, of Westerhall, as heir male of the house of Johnstone, and claimant of its highest honours. But before doing so, we must trace the descent of the heir general of the Johnstone family through Lady Henrietta Johnstone, dau. of the 1st, and half sister of the 3rd marquess, and wife of Charles, 1st Earl of Hopetoun, by whom she had issue,

- i. JOHN, 2nd Earl of Hopetoun.
- ii. Charles, who inherited through his mother the estate of Craigiehall. He m. 1st in 1733, Catherine, only dau. and heir of Sir William Weir or Vere, Baronet, of Blackwood, by whom he had with other issue,

1 William, b. 1736, grandfather of the present William Edward Hope Vere, of Craigiehall and Blackwood.

2 John, b. 1739, who had issue, Charles, b. 1763, lord president of the court of session in Scotland; John, a general officer; William, of whom hereafter as husband of Lady Anne Hope Johnstone, and father of J. J. Hope Johnstone, the heir general of the Annandale family.

Charles-Hope Vere m. 2ndly, Lady Anne Vane, d. of Henry, 1st Earl of Darlington, by whom he had issue. He m. 3rdly, Helen Dunbar, by whom he had issue.

- i. Sophia, m. James, Earl of Findlater.
- ii. Henrietta, m. Francis, Lord Napier.
- iii. Margaret, m. John Dundas, of Duddingston.
- iv. Helen, m. James Watson, of Saughton.
- v. Christian, m. Thomas Graham, of Balgowan.
- vi. Charlotte, m. Thomas, Lord Erskine.

Henrietta, Countess of Hopetoun, d. in 1750, and the earl, her husband, d. in 1742. Their eldest son,

JOHN, 2nd Earl of Hopetoun, was b. 1704. He m. 1st, 1733, Lady Anne Ogilvie, dau. of James, 6th Earl of Findlater, by whom he had issue,

- i. Charles, Lord Hope, who. d. v. p.
- ii. JAMES, 3rd Earl of Hopetoun.
- i. Elizabeth, wife of Henry, Earl of Drumlanrig, eldest son of Charles, 3rd Duke of Queensberry.
- ii. Henrietta.
- iii. Sophia, wife of Charles, 6th Earl of Haddington.

The earl m. 2ndly, in 1762, Jean, dau. of Robert Oliphant, of Rosse, by whom he had a son,

- i. JOHN, a distinguished general, created, for his great military services, Lord Niddrie, in 1814. On his brother's death, in 1817, he became 4th Earl of Hopetoun. By his 2nd wife, Dorothea, dau. of Sir John Wedderburn, Bart. of Ballindean, he had numerous issue. His grandson is JOHN-ALEXANDER, 6th and present EARL OF HOPETOUN.
- i. Lady Jean, wife, 1st, of Henry, 1st Viscount Melville, and 2ndly, of Lord Wallace.

The earl m. 3rdly, in 1767, Lady Elizabeth Leslie, 2nd dau. of Alexander, 5th Earl of Leven and Melville, by whom he had issue,

- i. Charles, a general officer, m. Louisa-Anne, dau. of George-Finch Hatton.
- ii. Alexander, of Luffness, a general officer, G.C.B., m. Georgiana Brown, by whom he had numerous issue.
- i. Elizabeth, wife of Rev. John Kemp.
- ii. Charlotte, wife of the Right Hon. Charles Hope, lord president of the court of Session.
- iii. Margaret, wife of Alexander Maclean, of Ardgour.
- iv. Mary, wife of Sir Patrick-Murray Baronet, of Auchtertyre.

The earl d. in 1781, and was s. by his eldest surviving son,

JAMES, 3rd Earl of Hopetoun. On the death of his grand-uncle, George, 3rd Marquess of Annandale, he became heir general of the Annandale family, and inherited the great Annandale estates, together with a claim to the Earldoms of Annandale and Hartfell. He was, in 1809, created a British peer, as Lord Hopetoun. He m. in 1766, Elizabeth, eldest dau. of George, 6th Earl of Northesk, by whom he had issue,

- i. Lady ANNE, of whom hereafter.
- ii. Georgiana, wife in 1793, of the Hon. Andrew Cochrane, son of the 8th Earl of Dundonald.
- iii. Jemima, wife in 1803, of Admiral Sir George Hope, of Carriden, G.C.B.

On the death of the 3rd Earl of Hopetoun, in 1817, his eldest dau. Anne, became the heir general of the Johnstone family, as LADY ANNE-HOPE JOHNSTONE, of Annandale. She m. in 1792, Admiral Sir William Hope, G.C.B., grandson of the Hon. Charles-Hope Vere, of Craigie Hall, and by him (who m. 2ndly, Maria, Countess Dowager of Athlone, and d. in 1831), she had issue,

- i. JOHN-JAMES, her heir.
- ii. William-James, vice-admiral, b. 1796, m. Ellen, dau. of Sir Thomas Kirkpatrick, Bart., and had issue.

iii. Charles-James, captain R. N., b. 1801; m. Eliza Wood, and had issue. He d. 1835.

iv. George-James, captain R. N., b. 1803, m. Maria Rankine, and d. in 1842; having had issue.

i. Mary, wife of Hon. and Right Rev. Hugh Percy, bishop of Carlisle.

ii. Eliza.

Lady Anne-Hope Johnstone, of Annandale, d. in 1818, and was s. by her eldest son,

JOHN-JAMES-HOPE JOHNSTONE, of Annandale, b. 1796; m. in 1816, Alicia-Anne, dau. of George Gordon, of Hallhead, by whom he had issue,

i. William-James, b. 1819, m. the Hon. Octavia-Sophia-Bosville Macdonald, youngest dau. of the 3rd Lord Macdonald. He d. in 1850, leaving, with other issue, an eldest son, JOHN-JAMES.

ii. George-Gordon, m. 1845, Adelaide, dau. of Sir George Sinclair, Bart., of Ulbster, by whom he had issue.

iii. John Charles.

i. Anne-Jemima.

ii. Lucy-Wilhelmina.

iii. Alice, wife in 1845, of Sir Graham Montgomery, Bart., of Stanhope.

John-James-Hope Johnstone is M.P. for the co. of Dumfries. He is heir general of the family of Johnstone, and claimant of the Earldom of Annandale and Hartfell.

On the death of the 3rd Marquess of Annandale, the headship of the house of Johnstone, and the claim to the marquessate of Annandale devolved on

SIR JAMES JOHNSTONE, 4th Baronet of Westerhall, descended from

MATTHEW JOHNSTONE, son of Sir John Johnstone, of Johnstone, by his 2nd wife, Janet Dunbar, dau. of George, 11th Earl of March, and widow of John, 1st Lord Seton. In consequence of this maternal descent, the Johnstones of Westerhall claim the blood of the ancient kings of Scotland, and the Saxon kings of England, WILLIAM THE CONQUEROR, and the Capetian kings of France. Lady Agnes Randolph, the wife of the 10th Earl of March, having been grand-daughter of Isabel, sister of King ROBERT BRUCE, and Christian Bruce, the wife of the 7th Earl of March, having been dau. of Robert Bruce, the competitor for the Scottish crown. Matthew Johnstone, of Pedinaie, d. in 1491. By his wife, Elizabeth Graham, a dau. of the house of Montrose, he had a son,

JAMES JOHNSTONE, of Westerhall, who s. his grandfather, and d. in 1570. By his wife, Flora, dau. of John Somerville, of Camnethan, grandson of the 3rd Lord Somerville, he had a son,

SIR JAMES JOHNSTONE, of Westerhall, who m. 1st, Margaret Johnstone, dau. of his relation, Sir John Johnstone, of Johnstone, by whom he had no issue; 2ndly, the Hon. Euphemia Oliphant, dau. of Laurence, 4th Lord Oliphant, by Lady Margaret Hay, dau. of George, 6th Earl of Errol. He d. in 1639, and was s. by his son,

JAMES JOHNSTONE, of Westerhall. He m. Isabella, dau. of Sir William Scott, of Harden, and d. in 1643. His son,

SIR JAMES JOHNSTONE, of Westerhall, was cited in 1679, as nearest of kin to WILLIAM JOHNSTONE, 3rd Earl of Annandale and Hartfell, afterwards 1st Marquess of Annandale. He m. Margaret, dau. of James Bannatyne, of Corehouse, by Grizzel, dau. of Sir James Lockhart, of Lee and Carnwath, by whom he had issue,

- i. JOHN, his heir.
- ii. WILLIAM, of whom presently.

He d. in 1699, and was s. by his son,

JOHN JOHNSTONE, of Westerhall, created a baronet in 1700. He m. Rachel, eldest dau. of James Johnstone, of Schiennes, brother of Sir Archibald Johnstone, Lord Wariston, by Anna Hamilton, dau. of Sir John Hamilton, lord register of Scotland, brother of Thomas, 1st Earl of Haddington. By her he had issue, a dau. Philadelphia, wife of Douglas, of Dornock. Sir John Johnstone d. in 1711, without male issue, and was s. by his brother,

SIR WILLIAM JOHNSTONE, 2nd baronet, of Westerhall. He m. Henrietta, 2nd dau. of James Johnstone, of Schiennes, brother of Lord Wariston, by Anna Hamilton, dau. of Sir John Hamilton, brother to Thomas, 1st Earl of Haddington, by whom he had,

- i. JAMES, his heir.
- ii. John, a colonel in the army, m. Charlotte Vanden Bempde,

Dowager Marchioness of Annandale, mother of George, 3rd Marquess, and d. in 1743, leaving issue,

KEITH—EARL MARISCHAL.

Lineage.

This great and illustrious family has held from the earliest ages the dignified post of Great Marischals of Scotland. Without attempting to trace the line of hereditary Great Marischals of Scotland from the year 1010, when Robert, the direct ancestor of this family, was invested with that dignity by King MALCOLM II., we will commence with SIR WILLIAM KEITH, Great Marischal of Scotland, the 11th in direct descent from the founder of the family, and who d. prior to 1476. He was created Earl Marischal of Scotland prior to 1458. By Mary, dau. of Sir James Hamilton, of Cadzow, he had, with other issue, a son,

WILLIAM KEITH, 2nd Earl Marischal. He m. Muriella, dau. of Thomas, 1st Lord Erskine, by whom he had issue,

I. WILLIAM, 3rd earl.

II. Robert.

III. Alexander, of Auquhorsh, ancestor of the late Rev. Dr. George Skene Keith.

IV. John, of Craig, ancestor of the late Sir Robert Murray Keith, K.B., a distinguished ambassador.

The eldest son,

WILLIAM KEITH, 3rd Earl Marischal, d. 1530. He m. 1482, Lady Elizabeth Gordon, dau. of George, 2nd Earl of Huntley, and grand-dau. of JAMES, 1st King of Scotland and Queen Jane Beaufort, by whom he had issue,

I. ROBERT, Lord Keith.

II. William, slain at Flodden, 1513, s. p.

III. Alexander, ancestor of Keith, of Urra, and Bishop Robert Keith, the ecclesiastical historian of Scotland.

I. Janet, wife of William, 2nd Earl of Montrose.

II. Elizabeth, wife, 1st, of Colin, master of Oliphant, 2ndly, of William, 2nd Lord Sinclair.

III. Agnes, wife of Sir Archibald Douglas, of Glenbervie.

IV. Beatrix, wife of Alexander Frazer, of Philorth.

The eldest son,

ROBERT, LORD KEITH, fell at Flodden, 1513, leaving by his wife, Lady Elizabeth Douglas, dau. of John, 2nd Earl of Morton, and great grand-dau. of JAMES I., King of Scotland and Queen Jane Beaufort,

I. WILLIAM, 4th Earl Marischal.

II. Robert Keith, Commendator of the abbey of Deer, father of Andrew Keith, created Lord Dingwall in 1587, who d. s. p. (see that title).

KEITH—LORD DINGWALL.

By Charter, dated 3 August, 1587.

Lineage.

ROBERT KEITH (2nd son of William, Lord Keith, killed at the battle of Flodden, 9 September, 1513, eldest son and heir of William, 3rd Earl Marischal) was abbot of the Cistercian Monastery of Deer, in Aberdeenshire, in the reign of King JAMES V., and dying at Paris, 12 June, 1551, was buried before the altar of St. Ninian, in the Carmelite church there. According to Dempster, he was "eruditio et vitam continentia clarus, et multa egisse dicitur, quo collapsos ecclesiastici ordinis mores restitueret; nonnulla scripsit." The compliment paid to his continence, however, appears unfounded, as he was father of

ANDREW KEITH, who was, by JAMES VI., created a peer, by the title of LORD DINGWALL, to him and his heirs male and assigns, by charter, dated at Falkland, 3 August, 1587. He d. s. p., having previously resigned his estate and honours in favour of William Keith, of Delney, who thereupon had a charter of the lands of Dingwall, to him and his heirs male whatsoever bearing the name and arms of Keith, with a seat in parliament, by the title of Lord Dingwall, dated at Holyrood House, 22 January, 1592-3. This title, however, was extinct before 1600, as it does not appear in the decret of ranking of the peers of that year, and Sir Richard Preston was created Lord Dingwall, 1607.

Arms—See KEITH, Earl Marischal.

KEITH—LORD ALTRIE.

By Letters Patent, dated 29 July, 1587.

Lineage.

ROBERT KEITH (2nd son of William, 4th Earl Marischal) was commendator of the Cistercian Abbey of Deer, in Aberdeenshire, and had the whole lands and baronies belonging to that monastery erected into a temporal lordship, to himself in life-rent, and George, Earl Marischal, his nephew, in fee, with the title of LORD ALTRIE, by charter, dated 23 July, 1587. His lordship m. Elizabeth, dau. and heir of Robert Landie, of Benholm, and had two daus.,

Elizabeth, m. to Alexander Hay, of Dalgety.
Margaret, m. to John Erskine, of Dun.

Lord Altrie d. s. p. 1693.

KEPPEL—VISCOUNT KEPPEL, OF ELVEDEN, CO. SUFFOLK.

By Letters Patent, dated 22 April, 1782.

Lineage.

The Hon. AUGUSTUS KEPPEL (2nd son of William-Anne, 2nd Earl of Albemarle), a naval officer of eminence, was constituted first lord of the Admiralty, and created a peer of the realm, as VISCOUNT KEPPEL, of Elveden, co. Suffolk, by letters patent, dated 22 April, 1782.

This celebrated officer was with Commodore Anson in the South Sea, where at the taking of Païta, he had a narrow escape from a cannon ball, which shaved off the peak of a jockey cap, then on his head, close to his temple. In 1751, he was commodore of a squadron in the Mediterranean, and took the island of Goree from the French in 1759. The same year he was with Admiral Hawke, in that memorable battle with Confians, when at a second broadside he sunk a seventy-four gun ship with all her crew. In 1762 he accompanied his brother, the Earl of Albemarle, and was present at the siege of Havannah, where, under Admiral Pococke, he was greatly instrumental in taking that important place and its dependencies. In 1778, he attained the rank of admiral of the blue but, while in command of the British fleet, his conduct in the engagement with the French, under Comte D'Orville, was deemed so unsatisfactory, that he was brought before a court-martial, by which, however, he was honourably acquitted.

His lordship d. unm. in 1786, when the Viscounty of Keppel, of Elveden, became EXTINCT.

Arms—Gu., three eachallop shells, arg., a crescent for difference.

KERDESTON—BARONS KERDESTON.

By Writ of Summons, dated 27 January, 1332.

Lineage.

In the 1st year of King JOHN's reign,

ROGER DE KERDESTON paid a fine to the crown of 30 marks, to have a confirmation of those lands which formerly belonged to Hubert de Bie. To this Roger s.

WILLIAM DE KERDESTON, who was sheriff of Norfolk, and Suffolk, in the 25th and 26th EDWARD I. He m. Margaret dau. of Gilbert de Gant, Baron of Folkingham, in Lincolnshire, and was s. by his son,

ROGER DE KERDESTON, who, in right of his mother, was one of the co-heirs of his uncle, Gilbert de Gant, Lord Gant, who d. s. p. in 1297; and doing homage, had livery of the lands which so descended to him. In the 34th EDWARD I. this Roger received the honour of knighthood with Prince Edward, by bathing, &c., having his livery of robes, and all accoutrements relating to that solemnity out of the king's wardrobe. In the 5th EDWARD III. he was made sheriff of Norfolk and Suffolk, and governor of the castle at Norwich. In the next year (1332), he was summoned to parliament as a Baron, and from that period to 21 June, 1337. His lordship d. in the latter year, and was s. by his son,

WILLIAM DE KERDESTON, 2nd baron, summoned to parliament from 20 December, 1337, to 3 April 1360. This nobleman distinguished himself in the French wars, and had the honour of participating in the glories of Cressy. He d. in 1361, leaving according to some inquisitions, WILLIAM, his son and heir, then thirty-six years of age; which

SIR WILLIAM DE KERDESTON, Knight, claimed part of his father's lands as his heir, and not being opposed, was admitted to them. He was, however, never summoned to parliament, and probably some doubt hung over his legitimacy. In Morant's History of Essex, which is partly corroborated by a pedigree in the College of Arms, it appears that William de Kerdeston, the last baron, left issue by Alice de Norwich, his 2nd wife, a son, WILLIAM; but by his 1st wife, two daus., who are called in the MS. pedigree above cited, his co-heirs, viz.,

Margaret, who m. Sir William de Tendring, and her son and heir,

SIR WILLIAM TENDRING, left issue,

Alice, m. to Sir John Howard, ancestor of the LORDS STOURTON and PETRE, as heirs general of the Howards and of the DUKES OF NORFOLK, as heirs male.

Maud, m. to John de Burghersh, and left two daus., his co-heirs,

Margaret, m. 1st, to Sir John Granville, and 2ndly, to Sir John Arundel.

Maud, m. to Thomas Chaucer, son of the poet Geoffrey Chaucer, and left at her decease, 1436, an only child, Alice Chaucer, who was thrice m., her last husband being William De la Pole, Duke of Suffolk.

Upon the failure of issue of Sir William de Kerdeston, the reputed son of the last baron, the barony of Kerdeston fell into ABEYANCE, as it still continues with the descendants of Margaret, Lady Tendring and Maud de Burghersh.

KING—BARON KINGSTON.

By Letters Patent, dated 4 September, 1600.

Lineage.

SIR JOHN KING, Knt., eldest son of Sir Robert King, muster-master-general of Ireland, and brother of Sir Robert King, of Rockingham, ancestor of the present Earl of Kingston, was elevated to the peerage of Ireland, 4 September, 1660, as Baron KINGSTON. His lordship m. Catherine, dau. of Sir William Fenton, of Mitchelston, co. Cork, by Margaret, his wife, sister and heir of Maurice Oge Fitz-Maurice Fitz-Edmund Fitz-Gibbon, and cousin and heir of Edmund Fitz-Gibbon, THE WHITE KNIGHT; dying in 1676, Lord Kingston was s. by his son,

ROBERT KING, 2nd Lord Kingston; who d. s. p. in 1693, having settled and limited his estates in remainder to his uncle, Sir Robert King, in consequence of his brother and the inheritor of his honours,

JOHN KING, 3rd Lord Kingston, having conformed to the church of Rome; but this nobleman appears afterwards to have enjoyed the estates. He was made a gentleman of the privy chamber to JAMES II., and following the fortunes of his master into France, was outlawed; but after his brother's death, returning to Ireland, he had a pardon from the crown. His lordship m. Florence O'Cahan, and d. in 1727, leaving (with two daus., Catherine, m. to George Butler, Esq., of Ballyragget, co. Kilkenny, and Sophia, m. to Brettridge Badham, Esq.,) an only surviving son,

JAMES KING, 4th Lord Kingston, m. 1st, Elizabeth, dau. of Sir John Meade, of Ballintobber, and widow of Sir Ralph Freke, of Rathbarry, co. Cork, Bart.; and 2ndly, Lady Ogle, widow of Sir Chaloner Ogle, Knt., admiral of his Majesty's fleet, but had issue only by the former, who d. 6 October, 1750, viz., one son, WILLIAM, who m. the only dau. of Samuel Burroughs, Esq., of Dewsbury, co. York, master in chancery, but d. s. p. v. p., and one dau., Margaret, he d. without male issue in 1761, when the barony EXPIRED; while an estate of £6,000 a year, and a large personal fortune, devolved upon his only surviving dau.,

MARGARET, who m. RICHARD FITZGERALD, Esq., of Mount Ophaley, co. Kildare, and had an only child and heiress, CAROLINE, m. 1769, Robert, 2nd EARL OF KINGSTON. (See BURKE's Extant Peerage).

KIRKETON—BARON KIRKETON.

By Writ of Summons, dated 14 August, 1362.

Lineage.

JOHN DE KIRKETON, of Kirketon, in that part of the co. Lincoln, called Holland, received the honour of knighthood, in the 19th EDWARD II., by bathing, &c., having had allowance of his robes for that solemnity out of the king's wardrobe; and being possessed of the castle and manor of Tattshall and manor of Tumby, in the same shire, with the knight's fees and advowsons of churches thereunto belonging, made a feoffment in the 16th EDWARD III., of that castle and lordship, to Adam de Welles and others, to stand feoffed thereof, to the use of himself, and Isabel, his wife; and to the heirs of their two bodies lawfully begotten, with divers remainders; his lands at Kirketon being at the time valued at £10 per annum.

In the 26th EDWARD III., upon the danger of an invasion by the French, Sir John de Kirketon was constituted one of the commissioners of Array, in the co. of Lincoln, for arming all knights, esquires, and others for defending the sea coasts in that shire. And in the 33rd of the same reign, King JOHN of France being then prisoner in England, he was one of the persons appointed to remove that prince from the castle of Hertford to Somerton Castle, co. Somerset, and there to secure him. Sir John de Kirketon was summoned to parliament as a Baron, 14 August, 1362, and 1 June, 1363. He d. in 1367, s. p., when the barony became EXTINCT. His lordship d. seized of the manor of Tattshall, by the grant of Sir Ralph de Cromwell, Knt., and Maud, his wife, as also of the manors of Tumby, Kirkeby, &c., leaving Sir John de Tudenham, Knt., Richard de Lina, John de Tilney, and William de Sutton, rector of the church of Whitwell, his next heirs.

KNOLLYS—BARON KNOLLYS, VISCOUNT WALLINGFORD, EARL OF BANBURY.

Barony, by Letters Patent, dated 13 May, 1603.

Viscounty, by Letters Patent, dated 14 November, 1616.

Earldom, by Letters Patent, dated 18 August, 1772.

Lineage.

In the 41st EDWARD III.,

SIR ROBERT KNOLLYS, K.G., having from humble fortune attained great wealth and high reputation, in the Norman wars, was chosen by the Black Prince to accompany him into Spain, in aid of DON PEDRO, then King of Castile and Leon, against Henry, the bastard son of (his father) King ALFONSO. And in three years afterwards was made general of all the forces then sent by King EDWARD into France. In the 1st RICHARD II., Sir Robert was governor of the castle of Brest; and in the 3rd, he went with Thomas Plantagenet (of Woolstock), Earl of Buckingham, and other gallant persons, to assist the Duke of Brittany against the French, when, landing at Calais, they marched quite through France, without resistance. The next year, upon the breaking out of Jack Straw's insurrection, Sir Robert led the citizens of London against the rebels. Besides his military achievements which rendered him famous in those days, Sir Robert Knollys left other memorials behind him. He erected a stately bridge over the River Medway, near Rochester, in Kent, called Rochester Bridge, and he enlarged the house of Friars-Carmelites, commonly called White Friars, in the city of London. He likewise founded a collegiate church of secular priests, at Pontefract, in Yorkshire. He d. at his seat of Scene Thorpe, co. Norfolk, anno 1407, and was buried with the Lady Constance his wife, in the body of the church at the White Friars. From this gallant personage descended,

ROBERT KNOLLYS, who, in the 9th HENRY VIII., being then one of the gentlemen ushers of the privy chamber, had a lease for a certain number of years, from the king, of the manor of Rotherfield Grey, commonly called Greys, co. Oxford. He was s. by his son,

SIR FRANCIS KNOLLYS, who obtained from King HENRY VIII., a grant of the lordship in fee of Rotherfield Grey, or Greys, and was one of that monarch's gentlemen pensioners. In the reign of EDWARD VI., he was so staunch an upholder of the reformation, that he deemed it prudent, upon the accession of MARY, to retire into Germany. But when ELIZABETH ascended the throne, he returned and enjoyed in a high degree, the favour and confidence of the crown. He was immediately sworn of the privy council, made vice-chamberlain of the household; next, captain of the guard; afterwards treasurer; and lastly, installed a knight of the most noble order of the Garter. In the 11th ELIZABETH, Sir Francis Knollys had the custody of MARY, Queen of Scots, then confined at Bolton Castle, in Yorkshire, and in eighteen years afterwards, he was one of those who sat in judgment upon her life. Sir Francis m. Catherine, dau. of William Carey, Esq. (by Mary his wife, dau. of Thomas Boleyn, Earl of Wiltshire, and sister of Queen Anne Boleyn), and a dau., Lettice, m. to Walter Devereux, Earl of Essex, a son,

WILLIAM KNOLLYS, treasurer of the household in the reign of ELIZABETH, who was advanced to the peerage by King JAMES I., by letters patent, dated 13 May, 1603, in the dignity of LORD KNOLLYS, of Grey, co. Oxford (his chief seat). In 1614, his lordship was appointed master of the wards, and within a short time installed a knight of the Garter. In 1616, he was created VISCOUNT WALLINGFORD, and advanced by King CHARLES I., 18 August, 1626, to the EARLDOM OF BANBURY, with precedency of all earls who were created before him. His lordship m. 1st, Dorothy, dau. of Edward, Lord Bray, sister and co-heir of John, Lord Bray, and widow of Edmund, Lord Chandos, by whom he had no issue. He m. 2ndly, Elizabeth Howard, dau. of Thomas, Earl of Suffolk, and dying 25 May, 1632, at the advanced age of eighty-eight, was buried in the church of Greys. The subsequent history of this peerage is one of the most curious in the whole record of peerage claims. Upon the decease of the EARL OF BANBURY, the inquisition found that he d. s. p., but leaving a widow, Elizabeth, his last wife. His honours were then deemed EXTINCT, and his estates passed to his collateral heirs, excepting such as he had devised to his widow, who re-married Lord VAUX. In a few years this lady produced two sons, born during her marriage with Lord Banbury, her 1st husband. They had at first been called VAUX, but now she set them up as the sons of the Earl of Banbury, and gave to the eldest the title of that earldom. They were not of age before the civil wars had broken up the House of Lords. The elder died. Nicholas, the survivor, availing of the convention parliament in 1660, took his seat therein, and during the continuation of its sittings, voted upon several occasions. It seems, however, that on 13 July, 1660, it was moved, "That there being a person that now sits in this house as a peer of the realm, viz., the Earl of Banbury, it is ordered that this business shall be heard at the bar by counsel, on Monday come sennight." Whether, in fact, any such hearing did take place or not, the journals are silent, yet they furnish abundant proof, that the doubt had been removed by some means: for they show, that the said earl was present in the house every day preceding the day appointed for the hearing. That he was also present on that very day; and that the day following he was named of the committee on the excise bill. That he was present on 13 September, when the king was in the house; and, in short, was only absent seven days, between 13 July, when the said motion was made, and 21 November, when it was ordered, "That the Earl of Banbury hath leave to be absent for some time." Shortly after this, however, the parliament was dissolved, viz., 29 December, 1660; and in the new parliament, which met 8 May, 1661, the name of the Earl of Banbury was omitted; his lordship presented, therefore, a petition to the king for his writ of summons, which petition was referred to the lords, for their opinion, and by them transferred to a committee for privileges. Here a regular examination of witnesses took place, and the attorney-general, who attended on behalf of the crown, confessed the law to be clear; when the committee reported to the house, 1 July, 1661, "That Nicholas, Earl of Banbury, was a legitimate person." Upon receiving the report, the house ordered that the cause should be heard at the bar; where having been accordingly heard, it was again referred to the committee for privileges, with an additional direction, to consider the matter of the right of precedency between the said earl and several other peers; which committee once more having taken the matter into consideration, on 19 July, 1661, reported, "That the Earl of Banbury, in the eye of the law, was son of the late William, Earl of Banbury; and the House of Peers should therefore advise the king to send him a writ to come to parliament, and that he ought to have a place in the House of Peers, according to the date of his patent, and not according to that part thereof, which ranked him before the other earls created before William, Earl of Banbury." This report was made on Friday, and the house resolved to take it into consideration on the Monday following; but nothing appears to have been done on that day: from which period it was postponed day after day, to 9 December; when it appears from the journals, that a bill was brought in, and read a first time, entitled, "An Act for declaring Nicholas, called Earl of Banbury, to be illegitimate." But such a measure was found too unjust to become a law, and the bill therefore dropped: Nicholas, the petitioner, d. 14 March, 1673-4, without bringing the matter to a conclusion, leaving a son, CHARLES, then twelve years of age. Which Charles, in the first parliament after he came of age, anno 1695, presented a petition to the House of Peers, who referred it to a committee for privileges, and he was treated with the same procrastination as his father had experienced. He had, however, the misfortune to kill his brother-in-law, Philip Lawson, Esq., in a duel, in 1692, and that event placed his right to the peerage in a different point of view, and raised a new question upon it. He was indicted at the quarter sessions of Middlesex, and the indictment being removed by certiorari, into the Court of King's Bench, the assumed Earl of Banbury petitioned the lords to be tried by his peers. The house having again entered into the investigation of his father's legitimacy, resolved, that he had no right to the Earldom of Banbury, and the petition was ordered to be dismissed. Meantime, the proceedings went on in the King's Bench, and he being indicted in the name of Charles Knollys, pleaded in abatement that he was Earl of Banbury. To this the attorney-general rejoined, that he was not Earl of Banbury, because the lords adjudged that he had no right to that honour. To this he demurred as a bad replication, contending that the lords had no jurisdiction over that question. And the point which the Court of King's Bench had now to determine, was "whether the plea or replication was good."

Lord Holt and his brother judges finally adjudged "the replication bad, and the resolution of the lords invalid."

The claimant now again petitioned for his writ of summons, and the crown again, anno 1693, referred it to the lords, who got rid of the affair, by sending a message to his Majesty "that they had already determined the question, of which they supposed the King was not aware." In the reign of Queen ANNE the claimant once more petitioned, and it was referred to the privy council, but what became eventually of the petition is not known.

On the accession of GEORGE II., 1727, the claimant again petitioned. Sir Philip Yorke, afterwards Lord Hardwicke, was then attorney-general, and this petition being referred to him, he reported, that whether the crown would refer it to the lords, was a matter of discretion, not of law: the crown therefore declined to interfere. Thus the claim continued to be hung up from reign to reign. Lord Hardwicke was undoubtedly right: it was a matter of pure option on the part of the crown, whether it would take the opinion of the lords; and prudence counselled the negative, after the flame which had been kindled between the House of Peers and the courts of law. At length, in 1776, the heirship devolved upon William Knollys, an officer in the army, who had attained the rank of general, who from that time enjoyed, as his ancestors had, since the Restoration, the titular honour, and had been so named in all the king's commissions. The awkwardness of his situation, however, impelled him to make an effort in his own person to have the question of his right to a writ of summons finally decided. He accordingly petitioned the crown; and the case was referred to the attorney-general, Sir Vicary Gibbs, in 1808. That able lawyer reported that he was bound by the high authority of the judgment of Lord Chief Justice Holt, in 1693, to give it as his opinion, that the resolution of the lords on that occasion was not conclusive, because, if that judgment had been erroneous it might have been reversed by a writ of error.

The case thus again came before a lords' committee, Sir Samuel Romilly being counsel for the claimant, and a decision was come to by their lordships, in 1813, that the claimant was not entitled to the Earldom of Banbury.

DESCENT OF THE BANBURY PEERAGE THROUGH THE ASSUMED EARLS OF BANBURY.

KNOVILL—BARON KNOVILL.

By Writ of Summons, dated 23 June, 1295.

Lineage.

Bogo DE KNOVILL, in the 16th King John, had livery of those lands at Horsed, in Cambridgeshire, which Stephen of Oxford some time held. But in the 18th HENRY III., being involved in the insurrection of Richard, Earl Marshal, all his possessions were seized by the crown. Upon making submission, however, he obtained precepts to the sheriffs of Northamptonshire, Buckinghamshire, Sussex, Herefordshire, and Cambridgeshire, to make restitution to him of what lay in their respective counties. To this Bogo s. (his son and heir it is presumed)

Bogo DE KNOVILL, who, in the 3rd EDWARD I., was constituted sheriff of the cos. Salop and Stafford, and governor of the castle of Blaneminstre (subsequently called Oswestre), in the former shire. In which office he continued for three years, and was then made governor of Dolvoron Castle, in the marches of Wales. This feudal lord was summoned to parliament as a baron, from 23 June, 1295, to 26 August, 1307, in which latter year he d., leaving a son and heir, then thirty years of age.

Bogo DE KNOVILL, who doing homage, had livery of his lands, but, according to Dugdale, was never summoned to parliament. His name appears, however, in the rolls of the first year of King EDWARD II., amongst others therein mentioned, as having been summoned to the parliament held at that period. In the 4th EDWARD II., this Bogo was in the wars of Scotland, and in four years after he had a military summons for the same field. He was subsequently involved in the rebellion of Thomas, Earl of Lancaster, and paid the very large fine of £1,000 to preserve his life. He then resided in Gloucestershire. Of this nobleman, or his descendants, Dugdale gives no further account.

Kimber, in his Baronetage states, that Eleanor, dau. and co-heir of Sir John Knovill, m. about the 13th EDWARD III., Grey de St. Aubyn, ancestor of Sir John St. Aubyn, Baronet, of Clowance, co. Cornwall.

KNYVETT—BARON KNYVETT, OF ES-CRICK, CO. YORK.

By Writ of Summons, dated 4 July, 1607.

Lineage.

The very ancient family of KNYVETT came at length to possess Buckenham Castle, in Norfolk, through the Cliftons.

SIR JOHN KNYVETT, Knt. (son of Richard Knyvett, by Joan his wife, and great-grandson of Sir John Knyvett, Lord of Southwick), was constituted chief justice of the King's Bench, 39th EDWARD III., and became subsequently lord chancellor of England. He m. Eleanor, eldest dau. of Ralph, 2nd Lord Bassett, of Weiden, and his eldest son and heir,

JOHN KNYVETT, was one of the knights of the shire for Huntingdon, 21st RICHARD II. He left with two daus., an only son,

SIR JOHN KNYVETT, who m. Elizabeth, dau. of Sir Constantine de Clifton, 2nd Baron Clifton, and eventually co-heir of her noble family. By her he acquired Castle Buckenham, in Norfolk, and other estates. His only son and heir,

SIR JOHN KNYVETT, in whom, or his representative, the Barony of Clifton became vested, on the death of his uncle, Sir John Clifton, m. 1st, Alice, dau. of Reginald, Lord Grey, of Ruthyn, and by her had a son and heir, EDMUND. He m. 2ndly, Joan, dau. of Humphrey Stafford, Duke of Buckingham, and relict of William, Viscount Beaumont, and by her had a son, Edward (Sir), high sheriff of Norfolk and Suffolk, 31st HENRY VIII. Sir John d. 7th HENRY VII., and was s. by his elder son,

SIR EDMUND KNYVETT, Knt., of Buckenham, who m. Eleanor, sister of Sir James Tyrell, Knt., and had with a dau., Anne (m. to Sir George St. Leger), five sons, viz.,

THOMAS (Sir), of whose line we here treat.

Edmund, serjeant porter to HENRY VIII., who m. Jane, only surviving dau. of Sir John Bourchier, 2nd Baron Berners, and by this great heiress had three sons and three daus., viz.,

1 John, who left a son and heir, Sir Thomas Knyvet, whose descendant, Elizabeth Knyvet, m. Henry Wilson, Esq., and their grandson Robert Wilson, was summoned to parliament in 1832, as LORD BERNERS.

2 William, ancestor of the Knyvetts of Fundenhall, in Norfolk.

3 Edmund.

1 Rose, m. to Oliver Reymes.

2 Alice, m. to Oliver Spiers.

3 Christian, m. to Thomas Foster.

The eldest son,

SIR THOMAS KNYVETT, of Buckenham, was made knight of the Bath at the coronation of HENRY VIII., and became subsequently master of the horse. He m. Muriel, dau. of Thomas, Duke of Norfolk, and relict of John Grey, Viscount Lisle, and had issue,

i. EDMUND (Sir), his heir, whose great grandson, PHILIP KNYVETT, was created a Baronet at the institution of the order, 22 May, 1611, which dignity became extinct on the death of his son, Sir ROBERT, the 2nd bart., about 1699. (See BURKE'S Extinct Baronetage.) Sir Robert's sisters and co-heirs were

- 1 Dorothy, m. to James, 6th Earl of Buchan.
- 2 Katherine, d. unm.
- 3 Eleanor, m. 1st, to Sir Henry Hastings, of Braunston, co. Leicester, and 2ndly, to Thomas Waldron, Esq., of Charley, co. Leicester.

ii. Ferdinando.

iii. HENRY (Sir), of whom we treat.

The 3rd son,

SIR HENRY KNYVETT, knighted by Queen ELIZABETH, in 1574, m. Anne, dau. and heir of Sir Christopher Pickering, and thence descended the brother,

HENRY (Sir), Knt., of Charlton, co. Wilts, who left two daus., his co-heirs, viz.,

Katherine, who m. 1st, the Hon. Richard Rich, but had no issue. She m. 2ndly, Thomas Howard, 1st Earl of Suffolk, and the estate of Charlton passed to her 2nd son, the Hon. Thomas Howard, who was created Earl of Berkshire.

Elizabeth, m. to Thomas, 3rd Lord Lincoln, ancestor of the Dukes of Newcastle.

THOMAS (Sir).

The 2nd son was,

SIR THOMAS KNYVETT, Knt., one of the gentlemen of the privy chamber to King JAMES I., who, in 1605, upon the mysterious intimation conveyed by letter to the Lord Montague, was sent, being a justice of the peace in Westminster, to make search, with others, in the vaults and cellars under the House of Lords, where Guydo Faux was discovered, and the Gunpowder Plot detected and prevented. After which, he was summoned to the parliament then sitting, 4 July, 1607, as BARON KNYVETT, of Escrick, co. York. His lordship m. Elizabeth, widow of Richard Warren, Esq., and dau. of Sir Rowland Hayward, an alderman of London, but had no issue. He d. 27 April, 1622, when the Barony of Escrick became EXTINCT. His lordship's estates devolved upon his niece, Elizabeth, dau. and co-heir of Sir Henry Knyvett, of Charlton, co. Wilts; which Elizabeth, m. Thomas Howard, Earl of Suffolk, and her 7th son, Sir Edward Howard, K.B., was created BARON HOWARD OF ESCRICK, 29 April, 1628 (see that dignity).

KYME—BARONS KYME.

By Writ of Summons, dated 23 June, 1295.

Lineage.

Of this ancient family, which assumed the surname of Kyme, from a fair lordship, the principal place of their residence in Kesteven, co. Lincoln, the first mentioned is

SIMON DE KYME (the son of William), who founded, temp. STEPHEN, the priory of Bollington, in Lincolnshire. This Simon m. Roese, dau. of Robert Dapifer (that is steward to Gilbert de Gant, Earl of Lincoln), which lady was commonly called Roese de Bolinton. He was s. by his son,

PHILIP DE KYME, who was constituted sheriff of Lincolnshire in the 14th HENRY II., and was one of the barons in the great council held at London in the year 1177, where he was a subscribing witness to the instrument of arbitration there made by King HENRY II., for according the difference betwixt ALFONSO, King of Castile, and SANCTIUS, King of Navarre. This feudal lord was the founder of the priory of Kyme, and he granted twenty acres of land to the canons and nuns at Bolinton, for supporting the charge of their garments. He was steward to Gilbert de Gant, Earl of Lincoln, and was s. at his decease (before 1194) by his son,

SIMON DE KYME, who, in the 21st HENRY II., was indebted to the crown in the sum of forty marks, as a fine for not disclaiming his right to certain lands after he had lost them upon a trial by battel. In the 6th EDWARD I. he paid 100 marks to be excused serving in Normandy, and in the 8th of the same reign he was sheriff of Lincolnshire. In the reign of JOHN he took up arms with the barons, and was excommunicated by the pope, when his lands were all seized and transferred to Geoffrey Nevill. He subsequently negotiated for their restoration, but d. before anything effectual in the matter could be accomplished. He d. in 1219, and was s. by his son,

PHILIP DE KYME, who, upon paying £100 for his relief, had the lands of his father restored to him. He m. Agnes de Wales, and dying in 1242, was s. by his eldest son,

SIMON DE KYME, who d. s. p. in 1247, and was s. by his brother,

WILLIAM DE KYME, who also d. s. p. in 1258, and was s. by

PHILIP DE KYME. This feudal lord had a military summons in the 22nd EDWARD I., for the French wars, and in three years afterwards he was engaged in Gascony. In the 28th of the same reign he obtained a grant for a weekly market at his manor of Burwell, co. Lincoln, and we find his lordship for several years subsequently actively employed in the wars of Scotland. In the 10th EDWARD II. he had an indemnity granted him, being then much decayed in strength, in consideration of his great service in the wars, in the time of King EDWARD I., and the then king, from any the like service in future. Furthermore, in the 12th of the same monarch, he obtained a special discharge for a debt of £50 owing to the king's exchequer, by a recognizance, which money had been borrowed in the time of King EDWARD I., as a supply for the charge of his passage into Gascony. This eminent person was summoned to parliament as a Baron, from 23 June, 1295, to 26 November, 1313. His lordship m. a dau. of Hugh Bigot (to which Hugh he had been a ward in his minority), and dying in 1322, was s. by his son, WILLIAM DE KYME, 2nd baron, summoned to parliament, from 26 December, 1323, to 22 January, 1336. His lordship d. s. p. in 1338, leaving Joane, his widow, who re-m. Nicholas de Cantilupe. Whereupon Robert de Umframvill, Earl of Angus, who had m. LUCIE DE KYME, his lordship's sister, came by virtue of a fine levied in the 8th EDWARD III., to possess the inheritance; and amongst the descendants of the said Robert and Lucie the Barony of Kyme must now be considered to be in ABEYANCE.

LACY—EARLS OF LINCOLN.

By Charter of Creation, dated 23 November, 1232.

Lineage.

Two distinguished members of this ancient family, namely, WALTER DE LACI, and ILBERT DE LACI, came into England with the CONQUEROR, but in what degree allied, if at all, has not been ascertained. From ILBERT, the noble house of which we are about to treat, derived, and to him and his descendants, after disposing of the line of Walter, we shall direct our attention.

First then, as to the LINE OF WALTER DE LACI.

WALTER DE LACI, when the power of his royal master was firmly established in England, was one of the commanders whom WILLIAM sent into Wales to subjugate the principality, and being victorious acquired large possessions there, in addition to those already obtained as his portion of the spoil of Hastings. He was killed in April, 1064, by falling from a ladder, which he had ascended to inspect the completion of the church of St. Peter, in Hereford, of which he was the founder. Walter de Laci left three sons, ROGER, HUON, and Walter, a monk in the abbey of St. Peter's, at Gloucester. The eldest son,

ROGER DE LACI, through the bounty of the CONQUEROR, as well as by inheritance from his father, had large possessions in the cos. of Berks, Salop, Gloucester, Worcester, and Hereford, where the castle of Ewyas was the head of his barony. But joining in the rebellion against WILLIAM RUFUS, in favour of ROBERT CURTHOSE, he was banished England, and all his lands were conferred upon his brother,

HUON DE LACI, who, with many other Norman soldiers of fortune, had been permitted by RUFUS to invade the principality of Wales, and to acquire by their good swords, lands there— which lands Sir John Dodderidge, Knt., one of the Justices of the Court of King's Bench, a learned antiquary as well as lawyer, describes as becoming, when conquered, Baronies Marchers held in capite of the crown—wherein the barons enjoyed a kind of palatine jurisdiction, with power to administer justice to the tenants in each of their territories, holding courts, invested with divers privileges, franchises, and immunities, so that the king's writs were not current, unless the whole barony had been in question. Such was the state of the government of the marches of Wales down to the reign of HENRY VIII. This Hugh, who upon all occasions liberally supported the church, was the founder of the priory of Lanthony, in Wales. He d. s. p. bequeathing his great inheritance to his two sisters, Ermeline, who had no children, and Emme, whose son,

GILBERT, assumed the surname of Laci. This feudal lord, in the conflict between STEPHEN and the Empress, espoused the cause of the latter. He eventually became a knight Templar, and was s. by (whether son or brother not known),

HUGH DE LACI, who was employed in the conquest of Ireland, and for his services there obtained from King HENRY II., the whole county of Meath. He was subsequently constituted governor of Dublin, and justice of Ireland. But incurring the displeasure of his royal master by marrying without license the king of Connaught's dau., he was divested in 1191, of the custody of the metropolis. In four years afterwards he was murdered by one Malvo Mladaich, a mean person. In revenge for the severity with which he had treated the workmen employed by him in erecting the castle of Lurhedy. He left issue,

WALTER, his successor.

HUGH, constable of Ireland, who, according to Matthew Paris, a most famous soldier, obtained the earldom of Ulster from King JOHN, by betraying and delivering into that monarch's power the celebrated JOHN DE COURCY, EARL OF ULSTER. He subsequently, however, incurred the displeasure of the king, and was himself driven out of Ireland. His wife was Emeline, dau. and heir of Walter de Ridelesford, by whom (who m. 2ndly. Stephen de Longespee) he left at his decease, 26th HENRY III., an only dau. and heir, MAUD DE LACY, who m. Walter de Burgh, Lord of Connaught and Earl of Ulster.

Elayne, m. to Richard de Beaufort.

The elder son,

WALTER DE LACI, paid, in the 10th RICHARD I., 2,000 marks for the king's favour, and to have livery of his lands, but this being the last year of that monarch's reign, his brother and successor, JOHN, exacted no less than £1,200 for similar favour of livery. In the 9th of the latter king's reign, Walter de Laci, obtained a confirmation of his dominion of Meath, to be held by him and his heirs for the service of fifty knights' fees; as also of all his fees in FINGALL, in the valley of Dublin, to be held by the service of seven knights' fees. But in three years afterwards, King JOHN passing into Ireland with his army, Laci was forced to deliver himself up and all his possessions in that kingdom, and to abjure the realm. He was subsequently banished from England, but in the 16th of the same reign, he seems to have made his peace, for he was then allowed to repossess Ludlow, with the castle; and the next year he recovered all his lands in Ireland, except the castle and lands of Drogheda, by paying a fine of 4,000 marks to the crown. After this we find him sheriff of Herefordshire, in the 18th of JOHN, and 2nd of HENRY III., and in the 14th of the latter king, joined with Geoffrey de Marisco, then justice of Ireland, and Richard de Burgh, in subduing the King of Connaught, who had taken up arms to expel the English from his territories. So much for the secular acts of this powerful feudal baron. Of his works of piety, it is recorded that he confirmed to the canons of Lanthony, all those lands and churches in Ireland, granted to them by his father, Hugh de Laci; and of his own bounty, gave them the church of our lady at Drogheda, with other valuable gifts. To the monks of Creswil, in Herefordshire, he was a special benefactor, having conferred upon them 204 acres of his wood, called Ham: as also 600 acres, with the woods thereto belonging; and common pasture for their cattle in New Forest, and in divers other pasturages. Moreover, the ninth sheaf of wheat and other corn, except oats, throughout all his lordships in England and Wales. Likewise the tithe of all the hides of those cattle which were yearly sold at the fair of his castle at Ewys. In Ireland he founded the abbey of Beaubec, which was first a cell to the great abbey of Bee, in Normandy, and afterwards to Furness, in Lancashire. Walter Laci m. Margaret, dau. of William de Braose, of Brecknock, and in the year 1241, being then infirm and blind, departed this life, "Vir, inter omnes nobiles Hibernia, eminentissimus," leaving his great inheritance to be divided amongst females, viz., the dau. of GILBERT DE LACY, his son (who d. in his life time), and Isabel his wife, sister of John Bigod. Which dau. were

Maud, wife of Peter de Geneva, who had livery of Ludlow Castle in her right, and after this in the 38th HENRY III., of Geoffrey de Genevill, who had livery of the castle of Trim, in the co. of Meath, as part of her inheritance.

Margery, m. to John de Verdon, and had for her share of the property, the castle of Webbeley. The honour of Ewys-Lacy having been assigned for the dower of Isabel, her mother.

Having thus brought the line of WALTER DE LACY, the companion of the CONQUEROR, to a close, we return to his fellow-soldier, if not kinsman, and proceed to deduce the LINE OF ILBERT DE LACI.

ILBERT DE LACI, to whom King WILLIAM gave the castle and town of Brokenbridge, co. York, which he afterwards denominated, in the Norman dialect, "Pontfract," had besides other territorial grants of vast extent; and at the time of the General Survey possessed nearly one hundred and fifty lordships in Yorkshire, ten in Nottingham, and four in Lincolnshire. This Ilbert left two sons, ROBERT and Hugh. The elder,

ROBERT DE LACI, otherwise Robert de Pontfract, had a confirmation from King WILLIAM RUFUS, of all those lands whereof Ilbert, his father, died possessed. Attaching himself, however, to the interest of ROBERT CURTHOSE, after the death of RUFUS, himself and his son, ILBERT, were expelled the realm by King HENRY I., and the honour of Pontfract bestowed upon Henry Travers; which Henry, having shortly after been mortally wounded by one Pain, a servant of his own, caused himself to be shorn a monk, and so d. within three days. After that the king gave this honour to Guy de la Val, who held it until King STEPHEN's time, when, it is stated by an old historian, that Robert de Laci's son,

ILBERT DE LACY (the personage mentioned above as exiled with his father), by the special favour of STEPHEN, re-obtained his Barony of Pontfract, and was ever afterwards one of the staunchest adherents of that monarch. In the 3rd year of that reign he was a principal commander at the celebrated battle of the Standard, fought at Northallerton, where the Scots sustained so signal a defeat from the northern barons. He subsequently obtained a pardon on behalf of his servants, for all forfeitures whatsoever; and especially for the death of William Maltravers. This feudal lord m. Alice, dau. of Gilbert de Gant, but dying s. p., he was s. by his brother,

HENRY DE LACY, who was received into favour by the empress, and her son, King HENRY II., and obtained from them a remission of the displeasure which King HENRY I. bore towards Robert, his father; as also of the forfeiture, which he himself had made before he did his homage; with full restitution of his whole honour of Pontfract, and all other his lands in England and Normandy. He was s. by his son,

ALBRIDA LISOURS, then the wife of Richard Fitz-Eustace, feudal baron of Halton, and constable of Chester, possessed herself of the Barony of Pontfract, and all the other lands of her deceased brother, under pretence of a grant from Henry de Lacy, her 1st husband. By Fitz-Eustace, she had a son, JOHN, who becoming heir to his half uncle, Robert de Lacy, assumed that surname, and inherited, as

JOHN DE LACY, the Baronies of Halton and Pontfract, with the constablership of Chester. This feudal lord m. Alice de Vera, and dying in the Holy Land, anno 1179, was s. by his eldest son,

ROGER DE LACY, constable of Chester. This nobleman assisted at the siege of Acon, in 1192, under the banner of the lion-hearted RICHARD, and shared in the subsequent triumphs of the chivalrous monarch. At the accession of JOHN, he was a person of great eminence, for we find him shortly after the coronation of that prince, deputed with the sheriff of Northumberland, and other great men, to conduct WILLIAM, King of Scotland, to Lincoln, where the English king had fixed to give him an interview; and the next year he was one of the barons present at Lincoln, when DAVID, of Scotland, did homage and fealty to King JOHN.

In the time of this Roger, Ranulph, Earl of Chester, having entered Wales at the head of some forces, was compelled, by superior numbers, to shut himself up in the castle of Rothelan, where, being closely besieged by the Welsh, he sent for aid to the constable of Chester. Hugh Lupus, the 1st Earl of Chester, in his charter of foundation of the abbey of St. Werberg, at Chester, had given a privilege to the frequenters of Chester fair, "That they should not be apprehended for theft, or any other offence during the time of the fair, unless the crime was committed therein." This privilege made the fair, of course, the resort of thieves and vagabonds from all parts of the kingdom. Accordingly, the constable, Roger de Laci, forthwith marched to his relief, at the head of a concourse of people, then collected at the fair of Chester, consisting of minstrels, and loose characters of all descriptions, forming altogether so numerous a body, that the besiegers, at their approach, mistaking them for soldiers, immediately raised the siege. For this timely service, the Earl of Chester conferred upon De Lacy and his heirs, the patronage of all the minstrels in those parts, which patronage the constable transferred to his steward, Dutton, and his heirs; and it is enjoyed to this day by the family of Dutton. It is doubtful, however, whether the privilege was transferred to the Duttons by this constable, or his successor. The privilege was, "That, at the midsummer fair held at Chester, all the minstrels of that country, resorting to Chester, do attend the heir of Dutton, from his lodging to St. John's Church (he being then accompanied by many gentlemen of the country, one of them walking before him in a surcoat of his arms, depicted on taffata; the rest of his fellows proceeding two and two, and playing on their several sorts of musical instruments.") When divine service terminates, the like attendance upon Dutton to his lodging, where a court being kept by his steward, and all the minstrels formally called, certain orders and laws are made for the government of the society of minstrels.

Roger de Lacy's son and successor,

JOHN DE LACY, constable of Chester, who, in the 15th year of King JOHN, undertook the payment of 7,000 marks to the crown, in the space of four years, for livery of the lands of his inheritance, and to be discharged of all his father's debts due to the exchequer; further obliging himself by oath, that in case he should ever swerve from his allegiance, and adhere to the king's enemies, all his possessions should devolve upon the crown; promising also, that he would not marry without the king's license. By this agreement it was arranged that the king should retain the castles of Pontefract and Dunnington, still in his own hands; and that he, the said John, should allow £40 per annum, for the custody of those fortresses. But the next year he had Dunnington restored to him, upon hostages. About this period he joined the baronial standard, and was one of the celebrated twenty-five barons, appointed to enforce the observance of Magna Charta. But the next year, he obtained letters of safe conduct to come to the king to make his peace, and he had similar letters, upon the accession of HENRY III., in the 2nd year of which monarch's reign, he went with divers other noblemen into the Holy Land. He m. MARGARET, dau. and heir of Robert de Quincy, Earl of Winchester (see that title), by Hawyse, 4th sister and co-heir of Ranulph de Mechain, Earl of Chester and Lincoln, which Ranulph, by a formal charter under his seal, granted the EARLDOM OF LINCOLN, that is, so much as he could grant thereof, to the said Hawyse, "to the end that she might be countess, and that her heirs might also enjoy the earldom;" which grant was confirmed by the king, and at the especial request of the countess, this John de Lacy, constable of Chester, was created by charter, dated at Northampton, 23 November, 1232, EARL OF LINCOLN, with remainder to the heirs of his body, by his wife, the above-mentioned Margaret. In the contest which occurred during the same year, between the king and Richard Marshal, Earl of Pembroke, Earl Marshal, Matthew Paris states that the Earl of Lincoln was brought over to the king's party, with John le Scot, Earl of Chester, by Peter de Rupibus, bishop of Winchester, for a bribe of 1,000 marks. In 1237, his lordship was one of those appointed to prohibit Otto, the pope's legate, from establishing anything derogatory to the king's crown and dignity, in the council of prelates then assembled: and the same year he had a grant of the sheriffalty of Cheshire, being likewise constituted governor of the castle of Chester. The earl d. in 1240, leaving Margaret, his wife, surviving, who re-m. William Marshal, Earl of Pembroke. His lordship left issue, and two daus., which ladies in the 27th HENRY III., were removed to Windsor, there to be educated with the king's own daus.; of these, Maud, m. Richard de Clare, Earl of Gloucester. The earl was s. by his son,

EDMUND DE LACY (presumed 2nd Earl of Lincoln). This young nobleman m. in 1247, "an outlandish lady," says Dugdale, "from the parts of Savoy, brought over purposely for him, by Peter de Savoy, uncle to the queen, which occasioned much discontent amongst the nobles of England." The lady thus designated was Alice, dau. of the Marquess of Saluces, in Italy, and cousin of the queen. By her his lordship had issue,

HENRY, his successor.

John.

Margaret, m. to George de Cantilupe, Baron of Bergavenny.

As to the title of EARL OF LINCOLN, this nobleman never used it, nor was it ever attributed to him in any charter, by reason that he died before his mother, through whom the dignity came; but as he enjoyed the Tertium Denarium of that county, he must nevertheless be esteemed the 2nd earl, and

Sir Harris Nicolas so places him. His lordship d. in 1257, and was s. by his elder son,

HENRY DE LACY, 3rd Earl of Lincoln, who having m. Margaret, dau. and co-heir of William de Longespee, son of William de Longespee, Earl of Salisbury, became jure uxoris, EARL OF SALISBURY. This nobleman was one of the most eminent of the period in which he lived, and enjoyed the highest favour of King EDWARD I., in whose Welsh wars he had early a distinguished part, and obtained from the king the land of Denbigh, upon which he began the town of that name, walling it in and protecting it by a castle, upon the front whereof was his statue in long robes. In 1290 (18th EDWARD I.), his lordship was appointed the chief commissioner for rectifying and discovering abuses and bribes amongst the judges, complained of in parliament; when Thomas Weyland, Chief Justice of the Common Pleas, was banished, and all his estates forfeited; Sir John Lovetot, compounded for 500 marks; Roger Leicester (clerk), for 1,000; Sir William Brompton for 6,000, with several others, who were also fined; a proof that the judgment-seat is not always as immaculate as it is represented to be. In the 21st year of EDWARD I., his lordship was sent ambassador to the King of France, to treat concerning the restraint of pirates; and the next year he attended the king into Wales, where he experienced a great repulse, not far from the castle of Denbigh. He was subsequently, for some years, engaged in the French wars: first under Edmund, Earl of Lancaster, but after the decease of that prince, he had the sole command of the army himself. In the 27th and 28th of the same reign, his lordship was in the wars of Scotland; in the 29th he was constituted governor of Corff Castle, and two years afterwards, joined in commission with the bishop of Winchester and others, to treat of peace with the court of France. In 1305, the earl was deputed, with the bishops of Lichfield and Worcester, to the solemn inauguration of the Pope at Lyons, and presented his holiness with divers vessels of pure gold, from his royal master. After this, we again find him in the wars of Gascony and Scotland; and in the 3rd EDWARD II., upon that monarch's march into Scotland, the Earl of Lincoln was constituted governor of England, during the king's absence. His lordship d. in 1312, "at his mansion house, called Lincoln's Inn, in the suburbs of London, which he himself had erected, in that place, where the Black-friars habitation anciently stood." Immediately before his decease, he called his son-in-law, the Earl of Lancaster, to his bedside, and addressed him in words to the following effect: "Seest thou the church of England, heretofore honourable and free, enslaved by Romish oppressions, and the king's unjust exactions? Seest thou the common people impoverished by tributes and taxes, and from the condition of freemen, reduced to servitude? Seest thou the nobility, formerly venerable through Christendom, vilified by aliens, in their own native country? I therefore charge thee, in the name of Christ, to stand up like a man; for the honour of God, and his church, and redemption of thy country; associating thyself to that valiant, noble, and prudent person, Guy, Earl of Warwick, when it shall be most proper to discourse of the public affairs of the kingdom; who is so judicious in counsel, and mature in judgment. Fear not thy opposers, who shall contest against thee in the truth. And if thou pursue this, my advice, thou shalt gain eternal Heaven!" This great earl left an only dau. and heiress,

ALICE DE LACY, who m. 1st, Thomas Plantagenet, Earl of Lancaster, who is said to have been Earl of Lincoln, in her right; she m. 2ndly, Eubold le Strange; and 3rdly, Hugh le Fresne. Her ladyship assumed the title of COUNTESS OF LINCOLN AND SALISBURY, but d. s. p. in 1348, when those honours became EXTINCT, in the family of Lacy.

LAKE—BARONS AND VISCOUNTS LAKE.

Barony, by Letters Patent, dated 18 September, 1804.

Viscounty, by Letters Patent, dated 4 November, 1807.

Lineage.

SIR THOMAS LAKE, of Canons, co. Middlesex (eldest son of Almaric Lake, of Southampton, and brother of Arthur Lake, bishop of Bath and Wells), was born at Southampton, bred a scholar, and afterwards taken into the service of Sir Francis Walsingham, secretary of state, as his amanuensis. By this minister he was recommended to Queen ELIZABETH, to whom he read French and Latin. A little before her Majesty's death, she made him clerk of her signet, and after her decease, he was deputed by the state in that capacity, to attend JAMES I. from Berwick. That monarch soon after employed him in French affairs, and knighted him. After Sir Robert Cecil (Salisbury) attained the administration of affairs, the secretaryship of state was divided, and Sir Thomas Lake was appointed one of the secretaries, "and so continued," says A. Wood, "with honourable esteem of all men, till malice and revenge, two violent passions, overruling the weaker sex,* concerning his wife and dau., involved him in their quarrel, the chief and only cause of his ruin." Sir Thomas m. Mary, dau. and heir of Sir William Ryther, lord mayor of London, and had issue,

THOMAS (Sir). LANCELOT (Sir).
Elizabeth, m. to Lord Roos.
Anne, m. to William Stonor, Esq., of Stonor.
Mary, m. to John Ingleby, Esq.
Bridget, m. to Sir William Domville.

Sir Thomas d. at his seat of Canons, co. Middlesex (which he had bought in 1604), 17 September, 1630, and was s. by his eldest son,

SIR THOMAS LAKE, of Canons, who d. in 1653, and was s. by his brother,

SIR LANCELOT LAKE, of Canons, who m. Frances, dau. of Sir Thomas Cheeke, of Pirgo, by Elizabeth, his wife, dau. of Robert Rich, Earl of Warwick, and d. in 1680, leaving, with other issue,

THOMAS (Sir), who inherited Canons, and marrying Rebecca, dau. of Sir James Langham, Bart., had several children, of whom,

MARY became eventually sole heir, and marrying John Brydges, Duke of Chandos, conveyed to that nobleman the seat of Canons.

And

WARWICK LAKE, Esq., who m. Elizabeth, only dau. and sole heir of Sir Charles Gerard,† Bart., of Flamberda, and granddaughter, maternally, of Charles Seymour, Lord Seymour, of Trowbridge, and dying in 1712, left an only son.

LAUNCELOT-CHARLES LAKE, Esq. This gentleman m. Letitia, dau. and co-heir of John Gumley, Esq., of Isleworth, and had two sons, Gerard and Warwick, of whom,

GERARD LAKE, Esq., having adopted the profession of arms attained the rank of general in the army, with the colonelcy of the 60th regiment of foot: and was elevated to the peerage, 1 September, 1804, as BARON LAKE, of Delhi, Lanesware, and of Aston Clinton, co. Bucks., in consideration of the high military talents and personal valour he had displayed in the command of the army during the Mahratta war, receiving, at the same time, the thanks of both houses of parliament. His lordship

* From a statement made by Sanderson, who was secretary to Lord Roos, during that nobleman's embassy in Spain, (1611,) we extract the cause and issue of the great feud between Frances, 2nd wife of Thomas, 1st Earl of Exeter, and the Lake family, alluded to above. We must previously premise that Thomas, 1st Earl of Exeter, espoused, for his 2nd countess, Frances Brydges, dau. of William, Lord Chandos, and widow of Sir Thomas Smith, master of requests to JAMES I., and that the lady was thirty-eight years younger than her noble husband. It is necessary also to observe, that Lord Roos, who m. Elizabeth, dau. of Sir Thomas Lake, was only son of William, 2nd Earl of Exeter (son and successor of the 1st earl), by Elizabeth, only dau. and heir of Edward Manners, Earl of Rutland. He was thus step-grandson to Frances, Countess of Exeter.

Upon Lord Roos's return from Spain, falling into some neglect of his wife and her kindred, and soon after withdrawing into Italy, where he became a Roman catholic, Lady Lake and her daughter, Lady Roos, asserted that an improper intimacy had subsisted between his lordship and the countess, his step-grandmother; and that the discovery of the intrigue had caused his lordship's flight into Italy. The matter at length assumed so serious a character that it was finally investigated before JAMES I., in person, when the whole story was found to have originated in the malice of Lady Lake and her dau., and the latter (Lady Roos) made an ample confession of the plot, in the middle of the trial, for which she was exempted from penal sentence. Sir Thomas Lake and his wife were condemned to pay £10,000 to the crown, and £5,000 to the countess, while Sarah Wharton, one of the perjured witnesses, was sentenced to be whipped through the streets at the cart's tail, and to do penance in St. Martin's Church.

† The Gerards of Flamberda were a younger branch of the family of Gerard, of Ince, in Lancashire. The 3rd baronet, SIR CHARLES GERARD, left at his decease, in 1701, an only child, ELIZABETH, m. 1st, to Warwick Lake, Esq., and 2ndly, to Miles Stapleton, Esq. (see BURKE's Extinct Baronetage.)

LANCASTER—BARON LANCASTER.

By Writ of Summons, dated 29 December, 1299.

Lineage.

The LANCASTERS, feudal Lords of Kendal, deduced their descent from Ivo TAILBOYS, brother of Fulk, Earl of Anjou, through his great grandson, WILLIAM, who assumed, Dugdale presumes, from being governor of Lancaster Castle, the surname of Lancaster. This

WILLIAM DE LANCASTER, Baron of Kendal, m. Gundred, dau. of William, 2nd Earl of Warren, and widow of Roger, Earl of Warwick; by whom he had issue, William, his successor, and a dau., Avicia, m. to Richard de Morevill. He was s. at his decease by his son, called

WILLIAM DE LANCASTER the 2nd, who was steward to King HENRY II. This William m. Helwiese de Stuteville, and left an only dau. and heiress, HELWIESE DE LANCASTER, whom RICHARD I., shortly after his coronation gave in marriage to (the son and heir of) Roger Fitz-Reinfride, one of the justices of the King's Bench)

GILBERT FITZ-REINFRIDE, and in consideration of a fine of 60 marks of silver, relieved him and his heirs from a certain tribute, called NUTGELD, which used to be paid by his lands in Westmoreland and Kendal. This Gilbert obtained a grant of the honour of Lancaster for life from King JOHN, and filled the office of sheriff of Lancashire from the 7th to the 17th year of the same reign. But we find him, notwithstanding, taking up arms with the other barons, and only reduced to allegiance by the capture of his son and heir, William, by the royalists, upon the fall of Rochester Castle. This event compelled the haughty baron to sue for pardon, which the king granted with the freedom of the captive, in consideration of the sum of 12,000 marks, the custody of some of his castles, and hostages for future good conduct. This Gilbert d. in 1319, leaving issue,

WILLIAM, his heir, of whom presently.

Helwiese, m. to Peter de Brus, of Skelton, and left a son, Peter, who d. s. p., and four daus.,

- 1 Margaret, m. to Robert de Ros (see Ros), whose descendant, in the 5th degree, and representative of the family,

Elizabeth de Ros, m. Sir William de Parre, Knt., the great-great-grand-children of which marriage were WILLIAM PARR (see PARR), Baron of Kendall, and Marquess of Northampton.

MAURICINE PARR, last Queen of King HENRY VIII.

Anne Parr, 1st wife of William Herbert, 1st Earl of Pembroke.

- 2 Agnes m. to Walter de Fauconberg (see NEVILL, LORD FAUCONBERG).

- 3 Lucy, m. to Robert de Tweng.

- 4 Laderine, m. to John de Bella-Aqua.

Alice, m. to William de Lindsay, whose descendant,

Christian de Lindsay, m. Inglerum de Ghinnea, Lord of Coucy, in France.

Serota, m. to Ailan de Multon, and d. s. p.

Gilbert Fitz-Reinfride, was s. by his son,

WILLIAM, who assumed his maternal surname of LANCASTER, of whose history some particulars have been given above. This feudal lord was sheriff of Lancashire from the 18th to the 30th HENRY III. inclusive, and had likewise the custody of the honour of Lancaster. He d. about the year 1246 s. p., when his estates devolved upon the representatives of his two elder sisters, the youngest sister having d. s. p., and were thus divided. The Brus's had what was called the Marquess and Lumley fee; the Lindsays the Richmond fee. Thus terminated the legitimate line of the Lancasters, Barons of Kendall. The last baron, however, had a bastard brother, called

ROGER DE LANCASTER, who held the manor of Barton, co. Westmoreland, by gift of his brother, as also that of Patterdale, in the same shire, and was sheriff of Lancashire, in 49th HENRY III. He m. Philippa, eldest dau., and one of the co-heirs of Hugh de Bolebec, of the co. Northumberland, and dying in 1290, was s. by his son,

JOHN DE LANCASTER. This feudal lord having distinguished himself in the wars of Scotland, temp. EDWARD I., was summoned to parliament as a Baron from 29 December, 1299, to 12 December, 1309. His lordship d. in 1334, s. p., when the BARONY OF LANCASTER became EXTINCT, whilst his estates, which included the feudal Barony of Rydale, in Westmoreland, with divers other lordships, in the cos. of Northumberland and Essex, devolved upon his heir-at-law, Richard, the son of Richard de Plais, then twelve years old.

Arms—Arg., two bars gules, on a canton of the 2nd, a lion passant guardant, or.

LANE—VISCOUNT LANESBOROUGH.

By Letters Patent, dated 31 July, 1676.

Lineage.

RICHARD LANE, Esq., of Tulse, co. Roscommon, who was created a Baronet of England, in 1660-1, m. 1st, Mabel, dau. and heir of Gerald Fitzgerald, Esq., of Clonbolg and Rathaman, and 2ndly, Mary, dau. of Thomas Leicester, Esq. By the former, he left at his decease, 5 October, 1668, a son and successor,

SIR GEORGE LANE, 2nd baronet, an eminent politician, who filled the office of secretary of state for Ireland, and was raised to the peerage of that kingdom, as VISCOUNT LANESBOROUGH, co. Longford, 31 July, 1676. His lordship m. 1st, Dorcas, dau. of Sir Anthony Brabazon, Knt., of the noble family of MEATH; and 2ndly, Lady Frances Sackville, dau. of Richard, 5th Earl of Dorset. His son and successor,

SIR JAMES LANE, 2nd Viscount Lanesborough, m. Mary, dau. of Sir Charles Compton, Knt.; but d. s. p. 2 August, 1724, when all his honours became EXTINCT, and the estates devolved on his sister and heiress,

THE HON. FRANCES LANE, who became in 1691, the 2nd wife of HENRY FOX, Esq. (see Landed Gentry), and had issue,

- I. GEORGE FOX, M.P. for York, who assumed the additional surname of LANE, and was created BARON BINGLEY (see next article).

LANE-FOX—BARON BINGLEY.

By Letters Patent, dated 13 May, 1762.

Lineage.

GEORGE FOX, Esq., M.P. for the city of York, eldest son of Henry Fox, Esq. (for whose descent refer to BURKE's Landed Gentry), by his wife, the Hon. Frances Lane, sister and heiress of James, 2nd and last Viscount Lanesborough s. by will to the extensive property of Lord Lanesborough, and assumed, by act of parliament, 22 March, 1750-1, in accordance with the testator's injunction, the additional surname and arms of LANE: he m. in 1731, Harriet, dau. and sole heiress of Robert Benson, Lord Bingley (see that name); and was, on the extinction of his father-in-law's title, advanced to the peerage in the same dignity, being created, 13 May, 1762, BARON BINGLEY, of Bingley, in the co. of York. By his wife, with whom he is stated to have acquired £100,000, and £7,000 a-year, he had an only son, ROBERT, b. 5 August, 1732, who m. 1st, Mildred, dau. and heir of John Bouchier, Esq., of Benningborough; and 2ndly, in 1761, Lady Bridget Henley, eldest dau. of Robert, 1st Earl of Northington, lord chancellor of England, but d. in his father's lifetime, s. p. His widow m. 2ndly, in 1773, the Hon. John Tollemache, capt. R.N., 3rd son of Lionel, 3rd Earl of Dysart, and d. 13 March, 1796.

Lord Bingley having devised his great estates in England and Ireland to his nephew, JAMES FOX-LANE, M.P. (son of his brother, Sackville), grandfather of GEORGE LANE-FOX Esq., of Bramham Park, co. York (see Landed Gentry), d. in 1772, when his barony became extinct.

Arms—Quarterly: 1st and 4th, arg., a lion rampant, gu., within a border, sa.; on a canton of the 1st, a harp and crown, or, for LANE; 2nd and 3rd: arg., a chev., between three foxes' heads, erased, gu., for FOX.

LANGDALE—BARONS LANGDALE, OF HOLME.

By Letters Patent, dated 4 February, 1658.

Lineage.

The family derived its surname from the town of LANGDALE, in the hundred of Pickering, in Yorkshire, of which they were lords prior to the time of King JOHN. In the reign of EDWARD II.

PATRICK DE LANGDALE m. Amanda, dau. and heiress of Lawrence de Elton, and was s. by his son,

PATRICK DE LANGDALE, who m. Helen, dau. and heir of Sir Thomas Houghton, of Houghton, co. York, and with her acquired that estate; from this Patrick descended

ANTHONY LANGDALE, of Houghton, who d. in the 19th of ELIZABETH (1577), leaving with other issue, RICHARD, his successor, at Houghton, and

PETER LANGDALE, who was seated at Pighill, near Beverley, and having m. Anne, dau. of Michael Wharton, Esq., of Beverley Park, was s. by his son,

SIR MARMADUKE LANGDALE, of Holme, in Spaldingmore, Yorkshire. This gentleman received the honour of knighthood from King CHARLES I., at Whitehall, in 1627, "and was esteemed," says Banks, "a serious and wise man, of most scholarlike accomplishments, and of good husbandry." During the civil wars, Sir Marmaduke became one of the most distinguished amongst the cavalier generals. At the head of a corps raised by himself, consisting of three companies of foot, and a troop of seventy horse, he encountered and defeated the Scots at Corbridge, in Northumberland; and next, being commander-in-chief of the troops sent by the king into Lincolnshire, he there encountered the rebels under Colonel Rosseter. Thence marching against the Lord Fairfax, and putting that officer to rout, he relieved Pontefract Castle, then beleaguered by a numerous body of the northern insurgents. He subsequently besieged and reduced Berwick-upon-Tweed, and the strong castle of Carlisle. But afterwards, involved in the defeat of the Duke of Hamilton and the Scotch army at Preston, Sir Marmaduke was made prisoner. He was fortunate enough, however, to effect his escape, and retiring abroad, became one of the attendants of King CHARLES II., in his exile, by whom he was elevated to the peerage, on 4 February, 1658, as BARON LANGDALE, of Holme, in Spaldingmore, co. York. His lordship is thus mentioned by Lloyd: "He was a very lean and much mortified man, so that the enemy called him ghost (and deservedly, they were so haunted by him); and carried that gravity in his converse, that integrity and generosity in his dealings, that strictness in his devotion, that experience, moderation, and wariness in his counsel, and that weight in his discourse, as very much endeared strangers to his royal master's cause, and to his own person, in all the countries he travelled, as he did in many; and to all the armies he engaged in, as he did in most then afoot in Europe, till he was restored with his Majesty in 1660; when, after appearing in parliament as Baron Langdale, of Holme, he returned to his considerable estates in Yorkshire; having lost £160,000 in his Majesty's service, without any other recompense, than the conscience of having suffered in a good cause, acquitted himself bravely, and played the man." His lordship m. Lenox, dau. of Sir John Rodes, of Bariborough, in Derbyshire, by whom he had surviving issue,

MARMADUKE, his successor.

Philip.

Lenox, m. to Cuthbert Harrison, Esq., of Alaster Selby, co. York.

Peter, } both d. s. p.

Jane, m. to Michael Anne, Esq., of Frickley, Yorkshire.

Elizabeth, m. to Sir Hugh Smithson, 3rd Bart., and was grandmother of SIR HUGH SMITHSON, 1st EARL OF NORTHUMBERLAND, of that family. (Refer to BURKE's Extant Peerage.)
 Bridget, d. unm.

This nobleman was governor of Hull in the reign of JAMES II., where, upon the landing of the Prince of Orange, he was surprised and made prisoner by Col. Copeley. His lordship d. in 1703, and was s. by his eldest son,

MARMADUKE LANGDALE, 3rd baron, who m. Frances, dau. of Richard Draycott, Esq., of Painesley, co. York, and had issue,

MARMADUKE, his successor.

Elizabeth, m. to Peter Middleton, Esq., of Stockeld, in Yorkshire.

Frances, m. to Nicholas Blundell, Esq., of Crosby, co. Lancaster (see Landed Gentry).

His lordship d. 12 December, 1718, and was s. by his son,

MARMADUKE LANGDALE, 4th baron, who m. Elizabeth, youngest dau. of William, Lord Widdrington, and had issue,

I. MARMADUKE, who s. to the title.

I. Alatha, d. unm.

II. Dorothy, m. to Sir Walter Vavasor, Bart., of Hazlewood, co. York, and by him (who d. 13 April, 1766.) had two surviving sons, Walter Vavasor and Thomas Vavasor, successive baronets, with the latter of whom the baronetcy expired, and Sir Thomas bequeathed his estates to his cousin, the Hon. EDWARD-MARMADUKE STOUTON (see below).

III. Elizabeth.

His lordship d. in 1771, and was s. by his only son,

MARMADUKE LANGDALE, 5th baron. This nobleman m.

Constantia, dau. of Sir John Smythe, 3rd bart., of Acton-Barnet, co. Salop, by whom he had,

- I. MARMADUKE, who d. young, and before his father.
2. Constantia, d. young.

Edward-Marmaduke Stourton, who assumed the surname of VAVASOUR, on succeeding to the estates of his cousin as above mentioned, and was created a baronet in 1838. (Refer to BURKE'S Peerage and Baronetage.) CHARLES STOURTON, who assumed in 1815 the surname of LANGDALE, only, in compliance with the testamentary injunction of Philip Langdale, Esq., of Houghton, co. York, a senior branch of the family of Lord Langdale. The Hon. Mr. Langdale m. and had issue.
- IV. APOLO니아, m. in 1790, the 5th Lord Clifford, of Chudleigh, who d. s. p. 15 January, 1795.

Lord Langdale d. in 1777, when his Barony of Langdale, of Holme, became EXTINCT.

*. The Langdales of Garston, co. Surrey (see Landed Gentry), claim descent from the same stock as this noble house.

Arms—Sa., a chevron between three estoiles, arg.

LASCELS—BARON LASCELS.

By Writ of Summons, dated 23 June, 1295.

Lineage.

"Of this ancient family, seated in the county of York, were divers persons," says Dugdale, "of great note many ages since." The chief of whom was

ROGER DE LASCELS, who, in the 22nd EDWARD I., had summons, with several of the peers of the realm, and other eminent persons, to attend the king, and to advise touching the most important affairs of the kingdom. Sir H. Nicolas doubts whether this writ could be deemed a baronial summons to parliament, as he observes, that none of the higher temporal nobility, nor any of the spiritual peers, were included in it, and that no regular day was fixed for the meeting. The same learned authority further remarks, "that the writ in question is the earliest on record, excepting that of the 49th HENRY III. (1255), that the majority of the persons summoned by it were never again summoned save in the 23rd EDWARD I. (A. D. 1295); that several of those persons were not considered as barons by tenure; and that of those who were barons by tenure, and summoned on those occasions, many were never included in any subsequent summons to parliament. The writ has however (continues Nicolas), on one occasion (in the case of the Barony of Roos), admitted as a writ of summons to parliament at the bar of the House of Lords; but the last 'General Report of the Lords' Committee,' appointed to search for matters touching the dignity of a peer of the realm, appears to confirm the objections thus raised." Roger de Lasceles was, however, summoned in the following year, 23 June, 30 September, 2 November, and 26 August, 1296. His lordship d. about the year 1297, leaving four daus., his co-heirs, amongst whom the Barony of Lasceles fell into ADETANCE, and it still continues in that state with the representatives of those ladies.

*. The noble house of Lascelles, Earls of Harewood, claim descent from this ancient baronial family.

LASCELLES—BARON HAREWOOD.

By Letters Patent, dated 9 July, 1790.

Lineage.

EDWIN LASCELLES, Esq., of Harewood, &c., in Yorkshire, was elevated to the peerage 9 July, 1790, as BARON HAREWOOD, of Harewood Castle, co. York. His lordship m. twice, but dying

s. p. 25 January, 1795, the Barony of Harewood became EXTINCT, while his lordship's estates passed to his heir-at-law, EDWARD LASCELLES, Esq., who was in the following year elevated to the peerage by the same title, having been created Baron Harewood, and who was subsequently advanced to the Earldom of Harewood. (See Extant Peerage.)

Arms—Sa., a cross fretty, within a bordure, or.

LATIMER—BARONS LATIMER, OF DANBY.

By Writ of Summons, dated 29 December, 1299.

Lineage.

The surname of LATIMER is remarked from an old inquisition to have been attributed to Wrenoc, the son of Meirric, who held certain lands by the service of being latimer, that is interpreter between the Welsh and English. Of this name, English history has since boasted of several distinguished personages.

WILLIAM LE LATIMER, in the 2nd RICHARD I., 1190–1, paid 100 shillings to have a trial at law with Geffry de Valoins, who had possessed himself of part of his park at Billinges, co. York. To this William s. another,

WILLIAM LE LATIMER, who, in the 38th HENRY III., A.D. 1254, was made sheriff of Yorkshire, and governor of the castle at York, and the next year governor of Pickering Castle. In this sheriffalty he continued for nearly five years, during which period he had a military summons to march into Scotland in aid of (the minor) King ALEXANDER (HENRY III.'s son-in-law), against his rebellious subjects: and he was constituted escheator-general throughout all the cos. of England. In the 47th HENRY III., 1263, he obtained the king's precept to the conservators of the peace, in the cos. of York, Cumberland, Northumberland, Lincoln, and Northampton, to make restitution to him of all his lands which had been seized in the baronial war. He appears, however, in those contests to have sided with the crown, for we find him upon the full re-establishment of the power of the king again filling the office of sheriff of Yorkshire, and again governor of the castles at York and Scarborough. He also received a compensation of 100 marks for the expenses he had incurred. In the 54th HENRY III., 1270, he was, amongst others, signed with the cross, to accompany Prince Edward to the Holy Land. In the 10th EDWARD I., 1282, he was in an expedition against the Welsh, and in several years after he accompanied the famous soldier, John St. John, in an expedition into Gascony. From this period he seems to have been almost uninterruptedly employed in the wars of Scotland and Gascony, and for his services he was summoned to parliament as a Baron, from 29 December, 1299, to 22 January, 1305. He obtained about the same time, a grant from the crown, of the manor of Danby, co. York. His lordship m. Alice, eldest dau. and co-heir of Walter Ledet, alias Braybrook, by whom he acquired a moiety of the barony of Warden, in the county of Northampton, and a moiety of the town and whole hundred of Corby, in the same shire. He had, with other issue,

WILLIAM, his successor.

John (Sir), who m. Joane, dau. and at length heir of Sir William de Gousis, Knt., by whom he acquired, amongst other estates, the manor of Duntish, co. Dorset, where he and his posterity continued to flourish, eminent for several generations, until the attainder of

SIR NICHOLAS LATIMER, in the reign of EDWARD IV., but that attainder was subsequently reversed. Sir Nicholas d. in 1505, leaving an only dau. and heiress, EDITH LATIMER, who m. Sir John Mordaunt, Knt., ancestor of the Earls of Peterborough, by which alliance those (now extinct) noblemen acquired Duntish, and other considerable lordships in Dorsetshire. It is however stated (in a MS. collection of pedigrees by William Parsons, Lancaster, now in the British Museum) that Sir Nicholas left, by another wife, another dau., Elizabeth, who m. William Aprece, Esq., of Washingley, co. Huntingdon, lineal ancestor of Sir Thomas Hussey Aprece, Bart.

Lord Latimer d. in 1305, and was s. by his eldest son,

WILLIAM LE LATIMER, who had himself been summoned to parliament as a Baron, under the designation of "Willielmo de Latimer, junior," from 6 February, 1299, to 22 January, 1305, and enjoyed precedence of his father. After the decease of that nobleman, he was summoned without the addition of "junior," until 20 December, 1327. His lordship was an experienced soldier, and highly distinguished in the Scottish wars of EDWARD I. and EDWARD II. In the latter reign he fought at Bannockburn, and was made prisoner there. He was subsequently involved in the treason of Thomas, Earl of Lancaster, but obtained a pardon; and in three years afterwards (15th EDWARD II., 1321-2), upon the breaking out of the grand insurrection of that prince, Lord Latimer was one of the principal commanders by whom he was defeated at Boroughbridge: for which service his lordship was the next year made governor of the city of York. He m. 1st, Lucie, dau. and heir of Robert de Thweng, and grand-dau. of Marmaduke, Baron Thweng. (See that title.) This lady seems to have proved unfaithful, for during one of his lordship's campaigns in Scotland, she was taken away from his manor house of Brunne, in Yorkshire, and the king's precept to the sheriff of the shire immediately issued, directing a strict search to be instituted after her. His lordship was, however, eventually divorced from her by sentence from the court of Rome, pronounced in the ecclesiastical consistory at York, and her ladyship m. Nicholas de Meinill, and then Robert de Everingham; and after him she m. Bartholomew de Fancourt. Lord Latimer m. 2ndly, Sibill, widow of William de Huntingfield, and dying in 1327, was s. by his son (by his 2nd wife),

WILLIAM LE LATIMER, 3rd baron, b. 1301, summoned to parliament from 6 August, 1327, to 1 April, 1335. This nobleman having, without license, purchased the office of coinage in the Tower of London, and city of Canterbury, from Maud, the widow of John de Botetourt (who held it by inheritance of the king in capite), obtained pardon for that offence in the 3rd EDWARD III., A.D. 1329. His lordship m. Elizabeth, dau. of Lord Botetourt, and d. in 1335, leaving by her (who afterwards m. Robert, Lord D'Ufford) a son,

WILLIAM LATIMER, 4th baron, b. 1330, summoned to parliament from 24 February, 1368, to 20 October, 1379. This nobleman was one of the eminent warriors of the martial times of EDWARD III. At the period he succeeded to the representation of his family he was in minority, and did not make proof of his age until the year 1351, when his homage was respited in consequence of his being then engaged in the king's service at Calais. His lordship continued for several succeeding years in France, performing numerous gallant exploits:—amongst others he is celebrated for a victory achieved over Charles de Blois at the siege of Doveroy; where, with only 1,600 men (English and Britons), he encountered that prince, who had come to the relief of the place at the head of 3,600 men, and defeated and slew him, with nearly 1,000 knights and esquires; taking prisoners, 2 earls, 27 lords, and 1,600 men-at-arms. In the 43rd EDWARD III., 1369, his lordship was again in the wars of France, being at that time steward of the king's household; and in the next year he was constituted lieutenant, captain, and governor of the castle, town, and viscounty of St. Saviour's, in Normandy. Nevertheless, in a few years afterwards, we find him, with the Duke of Lancaster, falling under the displeasure of the Commons, and impeached by the parliament (then 50th EDWARD III.) assembled at Westminster, of peculation, and of squandering, whilst belonging to the king's council, the royal treasure. Being convicted of these offences he was deprived of all his public offices, and sentenced to pay a fine of 20,000 marks, and to be imprisoned during the king's pleasure; but the fine and imprisonment were both remitted by the king. The parliament roll of that year states, that the loss of the town of St. Saviour's, in Normandy, and Becherell, in Brittany, were laid to his charge: but afterwards that the lords and commons, representing to the king, that he had been deprived of his offices, and erased from the privy council by untrue suggestions, he was reinstated in those offices again. Upon the death of King EDWARD III., Lord Latimer was one of those whom King RICHARD II. deputed to acquaint the citizens of London with the event; and for the remainder of his life he enjoyed the full confidence of the new monarch, was of his privy council, a knight of the Garter, &c., &c. In this reign his lordship's last service was at the siege of Nantes, with Thomas of Woodstock, being then constable of the Host. He m. the Lady Elizabeth Fitz-Alan, dau. of Richard, Earl of Arundel, and dying in 1380, left an only dau. and heiress,

ELIZABETH LATIMER, who m. John de Nevill, Lord Nevill, o. Baby, (his lordship's 2nd wife), and had issue,

JOHN NEVILL, of whom presently.

ELIZABETH NEVILLE.

Margaret, d. s. p.

She m. 2ndly, as 3rd wife, Robert, 4th Lord Willoughby de Eresby, and d. in the 7th Richard II., A.D. 1383-4.

The son of the above Elizabeth Latimer,

JOHN NEVILL, was summoned to parliament in right of his mother, as BARON LATIMER, from 25 August, 1404, to 27 November, 1430. His lordship m. Maud, dau. of Thomas, Lord

Clifford, and widow of Richard Plantagenet, Earl of Cambridge, but d. s. p., 1430, when the Barony of Latimer devolved upon his only surviving sister of the whole blood, ELIZABETH NEVILL, who m. SIR THOMAS WILLOUGHBY, Knt., Lady Willoughby's great-grandson (refer to Extant Peerage).

ROBERT, LORD WILLOUGHBY DE BROKE, claimed the BARONY OF LATIMER, in the reign of HENRY VIII. against RICHARD NEVILL, 2nd LORD LATIMER, under a new writ 10th HENRY VI., A.D. 1432. "To end this contest," says Banks, "the Lord Broke was informed by a herald, that Sir George Nevill, grandfather to Richard, had been created Lord Latimer, by a new title, which therefore lineally descended to Richard, by Henry, son and heir of the said George; and that the Lord Broke had made a wrong claim, who should have claimed his style from William Latimer, first created Lord Latimer, of Danby (the head of the barony), temp. EDWARD I. On this, Lord Broke perceiving his error, and having a title of his own, was contented to conclude a match between their children; and Richard suffered a recovery on certain manors and lordships, demanded by the Lord Broke; with which adjustment, both parties were well satisfied." Notwithstanding, however, that his lordship did not prosecute his claim, the original BARONY OF LATIMER must still be considered as vested in his descendant, the present Lord Willoughby de Broke.

LATIMER—BARON LATIMER, OF BRAY-BROOKE.

By Writ of Summons, dated 29 December, 1299.

Lineage.

JOHN LE LATIMER, brother of William, 1st Lord Latimer, of Danby (see preceding article), m. Christian, 2nd dau. and co-heir of Walter Ledit, alias Braybrook, great grandchild and co-heir of Henry de Braybrooke (Lord Latimer, of Danby, m. the other dau.), and dying in the 11th EDWARD I., A.D. 1293, was s. by his son (then twelve years of age),

THOMAS LATIMER, who took up his abode at Braybrooke, co. Northampton (part of his mother's inheritance), and in the 32nd EDWARD I., 1304, obtained license to make a castle of his manor house there. In the 18th EDWARD II., 1324-5, being then called Thomas le Latimer Bochard, he was in the expedition, made at that time, into Scotland; and he was summoned to parliament as a Baron from 29 December, 1299, to 16 June, 1311. He d. in 1334, seized, amongst other manors, of those of Warden and Braybrooke, co. Northampton, and was s. by his son,

WARINE LATIMER, who, being subsequently a banneret, was in the expedition made into France, in the 19th EDWARD III., and d. in four years afterwards, never having been summoned to parliament. He m. Catherine, sister of John, Lord de la Warre, and was s. by his eldest son,

JOHN LATIMER, who d. s. p., and was s. by his brother,

SIR THOMAS LATIMER, who, in the 39th EDWARD III., 1365, was of the retinue of Prince Edward in Gascony. This Sir Thomas is deemed the same person whom historians mention as a leader in the religious sect so well known, as "Lollards," in the reign of RICHARD II. He d. s. p., and was s. by his brother,

EDWARD LATIMER, who d. s. p. in 1411, then seized of the manor of Warden, and castle of Braybrooke, with divers other estates in Northampton and other shires, which devolved upon his nephew (son of his sister, Elizabeth, by her husband, Sir Thomas Griffin), JOHN GRIFFIN, whose descendant,

EDWARD-GRIFFIN, was created in 1688, BARON GRIFFIN, of Braybrooke Castle, a dignity that expired with his grandson,

EDWARD GRIFFIN, 3rd baron, who d. s. p. in 1742.

ANNE GRIFFIN, his lordship's younger sister, and eventually sole heiress, m. William Whitwell, Esq., of Oundle, co. Northampton, and her son,

JOHN GRIFFIN WHITWELL, Esq., having assumed, by Act of Parliament, 1748-9 (22 GEORGE II.), the surname and arms of GRIFFIN, and established his claim to the barony of HOWARD DE WALDEN, was summoned to parliament in that dignity, 3 October, 1784. He was created 6 September, 1783, BARON OF BRAYBROKE, with special remainder, under which that barony has passed to the present LORD BRAYBROKE. (Refer to Extant Peerage.)

LECHMERE—BARON LECHMERE.

By Letters Patent, dated 4 September, 1721.

Lineage.

This is a younger branch of the ancient Worcestershire family of Lechmere, of Hanley, full details of the pedigree of which will be found in the Extant Peerage and Baronetage, LECHMERE, Baronet; and in the Landed Gentry.

NICHOLAS LECHMERE, Esq., an eminent lawyer, 2nd son of Edmund Lechmere, Esq., of Hanley Castle, by Lucy, his wife, dau. of Sir Anthony Hungerford, of Farley Castle, co. Somerset, and younger brother of Anthony Lechmere, Esq., of Hanley Castle, M.P., whose grandson, Anthony, was created a baronet in 1818, and was grandfather of the present Sir Edmund Anthony Harley Lechmere, Bart., of the Rhyd, co. Worcester, having filled the office of solicitor and attorney-general, was elevated to the peerage by King GEORGE I., in the dignity of BARON LECHMERE, of Evesham, co. Worcester, by letters patent, dated 4 September, 1721. His lordship was likewise chancellor of the duchy of Lancaster. He m. Lady Elizabeth Howard, dau. of Charles, 3rd Earl of Carlisle, but dying without issue in 1727, the barony of Lechmere became EXTINCT.

LEGGE—BARONS OF STAWEL.

By Letters Patent, dated 20 May, 1760.

Lineage.

For the line of the STAWELS, refer to STAWEL, BARONS STAWEL, of Somerton.

EDWARD STAWEL, 4th Lord STAWEL, of Somerton, left at his decease, in 1755, when his peerage became EXTINCT, an only dau. and heiress.

THE HON. MARY LEGGE, then the wife of the Right Hon. HENRY-BILSON LEGGE, b. 29 May, 1708, (whom she had m. 3 September, 1750,) 4th son of William, 1st Earl of Dartmouth. (See Extant Peerage.) Mr. Legge, who was one of the most prominent statesmen of his time, sat in the eighth parliament of Great Britain for one of the Cornish boroughs, at which period he was a commissioner of the navy, and soon afterwards joint secretary to the Treasury. He subsequently represented the county of Hants, was appointed a lord of the Admiralty in 1746, and the next year a lord of the Treasury. In 1748 he was accredited envoy extraordinary to the court of Berlin, and upon his return, in 1749, was constituted treasurer of the navy. In 1754 he was appointed chancellor of the Exchequer, and sworn of the privy council, and was, subsequently, twice removed from, and twice reappointed to the same important office, from which, however, he was finally dismissed, or, to use his own expression, turned out, upon the change of administration in 1762. He had previously obtained, by letters patent, dated 20 May, 1760, the dignity of BARONESS STAWEL, of Somerton, co. Somerset, for his wife, with remainder to the heirs male of her body by himself, and dying 21 August, 1764, left an only son, HENRY-STAWEL, 2nd Lord Stawel.

The Baroness became, in 1768, the 2nd wife of the Right Hon. Wills Hill, Earl of Hillsborough, afterwards Marquess of Downshire, but had, by him, no issue. Her ladyship d. in 1780, when the Barony of Stawel devolved upon her only child,

HENRY-STAWEL LEGGE, as Baron Stawel. This nobleman m. in 1779, the Hon. Mary Curzon, youngest dau. of Asheton, 1st Viscount Curzon (see Extant Peerage: Howe), by whom (who d. in 1804) he left an only dau. and heiress,

MARY, who m. 11 August, 1803, John, 2nd Baron Sherborne, and d. 21 October, 1864, leaving issue. (See Extant Peerage.)

Lord Stawel d. in 1820, when this Barony of Stawel became EXTINCT.

Arms—Gu., a cross of lozenges, arg., for STAWEL; a buck's head, cabossed, arg., for LEGGE.

LEIGH—BARON LEIGH OF STONELEIGH.

By Letters Patent, dated 1 July, 1643.

Lineage.

This is a junior branch of the family of which the present Lord Leigh, of Stoneleigh, of the later creation, is the representative, and full details of the earlier pedigree of both lines will be found in BURKE's Extant Peerage. The history of many other branches of the family are given in the Landed Gentry.

SIR THOMAS LEIGH, of Stoneleigh, in the co. of Warwick (2nd son of Sir Thomas Leigh, lord mayor of London,) was knighted by Queen ELIZABETH, and created a baronet, upon the institution of that order, 29 June, 1611. Sir Thomas m. Catherine, 4th dau. of Sir John Spencer, Knt., of Wormleighton, co. Warwick, and had issue,

JOHN (Sir), m. 1st, Ursula, dau. of Sir Christopher Hodgesdon, Knt., lord of the manor of Leighton, in Bedfordshire, by whom he had a son,

THOMAS, successor to his grandfather.

Sir John m. 2ndly, Anne, eldest dau. of Sir Anthony Cope, of Hanwell, in Oxfordshire, who was created a baronet, but by her had no issue. He d. before his father.

Thomas (Sir), } both d. without issue.
Ferdinando, }

Alice, m. to Sir Robert Dudley, Knt., and was created Duchess of Dudley for life. (See that name.)

Sir Thomas d. in February, 1625, and was s. by his grandson,

SIR THOMAS LEIGH, 2nd baronet, a staunch cavalier, and M.P. for the co. Warwick, temp. CHARLES I., who, for his zeal in the royal cause, was elevated to the peerage by letters patent, dated at Oxford, 1 July, 1643, as BARON LEIGH, of Stoneleigh, co. Warwick. He had pleased the king particularly in one matter, which was this: before the king set up his standard at Nottingham his Majesty marched to Coventry, but finding the gates shut against him, and that no summons could prevail with the mayor and magistrates to open them, he went the same night to Stoneleigh, the house of Sir Thomas Leigh, where, as Clarendon observes, his Majesty met with a warm and loyal welcome, and right plentiful and hospitable entertainment from his devoted subject, Sir Thomas. After having become Lord Leigh, he persevered in his ardent attachment to royalty, and at one time paid no less than £4,895, as a compensation for his estate. He had the gratification, however, of seeing the monarchy restored. His lordship m. Mary, one of the daus. and co-heirs of Sir Thomas Egerton, eldest son of Sir Thomas Egerton, 1st Lord Ellesmere, lord chancellor of England, by whom he had, with other issue,

I. THOMAS (Sir), who m. 1st, Anne, dau. and sole heir of Richard Bingham, Esq., of Lambeth, in Surrey, by whom he had an only dau. Anne, who d. young, Sir Thomas m. 2ndly, Jane, dau. of Patrick Fitz-Maurice, Lord Kerry, in Ireland, and dying before his father, left

THOMAS, who s. his grandfather.

HONORA, m. 1st, to Sir W. Egerton, and 2ndly, to Hugh Lord Willoughby, of Parham.

MARY, m. to Arden Bagot, Esq., of Pipe Hall, co. Warwick.
JANE, m. to William, 4th Viscount Tracey.

II. Charles, of Leighton, who m. twice, but surviving his children, left his estates to his grand nephew, the Hon. Charles Leigh.

I. Elizabeth, m. to John, 3rd Viscount Tracey, and d. in 1683, leaving issue. (See Extant Peerage: SUDLEY.)

II. Vere, m. to Sir Justinian Isham, of Lamport, Notts, 2nd baronet.

III. Ursula, m. to Sir William Bromley, K.B., of Bagington, co. Warwick.

Lord Leigh, d. 22 February, 1671, and was s. by his grandson,

THOMAS LEIGH, 2nd baron. This nobleman m. 1st, Elizabeth, dau. and heir of Richard Brown, Esq., of Shingleton, but had no issue. He m. 2ndly, Eleanor, eldest dau. of Edward, Lord Rockingham, by whom he had surviving issue,

EDWARD, his successor.

Charles, who s. to the estates of his uncle, the Hon. Charles Leigh, of Leighton, and m. Lady Barbara Lumley, dau. of the Earl of Scarborough, but d. s. p. in 1749.

Anne, d. unm. in 1734.

Eleanor, m. to Thomas Verney, Esq., and d. in 1756.

His lordship d. in 1710, and was s. by his elder son,

EDWARD LEIGH, 3rd baron, who m. Mary, only dau. and heiress of Thomas Holbech, Esq., of Fillongley, co. of Warwick, by Elizabeth his wife, heiress of Bernard Paulet, Esq., and had issue,

Edward, who d. v. p. anno 1737.

THOMAS, his successor.

Mary.

Eleanor, } d. unm.
Anne, }

His lordship d. 9 March, 1737-8, and was s. by his only surviving son.

THOMAS LEIGH, 4th baron. This nobleman m. 1st, Maria-Rebecca, dau. of the Hon. John Craven, and sister of William, 5th Lord Craven, by whom he had surviving issue,

EDWARD, his successor.

Mary, d. unm.

His lordship m. 2ndly, Catherine, dau. of Rowland Berkeley, Esq., of Cotherridge, co. Worcester, and had a dau. Anne, who m. Andrew Hacket, Esq. Lord Leigh d. 30 November, 1749, and was s. by his son, EDWARD LEIGH, 5th baron. This nobleman d. unm. 26 March, 1786, when the estates devolved on his sister, the Hon. MARY LEIGH, at whose decease s. p., 2 July, 1806, the property passed to the Adlestrop branch of the family. The Barony of Leigh, of Stoneleigh, EXPIRED at the death of the last-mentioned baron. It was, however, revived by a new creation, in 1839: see Extant Peerage.

LEIGH—BARON DUNSMORE AND EARL OF CHICHESTER.

Barony, by Letters Patent, dated 31 July, 1628.
Earldom, by Letters Patent, dated 3 June, 1644.

Lineage.

This is a junior branch from the stock of the present noble family of Leigh, of Stoneleigh.

SIR WILLIAM LEIGH, Knt., of Newnham-Regis, in Warwickshire (3rd son of Sir Thomas Leigh, lord mayor of London), m. Frances, dau. of Sir James Harington, of Exton, co. Rutland, and was s. by his son,

SIR FRANCIS LEIGH, K. B., who m. the Hon. Mary Egerton, dau. of Thomas Egerton, lord chancellor of England, created Lord Ellesmere, and by her left a son and heir,

(SIR) FRANCIS LEIGH, of Newnham, who was created a baronet, 24 December, 1618, and was ten years later elevated to the peerage as BARON DUNSMORE, of Dunsmore, co. Warwick, by letters patent, dated 31 July, 1628. His lordship m. 1st, Susan, dau. and heir of Richard Northan, Esq., but by her had no issue. LEIGH—DUCHESS DUDLEY.

By Letters Patent (for life only), dated 23 May, 1644.

(See DUDLEY, DUCHESS DUDLEY.)

LEEKE—BARONS DEINCOURT, AND EARLS OF SCARSDALE.

Barony, by Letters Patent, dated 26 October, 1624.
Earldom, by Letters Patent, dated 11 November, 1646.

Lineage.

Upon the institution of the order of baronet,

SIR FRANCIS LEEKE, Knt., of Sutton, co. Derby, being a person of very ancient family in those parts, and of ample fortune, was advanced to that dignity by patent, dated 22 May, 1611, and elevated to the peerage 26 October, 1624, as BARON DEINCOURT, of Sutton, co. Derby. This manor of Sutton "was acquired," says Banks, "by the marriage of Richard de Grey (son of William de Grey, of Landford, Notts, and Sandiacre, in Derbyshire, a younger son of Henry de Grey, of Thurrock), with Lucy, dau. and heir of Robert de Hareston, Lord of Sutton, in the Dale; which, with divers other lordships, by issue male failing, came by a female branch to the Hilarys, who took the name of Grey; by a female heir of which line, m. to Sir John Leke, in the reign of HENRY IV., the same came to this family." Lord Deincourt, taking an active part during the civil war in the cause of King CHARLES I., under whose banner two of his sons laid down their lives, was created by that monarch, by letters patent, dated 11 November, 1645, EARL OF SCARSDALE. He m. Anne, dau. of Sir Edward Carey, Knt., of Berkhamstead, co. Hertford, and sister of Henry, Viscount Falkland, by whom he had issue, viz.,

Michael Tennyson, Esq., of Preston, and was grandmother of the Right Hon Charles Tennyson, M.P., of Bayona Manor, co. Lincoln, who superadded the name and arms of D'EYNCOURT to those of Tennyson, by royal license, dated 27 July, 1836 (see BURKE'S Landed Gentry).

- ii. Catherine, m. Cuthbert Morley, Esq.
- iii. Elizabeth, } d. unm.
- iv. Muriel, } d. unm.
- v. Frances, m. Viscount Gormanston, and d. s. p.
- vi. Penelope, m. Charles, Lord Lucas, and was ancestress of LORD METHVEN.

His lordship became so much mortified, it is said, by the murder of King CHARLES I., that he clothed himself in sackcloth, and causing his grave to be dug some years before his death, laid himself therein every Friday, exercising himself frequently in divine meditation and prayer. He d. in 1655, and was s. by his eldest surviving son, NICHOLAS LEEKE, as 2nd Earl of Scarsdale, who m. Lady Frances Rich, dau. of Robert, Earl of Warwick (see that name), and had issue,

LENNARD—EARL OF SUSSEX.

By Letters Patent, dated 5 October, 1674.

Lineage.

THOMAS LENNARD, 15th Baron Dacre (see Extant Peerage), was created EARL OF SUSSEX, 5 October, 1674. His lordship m. Lady Anne Palmer, dau. of Barbara, Duchess of Cleveland, prior to her formal separation from her husband, Roger Palmer, Earl of Castlemain, which ANNE was acknowledged by King CHARLES II. as his natural dau., and his Majesty assigned her the royal arms, with the baton sinister. By this lady the Earl of Sussex had two sons, who both d. in infancy, and two daus., viz.,

- i. BARBARA, who m. Lieutenant-General Charles Skelton, of the French service (eldest son of Bevil Skelton, son and heir of Sir John Skelton, lieutenant-governor of Plymouth, which Bevil was envoy extraordinary to the States General, temp. JAMES II., and followed the fortunes of his fallen master into France). Lady Barbara Skelton d. s. p. in 1741.
- ii. ANNE, who eventually became BARONESS DACRE, m. 1st, her cousin, Richard Barret Lennard, grandson of Richard Barret, 2nd son of Richard, 13th Baron Dacre, and by him had an only son,

THOMAS BARRET-LENNARD, who s. as 17th Lord Dacre.

Lady Anne Lennard m. 2ndly, Henry, 8th Lord Teynham, by whom she had, with other children,

CHARLES ROPER, whose son,

TREVOR-CHARLES ROPER, s. as 18th Baron Dacre, but dying s. p. in 1794, was s. by his sister, GERTRUDE, as Baroness Dacre. From her descends the present Baron Dacre. (See Extant Peerage.)

Her ladyship m. 3rdly, the Hon. Robert Moore, 6th son of Henry, 3rd Earl of Drogheda, by whom she had one son, Henry.

The Earl of Sussex, who was one of the lords of the bed-chamber, entering deeply into the dissipation of the court, considerably impaired his estate; a great part of which he was obliged at different times to dispose of, particularly the fine seat at Hurstmonceaux, in Sussex. He d. in 1715, when as he left no male issue, the Earldom of Sussex became extinct, and the Barony of Dacre fell into ABEYANCE between his dau., but the elder, Lady Barbara Skelton, dying s. p. in 1741, the younger, Lady Anne Lennard, became then sole heiress, and BARONESS DACRE.

LESLIE—BARON LINDORES.

By Charter, dated 31 March, 1600.

Lineage.

THE HON. SIR PATRICK LESLIE, of Pitcairly, commendator of Lindores, 2nd son of Andrew, 4th Earl of Rothes (refer to Extant Peerage), was in high favour with King JAMES VI., who conferred on him the honour of knighthood, and appointed him one of his gentlemen of the bedchamber. He m. Lady Jean Stewart, 2nd dau. of Robert, Earl of Orkney, and by her (who m. 2ndly, Robert, Lord Melville, of Monymail) left at his decease, with other issue,

- I. PATRICK, 1st Lord Lindore, his heir.
- II. JAMES, successor to his brother, as 2nd lord.
- III. DAVID, created LORD NEWARK. (See that title.)
- IV. Robert, m. and had issue, but his male line is extinct.
- V. Ludovick, who served under GUSTAVUS ADOLPHUS, and was governor of Berwick, and d. s. p.
- I. Helen, m. (contract dated 30 April, 1622) to John, 2nd Lord Maderty.
- II. Elizabeth, m. to Sir James Sinclair, of Mey.
- III. Jean, m. George Leslie, of Leslie.
- IV. Janet, m. Sir John Cunningham, of Broomhill.
- V. Mary, m. to Sir David Barclay, of Cullairnie.

The eldest son,

PATRICK LESLIE, was created, by charter, dated 31 March, 1600, BARON LINDORES, which charter was ratified to him and his heirs male and assignees whatsoever, by act of parliament, 1606. He d. s. p. in August, 1649, and was s. by his brother,

JAMES LESLIE, 2nd Lord Lindores, who m. 1st, Mary, 3rd dau. of Patrick, 7th Lord Grey, by whom he had a son,

JOHN, his heir.

His lordship m. 2ndly, Miss Cleburn, of Yorkshire, by whom he had a dau., Jean, m. 1st, to John Stewart, of Innernytie; and 2ndly, to John Bruce, of Blairhall. Lord Lindores d. before 20 July, 1667, and was s. by his son,

JOHN LESLIE, 3rd Lord Lindores, who m. 1st, Lady Marion Ogilvy, eldest dau. of James, 2nd Earl of Airlly, and relict of James, Lord Coupar, by whom he had a son, DAVID, his heir; and 2ndly, 6 September, 1695, Jean Gibson, relict of Sir Hugh Macculloch, of Piltoun, by whom he had no issue. His lordship d. in 1706, and was s. by his son,

DAVID LESLIE, 4th Lord Lindores, who m. Margaret, dau. of Sir Archibald Stewart, of Dunearn, and relict of Sir Archibald Stewart, of Burray; but d. s. p. in July, 1719, when the title devolved on his kinsman,

ALEXANDER LESLIE, of Quarter, as 5th Lord Lindores. His lordship was son of John Leslie, of Quarter, son of Major Andrew Leslie, who was 2nd son of the Hon. Sir John Leslie, of Newton, a lord of session, son of Andrew, 4th Earl of Rothes, and uncle of the 1st Lord Lindores. He entered the army early in life, and attained the rank of major-general. He m. Jean, dau. of Colin Campbell, Esq.; and dying in 1765, was s. by his son,

FRANCIS-JOHN LESLIE, 6th Lord Lindores, who d. s. p. 30 June, 1775.

The title was thereupon assumed by (the descendant of James Leslie, of Lumquhat, 3rd son of the Hon. Sir John Leslie, of Newton),

JOHN LESLIE, of Lumquhat, who voted as Lord Lindores, at several elections without challenge; but in 1790 was objected to, and the House of Lords, in 1793, resolved that "the votes given by the Lord Lindores at the said election were not good."

LESLIE—LORD NEWARK.

By Letters Patent, dated 31 August, 1661.

Lineage.

DAVID LESLIE (5th son of Patrick, commendator of Lindores, refer to preceding article), went into the service of GUSTAVUS ADOLPHUS, King of Sweden, and having eminently distinguished himself in Germany, rose to the rank of colonel of horse. Returning home when the civil war broke out in Scotland, he was appointed major-general to the army under the command of the Earl of Leven, which marched into England in 1644, and greatly contributed to the defeat of the royalists at Marston Moor, in July of that year, the cavalry under his command breaking and dispersing the right wing of the enemy. He routed Musgrave and Fletcher in Cumberland, was recalled into Scotland to oppose Montrose in 1645, and defeated that gallant chieftain at Philiphaugh, 13 September in that year. For this acceptable service the parliament voted him 50,000 marks out of the fine imposed on the Marquess of Douglas, 18 March, 1646. In 1647 he completely suppressed the civil war in Scotland, was declared lieutenant-general of the forces, and had a pension of £1000 a month settled on him over and above his pay as colonel of the Perthshire horse. In 1649 he refused to serve in the engagement for the rescue of King CHARLES I., of which he was appointed general of horse, and threw up the commission. In 1650 he again advanced against Montrose, whom he made prisoner. In the same year, when Cromwell invaded Scotland, Leslie had the chief conduct of the Scottish army, and his cool and vigilant sagacity baffled the impetuosity of Oliver, and hemmed him up at Dunbar in such a manner that the ruin of the English seemed inevitable. But the operations of the Scottish commander were controlled by a committee of church and state, by whom he was compelled to descend from his commanding situation, and he was attacked and defeated by Cromwell, 3 September, 1650. Leslie, with the dispirited remains of a numerous army, retired to Stirling to secure the passes to the north; but justice was done to his abilities; he was acquitted of misconduct, and restored to the command. He marched with CHARLES II. to Worcester, and after that disastrous battle, was, on his retreat, intercepted in Yorkshire, and committed to the Tower of London, where he remained till 1660. After the Restoration, he was, in consideration of his eminent services and sufferings in the royal cause, gratified with a pension of £500 per annum, and created LORD NEWARK, by patent, dated 31 August, 1661, to him and the heirs male of his body. His lordship m. Jean, dau. of Sir John Yorke, Knt., by whom he had surviving issue,

- I. DAVID, his heir.
- I. Elizabeth, m. to Sir Archibald Kennedy, Bart., of Cullen.
- II. Mary, m. 1st, to Sir Francis Kinloch, of Gilmerton; and 2ndly, to the Hon. Sir Alexander Ogilvy, Bart., of Forglie.
- III. Margaret, m. to the Hon. Colonel James Campbell, 4th son of Archibald, 9th Earl of Argyll.

His lordship d. in 1682, when his only son,

DAVID LESLIE, 2nd Lord Newark, m. 20 May, 1760, Elizabeth, 7th dau. of Sir Thomas Stewart, of Grandtully, and had five daus., namely,

- I. JEAN, of whom presently.
- II. Mary, d. unm.
- III. Elizabeth, d. unm.
- IV. Christian, m. to Thomas Graham, of Balgowan; and d. 1752.
- V. Grizel, m. to Thomas Drummond, of Logiealmond.

Lord Newark d. 15 May, 1694, and with him the title appears to have become extinct.

However, his lordship's eldest dau.,

JEAN LESLIE, it appears, s. her father as BARONESS NEWARK; but unless some other patent were granted save that of the 31 August, 1661, which limited the title to the heirs male of the body of the grantee, she was unentitled to the dignity.

Her ladyship m. Sir Alexander Anstruther, Knt., and had several children; of whom the last surviving son, Alexander, unsuccessfully claimed the Barony of Newark in 1793.

- VIII. Phoebe, m. to — Biggs, Esq., of Hurst, co. Berks.

His lordship m. 2ndly, Mary, widow of Sir William Bower, Knt.; and 3rdly, Jane, dau. of John, Lord Butler, of Bramfield, but had no issue by either of these ladies.

The Earl of Marlborough, who was esteemed a person of talents and integrity, and who left behind him several learned works, both in law and history, d. 14 March, 1628, and was s. by his eldest son,

HENRY LEY, 2nd Earl of Marlborough, who had previously been summoned to parliament in his father's barony of Ley. He m. Mary, dau. of Sir Arthur Capel, of Hadham, in Hertfordshire, by whom he had a son JAMES, his successor, and a dau. Elizabeth, who d. unm. His lordship was s. at his decease, 1 April, 1638, by his son,

JAMES LEY, 3rd Earl of Marlborough. This nobleman, who was an eminent mathematician and navigator, was appointed, being a naval officer, lord admiral of all his Majesty's ships at Dartmouth, and parts adjacent. In 1662, he was employed in the American plantations. But in 1665, commanding "that huge ship called the Old James, in that great fight at sea, with the Dutch off Lowestoffe, upon the 8th June, was there slain by a cannon bullet." His lordship d. s. p., when his honours reverted to his uncle, WILLIAM LEY, who thereupon became 4th earl. This nobleman m. Miss Hewet, dau. of Sir William Hewet, Knt., but d. without issue, in 1679, when the Barony of Ley, and Earldom of Marlborough, became EXTINCT.

Arms—Arg., a chevron between three seals, heads couped, sa.

*. The Dukedom of Marlborough, conferred in 1702, upon the great warrior, John Churchill, was in no way connected with this earldom.

LEYBURN—BARON LEYBURN.

By Writ of Summons, dated 6 February, 1299.

Lineage.

In the 10th RICHARD I., A.D. 1198-9, ROBERT or ROGER DE LEYBURN being dead, Stephen de Turnham paid 300 marks to the king, for the wardship and marriage of his son and heir,

SIR ROGER DE LEYBURN. This feudal lord espousing the cause of the barons, at the commencement of the contest, in the reign of King JOHN, was made prisoner, with several of his associates, at Rochester Castle, and committed to the custody of John Mareschall. In the time of HENRY III., we find him first mentioned, in the 35th year of that king's reign (1251-2) as slaying, presumed accidentally, but shrewdly suspected, designedly and through revenge, Sir Ernald de Mountney, in a tournament, held at Walden, in Essex. The next year, after this unhappy affair, he attended the king in an expedition into Gascony. In the 44th of the same reign, he was constituted constable of the castle at Bristol, but before two years elapsed, again siding with the barons, he was one of those prohibited by royal precept, to meet at any tournament, without especial license, and soon after included in the excommunication of the archbishop of Canterbury. Within a very short period, however, he forsook the baronial banner (drawn off it was said by promised rewards;) and was made warden of the Cinque Ports. He was subsequently one of the most zealous commanders in the royal army—at the taking of the town and castle of Northampton—in defending Rochester, when assaulted by the insurrectionary lords, where he was severely wounded, and at the battle of Lewes. For these services, after the king's restoration to power, by the victory of Evesham, he was made warden of all the forests beyond the Trent, sheriff of Cumberland and Kent, and warden of the Cinque Ports. He obtained likewise a grant of the wardship of Idonea, younger of the two daus. and co-heirs of Robert de Vipont, a great baron in the north, and in the 50th HENRY III., joining with Robert de Clifford, the guardian of Isabel, the elder co-heir, he procured the king's pardon for those ladies, for the rebellious proceedings of their father, in the time of the grand insurrection of Montfort, Earl of Leicester, and his adherents. He was afterwards re-appointed sheriff of Cumberland and Kent, and governor of the castle of Carlisle. This great feudal lord m. 1st, Idonea, dau. of Sir Robert de Vipont, Lord of Westmoreland (Dugdale calls her "Eleanor de Turnham"); and 2ndly, Eleanore widow of Roger de Quinzel, Earl of Winchester (see QUINCY). The baron d. in the 56th HENRY III., and was s. by his son,

WILLIAM DE LEYBURN, of Leyburn, who, in the 10th EDWARD I., 1281-2, was in the expedition then made into Wales. In the 22nd of the same reign, he was made constable of the castle of Pevensey; and about this period, the king having concluded a league with RODULPH, King of the Romans, and sending in conformity with its provisions, an army into Gascony, this William de Leyburn was appointed admiral of the fleet, lying at Portsmouth, upon which one-third of the expedition was to embark. In three years afterwards he attended the king into Flanders; and he was summoned to parliament as a Baron, 6 February, 1299. His lordship was subsequently engaged in the Scottish wars. He d. in 1309, leaving his grand-dau. JULIANA (dau. of his son, Thomas de Leyburn, by Alice de Tony, his wife,) his heir. This lady, b. in 1303, m. 1st, John de Hastings, Lord Bergavenny, father of Laurence, 1st Earl of Pembroke of that family; 2ndly, Sir Thomas le Blount; and 3rdly, Sir William de Clinton, Earl of Huntingdon, but d. s. p. in 1309. Her two uncles Sir Simon de Leyburn and Sir Henry de Leyburn were both knighted at Carlaverock, and her aunt, Idonea de Leyburn, m. Geoffrey de Saye.

Arms—Az., six lionsels rampant, arg.

LEYBURN—BARON LEYBURN.

By Writ of Summons, dated 21 June, 1337.

Lineage.

SIR JOHN DE LEYBURN, of the co. Salop, having been involved in the insurrection of Thomas, Earl of Lancaster, in the 16th EDWARD II., A.D. 1321-2, had all his lands in the co. Northumberland seized by the crown; but paying a fine in two years afterwards, he had full restitution of those estates. The next year he accompanied John de Felton in the expedition then made into Gascony; and in the 4th EDWARD III., 1330-1, upon the death of John le Strange, of Cheswardyne, co. Salop, he was found to be his next heir; that is, son of Lucia, sister of the said John. In three years afterwards, he had summons to attend the king in his Scottish wars; but being prevented by some unforeseen circumstances, he obtained pardon for his absence, upon his humble petition setting forth the cause in the 9th EDWARD III. The next year he was, however, in those wars. In the 19th of the same reign, being then a banneret, and residing in Shropshire, he had a military summons to attend the king into France, and the next year distinguished himself in the celebrated battle of Durham, wherein DAVID, King of Scotland, was vanquished and made prisoner. Sir John was summoned to parliament as a Baron, from 21 June, 1337, to 14 February, 1348, in the latter of which years he d. s. p., when this Barony of Leyburn became EXTINCT.

LIGONIER—BARON AND EARL LIGONIER, AND VISCOUNT LIGONIER.

Irish Viscounty, by Letters Patent, dated 21 December, 1757; and 20 May, 1762.

English Barony, by Letters Patent, dated 27 April, 1763.

English Earldom, by Letters Patent, dated 10 September, 1766.

Lineage.

JOHN LIGONIER, of an ancient French family, having distinguished himself under the Duke of Marlborough, in Flanders, and attained high reputation, temp. GEORGE II., in Germany, was made a knight banneret, under the royal standard, at the battle of Dettingen, in 1742. Sir John, being then a Field Marshal, was raised to the peerage of Ireland, by letters patent, dated 21 December, 1757, as VISCOUNT LIGONIER, of Enniskillen, co. Fermanagh; and in 1762, he obtained a new patent, conferring upon his lordship the VISCOUNTY OF LIGONIER, of Clonmell, in the same kingdom, with remainder to his nephew, Edward Ligonier, Esq. In the next year he was made a peer of Great Britain, as BARON LIGONIER, of Ripley, co. Surrey, and three years later he was created EARL OF LIGONIER, by patent, dated 10 September, 1766. His lordship, after filling the first military offices, and establishing the highest military reputation, died in 1770 at the advanced age of ninety-one, and was buried in Westminster Abbey. As he left no issue, the British Barony and Earldom of Ligonier became EXTINCT, while the Irish Viscounty of Ligonier, of Clonmell, passed according to the patent, to (the son of his brother, Col. Ligonier) his nephew, EDWARD LIGONIER, Esq., who became 2nd Viscount Ligonier. He m. 1st, Penelope, eldest dau. of George Pitt, created Lord Rivers. She was divorced from him, and re-m. in 1784, Captain Smith. Lord Ligonier m. 2ndly, Mary, dau. of Robert, Earl of Northampton, but d. s. p. in 1782, when the Irish Viscounty of Ligonier of Clonmell likewise EXPIRED.

LINDSAY—DUKE OF MONTROSE.

Dukedom, by Charter, dated 1488; and, for life by Charter, dated, 19 September, 1489.

Lineage.

The illustrious house of Lindsay has found a historian not less learned than eloquent in the heir of its ancient honours. Lord Lindsay has, in his Lives of the Lindsays, contributed an important addition to the historical literature of Scotland, in which his ancestors have during seven centuries acted such a distinguished part.

Sir William Dugdale mentions several considerable families of Lindsay in England in the 11th and 12th centuries; observing that the surname was first assumed by the proprietors of the lands and manor of Lindsay, co. Essex. It is the opinion of Scotch antiquaries, that one of these Lindsays, coming with King MALCOLM CANMORE into Scotland, and settling there, obtained the lands of Wachopdale, and other possessions from the crown, and founded the family of Lindsay beyond the Tweed. Certain it is that the Lindsays began to be of note in Scotland temp. ALEXANDER I. (the son of MALCOLM), who s. to the throne in 1107.

Descended from a great Norman family, which traced its origin to an uncle of Rollo, the Norwegian conqueror of Neustria, and founder of the Dukedom of Normandy, was

WILLIAM DE LINDSAY, Lord of Erclidown and Crawford. He was one of the MAGNATES SCOTIE, temp. MALCOLM IV., and WILLIAM THE LION. Between 1189 and 1199 he held the office of high justiciary of the Lothians. He m. the Princess Marjory, sister of MALCOLM IV. and WILLIAM THE LION, and dau. of David, Prince of Scotland, son and heir of King DAVID I., by Adele de Warren, who was thus descended from the kings of Scotland, the Saxon kings of England, WILLIAM THE CONQUEROR, and the Capetian kings of France. By the Princess his wife, he had three sons,

- I. David (Sir), of Crawford, whose male line became extinct. His heir-general, Sir Robert de Pinkney, was in 1292, one of the claimants of the Scottish crown, through his ancestress, Princess Marjory.
- II. Walter (Sir), of Lamberton. His great grandson, Sir William Lindsay, m. another lady of royal blood, Ada Balliol, sister of JOHN BALLIOL, King of Scotland, and their dau. and heir, Christina Lindsay, carried the right of representation of the ancient Scottish kings and the Saxon kings of England, through the great French family of De Coucey, into the house of Bourbon, and their heir is H.R.H. the Duke of Bordeaux.
- III. WILLIAM, of whose line we treat.

The 3rd son,

WILLIAM LINDSAY, of Luffness, d. about 1236, and was s. by his son,

SIR DAVID LINDSAY, of Luffness, who m. a dau. of Sir John Crawford, of Crawford. He was high justiciary of Lothian, from 1243 to 1249. His son,

SIR DAVID LINDSAY, of Luffness, was one of the regents of Scotland during the intestine troubles of 1255, high chamberlain in 1256, and he d. whilst accompanying St. Louis on his last crusade in 1268. His son,

SIR ALEXANDER LINDSAY, of Luffness, was one of the MAGNATES SCOTIE, who, at the great council of Brigham, in 1289, consented to the marriage of Margaret of Norway with Edward, Prince of Wales. On the forfeiture of Sir Henry de Pinkney, he obtained the Barony of Crawford. He d. in 1307. His son,

SIR DAVID LINDSAY, of Crawford, in 1325, m. Mary, dau. and co-heir of Sir Alexander de Abernethy. He was one of the MAGNATES SCOTIE, who, in 1320, signed the famous letter to the Pope. He fought at the battle of Halidonhill in 1333, and was keeper of the castle of Edinburgh in 1346. He d. in 1356, leaving three sons,

- I. James (Sir), of Crawford, who, by his wife, Egidia Stewart, sister of ROBERT II. of Scotland, had a son, Sir James, whose line failed.
- II. ALEXANDER (Sir), of whose line we treat.
- III. William, ancestor of the Lords Lindsay, of the Byres, Earls of Lindsay (and Crawford eventually) and Viscounts Garnock. See those titles.

The 2nd son,

SIR ALEXANDER LINDSAY, m. Catherine, dau. and heir of Sir John Stirling, of Glenesk, by whom he had a son,

SIR DAVID LINDSAY, of Glenesk, who became on his cousin's death, 7th feudal Lord of Crawford. He m. the Princess Elizabeth of Scotland, dau. of King ROBERT II. "This Sir David Lindsay acted the principal part in the celebrated tournament at London Bridge, in May, 1390. John, Lord Welles, ambassador from RICHARD II. to Scotland, at a solemn banquet, where the Scots and English were discoursing of deeds of arms, said, 'Let words have no place: if you know not the chivalry and valliant deeds of Englishmen, appoint me a day and place, where you list, and you shall have experience.' Whereupon Sir David Lindsay assenting, Lord Welles selected London Bridge as the place for a trial of skill. Lindsay repaired to London with a gallant train of thirty persons; and on the day appointed, appeared in the lists against Lord Welles. At the sound of trumpet they encountered each other, upon their barbed horses, with square grounden spears. In this adventure, Lindsay sat so strong that, notwithstanding Lord Welles' spear was broken upon his helmet and visage, he stirred not, insomuch that the spectators cried out that, contrary to the laws of arms, he was bound to his saddle. Whereupon he dismounted, got on his horse again without assistance, and in the third course, threw Lord Welles out of his saddle to the ground. Then dismounting, he supported his adversary, and with great humanity, visited him every day, till he recovered the effects of the fall." Sir David was created by his brother-in-law, King ROBERT III., a peer of Scotland, by the title of EARL OF CRAWFORD, 21 April, 1398, being, says Fordun, "valens miles et in omni probitate bellica quamplurimum commendatus." His lordship had issue,

- I. ALEXANDER, his successor.
- II. David, of Newdack.
- III. Gerald.
- IV. Ingelram, bishop of Aberdeen.
- I. Matilda, m. Archibald, 5th Earl of Douglas, Duke of Touraine.
- II. Marjory, m. Sir William, Douglas of Lochleven.
- III. Elizabeth m. Sir Robert Keith, Marischal of Scotland.

The earl d. in 1412, and was s. by his eldest son,

ALEXANDER LINDSAY, 2nd Earl of Crawford; who m. Mariota, dau. and heiress of David Dunbar of Cockburn, and grand-dau. of George, Earl of March, and dying in 1428, left a son,

DAVID LINDSAY, 3rd Earl of Crawford, who m. Marjory, dau. of Alexander Ogilvie, of Auchter House, and had issue,

- I. ALEXANDER, of whose line we treat.
- II. WALTER, of Edzell, ancestor of the EARLS OF BALCARNEIL. (See below, and refer to Extant Peerage.)
- III. William, ancestor of the Lindsays of Evelick.
- IV. John, of Pitcairly, killed at the battle of Brechin.
- V. James, keeper of the privy seal in 1453; who m. a lady of rank in Germany, and acquired with her a considerable estate near Augsburg.

The Earl of Crawford was slain at the battle of Arbroath, 13 January, 1445-6, and s. by his son, ALEXANDER LINDSAY, 4th Earl of Crawford, who entering into a treasonable convention with the Earl of Douglas and other discontented nobles, took up arms against the royal authority, but was defeated at Brechin, by the Earl of Huntly, 18 May, 1452. An act of forfeiture passed against him; but subsequently submitting in the most humble manner to the king's mercy, his lordship was received with some degree of favour. The king rode to visit him at Pinhaven, where he was magnificently entertained; and JAMES is said to have thrown a flagstone from the battlements of the castle down into the ditch, that he might, without injury to the earl or his mansion, fulfil a vow which he had made in his anger, that he would "make the highest stone of that house the lowest." The Earl of Crawford m. Elizabeth Dunbar, of the house of March, and dying in 1454, left (with a dau. Elizabeth, wife of Sir John, Lord Drummond,) two sons, DAVID, 5th earl, and ALEXANDER, 7th earl.

The elder son

DAVID LINDSAY, 5th Earl of Crawford, was constituted, in 1475, admiral of the fleet, appointed master of the household in 1482; great chamberlain of Scotland in 1484; and justiciary of the north in 1487. In the following year, JAMES III., King of Scotland created the Earl of Crawford, DUKE OF MONTROSE, by a patent granted to him and his heirs 18 May, 1488; and it is alleged that in the September after, King JAMES IV., who had dethroned and murdered his father, rescinded the creations of peerages during the last year of the deceased monarch's reign; but an act of grace previously passed, preserved the Duke of Montrose from the damaging effects of this recissory Act, and he was recognized as Duke of Montrose, subsequently to the passing of it. In September, 1489, a deed was granted by King JAMES IV., to the Duke, of which no copy exists, and which is only known by an imperfect abridgement, interpolated in the Register of the Great Seal, which, in so far as it goes, re-echoes and enforces the original patent, repeating the intention of the crown to exalt the title borne by the ancient Earls of Crawford into a Dukedom. In this deed the words "pro toto tempore vite sue" occur, but they are accompanied by words which seem to include the limitation to heirs in the original patent of 1488. The Duke m. 1st, Elizabeth, eldest dau. of James, 1st Lord Hamilton, by whom he had two sons, Alexander, who d. v. p., a p.; and JOHN, who s. as 6th earl. The Duke m. 2ndly, Margaret, dau. of Carmichael, of Meadowflat, by whom he had two daus., Margaret, wife of John Blair, and Elizabeth, m. to David Lyon. The Duke d. in 1495, and was s. by his only surviving son (the subsequent holders of the Crawford honours did not assume the ducal title).

JOHN LINDSAY, as 6th Earl of Crawford, who was slain at Flodden, where he had a chief command, 9 September, 1513. He had m. Mariota, sister of Alexander 2nd Lord Home, but d. s. p., whereupon the title passed to his uncle,

ALEXANDER LINDSAY, 7th Earl of Crawford, who m. Margaret, dau. of Campbell of Ardkinglass; and dying in 1517, left, (with a dau. m. to Sir Archibald Douglas, of Kilsindie) two sons; of whom the elder,

DAVID LINDSAY, 8th Earl of Crawford, m. 1st, Lady Mariana Hay, dau. of William, 3rd Earl of Errol, by whom he had a son,

ALEXANDER, master of Crawford, who was killed in Dundee, towards the end of 1541, leaving by Jean, his 1st wife, dau. of Henry, Lord Sinclair, a son, DAVID, who s. as 10th earl.

His lordship m. 2ndly Isabel, dau. of Lundin, of Lundin, and had by her three sons and a dau., namely,

- John, d. s. p.
- Isabel, m. to John, 5th Lord Borthwick.
- Margaret, m. to James, 3rd Lord Ogilvie, of Airlie.
- Elizabeth, m. to John Erskine, of Dun.

Alexander, Master of Crawford, and his brother, John Lindsay, having seized, fettered, and imprisoned their father, the Earl of Crawford, were disinherited in consequence by his lordship, who assigned by deed, dated 20 December, 1541, with the approbation of the crown, his honours and estates to his cousin, and next male heir after those sons,

DAVID LINDSAY, Esq., of Edzell, the grandson of Walter, the brother of Alexander, 4th Earl of Crawford, (one of the lineal progenitors of Earl Balcarres,) and the said David inherited at the earl's decease, in 1542, (the Master and his brother having previously died, the latter s. p.) but being of a generous disposition, he re-conveyed the titles and estates to David Lindsay, son of the said Master of Crawford, but with the express provision, that failing heirs male of this David's body (which eventually happened) the estate and honours of Crawford should descend to the heirs male of Edzell. He likewise reserved to himself the title for life, with sufficient property to maintain his rank. He d. in 1558, and was s. in accordance with the terms of the charter of 1546, by the said

DAVID LINDSAY, as 10th Earl of Crawford. This nobleman joined the association for Queen MARY in 1568, and adhered with fidelity to her cause. He m. in April, 1546, Margaret, dau. of the Cardinal David Beaton, archbishop of St. Andrew's and had issue,

- I. DAVID, his heir.
- II. HENRY, who s. as 13th earl.
- III. John (Sir), of Ballinscho and Woodhead, whose only son, Col. Henry Lindsay, d. s. p. at Hamburg in 1639.
- IV. ALEXANDER, created LORD SPYNIE. (See that title.)
- I. Helen, m. to Sir David Lindsay, of Edzell.

The earl was s. at his decease by his son,

DAVID LINDSAY, 11th Earl of Crawford, who m. 1st, Lillias, dau. of Lord Drummond; and 2ndly, Lady Grisel Stewart, eldest dau. of John, 4th Earl of Atholl; and dying 22 November, 1607, was s. by his son,

DAVID LINDSAY, 12th Earl of Crawford, who m. Lady Jean Ker, eldest dau. of Mark, Earl of Lothian, and relict of Robert, Master of Boyd, and had an only child, Jean. He d. in 1621, when the title devolved on his uncle,

HENRY LINDSAY, 13th Earl of Crawford, who m. 1st, Beatrix, dau. and heir of George Charteris, of Kinfans, and had two sons,

- JOHN (Sir), of Kinfans, K.B., d. s. p. m. and v. p.
- GEORGE, successor to his father.

Lord Crawford m. 2ndly, Elizabeth, dau. of Sir James Shaw, of Sauchie, and had by her two sons, ALEXANDER, 15th earl, who d. s. p., and LUDOVICK, 16th earl. His lordship d. in 1623, and was s. by his son,

GEORGE LINDSAY, 14th Earl of Crawford, who m. Lady Anne Sinclair, only dau. of George, 5th Earl of Caithness, and had a dau. Margaret, who appears to have d. young. Lord Crawford was s. by his brother,

ALEXANDER LINDSAY, 15th earl, who d. s. p. 1639, and was s. by his brother,

LUDOVICK LINDSAY, 16th Earl of Crawford, who, early in life, entered the Spanish service and attained high military rank. At the outbreak of the civil war in England, his lordship sided with the king's party, and gained considerable distinction as a cavalier commander. He participated with his regiment of horse in the victory of Lansdowne; joined Montrose in the first unsuccessful attempt for King CHARLES; fought at Marston Moor and at Philiphaugh, and finally effected his escape to Spain, where he d. about the year 1648. After the battle of Marston Moor, Lord Crawford was taken prisoner at the siege of Newcastle, and sent to Edinburgh, where he remained in confinement until after Montrose's victory at Kilsyth. His lordship m. Lady Margaret Graham, dau. of William, Earl of Strathern (see that name), and relict of Alexander, Lord Garlies, but had no issue.

At the earl's decease, the male representation of the family devolved on George Lindsay, 3rd Lord Spynie; and upon his demise s. p. in 1672, on John Lindsay, of Edzell, lineally descended from David, 8th earl, and entitled, in terms of the charters of 1546 and 1556, and of the act of parliament of 1567, to the earldom of Crawford, to which he unsuccessfully preferred his claim in the second parliament of JAMES II.

The title was taken up by the Earl of Lindsay, who on sentence of forfeiture having been passed against Ludovick, the 16th earl, in 1644, had obtained a ratification from the parliament of Scotland of his lordship's right and patent as Earl of Crawford; this ratification was confirmed by act of parliament after the Restoration. As to the final devolution of this title on the EARL OF BALCARRES, see further on: "Lindsay, Earl of Lindsay, &c."

In 1653, James, 24th Earl of Crawford, and 7th Earl of Balcarres, the undoubted heir male of the Duke of Montrose claimed the dukedom, which claim being referred to a Committee for Privileges of the House of Lords, was at the time unsuccessful; but the Earl of Crawford and Balcarres has not, it is understood, abandoned his claim to the ducal dignity.

LINDSAY—LORD SPYNIE.

By Charter, dated 17 April, 1589.

Lineage.

SIR ALEXANDER LINDSAY, 4th son of David, 10th Earl of Crawford (for earlier ancestry refer to that title), accompanied King JAMES VI. on his matrimonial expedition to Denmark, 1589. He had a charter granted, 17 April, 1602, erecting the lordship of Spynie, Kinneder, Raffart, and other lands, in the counties of Elgin, Banff, and Inverness, into a temporal lordship, with the dignity of a peer of parliament, by the title of LORD SPYNIE, to him and Dame Jean Lyon, Countess of Angus, his wife, and the longest liver of them, in conjunct fee, and to the heirs lawfully procreated, or to be procreated betwixt them; which failing, to the nearest lawful heirs male of the said Alexander, Lord Spynie, whomsoever, and his assignees heritably.

The Earl of Crawford having assassinated his kinsman, Sir Walter Lindsay, Sir David Lindsay, of Edzell, nephew of Sir Walter, collected an armed force to revenge the murder; the parties met on the street of Edinburgh, in July, 1607, when Lord Spynie interposing between them, was inadvertently slain by Edzell. His lordship's death was much regretted for the many good qualities he possessed, and the hopes that his friends conceived of his raising again the ancient and noble house of Crawford to its former splendour and dignity. He m. Jean, eldest dau. of John, 10th Lord Glamis, relict of Robert, Master of Morton, and of Archibald, 8th Earl of Angus, and by her had issue,

- I. ALEXANDER, 2nd Lord Spynie.
- II. John, who d. young.
- I. Anne, m. to Sir Robert Graham, of Innermay.
- II. Margaret, m. to John Erskine, of Dun.

The elder son,

ALEXANDER LINDSAY, 2nd Lord Spynie, succeeded his father, 1657. He fought in Germany under the banners of GUSTAVUS, and acquired high military reputation. He m. 1st, Johanna Douglas; and 2ndly, Lady Margaret Hay, only dau. of George, 1st Earl of Kinnoul, high chancellor of Scotland; by the latter he had issue,

- I. Alexander, Master of Spynie, who m. Magdalene Carnegie, 2nd dau. of John, 1st Earl of Northesk, but had no issue by her, who took to her 2nd husband, John Lindsay, of Edzell.
- II. GEORGE, 3rd Lord Spynie.
- I. Margaret, m. about 1650, William Fullarton, Esq., of Fullarton, and was great-great-grandmother of Lieut.-Colonel William Fullarton, of Glenquich of whom, hereafter as claimant of this title. (See Landed Gentry, for particulars of the descent.)
- II. Anne, d. unm.

The 2nd son,

GEORGE LINDSAY, 3rd and last Lord Spynie, was served heir male of Alexander, Lord Spynie, his father, and Alexander, Master of Spynie, his brother, 12 June, 1646. He was a steady loyalist, opposed the surrender of King CHARLES I. to the parliament of England, January, 1647, and was colonel of the Stirlingshire and Clackmannan horse in the engagement for the rescue of the king, 1648. After the death of the ill-fated monarch, Lord Spynie ruined his patrimonial estate by raising forces for the service of his son. He accompanied CHARLES II. to the battle of Worcester, was taken prisoner, and sent to the Tower of London, being excepted out of Cromwell's act of grace and pardon, 1654.

On the death of Ludovick, 16th Earl of Crawford, the male representation of that ancient family devolved on Lord Spynie, who was served heir male of David, Earl of Crawford, "illi patris avi," 8 November, 1666. Lord Spynie d. s. p. in 1672.

On the title of Spynie, the lords of session, in their return to the House of Peers, 1740, observed, "that the patent of creation has not been found in the records, nor has any person sat in parliament under that title since 1669, neither has any person claimed a vote in virtue thereof at any election since the Union, but whether the peerage is extinct they cannot say."

This title was unsuccessfully claimed, in 1784, by Lieut.-Col. William Fullarton (above mentioned), under the supposition that the original grant had been made only to the 1st Lord Spynie's issue male. This has been clearly proved to be wrong by Mr. Riddell, the eminent writer on Scotch peerage law. Lieut.-Col. Fullarton's representative bears the name of "Lindsay-Carnegie," and styles himself "of Spynie," and is patron of that parish. (See Landed Gentry.)

LINDSAY—LORDS LINDSAY OF THE BYRES, LORDS PARBROATH, AND EARLS OF LINDSAY.

Lord Lindsay of the Byres, by Letters Patent, dated 1455.

JOHN LINDSAY, 10th Lord Lindsay, of the Byres, b. 1596, was an eminent statesman, and during his long life was at the head of the Presbyterian interest in Scotland, and was one of the most influential and powerful noblemen of his age. He was created by King CHARLES I., 8 May, 1633, Lord Parbroath and Earl of Lindsay. Upon the forfeiture of Ludovick, 16th Earl of Crawford, that nobleman's title and estate were conferred upon the Earl of Lindsay by an act of parliament, 26 July 1644, which he obtained, whereupon he was designated EARL OF CRAWFORD AND LINDSAY. This ratification of right and patent as Earl of Crawford, was confirmed by act of parliament after the Restoration. In 1644, the earl was appointed Lord high treasurer of Scotland. His lordship m. Lady Margaret Hamilton, 2nd dau. of James, 2nd Marquess of Hamilton, and sister of James and William, Dukes of Hamilton, by whom he had issue,

Mary, heir to her brother.

The earl d. in 1781, and was s. by his son,

GEORGE LINDSAY-CRAWFORD, 22nd Earl of Crawford 6th Earl of Lindsay, and 5th Viscount Garnock; b. in 1758; a major-general in the army, and lord-lieutenant of Fifehire; at whose decease, unm. 30 January, 1808, the estates devolved on his lordship's surviving sister, LADY MARY LINDSAY-CRAWFORD, of Kilbirnie, who d. unm. in 1833.

Upon the death of the Earl the titles of Crawford, and Lindsay were assumed by Charles Lindsay, a serjeant in the Perthshire militia. He claimed descent from the Lindsays of Kirkforthar. (Revert to David, younger brother of John, 5th Lord Lindsay of Byres.) Upon his death s. p. in 1809, the male heir of the Kirkforthar branch was Lieutenant-Colonel John Lindsay, of the 33rd regiment, who m. in 1776, Margaret-Maria, 2nd dau. of Charles Halkett Craigie, Esq., of Hall Hill, governor of Namur, and had a son, Patrick, a field officer in the army.

The Earldom of Crawford had, however, devolved de jure upon ALEXANDER LINDSAY, 6th Earl of Balcarres (refer to early part of lineage of the Earls of Crawford), and it was confirmed by the House of Lords in 1848, to his son and successor, JAMES LINDSAY, 7th Earl of Balcarres, the chief of the house of Lindsay. For his intermediate descent and further particulars, refer to Extant Peerage.

The Earldom of Lindsay, the Viscounty of Garnock, the Barony of Lindsay of the Byres, became DORMANT upon the death of the last earl, and have remained so since. The representation, however, of those families devolved upon the death of Lady Mary Lindsay-Crawford, on her cousin, the Earl of Glasgow and Mr. Hamilton Dundas of Duddingstone and Westburn.

Besides these two heirs general, the next-of-kin to Lady Mary and her brother, the 22nd Earl, were

The Right Hon. David Boyle, Lord Justice General of Scotland.

Admiral Sir Charles Napier, K.C.B., Count of Cape St. Vincent.

Gen. Sir Thomas Erskine Napier, K.C.B., and

The Rev. John Hamilton Gray, of Carnlyne.

Lineage.

The Hon. PATRICK LINDSAY (2nd son of John, 10th Lord Lindsay, of the Byres, 17th Earl of Crawford and Earl of Lindsay—refer to those titles), m. in 1664, Margaret, 2nd dau. and heir of Sir John Crawford, of Kilbirnie, in Ayrshire, M.P. for that co. (by his wife, the Hon. Magdalen Carnegie, dau. of David, Lord Carnegie, and co-heir of the Earl of Southesk). The Hon. Patrick Lindsay assumed the additional name of CRAWFORD, on succeeding to Kilbirnie. He and his wife d. together in 1680, having had issue, besides two younger sons, d. unm.,

1. JOHN, their heir, of whom presently.

1. Margaret, m. David Boyle, 1st Earl of Glasgow, and had issue. (Refer to BURKE'S Extant Peerage for full details of this family).

11. Anne, 2nd wife of the Hon. Harry Maule, of Kelly, 3rd son of George, 2nd Earl of Panmure; their only son, John Maule, Baron of the Exchequer, d. unm., 1781.

111. Magdalen, m. to George Dundas, of Duddingstone, and d. in 1717. They had issue, a son John, who d. s. p., 1788, and a dau. Agnes Dundas, heiress of Duddingstone, who m. Gabriel Hamilton of Westburn, and d. 1798, leaving surviving issue, a son, John Hamilton Dundas, of Duddingstone and Westburn; and two daus., Christian, wife of the Hon. Charles Napier, and mother of Admiral Sir Charles Napier, K.C.B., Count Cape St. Vincent, and of General Sir Thomas Erskine Napier, K.C.B., and 2 Mary-Anne, wife of Robert Gray, of Carnlyne, and mother of the present Rev. John Hamilton Gray, of Carnlyne. The son and heir of the heiress of Duddingstone, John Hamilton Dundas, of Duddingstone and Westburn, m. Guzzel Hamilton, of Barnes and Cochno, and was father of GABRIEL HAMILTON DUNDAS, of Duddingstone, and Westburn, who became in 1833, co-heir of the Earls of Crawford and Lindsay, and the Viscounts Garnock. His son and successor is the present representative of the Dundases of Duddingstone, MAJOR JOHN HAMILTON DUNDAS, co-heir of the Earls of Crawford and Lindsay.

The Hon. Patrick Lindsay-Crawford d. in 1680, and was s. by his son,

JOHN LINDSAY-CRAWFORD, of Kilbirnie, M.P., for Ayrshire, who was created by Queen ANNE in 1703, VISCOUNT GARNOCK. He m. Lady Margaret Stewart, only dau. of James, 1st Earl of Bute, and d. in 1709, leaving by her, besides several children, who left no succession, his eldest child and successor,

PATRICK LINDSAY-CRAWFORD, 2nd Viscount Garnock. He m. Margaret, dau. of George Home, Esq., of Kelly, by whom he had a dau., who left no succession, and two sons,

1. JOHN, his heir.

11. GEORGE, successor to his brother.

The viscount d. in 1735, when his eldest son,

JOHN LINDSAY-CRAWFORD, s. as 3rd Viscount Garnock, who dying unm. in 1738, was s. by his brother,

GEORGE LINDSAY-CRAWFORD, 4th Viscount Garnock. Upon the death s. p. of his kinsman, John, 20th Earl of Crawford, and 4th Earl of Lindsay, this nobleman s. to those titles, and we consequently revert to that title (which see.)

L'ISLE—BARONS DE L'ISLE, OF ROUGE-MONT.

By Writ of Summons, dated 19 December, 1311.

Lineage.

Of this surname were several families, springing originally from two, which had derived the designation, one from the Isle of Ely, the other from the Isle of Wight.

ROBERT DE L'ISLE, of Rougemont, co. Bedford, having m. Rohese de Tatshall, widow of Robert de Tatshall, and dau. and co-heir of John de Wuhull, feudal lord of Wuhull (now Wodhull), co. Bedford, had livery of the lands of her inheritance upon paying his relief in the 1st HENRY III., A.D. 1217, at which period he had restitution of his own estates, in the cos. of Lincoln, Kent, York, Norfolk, and Suffolk, which had been seized by the crown in the preceding reign during the baronial contest. After this feudal lord came another,

ROBERT DE L'ISLE, who, in the 48th HENRY III., was constituted governor of the castles of Marlborough and Lutgershull, and the next year taking part with the barons, was made by them governor of Newcastle-upon-Tyne. "From this Robert," says Dugdale, "I must make a large leap to another,"

ROBERT DE L'ISLE, who was summoned to parliament as a Baron, from 19 December, 1311, to 25 February, 1342. This nobleman was in the expedition made in 1339 into Flanders, but he subsequently took holy orders, having, before doing so, settled the manors of Rampton, Cotenham, West Wike, with the advowson of the church of Wimpole, co. Cambridge, upon Alice, dau. of Robert de L'Isle, Elizabeth Peverell, and Richard Bayeaux, for life, with remainder to John, son of Robert de L'Isle, and his heirs. He was also then seized of the manors of Hayford Warin, in Oxfordshire, and Pishiobury, in Hertfordshire. His lordship d. in 1342, and was s. by his son,

JOHN DE L'ISLE, 2nd baron, summoned to parliament, by writ addressed "Johanni de Insula de Rubeo Monte," from 25 November, 1350, to 15 March, 1354. This nobleman, in the 10th EDWARD III., had obtained a grant from his father of the manor of Harwood, co. York, valued at 400 marks per annum, to enable him the better to serve the king in his wars. In three years subsequently he was in the English army, then drawn up to encounter the French at Vironfosse—and we find him soon after engaged in an expedition made into Gascony. In the 16th of the same reign he was one of the commanders at the siege of Nantes. In the 18th he was again in Gascony, and in the 20th he had a pension from the king of £200 per annum, to be paid out of the exchequer, to enable him to sustain his rank of banneret. It is said by some, that in the 20th EDWARD III., A.D. 1346, Sir Thomas Dagworth, Knt., with 80 men at arms, and 100 archers, worsting Charles de Bloys, and the great men of Britany, who had 1,000 horse, the king thereupon made two barons, viz., Alan Zouche, and John L'Isle, as also 50 knights; but others affirm that this was at the battle of Cressy, which happened the same year. John L'Isle was, however, so highly esteemed by King EDWARD III. for his courage and martial prowess, that he was made one of the knights companions of the Garter, at the institution of that order. He subsequently obtained from the crown a grant for life of the sheriffalty of the counties of Cambridge and Huntingdon, with the governorship of the castle of Cambridge, and the year before he d. (29th EDWARD III.), he was again with Prince Edward in the wars of France. His lordship d. 14 October, 1356, leaving issue, ROBERT, his heir; John, d. s. p.; William, d. s. p.; and Elizabeth, m. to William, Lord Aldeburgh. The eldest son, ROBERT L'ISLE, 3rd baron, was summoned to parliament as by writ addressed "Roberto de Insula de Rubeo Monte," 15 December, 1357, and 20 November, 1360. He is stated to have d. in 1399, and the Somersetshire Visitation of 1623 says that he left a son, Sir William Lisle, of Waterperry, co. Oxford, but this is very doubtful.

L'ISLE—BARONS DE L'ISLE.

By Writ of Summons, dated 15 December, 1347.

Lineage.

BRYAN DE L'ISLE, who, in the beginning of King JOHN's reign paid 120 marks, and a palfrey, for the wardship and marriage of the heir of William Briston, m. in a few years afterwards, Maud, dau. and heiress of Thomas, son of William de Seleby, by whom he had issue three daus. This Bryan was governor of Bolsover Castle, co. Derby, and a principal commander of the royal army raised in Yorkshire. At that time King JOHN conferred upon him the lands of the Barons, Robert de Percy, and Peter de Plumpton. In the reign of HENRY III., remaining steadfast to the cause he had espoused, he had a command at the siege of Montorel, and the subsequent battle of Lincoln. In the 5th HENRY, he was made warden of all the forests throughout England, and he was afterwards sheriff of Yorkshire. He d. about the 18th HENRY III., A.D. 1234, possessed of the manor of Brainston, otherwise Blandford Brian, in the co. Dorset—"which," says Hutchins, in his History of that shire, "is called Brientius-town, by Camden, and very properly derived its additional denomination of Brian, from Brian de Insula, or L'Isle, its ancient lord."

"I now come (says Dugdale) to WARINE DE L'ISLE, son of Robert, son of Alice, dau. of Henry, a youngerson of Warine Fitzgerald, as the descent sheweth." Which Warine was in the Scottish wars, temp. EDWARD I., and in the beginning of EDWARD II.'s reign, was constituted governor of Windsor Castle, and warden of the forest. For years subsequently, he was engaged in Scotland, but joining Thomas, Earl of Lancaster, against the Spencers, 1320-1, and sharing in the discomfiture of his chief, he was taken prisoner, and hanged at York, with the Lord Mowbray, and several others. After which, it was found in A.D. 1327, that he d. seized of the manors of Bouden, Kingston, and Fanfore, in Berks; Mundiford, in Norfolk; and Kistingbury, in Northamptonshire; leaving Gerard, his son, twenty-three years of age, and Alice, his wife, sister and heir of Henry, Baron Teyes surviving, which

GERARD DE L'ISLE, having become eminent in the Scotch and French wars of EDWARD III., was summoned to parliament as a Baron, by the designation of "Gerardo de Insula," 15 December, 1347, but never afterwards. His lordship d. in 1360, and was s. by his son,

WARINE DE L'ISLE, 2nd baron, summoned to parliament from 6 April, 1369, to 24 May, 1382. This nobleman, like his father, participated in the great martial achievements of EDWARD III. In the 1st of RICHARD II., A.D. 1377-8, he was also in the wars of France—and in two years afterwards he went to Ireland. From King EDWARD he obtained license to make a castle of his house at Shirbourne, co. Oxford. His lordship m. Margaret, dau. of William Pipard, by whom he left, at his decease in 1381, an only dau.,

MARGARET DE L'ISLE, who m. Thomas, Lord Berkeley, and had an only dau. and heiress,

ELIZABETH BERKELEY, who m. Richard Beauchamp, 12th Earl of Warwick, by whom she had three daus., her co-heirs, viz.,

I. Margaret, 2nd wife of John Talbot, 1st Earl of Shrewsbury, and d. 1467. Her eldest son, John Talbot, was created Baron L'Isle, 26 July, 1444, and Viscount L'Isle, in 1451. From him descends Lord de Lisle and Dudley.

II. Eleanor, m. 1st, to Thomas, Lord de Ros (see p. 19); and 2ndly, to Edmund, Duke of Somerset, by both of whom she had issue; and 3rdly, Walter Rodesley.

III. Elizabeth, m. to George Nevill, Lord Latimer (see p. 398).

Amongst the representatives of these descendants of Margaret de L'Isle, this Barony of L'Isle is presumed to be now in ABEYANCE. Mr. Courthope adds in a note (Historic Peerage, p. 290), the following remarks:—"In 1825, these co-heirs were stated, in the case presented to the House of Lords on the part of Sir John Shelley Sidney, Bart. (who claimed the Barony of L'Isle, but without success), to have been—Sir John Shelley Sydney, Bart., as sole heir of the body of MARGARET, COUNTESS OF SHREWSBURY; George, Earl of Essex, Sir Henry Munloke, Bart., and Charlotte, Baroness de Ros, as co-heirs of the body of ELEANOR, wife of THOMAS, LORD DE ROS; and Hugh, Duke of Northumberland, Winchcombe Henry Howard Hartley, Esq., James Knightley, Esq.; Grey Jermyn Grove, Esq.; George William Villiers, Esq.; Montagu, Earl of Abingdon; Sir Francis Burdett, Bart.; William Fermor, Esq., and John, Lord Rollo, as co-heirs of the body of ELIZABETH, LADY LATIMER. These were also, it is presumed, co-heirs of the body of the Barony of Berkeley under the writ of summons to Thomas de Berkeley, 23 June, 1295, being co-heirs of the body of the said Thomas de Berkeley" (see LATIMER).

LIVINGSTON—EARL OF LINLITHGOW.

Earldom, by Letters Patent, dated 1600.

Lineage.

It is said by some antiquaries that the head of this noble family was a Hungarian gentleman who came to Scotland with MARGARET, Queen of MALCOLM CANMORE, about 1070. Their immediate ancestor,

LIVINGSTON flourished in the reigns of ALEXANDER I., and his brother DAVID I. He possessed a considerable estate in West Lothian, called Livingstone. His son,

THURSTANUS, "filius Livingi," witnessed the foundation charter of Holyrood House, 1128, and was father of

ALEXANDER LIVINGSTON, who first assumed the surname. He left a son,

SIR WILLIAM LIVINGSTON, who had three sons,

I. William, from whom descended the Livingstons of Livingstone, the last of whom, Sir Bartholomew Livingstone fell at Flodden in 1513, leaving three daus. and co-heirs.

II. ARCHIBALD (Sir), of whom we treat.

III. Adam.

The 2nd son,

SIR ARCHIBALD LIVINGSTON, was father of

SIR WILLIAM LIVINGSTON, who m. a dau. of Sir John Erskine, of Erskine, and left a son and heir,

SIR WILLIAM LIVINGSTON, who accompanied King DAVID II. in his expedition to England in 1346, was knighted under the royal banner, and taken prisoner at the battle of Durham, 17 October, 1346. He had a grant of the barony of Calendar, then in the crown, by the forfeiture of Patric Calendar, whose only dau. and heir, Christian, he married. His only surviving son and successor,

SIR WILLIAM LIVINGSTON, of Calendar, d. temp. King ROBERT II., leaving a son,

SIR JOHN LIVINGSTON, of Calendar, who m. 1st, a dau. of Menteth, of Carse, and had issue,

I. ALEXANDER (Sir), his heir

II. Robert, ancestor of the Livingstons of Westquarter and the Livingstons of Kynnsaird, Earls of Newburgh.

III. John, ancestor of the Livingstons of Bonton.

He m. 2ndly, Agnes, dau. of Sir James Douglas, of Dalkeith, and by her had a son,

IV. William, ancestor of the Viscounts Kilsyth (see that title.)

The eldest son,

SIR ALEXANDER LIVINGSTON, of Calendar, having passed through numerous political troubles and suffering imprisonment was eventually restored to royal favour and appointed justiciary of Scotland, and sent as ambassador to England in 1449. He m. a dau. of Dundae, of Dundae, and was s. by his eldest son,

SIR JAMES LIVINGSTON, of Calendar, co. Stirling, who had the appointment of captain of the castle of Stirling, with the tuition of the young King JAMES II., committed to him by his father, and was afterwards (previously to 30 August, 1450) created a peer of Scotland as Lord LIVINGSTON. He d. about 1467. Marion, widow of James, Lord Livingston, occurs in the records of parliament, 4 July, 1478. He had issue,

I. JAMES, 2nd Lord Livingston.

II. Alexander, father of JOHN, 3rd Lord Livingston.

I. Elizabeth, m. to John, Earl of Ross, Lord of the Isles.

II. Eupheme, m. 1st, to Malcolm, son and heir of Robert Lord Fleming; and 2ndly, to William Fleming, of the Bord.

The older son,

JAMES LIVINGSTON, 2nd Lord Livingston, m. 1st, a dau. of Sir John Erskine, of Kinnoul; 2ndly, a dau. of Sir Robert Crichton; and 3rdly, Agnes Houston; but dying s. p., was s. by his nephew,

 Eleanor, d. unm.

The elder son,

GEORGE LIVINGSTON, 3rd Earl of Linlithgow, b. July, 1616, was implicated in Sir James Montgomery's plot for the restoration of the abdicated royal family. He m. 30 July, 1650, Lady Elizabeth Maule, 2nd dau. of Patrick, 1st Earl of Panmure, dowager of John, 2nd Earl of Kinghorn, and by her (who d. at Castle-Huntly, in October, 1659) had issue, GEORGE, 4th Earl of Linlithgow.

ALEXANDER, successor to his uncle as 3rd Earl of Calendar, which uncle had also inherited from an uncle, the title of Calendar being thus borne by the 2nd son of this family for three generations in succession.

Henriet, m. in July, 1666, to Robert, 2nd Viscount of Oxford.

The Earl d. 1 February, 1690, aged seventy-four, and was s. by his son,

GEORGE LIVINGSTON, 4th Earl of Linlithgow, who was sworn a privy councillor in 1692, and appointed one of the commissioners of the Treasury. He m. Henriët Sutherland, eldest dau. of Alexander, 1st Lord Duffus, but had no issue. He d. 7 August, 1695, when his title devolved on his nephew,

JAMES LIVINGSTON, 4th Earl of Calendar, son of Alexander Livingston, 3rd Earl of Calendar. Engaging in the rebellion of 1715, the Earl of Linlithgow and Calendar was attainted of high treason, and his estate and honours forfeited to the crown. He m. Lady Margaret Hay, 2nd dau. of John, 12th Earl of Erroll, and by her had a son, James, Lord Livingston, who d. 13 April, 1715; and a dau., Anne, who m. William, 4th Earl of Kilmarnock, and their eldest son, JAMES, s. in her right to the Earldom of Erroll. The great Calendar property (first sold to the York Buildings Company, a London Corporation) was purchased eventually, about 1780, by WILLIAM FORBES, Esq. (See BURKE'S Vicissitudes of Families, 2nd Series.)

Though "the strongholds of the Livingstones are in ruins in Scotland," a flourishing branch of the family still remains, in high honour and distinction, in the United States of America. (See ADDENDA.)

LIVINGSTON—EARL OF CALENDAR.

Barony, by Letters Patent, dated 19 June, 1633.

Earldom, by Letters Patent, dated 1641 and 1660.

Lineage.

THE HON. SIR JAMES LIVINGSTON (3rd son of Alexander, 1st Earl of Linlithgow), acquired a high military reputation in the wars in Bohemia, Germany, Holland, and Sweden. Returning to his native country, he was constituted one of the gentlemen of the bedchamber to King CHARLES I., and created LORD LIVINGSTON, of Almond, 19 June, 1633, to him and his heirs male for ever. He obtained subsequently a patent of the EARLDOM OF CALENDAR to the heirs male of his body in 1641, and a second in 1660, with specific limitations. His lordship acted a distinguished part in the civil wars. He m. (contract dated 1633) Margaret, only dau. of James, 7th Lord Yester, sister of John, 1st Earl of Tweeddale, dowager of Alexander, 1st Earl of Dunfermline, high chancellor of Scotland, but by her, who was buried with her first husband, at Dalgety, 20 January, 1660, had no issue; and dying in 1672, was s., in terms of the patent, by his nephew,

ALEXANDER LIVINGSTON, 2nd Earl of Calendar (2nd son of Alexander, 2nd Earl of Linlithgow). He m. (contract dated 1663) Lady Mary Hamilton, 3rd dau. of William, 2nd Duke of Hamilton, but by her (who m. 2ndly, Sir James Livingstone, of Westquarter; and 3rdly, James, 3rd Earl of Findlater) had no issue. He d. in August, 1686, and his estate and honours devolved on his nephew,

ALEXANDER LIVINGSTON, 3rd Earl of Calendar (2nd son of George, 3rd Earl of Linlithgow), who was served heir of entail and provision of his uncle, in the baronies of Calendar, Haining, and other lands, 16 May, 1688. He d. in December, 1692, leaving by his wife, Lady Anne Graham, eldest dau. of James, 2nd Marquess of Montrose,

I. JAMES, his successor, 4th earl.

II. Henriët, d. unm. 25 May, 1738.

III. Mary, m. to James Graham, of Airth, co. Stirling, an advocate of great celebrity, judge of the Court of Admiralty in Scotland.

The son,

JAMES LIVINGSTON, 4th Earl of Calendar, s. on the death of his uncle, George, 4th Earl of Linlithgow, in August, 1695, to the Earldom of Linlithgow, to which refer. His estates and honours were FORFEITED by his engaging in the rebellion of 1715.

Mary, dau. of Sir Duncan Forrester, of Garden, comptroller of the household, and had (with three daus., Elizabeth, m. to Gabriel Cunningham, of Craighends; Isabel, m. to Colin Campbell, of Auchinbove; and Margaret, m. 1st, to Ninian Bruce, and 2ndly, to Alexander Baillie, of Jerviswood), a son,

SIR WILLIAM LIVINGSTON, of Kilsyth, who was knighted in 1563, when Darnley was made Duke of Albany. He m. Lady Christian Graham, 2nd dau. of John, 4th Earl of Menteith (see that title), and had (with a dau., Christian, m. to John Lawson, of Boghall,) an only son,

SIR WILLIAM LIVINGSTON, of Kilsyth, a man of talents and learning, who attended the Duke of Lennox in his embassy to France, in July, 1601; was appointed one of the lords of the session, 6 June, 1609; sworn a privy councillor, 13 May, 1613, and the same day constituted vice chamberlain of Scotland. He m. 1st, Antonia de Bourd, a French lady of quality, by whom he had,

William (Sir), knighted at the baptism of Prince Henry, 1595: he d. v. p., having m. Lady Annie Fleming, 2nd dau. of John, 1st Earl of Wigton, by whom he had a son, William Livingston, of Kilsyth, who d. in his minority, unm., 1647.

He m. 2ndly, Margaret, dau. of Sir John Houston, of Houston, and by her had,

JAMES (Sir), of whom we treat.

Margaret, m. to Robert Montgomery, of Haalehead, in Ayrshire.

He d. in 1627, and was s. by his only son,

SIR JAMES LIVINGSTON, of Barnclough, b. 25 June, 1616. This gentleman, an eminent royalist, offered to hold out his castle of Kilsyth against Cromwell, and received a letter of thanks from King CHARLES II., dated 7 October, 1650. He was fined by Cromwell £1,500; but on the Restoration, raised to the peerage, as Lord of Campsie, and VISCOUNT KILSYTH, by patent, dated 17 August, 1661. He enjoyed his honours, however but a few days, dying at London, 7 September, 1661. His lordship m. Eupheme, dau. of Sir David Cunningham, of Robertland, and had issue,

I. JAMES, 2nd Viscount.

II. WILLIAM, 3rd Viscount.

I. Elizabeth, m. to the Hon. Major-Gen. Robert Montgomery, 5th son of Alexander, 6th Earl of Eglinton.

LONGFIELD—BARON AND VISCOUNT LONGUEVILLE.

Barony, by Letters Patent, dated 1795.

Viscounty, by Letters Patent, dated 1800.

Lineage.

The earlier lineage and full details as to this family will be found in the Landed Gentry.

RICHARD LONGFIELD, Esq., of Longueville, co. Cork, b. in 1734, J.P., high sheriff for that county in 1758, sat for several years in the parliament of his native country, and was M.P. for Charleville, in 1761, and afterwards for the co. Cork. He was elevated to the peerage of Ireland as Baron Longueville, of Longueville, in the co. Cork, by letters patent, dated 1793, and was advanced to a viscounty, being created VISCOUNT LONGUEVILLE, by letters patent, dated 1800. His lordship, who was governor of the co. Cork, and sat in the imperial parliament as a representative peer for Ireland, m. in 1766, Margaret, dau. of Richard White, Esq., and aunt to Richard, 1st Earl of Bantry, but d. s. p. 23 May, 1811, when the title became EXTINCT, while the greater portion of his lordship's estates devolved on his cousins,

JOHN LONGFIELD, Esq., of Longueville, M.P. for Mallow; and MOUNTFORD LONGFIELD, M.P. for Enniscorthy, who inherited the estates of Castle Mary, co. Cork. (See Landed Gentry.)

Arms—Gu., a chevron, erm., between seven cross-crosslets, fitchée.

LONGVILLIERS—BARON LONGVILLIERS.

By Writ of Summons, dated 25 February, 1342.

Lineage.

In the 26th EDWARD I (A.D. 1297)

JOHN DE LONGVILLIERS d. seized of the manors of Cokesford, co. Notts, and Gloseborne, in Yorkshire, and was s. by his brother,

THOMAS DE LONGVILLIERS, who had summons to parliament as a Baron, 25 February, 1342, but never afterwards. His lordship d. in 1374, when the Barony of Longvilliers became EXTINCT.

According to Dugdale, his lordship left an only sister, AGNES, wife of Robert, son of Ralph Cromwell, his next heir. Under the head of Everingham, however, the same authority states, that Agnes, dau. of John Longvilliers, m. Reginald de Everingham. And Collins says, that Agnes, the wife of Everingham, was dau. and co-heir of Sir John Longvilliers, whose sister, Elizabeth, was mother of Stephen Manlovel, of Rampton, whose dau. and heir, Elizabeth, m. Sir John de Stanhope, ancestor of the Earls of Chesterfield.

Arms—Sa., a bend between six cross-crosslets, arg.

L'ORTI—BARON L'ORTI.

By Writ of Summons, dated 6 February, 1299.

Lineage.

In the 6th of HENRY III. (A.D. 1221-2)

HENRY D'ORTREI (which is the same with L'Orti or De Urtino), having m. Sabina, dau. and heir of Richard Revel (a person of great note in the West, viz., sheriff of the cos. of Devon and Cornwall, from the 7th to the end of King RICHARD I's reign), and of Mabel, his wife, sister and heir of Walter de Esceleghe, of Esceleghe, co. Wilts, had livery of the lands of the inheritance of the said Sabina, and in some years afterwards obtained license to impark his woods in the co. Somerset, so that he might be free of any regard of the king's forests. He d. in 1241, and was s. by his son, HENRY L'ORTI, who having been engaged in the Welsh and French wars, was summoned to parliament as a Baron, 6 February, 1299. His lordship was s. at his decease, 1321, by his son.

HENRY L'ORTI, summoned to parliament by writ addressed "Henries de L'Orty," 10 October, 1325, and d. 1341-2. His son and heir,

JOHN L'ORTI, was never summoned to parliament. This nobleman left, at his decease, two daus., viz.,

SYBIL, wife of Sir Lawrence de St. Martin,
 MARGARET, wife of Henry de Esturmie,

Amongst whose descendants and representatives the Barony of L'Orti is now in ABEYANCE.

LOVEL—BARON LOVEL OF KARY.

By Writ of Summons, dated 20 November, 1348.

Lineage.

The first of this family that came into England was

ROBERT, Lord of Breherval, &c., in Normandy (where he likewise held the castle of Yvery, by the service of three knights' fees), a younger son, as it is said, of Eudes, sovereign Duke of Brittany. This nobleman accompanied WILLIAM THE CONQUEROR in 1066, and was rewarded with the lordships of Kary and Harpetre, co. Somerset; but returning into Normandy, and being there attacked by a severe illness, he became a monk in the abbey of Bec, and d. soon after, about the year 1083, leaving three sons, of whom the eldest,

ASCÉLIN GOUEL DE PERCEVAL, s. his father. This feudal lord like his predecessor, held a distinguished place in the Norman army of the conquest, and for his services had a grant of divers manors, particularly of Weston and Stawell, co. Somerset. He was a man of violent temper, and hence acquired the surname of LUPUS, or the Wolf. Odericus Vitalis gives the particulars of a long and extraordinary dispute which this Ascelin had with the Earl of Bretevil, in Normandy, and which terminated by his obtaining his own terms, after sustaining a siege of two months in his castle of Breherval, against a powerful army, commanded by the ablest captains of the age—which terms included the retention of the fortress, and the hand of Isabella, the Earl of Bretevil's only dau., in marriage. This lady, although illegitimate, upon the failure of the earl's legitimate issue, became, through the favour of HENRY I., heir in part to her father, and her husband, ASCÉLIN, was established in the Earldom of Yvery, in Normandy, in 1119. The issue of the marriage were seven sons and a dau., m. to Radulfus Rufus, a noble Norman. Of the sons, the names of three alone have been handed down to us, namely, ROBERT, WILLIAM, and John, of whom the youngest, John, acquired from his father the manor of Harpetre, and assumed that as a surname, but it was afterwards changed by his descendants to GOURNAY. Ascelin d. soon after his accession to the Earldom of Yvery, and was s. by his eldest son,

ROBERT, Earl of Yvery, who d. s. p. in 1121, and was s. in his Norman and English estates by his brother, WILLIAM, Earl of Yvery. This nobleman was nicknamed Lupellus, or the little wolf, which designation was softened into Lupel, and thence into LUVEL, and became the surname of most of his descendants. He defended his castle of Kary in 1163, against King STEPHEN, but d. in two years afterwards.

He m. Auberic, s'ter of Waleran de Bellemonte, Earl of Mellent, in Normandy, and d. about 1155, having had five sons, namely,

- I. WALERAN, who s. to the Norman dominions, and was Baron of Yvery, but the title of earl never, subsequently, occurs. His line continued until the 15th century.
- II. RALPH, of whom presently.
- III. HENRY, successor to his brother Ralph.
- IV. WILLIAM, ancestor of the BARONS LOVEL, of Tichmersh, &c., and VISCOUNT LOVEL (see next article).
- V. Richard, who retained the original surname of PERCEVAL, and from him descend the Percevals, Earls of Egmont.

The 2nd son having adopted the surname of LOVEL, and inherited the estate of Castle Kary, co. Somerset, became RALPH LOVEL, Lord of Castle Kary. He m. Maud, dau. of Henry de Newmarch, but dying s. p. before 1169, was s. by his brother,

HENRY LOVEL. This feudal lord, upon the collection of the scutason in 1159, paid 5 marks; and in seven years after, upon the assessment in aid of marrying the King's dau., certified his knight's fees, de veteri feoffamento, to be 18, and de novo 1. In 1176, he was amerced for trespassing in the king's forests at 100 marks. He d. before the year 1199, and was s. by his son and heir,

RALPH LOVEL, who in the 1st year of King JOHN, A.D. 1199–1200, paid £60 for livery of his Barony of Kary, and afterwards bestowed the lands of Ethelberge on the monks of Montacute. He d. in 1207 s. p., and was s. by his brother,

HENRY LOVEL. This feudal lord, in the 13th King JOHN, gave 300 marks, and seven good palfries, for permission to go into Ireland. He d. in 1218, and was s. by his son,

RICHARD LOVEL, who, in the 2nd HENRY III., A.D. 1218, giving £100 as a security for payment of his relief, had livery of his Barony of Kary, and all his other lands in Somersetshire. In the 26th of the same king he paid a fine of 15 marks to be exempted from going into Gascony, and in 12 years afterwards, upon the collection of the aid for making the king's eldest son a knight, he answered for 11 knights' fees and a-half for the honor of Moreton. He d. in this latter year (1253), and was s. by his son,

HENRY LOVEL, who, in the ensuing year, paid £100 for his relief, and had livery of his lands; but enjoyed the estates only a short period. He d. in 1262, then seized of the manor of Castle Kary (held in capite from the crown, by barony, and the service of finding two soldiers in the king's army at his own charge for forty days), and was s. by his elder son,

RICHARD LOVEL. This feudal lord d. s. p. the year after his father, and was s. by his brother,

HENRY LOVEL, who d. about the year 1290, leaving a dau., Oliva, m. to John de Gournay, and his successor,

HUGH LOVEL, against whom his brother-in-law, John de Gournay, instituted a suit at law in the time of EDWARD I. for the fortune of his wife, Oliva; which fortune, in the 8th of that reign, 1280, the said Hugh entered into a stipulation to pay. He d. in 1291, and was s. by his son,

SIR RICHARD LOVEL, who in the 9th EDWARD III., A.D. 1335, in conjunction with Muriel, his wife, had the custody of the castles of Corf and Purbeck, co. Dorset, and was summoned to parliament as a Baron from 20 November, 1348, to 25 November, 1350. His lordship m. Muriel, dau. of John Soullis, of Roxburghshire, in Scotland, and had issue,

JAMES, who m. Isabella, dau. of Lord Zouche, and predeceased the baron, anno 1342, leaving issue,

Richard, b. 1335, d. s. p. 1342.

LOVEL—BARONS LOVEL, OF TICHMERSH, CO. NORTHAMPTON; VISCOUNT LOVEL.

Barony, by Writ of Summons, as stated below.

Viscounty, by Letters Patent, dated 4 June, 1433.

Lineage.

This branch of the family of Lovel descends from

WILLIAM LOVEL, 4th son of William, Earl of Yvery, in Normandy, and brother of Ralph and Henry Lovel, feudal lords of Castle Kary—(refer to preceding article). This William, who was lord of Minster Lovel, co. Oxford, d. previously to the year 1196, and was s. by his son,

WILLIAM LOVEL, who, in the 13th JOHN, A.D. 1211, held Dockinges by barony. He was s. by his son,

JOHN LOVEL, Lord of Dockinges, and of Minster Lovel. This feudal baron was a minor at the period of his father's decease, and under the guardianship of Alan Basset, of Murlewail and Wycombe, in Surrey, whose dau. Aliva, by Aliva, dau. of Stephen Gay, he eventually m. (as was frequently the case in those times), and settled upon her the manor of Minster Lovel. On his marriage he relinquished the ancient coat of arms of his own family, and assumed that of the Bassets, the colours only changed from az. and sa. to or. and gu. He had issue,

I. JOHN, his successor.

II. Philip, who, in the 25th HENRY III., 1241, being then guardian to the Jews, was charged with great bribery, in taking plate of much value to exempt some of them from the tallage then imposed, and he incurred thereby the high displeasure of the king. He made his peace, however, and through powerful interest at court got off with a fine of 1,000 marks. He was, subsequently, so well established in royal favour that he was constituted treasurer of England. But in the 43rd of the same reign, the barons caused him to be brought to trial for the offence above-mentioned, and had him removed from the treasurer'ship; he was likewise subjected to a heavy penalty, and his estates were seized by the crown, until that penalty should be discharged. This persecution so affected him that he is supposed to have d. in the following year, 1258, of grief and vexation, at his rectory (having taken orders), at Hamestable. He is stated to have m., of course before he became a priest, the widow of Alexander de Arsic, and had two sons,

1 John (Sir), who left an only dau. and heiress,

Margaret, who m. Thomas de Botetourt.

2 Henry, a priest.

III. Fulco, archdeacon of Colchester.

1. Agnes, m. to Adam de Chetwynd, ancestor of the Viscounts Chetwynd.

John Lovel was s. at his decease by his eldest son,

JOHN LOVEL, who in the 41st HENRY III., 1250, had a military summons to march against the Welsh, and in four years afterwards was constituted sheriff of the cos. Cambridge and Huntingdon. In the 48th of the same reign he was made governor of the castle of Northampton, and subsequently governor of Marlborough Castle. He m. Maud Sydenham, a great heiress, by whom he acquired the lordship of Tichmersh, and had issue,

I. JOHN (Sir), his successor.

II. Thomas (Sir), of Tickwell.

He d. in 1286, and was s. by his elder son,

SIR JOHN LOVEL, b. 1255, who performing his fealty had livery of his lands in the year of his father's decease. In 1294, Sir John attended the king in his wars in Gascony, and was summoned to parliament as BARON LOVEL from 6 February, 1299, to 26 July, 1311. He had also been summoned 26 January, 1297, but it is doubtful whether that writ was a regular summons to parliament. His lordship was subsequently engaged in the Scottish wars, and deserved so well for his services there, that he was rewarded with a license from the king, 31st EDWARD I., 1303, permitting him to make a castle of his house at Tichmersh, also for a market to be held weekly, and a fair annually. He m. 1st, Isabel, dau. of Ernald de Bois, of Thorpe Ernald, and sister and heir of William de Bois, by whom he had an only dau.,

Maud, m. to William, Lord Zouch, of Haryngworth, and, as heir to her mother, carried with her the manor of Dockinges, which had been settled on that lady.

His lordship m. 2ndly, Joan, dau. of Robert, Lord Ros, of Hamlake (see ROOS), and had two sons, viz.,

JOHN, his successor.

James, who left a son,

Sir Ralph Lovel, Knt.

Lord Lovel d. 1311, and was s. by his elder son,

JOHN LOVEL, 2nd baron, b. 1313, summoned to parliament as LORD LOVEL, of Tichmarsh, from 8 January, 1313, to 29 July, 1314. His lordship m. Maud, dau. of Sir Philip Burnell, Knt., and sister and heir of Edward, Lord Burnell, by whom (who m. 2ndly, John Handlo), he had an only son, his successor at his decease, in 1314.

JOHN LOVEL, 3rd baron, but who never was summoned to parliament. This nobleman was engaged for several years in the wars of Scotland and France, temp. EDWARD III. His lordship m. Isabella, sister of William, Lord Zouche, of Harringworth, and had issue,

JOHN (1st), his successor.

JOHN (2nd), successor to his brother.

Isabella, m. to Thomas Greene.

His lordship d. in 1347, and was s. by his elder son,

JOHN LOVEL, 4th baron, b. 1341, who dying in minority, without issue, anno 1361, was s. by his brother,

JOHN LOVEL, 5th baron, summoned to parliament as LORD LOVEL, of Tichmarsh, from 28 December, 1375, to 26 August, 1407. This nobleman, in 1368, being then a knight, was in the wars of France, and one of the retinue of Lionel, Duke of Clarence; he continued in this service for some years, and was constituted governor of the Castle of Banelynham, in France. In the reign of RICHARD III., when the influence exercised by Robert de Vere, Duke of Ireland, caused so much discontent amongst the nobility, he at first espoused the popular side, but afterwards going over to the king, he was one of those expelled the court by the confederate lords. His lordship, who was a knight of the Garter, m. 1373, Maud, dau. and heir of Robert de Holand, Lord Holand. This lady, in the printed pedigrees produced before the House of Lords, in a committee of privileges, on the (successful) claim of the late Sir Cecil Blisshopp, to the Barony of Zouch, is called the grand-dau. and heir of Robert, Lord Holand. Lord Lovel dying in 1408 (in his testament, he styles himself, "Lord Lovel and Holand"), was s. by his only son,

SIR JOHN LOVEL, Baron Holand, in right of his mother, and summoned to parliament as LORD LOVEL, of Tichmarsh, from 20 October, 1409, to 26 September, 1414. This nobleman m. Alianore, dau. of William, Lord Zouch, of Haryngworth, and had issue,

WILLIAM, his successor.

Wil m. m. Elizabeth, dau. and co-heir of Thomas St. Cler, of Barton St. John, co. Oxford.

His lordship d. in 1414, and was s. by his elder son,

SIR WILLIAM LOVEL, Baron Lovel and Holand, summoned to parliament, from 24 February, 1425, to 20 January, 1453. This nobleman was engaged in the French wars of King HENRY V. His lordship m. Alice, widow of Ralph Butler, of Sudley, and dau. and eventual heir, as Baroness D'Eincourt, of John Leke, Lord Deincourt (see LEKE), (by Johanna, dau. and sole heir of Robert, Lord Grey, of Rotherfield,) by which alliance the Baronies of Deincourt and Grey, of Rotherfield, became united with those of Lovel and Holand. Of this marriage there were issue,

I. JOHN, his successor.

II. William, m. Alianore, dau. and heir of Robert, Lord Morley, and was summoned to parliament as LORD MORLEY. (See LOVEL, Baron Morley.)

III. Robert, d. s. p.

IV. William (2nd).

His lordship d. 13 June, 1455, and was s. by his eldest son,

SIR JOHN LOVEL, Baron Lovel and Holand, summoned to parliament, from 9 October, 1459, to 28 February, 1463. This nobleman, in consideration of his good services, obtained a patent from the king, 38th HENRY VI. (1460), appointing him chief forester of the forest of Whichwoode, co. Northampton; but before the end of that year, the face of public affairs suddenly changed: for upon the landing of the Duke of York, this John, Lord Lovel, proceeding to London, with the Lords Seales and Hungerford, for the purpose of raising the good citizens in favour of King HENRY, was forced to take refuge in the Tower, as a place of security. Soon after which, the Yorkists prevailed in all parts of the kingdom, to the total ruin of the unfortunate HENRY, and his faithful adherents. Of this nobleman, nothing further is related, than his death, which happened in the 4th Edward IV., 1464. He was then seized among divers other considerable lordships, of the manors of Minster Lovel, co. Oxford; Bainton, otherwise Deincourts Manor, in Yorkshire; Tichmarsh, Northamptonshire; Holgate Burnell, and Acton Burnell, in Shropshire; and likewise of the moiety of the manor of Askham-Bryan, co. of the city of York. His lordship had m. Joane, only sister and heir of William, 2nd Viscount Beaumont (see Extant Perrage), and by her, who d. s. p., he had issue,

I. FRANCIS, his successor.

I. Joane, m. Sir Brian Stapleton, of Carlton, Knt. Amongst her descendants the Barony of Beaumont fell into ABBEYANCE until called out in 1840, as stated in Extant Perrage.

II. Fridlawide, m. to Sir Edward Norris, Knt., of Yattenden, co. Berks, and had issue,

I John Norris, Esquire of the body to King HENRY VIII., m. Elizabeth, sister of Edward, Lord Bray, but d. without legitimate issue.

2 HENRY NORRIS, who fell a sacrifice to the suspicious temper of HENRY VIII., and under the charge of a criminal intercourse with Queen Anna Boleyn, was tried, condemned, and executed, 14 May, 28th HENRY VIII. Henry Norris attainted, it is presumed, that the moiety of the Barony of Beaumont, to which he was heir, became vested in the crown. From him descends the present EARL OF ARBINGDON.

His lordship was s. at his decease, in 1463, by his on'y son,

SIR FRANCIS LOVEL, 9th baron, summoned to parliament as such, 15 November, 1482, and created, 4 January, 1483, Viscount Lovel. He m. Anna, dau. of Henry Fitz-Hugh, Baron Fitz-Hugh. This nobleman being in high favour with King RICHARD III., was made, by that monarch, chamberlain of the household, constable of the Castle of Wallingford, and chief butler of England. He subsequently fought under the banner of his royal master, at Bosworth, and was fortunate enough to escape with life, from the field; whence flying to St. John's, at Colchester, he there, for some time, took sanctuary, but deeming that no place of permanent security, he removed privately, to Sir John Broughton's house, in Lancashire, and thence effected his escape into Flanders, where he was graciously received by Margaret, Duchess of Burgundy, the late king's sister; by whom, with 2,000 soldiers, under the conduct of the eminent German general, Martin Swartz, he was sent into Ireland, to uphold the pretensions of Lambert Simnell, and thence invading England, his lordship is said to have fallen at the battle of Stoke, in 1487. That circumstance, however, admits of doubt, for after the battle, he was certainly seen endeavouring, on horseback, to swim the River Trent; yet from this period, no further mention is made of him, by any of our historians. A rumour prevailed, that he had, for the time, preserved his life, by retiring into some secret place, and that he was eventually starved to death, by the treachery or negligence of those in whom he had confided. Which report (says Banks), in later days seems to be confirmed by a very particular circumstance, related in a letter from William Cowper, Esq., clerk of the parliament, concerning the supposed finding of the body of Francis, Lord Lovel, viz.:

"Hertingfordbury Park, 9th August, 1737.

"Sir,

"I met t'other day with a memorandum I had made some years ago, perhaps not unworthy of notice. You may remember that Lord Bacon, in his history of HENRY VII., giving an account of the battle of Stoke, says of the Lord Lovell, who was among the rebels, that he fled and swam over the Trent on horseback, but could not recover the further side, by reason of the steepness of the bank, and so was drowned in the river. But another report leaves him not there, but that he lived long after, in a cave or vault.

"Apropos to this; on the 6th May, 1723, the present Duke of Rutland related in my hearing, that about twenty years then before, viz., in 1703, upon occasion of new laying a chimney at Minster Lovel, then was discovered a large vault underground, in which was the entire skeleton of a man, as having been sitting at a table, which was before him, with a book, paper, pen, &c.; in another part of the room lay a cup, all much mouldered and decayed. Which the family and others judged to be this Lord Lovel, whose exit has hitherto been so uncertain."

From hence (continues Banks), it may be concluded, that it was the fate of this unhappy lord, to have retired to his own house after the battle, and there to have entrusted himself to some servant, by whom he was immured, and afterwards neglected, either through treachery, fear, or some accident which befel that person; a melancholy period to the life and fortunes of one of the greatest and most active noblemen of the era wherein he had lived. Some additional particulars relating to this matter may be gleaned from "Notes and Queries."

To complete the tragedy, King HENRY VII., aspiring to the vast inheritance of this family, confiscated, by an act of ATTAINDER, in the 1st year of his reign, the whole estate, then inferior to few or none in the kingdom; and which, by grants at different times from HENRY VIII. down to JAMES I., has passed to the families of Compton, Earls of Northampton;

Cecil, Earls of Salisbury, and other great houses now existing. Under this attainder, the Baronies of Lovel, of Holand, of Deincourt, and o. Grey, of Rotherfield, fell, and could not be inherited by his lordship's sisters and co-heirs; but those ladies became heirs to their maternal uncle, William, Viscount Beaumont, in the ancient BARONY OF BEAUMONT, as already stated.

NOTE.—The title of BARON LOVELL, o. Minster Lovell, co. Oxford, was revived in the person of Sir Thomas Coke, K.B., of Holkham, co. Norfolk, 28 May, 1728, but on the death of his lordship, who was subsequently created Earl of Leicester, &c., his titles became EXTINCT. (Refer to Extant Peerage.)

The Barony of LOVELL AND HOLAND was conferred, 7 May, 1762, upon John Perceval, 2nd Earl of Egmont, the representative of RICHARD PERCEVAL, youngest son of William, Earl of Yvery, and brother of the founders of the houses of LOVEL OF CASTLE KARY, and LOVEL OF TICHMERSH (see Lovel of Castle Kary).

LOVELACE — BARONS LOVELACE, OF HURLEY, CO. BERKS.

By Letters Patent, dated 30 May, 1627.

Lineage.

SIR RICHARD LOVELACE, Knt., (son of Richard Lovelace, Esq., of Hurley, Berks, and grandson of John Lovelace, who d. 1558, possessed of Hurley), was elevated to the peerage, 30 May, 1627, as BARON LOVELACE, of Hurley, co. Berks. His lordship m. 1st, Katherine, dau. of George Hill, Esq., and widow of William Hide, Esq., of Kingston L'Isle, Berks, but had no issue. He m. 2ndly, Margaret, only dau. and heir of William Dodsworth, citizen of London, and had two sons and two daus., viz.,

- I. JOHN, his successor.
- II. Francis, whose son,
William, m. Mary, dau. of William King, Esq., of Iwer, Bucks, and left a son, JOHN, who inherited as 4th baron.
- I. Elizabeth, m. to Henry, son and heir of Sir Henry Martin, Knt.
- II. Martha, m. to Sir George Stonhouse, 3rd baronet.

His lordship d. in 1634, and was s. by his son,

JOHN LOVELACE, 2nd baron, who m. Lady Anne Wentworth, dau. of Thomas, Earl of Cleveland, which lady, upon the decease of her niece, Henrietta Maria Wentworth, Baroness Wentworth, in 1686, s. to that barony. They had issue,

- I. JOHN, his successor.
- I. Anne, d. unm.
- II. Margaret, m. to Sir William Noel, Bart., of Kirby-Malory, co. Leicester, and her great-grandson,

SIR EDWARD NOEL, Bart., eventually s. in her right to the BARONY OF WENTWORTH, and was created VISCOUNT WENTWORTH, in 1762. (See Extant Peerage.)

- III. Dorothy, m. to Henry, son of Sir Henry Drax, Knt.

His lordship d. in 1670, and was s. by his son,

JOHN LOVELACE, 3rd baron. This nobleman, "distinguished," says Macaulay, "by his taste, by his magnificence, and by the audacious and intemperate violence of his Whiggism," was in the habit of assembling the leading friends of the Revolution, in a vault beneath the hall of his splendid mansion at Lady Place, in Berkshire; a council chamber into which he had afterwards the pleasure of introducing King WILLIAM, when that monarch honoured him with a visit. Lord Lovelace was one of the very first to rise in arms for WILLIAM, and one of the most energetic of his partizans. His lordship who was captain of the band of pensioners, lived in so much splendour and profuseness, that a great portion of his estates came to the hammer, under a decree of the Court of Chancery. He m. Margery, one of the daus. and co-heirs of Sir Edmund Pye, Bart., of Bradenham, co. Bucks, by whom he had several children, one of whom only survived himself, viz.,

MARTHA, who upon the decease of her grandmother, ANNE, Lady Wentworth, and Dowager Lady Lovelace, (who survived her son, Lord Lovelace), s. to the Barony of Wentworth, to which she was declared entitled by a resolution of the House of Lords made 2 April, 1702, and confirmed by Queen ANNE. Her ladyship m. Sir Henry Johnson, an opulent ship-builder, but d. s. p. in 1745, when the Barony of Wentworth passed to her kinsman, Sir Edward Noel, Bart. (Refer to Margaret, dau. of the 2nd Lord Lovelace.)

His lordship d. before his mother, Lady Wentworth, in 1693, when the Barony of Lovelace passed to his cousin (refer to the 2nd son of 1st lord),

JOHN LOVELACE, 4th baron, who m. Charlotte, dau. of Sir John Clayton, Knt., by whom he left two surviving sons, JOHN and NEVIL, successive barons. His lordship was governor of New York, and d. in his government, 6 May, 1709, when he was s. by his elder son,

JOHN LOVELACE, 5th baron, who survived his father but a fortnight, when the barony devolved upon his only brother, NEVIL LOVELACE, 6th baron. This nobleman d. in 1736, when the Barony of Lovelace of Hurley became EXTINCT. His sister and heiress (or, according to one account his dau.) Martha, m. Lord Henry Beauclerk.

N.B. The title of LOVELACE was again created 30 June, 1838, in favour of William, 8th Lord King, who m. 8 July, 1835, Ada, only child o. George Gordon, Lord Byron (the poet). This lady's mother, Anna-Isabella, Lady Byron, only child of the Hon. Judith Noel, (by her husband, Sir Ralph Milbanke, Bart.), s. as Baroness Wentworth in 1856, and was representative of the extinct Barons Lovelace.

LOWTHER — VISCOUNTS AND EARL OF LONSDALE.

Viscounty, by Letters Patent, dated 28 May, 1696.
Earldom, by Letters Patent, dated 24 May, 1784.

Lineage.

For earlier pedigree refer to BURKE's Extant Peerage:—LONSDALE.

SIR JOHN LOWTHER, 2nd baronet, was returned to parliament by the co. of Westmoreland in 1675, and he continued to represent that shire so long as he remained a commoner. At the accession of King WILLIAM, Sir John was sworn of the privy council. In 1689 he was constituted lord lieutenant of Westmoreland and Cumberland; in 1690 appointed first commissioner of the Treasury, and elevated to the peerage 28 May, 1696, in the dignities of Baron Lowther, of Lowther, co. Westmoreland, and VISCOUNT LONSDALE. In 1699 he was made lord privy seal; and was twice one of the lords justices for the government of the kingdom during his majesty's absence. His lordship m. Catherine, dau. of Sir Frederick Thynne, and sister of Thomas, Viscount Weymouth, by whom he had issue,

- I. RICHARD, } successors in turn to the viscounty.
- II. HENRY, }
- III. Anthony, a commissioner of the revenue in Ireland, d. unm. in 1741.

- I. Mary, m. Sir John Wentworth, Bart., of North Elmsal and Broadsworth, Yorkshire, and had an only child, CATHERINE, wife of HUGH CHOLMELEY, Esq., of Whitby Abbey, co. York.

- II. Jane, d. unm.

- III. Margaret, m. to Sir Joseph Pennington, Bart., of Muncaster, in Cumberland, M.P., and had (besides an elder son, John, his successor, whose grandson was created Lord Muncaster), a dau. Catherine, who m. in 1731, Robert Lowther, Esq., governor of Barbadoes, whose eldest son by her was Sir James Lowther, of whom hereafter as EARL OF LONSDALE.

- IV. Barbara, m. to Thomas, son and heir of William Howard, Esq., of Corby, in Cumberland, and had three daus., who all d. s. p.

The viscount d. 6 July, 1700, and was s. by his eldest son,

RICHARD LOWTHER, 2nd Viscount Lonsdale, who d. of the small-pox, the same year that he had attained his majority, (1713), and being unm. was s. by his brother,

HENRY LOWTHER, 3rd Viscount Lonsdale. Of this nobleman Banks thus speaks: "If considered in his attachment to the protestant succession, his love to the king, and his readiness to co-operate with his ministers whenever he thought them right, he was a perfect courtier. But if we regard his constant adherence to the interest of his country, his contempt of honour, and advantage to himself, and his steady opposition to every measure which he considered detrimental to the public, then he was, indeed, a patriot. Beloved by his friends, respected even by his enemies, he was in the senate honoured with attention from both: courted by all parties, he enlisted with none, but preserved through life a remarkable independency. These public virtues arose from the excellence of his private disposition, from the benevolence of his heart, from the uprightness of his intentions, from his great parts, and uncommon penetration."

His lordship d. unm. 12 March, 1750-1, when the Barony of Lowther (of this creation) and Viscounty of Lonsdale became EXTINCT: while the estates and baronetcy devolved upon his heir-at-law and kinsman (who was maternally his grand-nephew, as above stated).

SIR JAMES LOWTHER, 5th baronet. Sir James, who represented the cos. of Cumberland and Westmoreland for several years in parliament, was elevated to the peerage 24 May, 1784, as Baron Lowther, of Lowther, co. Cumberland, Baron of the Barony of Kendal, in the same co., Baron of the Barony of Bury, co. Westmoreland, Viscount Lonsdale, in co. Westmoreland, and co. Palatine of Lancaster, Viscount Lowther and Earl of Lonsdale. His lordship m. 7 September, 1761, Lady Margaret Stuart, dau. of John, Earl of Bute, but having no issue, he obtained a new patent, dated 10 October, 1797, conferring upon him the dignities of Baron and Viscount Lowther, of Whitehaven, co. Cumberland, with remainder to the heirs male of his cousin, the Rev. Sir William Lowther, Bart., of Swillington. His lordship d. 24 May, 1802, when the Earldom of Lonsdale, and minor honours, created in 1784, became EXTINCT, while the peerage created in 1797, devolved (according to the limitation of the new patent), with the Earl's estates in Westmoreland and Cumberland upon

SIR WILLIAM LOWTHER, Bart., in whose favour the title LONSDALE was revived, he being created, 7 April, 1807, EARL OF LONSDALE. Refer to Extant Peerage.

Lineage.

The first mention of this family is in a render made by King HENRY I., of the lordship of Dice, in Norfolk (whether in requital of services, or as an inheritance, the record saith not) to

RICHARD DE LUCIE, who was governor of Faleis, in Normandy, temp. King STEPHEN, and defended that place with great valour, when besieged by Geoffrey, Earl of Anjou; for which heroic conduct he had a grant of lands, in the county of Essex, with the services of divers persons, to hold by ten knights' fees. In the subsequent contest between STEPHEN and the Empress Maud, he remained steady in his allegiance to the former, and obtained a victory of some importance near Wallingford Castle. Upon the adjustment of the dispute, the Tower of London, and the castle of Winchester, were by the advice of the whole clergy, placed in the hands of this feudal lord, he binding himself by solemn oath, and the hostage of his son, to deliver them up on the death of King STEPHEN, to King HENRY. Which being eventually fulfilled, Richard de Lucy was constituted sheriff of Essex and Hertfordshire, in the 2nd of HENRY II., A.D. 1158, and in three years afterwards, being with the king in Normandy, he was despatched to England to procure the election of Thomas à Becket, then lord chancellor, to the archiepiscopal see of Canterbury, vacant by the death of Theobald, Abbot of Becco. Soon after that he was appointed to the high office of Justice of England. In the 12th of this reign, upon the aid then assessed for marrying the king's dau., he certified his knights' fees (lying in the cos. of Kent, Suffolk, and Norfolk) de veteri feoffamento, to be in number seven, and that his ancestors performed the service of Castle Guard at Dover, for the same, as also that he held one knight's fee more, de nova feoffamento, in the co. Devon. About this time Becket having fled into Normandy from the power of King HENRY, came to Wicelias to celebrate the feast of the ascension, and observing several persons of distinction present, amongst whom was this Richard de Lucie, he ascended the pulpit, and there with lighted candles, pronounced the sentence of excommunication against them all, as public incendiaries betwixt the king and himself, but being neither convicted nor called to answer, they appealed and entered the church. Soon after this (13th HENRY II.), during a temporary absence of the king beyond sea, de Lucie was constituted Lieutenant of England, and again in 1173, when the Earl of Leicester and others having reared the standard of rebellion in behalf of Prince Henry, he besieged, in conjunction with Reginald, Earl of Cornwall, the town of Leicester, and having reduced it, demolished its walls, and laid it in ashes. In 1178, he founded the priory of Westwode, in the diocese of Rochester, in honour of St. Thomas, of Canterbury, the martyr: and begun, about the same time the foundation of the priory of Lesnes, in Kent, which he munificently endowed. In this priory he subsequently assumed the habit of a canon regular, and departing this life soon after (about 22nd HENRY II.), was buried in the chapter-house there. He m. Rohais —, and had issue,

1. Geoffrey, who d. in his father's life-time, leaving,

RICHARD, his son and heir, who departing this life, s. p., before 1196, the inheritance devolved upon his aunt, ROHAIS.

II. Hubert, who had the lordship of Stanford, in Essex, and hundred of Angre, for his livelihood, but d. s. p.

3. Maude, m. 1st, to Walter Fitz-Robert, to whom she brought the lordship of Disce; and 2ndly, to Richard de Riparia, and d. 27th HENRY III., 1243, leaving issue.

II. Rohais, m. 1st, to Fulbert de Dover, Lord of Chilham, in Kent; and 2ndly, Richard de Chilham. This Rohais, upon the decease of her nephew, succeeded to the estates of her elder brother, and upon the death of her younger brother, Hubert, she had livery of the whole barony, on paying a fine to the crown, in the 9th King JOHN.

Having thus disposed of the celebrated RICHARD DE LUCIE, and his family, we come to

REGINALD DE LUCIE, whose parentage Dugdale declares his inability to discover, but who, upon the rebellion of the Earl of Leicester, in the reign of HENRY II., was governor of Nottingham for the king; and attended at the coronation of RICHARD I., with the rest of the barons. This feudal lord m. Annabell, 2nd of the three daus. and co-heirs of William Fitz-Duncan, Earl of Murray, in Scotland (by Alice, dau. and heir of Robert de Rumell, Lord of Skipton), with whom he acquired the honour of Egremont, co. Cumberland, and by whom he had issue, his successor,

RICHARD DE LUCIE, who, in the 1st JOHN, (1199) paid a fine to the crown of 300 marks for livery of his lands, and licence to marry with whom he should think proper. In four years afterwards, he paid five marks and one palfrey to the king, that he might have jurors to inquire what customs and services his tenants had used to perform, and to do, him and his ancestors for their lands in Coupland. And the same year he obtained a grant from the king to himself and Ada, his wife, dau. and co-heir of Hugh de Morvill, of the forestship of Cumberland. The next year he paid 900 marks, and five palfreys, to have livery of the property of the said Ada, and to enjoy the forestship of Cumberland as amply as Hugh de Morvill had it, without any partition whatsoever. By an ample charter about this period, he granted to the burgesses of Egremont, divers immunities and privileges; namely, "that they should not go beyond the gates of the castle there, upon any summons, either with the lord, or his steward, to take distresses in Coupland. That in time of war they should not be obliged to find any more than twelve armed men for forty days, for the defence of the castle, at their own proper costs. That they should not give aid, unless for making his eldest son knight, marrying one of his daughters, or towards his own ransom, in case he were taken prisoner, and at such other times as his tenants, by military service, gave aid. Moreover, that they should be quit of pawns for their hogs in certain of his woods." But by this charter he obliged them to grind at his mills, and to give the thirteenth part for toll of their own corn, and of that which they should buy, the sixteenth part. Upon the purchase of any burgage, the buyer to give him four-pence at the taking possession. He d. on or before the 15th King JOHN, for then Ada, his widow, gave a fine of 500 marks for livery of her inheritance; as also for dowry of his lands, and that she might not be compelled to marry again. She espoused without compulsion, however, and without the king's licence, Thomas de Multon, in consequence of which the castle of Egremont, and her other lands, were seized by the crown. But upon paying a compensation they were restored, and she had livery of them again. Her first husband, Richard de Lucie, left two daus., his co-heirs, who became wards to her 2nd husband, and were m. to his sons, thus,

Annabell de Lucie, m. the eldest son, Lambert de Multon, and conveyed to him the lordship of Egremont. (See Multon of Egremont.)

Alice de Lucie, m. the younger son, Alan de Multon, and had a son,

Thomas de Multon.

The son of the younger co-heir, Alice, Thomas de Multon, having assumed the surname of his maternal family, became

THOMAS DE LUCIE, and in the 16th EDWARD I. (1288) had livery of all the lands which were of the inheritance of Alice, his mother. He m. Isabell, one of the daus. and co-heirs of Adam de Bolteby, by whom he acquired the manor of Langley, co. Northumberland, and dying in 1304, was s. by his son,

THOMAS DE LUCY, who, in the 34th EDWARD I., was in the wars of Scotland; and dying in 1308, s. p. was s. by his brother,

ANTHONY DE LUCY, who had been companion in arms of his deceased brother in the wars of Scotland. In the 10th EDWARD

II. (1316-17) this Anthony was joined in commission with William, Lord Dacre, for defending the counties of Cumberland and Westmoreland against the incursions of the Scots. The next year he was made sheriff of Cumberland, and constituted sole guardian of that county, and of Westmoreland, and again sheriff of Cumberland the ensuing year, when he was appointed governor of the castles of Carlisle and Cockermouth. He was summoned to parliament soon after, as a baron, and from that period to the 17th EDWARD III. In the 16th EDWARD II. he obtained a grant from the crown of the honour of Cockermouth, with the manor of Hapcastre, pertaining thereto, to hold by the service of one knight's fee. Amongst the other actions of this nobleman was the surprisal and capture of Andrew de Harcla, Earl of Carlisle, who had gone over to the Scots; whom he sent up to London a prisoner, where he was degraded and sentenced to death. Lord Lucy was subsequently appointed justice of Ireland, and governor of Berwick upon-Tweed. He m. Elizabeth, dau. of Robert Tiliott, Lord of Scaleby, and had issue,

THOMAS, his successor.

Joane, m. to William de Melton, and had issue, Sir William Melton, Knt., whose descendant and representative, Dorothy Melton, m. George, Lord Darcy.

Lord Lucy d. in 1343, and was s. by his son,

THOMAS DE LUCY, 2nd baron, summoned to parliament 25 February, 1342, in the lifetime of his father, and afterwards from 2 April, 1344, to 4 December, 1364. This nobleman, prior to the decease of his father, had attained high eminence in arms, particularly in Flanders, and at the siege of Loughmaban Castle, 17th EDWARD III. (1343). He was afterwards constantly employed to defend the northern marches towards Scotland, and had a part in the victory of Durham, wherein David, king of Scotland, was made prisoner. His lordship m. Mary, sister and co-heir of John de Multon, of Egremont (see above), by whom he acquired considerable estates in the county of Cumberland, and had issue,

ANTHONY, his successor.

Maud, m. 1st, to Gilbert de Umfraville, Earl of Angus, who d. s. p., and 2ndly, to Henry, 1st Earl of Northumberland. Upon the marriage of this lady, then sole heiress of the Barons Lucy, with the Earl of Northumberland, it was stipulated that the castle and honour of Cockermouth, part of her inheritance, should be settled upon the Earl and herself, and the heirs male of their bodies, failing which, upon the heirs of her body; and in case she should die without issue, then upon Henry, Lord Percy, the renowned Hotspur, the Earl's son and heir by his first wife, and the heirs male of his body, upon condition that the said Henry and his heirs male should bear the arms of Percy quarterly with the arms of Lucy, viz., "gules, three lucies ar." in all shields, banners, &c.; and notwithstanding the said Maud d. s. p. the descendants of the said Earl of Northumberland were often styled Barons Lucy, their pretensions to that dignity being manifestly without a shadow of foundation. In 1557, however, Thomas Percy, brother and heir of Henry, the 6th earl, was created Baron Percy, of Cockermouth and Petworth, Baron Poynings, Lucy, Bryan, and Fitzpayne—all which honours descended, as stated in Buxton's Extant Peerage, until, in 1670, upon the decease of Joceline, 11th Earl of Northumberland, without issue, they EXPIRED.

Lord Lucy d. in 1365, and was s. by his son,

ANTHONY DE LUCY, 3rd baron, but never summoned to parliament. This nobleman was joined with Roger de Clifford in the guardianship of the marches towards Cumberland and Westmoreland. In the 41st EDWARD III., his lordship, with divers other noble persons, procured license to travel beyond sea, and d. the ensuing year, 1368, leaving an infant dau., Joane, by his wife, Joane, widow of William, Lord Greytoste, which infant dau. d. the next year, when her aunt, MAUD, Countess of Angus, s. to the Barony of Lucy and the honour of Cockermouth, with the other estates. (Refer to issue of Thomas, 2nd baron.) This lady m. subsequently the Earl of Northumberland, and made the settlement already stated; but she d. s. p., when the BARONY OF LUCY reverted certainly to the descendant of her aunt, Joane (refer to issue of Anthony, 1st baron), Sir William Melton, Knt., and it is now vested in his representatives, should any such exist.

* Sir William Dugdale surmises that Sir WILLIAM DE LUCY, the 1st ancestor of the LUCYS, of CHARLESTON, co. Warwick, who bore the surname of Lucy, did so because his mother might have been the heir of some branch of this baronial family of Lucy.

LUDLOW—EARL AND BARON LUDLOW.

Earldom, by Letters Patent, dated 3 October, 1760.

Barony of the United Kingdom, by Letters Patent, dated 7 September, 1831.

Lineage.

The family of Ludlow (which derives its surname from the ancient town so denominated in the co. Salop) settled at Hill Deverell, in Wiltshire, about the middle of the 14th century, at which time lived,

WILLIAM LUDLOW, Esq., of Hill Deverell; from whom lineally descended,

SIR HENRY LUDLOW, Knt., of Malden Bradley, co Wilts, M.P. for that shire; b. in 1587; who m. Letitia, dau. of Thomas West, Lord Delawar, by whom he had issue, (with three daus.), EDMUND LUDLOW, the celebrated republican general during the civil wars; who d. in exile, at Vevay, in Switzerland, in 1693, where a monument is erected to his memory.

Henry, who was father of

STEPHEN LUDLOW, Esq., one of the clerks in the high court of Chancery, in Ireland. This gentleman d. in 1721, leaving issue,

PETER, his heir.

William, who m. Catharine, sister of James, 1st Earl of Courtown, and had issue.

Alice, m. to Francis Bernard, Esq., of Castle Bernard, co. Cork.

Arabella, m. to David Nixon, Esq., of Havensdale, co. Kildare.

Elizabeth, m. to Chief-Justice (John) Rogerson.

Frances, m. to Robert Leslie, Esq.

Stephen Ludlow was s. by his eldest son,

PETER LUDLOW, Esq., M.P. for the co. of Meath, in 1719 and 1727; who m. Mary, dau. and heir of John Preston, Esq., of Ardsalla, in that co., and had issue,

PETER, his heir.

Alice, m. to John Preston, Esq., of Ballinter, who was ancestor of JOHN PRESTON, Esq., of Bellinter, co. Meath.

Mary, m. to Sir Robert Rich, Bart., of Waverley.

He was s. at his decease, in 1750, by his only surviving son,

PETER LUDLOW, Esq., b. 21 April, 1730, M.P. for the co. Huntingdon, who was elevated to the peerage of Ireland, 19 December, 1755, as Baron Ludlow, of Ardsalla, co. Meath. His lordship was created, 3 October, 1760, Viscount Preston, and EARL OF LUDLOW, was sworn of the privy council in England, and nominated comptroller of his Majesty's household. He m. 20 January, 1753, Frances, eldest dau. of Thomas, Earl of Scarborough, by whom he had issue,

AUGUSTUS, 2nd earl.

GEORGE-JAMES, 3rd earl.

Frances-Mary, d. in 1804.

Anne-Barbara, d. in 1823.

Harriot, d. in 1833.

Charlotte, d. 4 April, 1831.

The earl d. in 1803, and was s. by his eldest son,

AUGUSTUS, 2nd earl, b. 1 January, 1755, at whose decease, anno 7 November, 1811, the honours devolved upon his brother, GEORGE-JAMES, 3rd earl, b. 12 December, 1758; who obtained a barony of the United Kingdom, as Baron Ludlow, by letters patent, dated 7 September, 1831. His lordship, who had lost an arm in the service of his country, was a general officer in the army, colonel of the 38th regiment of foot, lieutenant-governor of Berwick, and a knight grand-cross of the Bath. He d. anno 16 April, 1842, when his honours became extinct.

Arms—Quarterly: 1st and 4th, arg., a chev., between three foxes' heads, erased, sa., for LUDLOW; 2nd and 3rd, or, on a chief, sa., three crescents of the 1st, for PRESTON.

LUMLEY—BARON LUMLEY.

By Writ of Summons dated 28 September, 1394; and

By Act of Parliament, anno 1547.

Lineage.

The surname of this family was assumed from Lumley on the Wear, in the bishoprick of Durham, and the family deduced its lineage from

LULPH, son of Osbert de Lumley, m. Ælghitha (dau. by Elgyve, dau. of King ÆTHELRED II.) of Uchtred the Bold, Earl of Northumberland. Lulph, who was a nobleman of great popularity in the time of EDWARD THE CONFESSOR, was murdered by means of Leoferin, chaplain of Walcher, bishop of Durham, a crime soon after avenged by the populace of Durham sacrificing both the chaplain and the prelate to their just resentment. By Ælghitha, his wife, Lulph had issue,

I. UCHTRED.

II. Osbert de Stafford, whose dau. and heiress, Ormonda, m. Robert de Persall, who for his attachment to Robert de Stafford and the king's service, as also "ratione consanguinitatis," held the manor of Persall, in the parish of Eccleshall, co. Stafford, A.D. 1068, from which his descendants adopted their name.

The eldest son,

UCHTRED, assumed the name of LUMLEY, and from him lineally descended

ROGER DE LUMLEY, who m. Sybil, one of the daus. and co-heirs of the great Northumberland feudal Baron, Hugh de Morewic, at whose decease in 1261, his estates devolved upon his three daus., as co-heirs, namely,

Sybil, who m. 1st, as stated above, Roger de Lumley, and 2ndly, Roger de St. Martin.

Theophania, m. to John de Bulmer.

Beatrice, m. to John de Roseles.

Roger de Lumley was s. by his son,

SIR ROBERT DE LUMLEY, who m. Lucia, one of the three sisters and co-heirs of William, Robert, and Thomas de Thweng, Barons Thweng, of Kilton Castle, co. York (see THWENG), and was s. by his son,

SIR MARMADUKE DE LUMLEY, Knt., who first assumed the arms of his mother's family, those of the ancient house of Thweng, which his descendants have ever since borne. Sir Marmaduke was s. by his elder son,

ROBERT DE LUMLEY. This feudal lord d. anno and a minor, in the 48th EDWARD III., and was s. by his brother,

SIR RALPH DE LUMLEY, who in the 9th of RICHARD II., was in the expedition then made into Scotland, in the retinue of Hugh de Percy, Earl of Northumberland. In the 10th of EDWARD II., he was made governor of Berwick-upon Tweed, and continued therein until the 12th, when he was taken prisoner by the Scots. In three years after (16th RICHARD II.), he was deputy-governor of the same place under Henry de Percy, Earl of Northumberland, and the next year had license to make a castle of his manor house at Lumley. Sir Ralph was summoned to parliament as a Baron, from the 8th RICHARD II. to the 1st HENRY IV., 1384 to 1399, inclusive. In the latter year, joining in the insurrection of Thomas de Holand, Earl of Kent, for the restoration of the former monarch, he was slain in a skirmish at Cirencester, and being attainted in 1400, his lands were seized by the crown, and the BARONY OF LUMLEY fell under the attainder. His lordship left issue by his wife, Eleanor, dau. of John, Lord Nevill, of Raby, and sister of Ralph, Earl of Westmoreland, four sons and three daus., of whom the youngest, Marmaduke de Lumley, was successively master of Trinity Hall, Cambridge, and chancellor of the University; bishop of Carlisle (1430), treasurer of England (1446), and bishop of Lincoln (1451). Lord Lumley was s. by his eldest son,

THOMAS DE LUMLEY, who had been attainted with his father, and d. s. p. in 1404, was s. by his brother,

SIR JOHN DE LUMLEY, b. 1384, who, doing his homage in the 6th HENRY IV., had livery of all the castles, manors, and lands, whereof his father, Ralph, Lord Lumley, was seized at the time of his attainder; and was restored in blood by act of parliament, in the 13th of the same reign. He was subsequently, temp. HENRY IV., and V., distinguished in the wars of France, and fell at the battle of Beaugé, in Anjou, 13 April, 1421. Sir John m. Felicia, dau. of Sir Matthew Redman, governor of Berwick, and was s. by his only son,

SIR THOMAS DE LUMLEY, b. 1408, who, in the 33rd HENRY VI., 1455, was governor of Scarborough Castle, and upon the accession of King EDWARD IV., having petitioned the parliament for the reversal of the attainder of his grandfather, Ralph, Lord Lumley, and that prayer being granted by the repeal of the said attainder, was summoned to parliament as BARON LUMLEY, 26 July, 1461, and from that period to 16 January, 1497, in which year he is supposed to have died. His lordship m. Margaret, dau. of Sir James Harrington, Knt., brother of Sir Wm. Harrington, K.G., and was s. at his decease, by his only son,

SIR GEORGE LUMLEY, 3rd baron, who does not appear to have been summoned to parliament. He was sheriff of Northumberland, 2nd EDWARD IV., 1462. This nobleman m. Elizabeth, dau. and co-heir of Roger Thornton, Esq., an opulent merchant of Newcastle-upon-Tyne (by his wife, Elizabeth, dau. of John, Lord Greystoke), and had issue,

I. THOMAS, who m. Elizabeth Plantagenet, natural dau. of King EDWARD IV., by Lady Elizabeth Lucy, and d. v. p. (anno 1487) leaving a son and heir, and three daus., viz.,

- 1 RICHARD, who s. his grandfather, as 4th baron.
- 1 Anne, m. to Ralph, Lord Ogle. (See OGLE.)
- 2 Sybil, m. to William, Baron Hilton.
- 3 Elizabeth, m. to William Croswell.

II. Roger, who had three daus. to survive: Agnes, wife of John Lambton, Esq. of Lambton; Isabel, wife of Richard Conyers, Esq., of Horden; Margaret, wife of Thomas Trollope, Esq., of Thornley.

III. Ralph.

Lord Lumley acquired by his marriage the lordships of Wilton, in Northumberland, and Lulworth, and Isle, in the bishoprick, but had a protracted litigation regarding those lands with Giles Thornton, the bastard son of his father-in-law, which quarrel terminated by his lordship's killing his antagonist in the ditch of Windsor Castle. The baron, who, in the 7th HENRY VII. (1492), was in the expedition then made into Scotland under the command of Thomas, Earl of Surrey, when Norham Castle was besieged, d. in 1508, and was s. by his grandson,

RICHARD DE LUMLEY, 4th baron, summoned to parliament from 17 October, 1509, to 28 November, 1511. To the last will the following addition is made on the roll, "Mortuus est, ut dicitur." His lordship m. Anne, dau. of Sir John Conyers, K.G., of Hornby Castle, co. York, and sister of William, 1st Lord Conyers, by whom he had two sons,

I. JOHN, his successor.

II. Anthony, who m. a dau. of Richard Grey, Esq., of co. Northumberland, and left a son,

Richard Lumley, who m. Anne Kurtwisch, and had, with other issue, a son,

SIR RICHARD LUMLEY, who s. to the estates of his kinsman, Lord Lumley, as hereafter stated, and was elevated to the peerage of Ireland, as VISCOUNT LUMLEY, and from whom the EARL OF SCARBOROUGH is lineally descended.

His lordship d. in 1510 or 1511, and was s. by his elder son,

JOHN DE LUMLEY, 5th baron, b. 1493, summoned to parliament 23 November, 1514. This nobleman was one of the barons who, in the 22nd HENRY VIII. (1530) signed the memorable letter to Pope Clement VII., but in the 28th of that reign he was one of the chiefs of those northern lords who appeared in the insurrection called the "Pilgrimage of Grace;" when a pardon being offered by the Duke of Norfolk, who commanded the army sent against the rebels, his lordship was deputed to treat with the duke, and succeeded so well, that all concerned in the affair were allowed to return home without being further molested. Lord Lumley, was at the celebrated battle of Flodden Field under the Earl of Surrey. His lordship m. Joane, dau. of Henry, Lord Scrope, of Bolton, and had an only son,

GEORGE, who, being implicated in the treason of Lord Darcy and others, was apprehended, committed to the Tower, and being convicted of high treason, was executed and attainted in the 29th HENRY VIII., 1537 (his father then living). He m. Jane, 2nd dau. and co-heir of Sir Richard Knightley, of Fawsley, co. Northampton, and left issue, an only son, and two daus., viz.,

John, who was restored in blood, and created Baron Lumley, (see that dignity,) but by neither of his two wives had surviving issue.

Jane, m. Geoffrey Markham, Esq., and d. s. p.

BARBARA, m. twice; 1st, Humphrey Lloyd, Esq., M.P. for Denbigh, in 1563, the celebrated antiquary and historian, and by him, who d. August, 1568, at. forty-one, and was buried in Denbigh Church, (Whitchurch), where there is a monument to him, had issue,

I. Splendinan Lloyd, living in 1568 who d. s. p.

II. HARRY, or HENRY LLOYD, of Cheam, living 1568, who m. Mary, dau. of Robert Brome, Esq., of Bromfield, co. Essex, and was s. by his son, HENRY LLOYD, who m. Isabella, sister of Sir Thomas Parkyns, of Bunby, co. Nottingham, baronet, so created, 15 July, 1684, and dau. of Isham Parkyns, Esq., of Bunby, and was s. by his son, HENRY LLOYD, who m. Elizabeth, dau. of Benjamin Goodwin, Esq., of Stretham, and had with three daus., a son,

The Rev. Dr. Robert Lloyd, who claimed the barony of Lumley, in 1723.

III. John Lloyd, living in 1568.

IV. Humphrey Lloyd, dead in 1568.

1. Jane, dead in 1568.

II. Lumley, living in 1568, who subsequently m. Robert Coytmor, Esq., of Coytmor, co. Carnarvon, and was mother, by him, of George Coytmor, Esq., of Coytmor, whose eventual heir, Mary, heiress of Coytmor, dau. and heir of Robert Coytmor, Esq., of Coytmor, m. Edward-Philip Pugh, Esq., of Penrhyn, in Creuddyn, co. Carnarvon, and had an elder dau. and co-heir, Bridget, who m. 11 January, 1766, Lieut.-Col. Glynn-Wynn, M.P., brother of Thomas Wynn, 1st Baron Newborough, and had issue,

1 John Glynn-Wynn, b. 6 October, 1766.

2 Glynn-Wynn, b. 1766; who m. Elizabeth, 6th dau. of the Rev. Frederick Hamilton.

3 William Wynn, D.D., b. 1767, who, in accordance with the will of his grandmother, assumed the name of Coytmor. He m. Eliza, dau. and heir of Thomas Tennison, chief justice of the Common Pleas in Ireland, and widow of Henry Bellingham, of Castle Bellingham, co. Louth.

4 Thomas-Edward Wynn, of Newburgh Hall, co. York, who m. Charlotte, eldest dau. and co-heir of Henry, 2nd Earl of Fauconberg, and assumed the name and arms of Belasyse, in addition to that of Wynn.

1 Bridget, m. John, 4th Earl of Egmont, and d. 24 January, 1826.

2 Frances, m. Henry Soame, Esq.

3 Dorothea.

Barbara Lumley, m. 2ndly, William Williams, Esq., of Cochwillan, co. Carnarvon, and was mother of

1. Henry Williams, Esq., of Cochwillan, who m. Jane, dau. and heir of Thomas Salesbury, Esq., of Denbigh Castle, 3rd son of Sir John Salesbury, and was father of two sons, 1 Lumley; 2 William Williams, who m. and had issue, an only son, Griffith Williams, who d. unm. 2 April, 1658, and was buried at St. Alkmunda, Shrewsbury. The elder son LUMLEY WILLIAMS, jure ux. of Ystymcollwyn, co. Montgomery, m. Dorothy, dau. and heir of Rhys Thomas, Esq., of Ystymcollwyn, and was father of an only son, Lumley Williams, Esq., of Ystymcollwyn, whose grand-daughter and heiress, Muriel, heiress of Ystymcollwyn, dau. and heir of Lumley Williams, living 1703, m. her kinsman, Arthur Williams, Esq., of Meyllionydd, living 1723, derived from Arthur Williams, of Meyllionedd, younger brother of William Williams, Esq., of Cochwillan, who m. Barbara, the heiress of Lumley. The grand-daughter and heiress of this marriage, Anne, heiress of Ystymcollwyn and Meyllionydd, m. Sir Robert-Howell Vaughan, of Nanney, co. Merioneth, created a baronet, 21 June, 1791. The grandson and heir of this marriage, Sir Robert Williams Vaughan, 3rd and last Baronet of Nanney, d. s. p.

1. Blanch, m. Richard Price, Esq., of Eglwysseg, co. Denbigh.

II. Mary, m. William Bulkeley, Esq., of Brynddŷ, co. Anglesey, father of an elder son, William Bulkeley, Esq., of Brynddŷ, living 20 May, 1624, whose heir general is the present William Bulkeley Hughes, Esq., of Plas Coch, Brynddŷ, lord of the manor of Kemmua, co. Anglesey, late M.P. for the Carnarvon Boroughs.

III. Barbara, m. Richard Herbert, of Pwke.

Upon the death of Lord Lumley (his only son, George, having been, as above stated, previously attainted) this Barony of Lumley became EXTINCT.

His lordship's grandson and heir, however,

JOHN LUMLEY, having petitioned parliament, in the 1st EDWARD VI., praying that the attainder might be reversed, it was enacted by act of parliament, in 1547, "that the said John Lumley, and the heirs male of his body, should have, hold, enjoy, and bear, the name, dignity, state, and pre-eminence of a Baron of the realm." By this law, a new barony of Lumley was created. The old one having merged in the crown under the act of attainder, nothing but a positive repeal of that statute could have restored it, and the new act did not effect that object.

Lord Lumley was one of the noblemen who sat in judgment upon MARY, Queen of Scots, and Robert Devereux, Earl of Essex. His lordship m. 1st, Jane, eldest dau. and co-heir of Henry Fitz-Alan, Earl of Arundel, by whom he had a son and two daus., who all d. in infancy. He m. 2ndly, Elizabeth, dau. of John, Lord Darcy, of Chiche, but had no issue. Of Lord Lumley, Camden says, "that he was of entire virtue, integrity, and innocence; and in his old age, a complete pattern of true nobility. Having so great a veneration for the memory of his ancestors, that he caused monuments to be erected for them, in the collegiate church of Chester-le-Street (opposite Lumley Castle), in the order as they succeeded one another, from Lulphus down to his own time: which he had either picked out of the demolished monasteries, or made new. He also took care that his estates should descend to one of his own name and blood, by his last will and testament; in which he bequeaths to his kinsman and heir male, Richard, eldest son and heir apparent of Roger, the son of Anthony Lumley, brother to John, Lord Lumley, his grandfather (see above), his Castle of Lumley, together with divers manors, lands, tenements, &c."

His lordship d. 11 April, 1609, and was interred in the Church of Cheam, having a noble monument of white marble erected to his memory. With his lordship the new barony of Lumley, created by act of parliament, EXPIRED.

The aforesaid RICHARD LUMLEY, who s. to the estates of John, last Baron Lumley, was, in 1628, elevated to the peerage of Ireland as VISCOUNT LUMLEY: and his grandson was created, in 1690, EARL OF SCARBOROUGH, under which title the subsequent history of this family will be found in the Extant Peerage.

The Barony of Lumley was claimed, in 1723, by the above mentioned Rev. Robert Lloyd, as lineal descendant of Barbara Lumley, sister of the attainted George, when the House of Lords came to the resolution, "That the petitioner had no right to a writ of summons in parliament, as prayed by his petition,"—which resolution was founded upon the previous report—

"That by the act of parliament of 1st EDWARD VI. (which conferred the barony upon John Lumley, son and heir of the attainted George), 'a new barony of Lumley was created, and limited by express words to John, Lord Lumley, in tail male; and that upon his death, without issue male, the said barony became extinct.

"That the attainder of George Lumley is not reversed by the said act, but remains yet in force; and that the restitution of John, Lord Lumley, in blood only, while the attainder remains unreversed, could not possibly revive the ancient barony, which was before merged in the crown, in consequence of that attainder."

NOTE.—In consequence of the marriage of Sir Robert Lumley with Lucia de Thweng, one of the co-heirs of the Lords Thweng, a third of the Barony of Thweng devolved upon the Lumleys, which third, it is presumed, merged in the crown under the attainder of George Lumley, in the reign of HENRY VIII.

Arms—Originally: Gu., six martlets arg.

After the alliance with de Thweng: Or. a fesse, gu., between three parrots, ppr. collared of the second.

LUTEREL—BARON LUTEREL.

By Writ of Summons, dated 24 June, 1295.

Lineage.

This noble family claimed descent from one of the Norman chiefs who accompanied the CONQUEROR to England.

In the time of RICHARD I., the lands of

SIR GEOFFREY DE LUTEREL, in the cos. Nottingham and Derby, were seized by the crown, for his adherence to the Earl of Moreton, but he was compensated, upon the accession of the earl to the throne, as King JOHN, by extensive territorial and other grants. He m. Trethesenta, 2nd dau. and co-heir (with her sister Alicia, wife of Robert de Gant) of William Paganel, Lord of Irnham, and by her (who m. 2ndly, Henry de Newmarch), had a son and heir, ANDREW. Sir Geoffrey d. in the 2nd year of HENRY III., 1218, and was s. by his son,

SIR ANDREW DE LUTEREL, of Irnham, co. Lincoln, who, 14th HENRY III., upon the collection of the scutage, for the first journey of that king into Brittany, accounted £30 for fifteen knights' fees. In this year, he laid claim to lands in the county of Somerset, as well as the manor of Irnham, co. Lincoln, which formerly belonged to Maurice de Gant, and had descended to him, by right of inheritance; and the next year he had livery of the same, upon paying 100 marks to the crown. He subsequently served the office of sheriff of Lincolnshire. He m. the dau. of Philip de la Mare, a rich and powerful baron; and dying in 1264, was s. by his elder son,

GEOFFREY DE LUTEREL, feudal Baron of Irnham, co. Lincoln. This Geoffrey being insane, his brother, Alexander Luterel, had the custody of his person, and William de Gray, whose dau. he had married, the education of his children. To these succeeded

SIR ROBERT DE LUTEREL (whom Courthope's Historic Peerage calls brother of Geoffrey de Luterel). In the 5th EDWARD I., A.D. 1277, he was in the expedition then made into Wales, and had summons amongst other great men, in the 22nd of the same reign, to attend the king, touching the important affairs of the realm. He was summoned to parliament as a Baron, 24 June, 30 September, and 2 November, 1295, and dying in 1297, possessed of Irnham, co. Lincoln, and Hoton Paganel, co. York, left by Joan, his wife, a son and heir,

SIR GEOFFREY DE LUTEREL, feudal Lord of Irnham, who does not appear, from the existing enrolments to have been ever summoned to parliament. He m. Agnes, dau. of Sir Richard Sutton, Knt., and left three sons,

I. ANDREW, his heir,

II. Geoffrey (Sir), was one of the chief knights in the army of EDWARD III., in Scotland, in 1355. He m. Constance, dau. of Lord Scrope, but left no issue.

III. JOHN (Sir).

The eldest son,

SIR ANDREW LUTTRELL, 5th Baron of Irnham and Lord of Hoton Paganel, m. Beatrice, dau. of Sir Geoffrey Scrope, Lord Scrope, of Masham, and was father of

SIR ANDREW LUTTRELL, Knt., 6th Baron of Irnham, who m. Hawisia, dau. of John le Despenser, and dying in 1397, was s. by his son,

SIR ANDREW LUTTRELL, 7th Baron of Irnham, who d. 1st HENRY IV., A.D. 1400, leaving his estates to his son,

SIR GEOFFREY LUTTRELL, Knt., 8th Baron of Irnham, at whose decease s. p. in 1417, the Barony of Irnham and Lordship of Hoton Paganel devolved on his only sister and heiress, HAWISIA DE BELESBY, relict of Thomas de Belesby, and afterwards wife of Sir Godfrey de Hilton, Knt.

From the Hiltons, Irnham was conveyed by marriage to the Thimlebyss, and by them, by a female, to the Conquests, an heiress of which family brought the manor to Henry, 8th LORD ARUNDELL DE WARDOUR, through whose daughter it passed to the Cliffords.

LUTTRELL—EARL AND VISCOUNT CARHAMPTON AND BARON IRNHAM.

Irish Barony, by Letters Patent, dated 13 October, 1768.

Irish Viscounty, by Letters Patent, dated 9 January, 1781.

Irish Earldom, &c., by Letters Patent, dated 23 June, 1785.

Lineage.

A branch of this ancient family appears to have settled in Ireland so early as the reign of King JOHN, when

SIR GEOFFREY LUTTRELL obtained from that Prince a grant of the lands of Luttrellstown, co. Dublin. Perhaps this was the same person who is mentioned in the preceding article.

Be this as it may, certain it is that the LUTTRELLS, of DUNSTER CASTLE, and the LUTTRELLS, EARLS of CARHAMPTON were of the old baronial stock of Irnham.

SIR ANDREW LUTTRELL, of Chilton, co. Devon, a scion of the family of Luttrell of Irnham, m. the Lady Elizabeth, 2nd dau. of Hugh Courtenay, Earl of Devon (by Margaret, his wife, dau. of Humphrey de Bohun, Earl of Hereford), and was father of

SIR HUGH LUTTRELL, who resided at Dunster, co. Somerset, an honour and castle which his mother had purchased from the Mohuns, once Lords of Dunster. Sir Hugh was M.P. for Somersetshire in the reign of RICHARD II., and subsequently for Devonshire. In the 8th HENRY IV. (1407), he gained a suit-at-law against Edward Plantagenet, Duke of York, and the other heirs of John, last Lord Mohun, of Dunster, by which he obtained possession of the honours and castle of Dunster, the lordship of Carhampton, &c. He was afterwards ranger of Blackmore forest in Dorsetshire, a privy councillor to HENRY V., and one of the commanders under that martial monarch at the reduction of Harfleur in Normandy in 1415, and at the memorable siege of Rouen. Sir Hugh m. Catherine, dau. of Sir John Beaumont, Knt., of Sherwell, and had three sons,

I. SIR JOHN, from whom descend the LUTTRELLS of Dunster Castle, co. Somerset, for whose lineage refer to BURKE'S Landed Gentry.

II. ROBERT, of whose line we treat.

III. Andrew.

The 2nd son,

ROBERT LUTTRELL, acquired considerable possessions in the co. Dublin, by his marriage with the dau. of Sir Elias de Ashbourne, Knt., of Devon. He d. in the 15th HENRY VI. (1436-7), seized of the castle and lands of Luttrellstown, co. Dublin. He left at his decease besides a dau. Anne, m. to Simon Fleming, Lord Slane, and a son Hugh, another son,

CHRISTOPHER LUTTRELL, who s. at Luttrellstown, and was father of,

THOMAS LUTTRELL, who m. Catharine, dau. of Thomas Rochfort of Kilbride, ancestor of the Earl of Belvedere, and widow of Thomas Delafield, Esq., of Cudiffe, and d. in April, 1456, leaving issue,

- I. THOMAS, his heir.
- II. RICHARD, heir to his brother.
- III. Robert (Sir).
- I. Ellen, m. to Nicholas Traversa, Esq., of Cortilagh, co. Meath.

The eldest son,

THOMAS LUTTRELL, m. Ellen, dau. of Philip Bellew, Esq., but dying s. p., was s. by his brother,

RICHARD LUTTRELL, of Luttrellstown, living 1540, who m. Margaret, dau. of Patrick Fitz-Leons, Esq., of co. Dublin, and had issue,

- I. THOMAS (Sir), his heir
- II. Simon, alderman of Dublin, who m. Margaret, dau. of — Bath, Esq., of Landenstown, co. Kildare, and had three daus.: 1 Mary, m. to Robert Sherlock, Esq.; 2 Catherine, m. to Patrick White, Esq., of Flemingstown; and 3 Elizabeth, m. to Christopher Cruise, Esq., of the Naule.
- I. Anne, m. to Sir Patrick Barnwell, Knt., master of the Rolls.
- II. Catharine, m. 1st to Nicholas Barnwell, Esq., of Drum-nagh, and 2ndly, to Sir John Plunkett, Knt., of Dunsoghly, co. Dublin.
- III. Elizabeth, m. 1st to John Fitz-Chrisopher Cusack, of Turvey, and 2ndly, to Thomas Barbe, of Dublin.

The eldest son,

SIR THOMAS LUTTRELL, Knt., s. to Luttrellstown. In November, 1553, he was appointed chief justice of the court of Common Pleas in Ireland, and subsequently a privy councillor. He m. 1st, Anne, dau. of Bartholomew Aylmer, Esq., of Lyons, co. Kildare, and by her had two sons and two daus.,

- I. RICHARD, his heir.
- II. Robert, m. Elizabeth, 2nd dau. of Robert Rochfort, Esq., of Kilbride, and was father of Richard Luttrell of Tankardstown, co. Meath, who m. Anne, dau. of Robert Cusack, Esq., of Cusington, co. Meath, and d. in October, 1633, leaving two sons and two daus., viz., 1 Oliver, of Tankardstown; 2 James; 1 Jane, m. to Rowland Plunket of Cocklestown; and 2 Mary, m. to George Bathe, of Edickston, co. Meath.
- I. Margaret, m. to Lucas Netterville, Justice of the King's Bench.
- II. Anne, m. to Thomas Dillon, Esq., of Riverston, co. Meath.

Sir Thomas, m. 2ndly, Elizabeth, dau. and co-heir of Sir William Bathe, Knt., of Rathfeigh, co. Meath, and had further issue,

- I. John, who m. Mary, dau. of Walter Nugent, Esq., of Moyrath, co. Meath.
- II. James, m. Dame Janet Sarsfield.

Sir Thomas was s. by his eldest son,

RICHARD LUTTRELL, Esq., who m. Mary, dau. of Lord Dunsany, and widow of Thomas Plunket, Esq., of Rathmore, and by her had (besides two daus., 1. Anne, d. unm.; and 2. Elizabeth, m. in 1601, to Sir Christopher Nugent), one son and successor,

THOMAS LUTTRELL, Esq., M.P. for co. Dublin, in the reigns of King JAMES and King CHARLES, and a Privy Councillor. He m. 1st, in 1606, Eleanor Preston, dau. of Christopher, 4th Viscount Gormanston, and by her had,

- I. SIMON, his heir.
- II. Stephen.
- I. Catharine, m. to Robert Hartpole, Esq., of Shrule, Queen's County.

Mr. Thomas Luttrell m. 2ndly, in 1616, Alison, youngest dau. of Nicholas, 21st Baron of Howth, and by her had issue,

- I. John.
- II. Thomas, of Ranaghan, co. Westmeath, d. s. p. in 1673, and by will settled his estates on his nephew Thomas, Viscount Fitz-William.
- I. Susan, m. to Edmund Butler, Esq., of Tullahinch, co. Carlow.
- II. Mary, m. to William, 3rd Viscount Fitz-William.
- III. Margaret
- IV. Alison.

Mr. Luttrell d. 12 November, 1634, and was s. by his eldest son,

SIMON LUTTRELL, Esq., of Luttrellstown, in whose time the castle of Luttrellstown was taken by Colonel Hewson, commander of the parliament forces, in and about Dublin, and held possession of by him till the Restoration, when Mr. Luttrell was reinstated. He m. Mary, eldest dau. of Jenico, 5th Viscount Gormanstown, and widow of Sir Thomas Alen, Bart., of St. Wolstant, and d. in 1650, leaving a son and heir,

THOMAS LUTTRELL, Esq., who was restored to his estates in fee, by the acts of settlement. He m. a dau. of William Segrave, Esq., of co. Dublin, and d. in August, 1674, having had issue,

- I. SIMON, his heir.
- II. HENRY, successor to his brother.
- III. Thomas, who was attainted of high treason in 1583, and d. s. p.

IV. Robert, m. Anne, 3rd dau. of Nicholas, 6th Viscount Gormanston.

The eldest son,

SIMON LUTTRELL, Esq., of Luttrellstown, M.P. for the co. Dublin, was governor of the town and garrison of Dublin, during the residence of JAMES II. in Ireland, a privy councillor, and colonel of a regiment of dragoons. This gentleman adhered with unshaken fidelity to his royal master's fortunes, and was killed at the battle of Landen in 1693, commanding an Irish regiment in foreign service, when, having had no issue by his wife, Catherine, dau. of Sir Thomas Newcomen, Bart., of Sutton, he was s. by his brother,

HENRY LUTTRELL, an officer of rank in King JAMES's army, whose treachery to and desertion of the cause he had espoused excited "the abhorrence of the Roman Catholic population" of Ireland. In 1702, Colonel Luttrell was appointed a major-general in the Dutch army, with a regiment, and nominated to command on a military enterprise of importance; but at the death of King WILLIAM he retired to his seat at Luttrellstown, where he chiefly resided, until assassinated in his sedan-chair, by a band of ruffians, in the city of Dublin, 22 October, 1717.* He m. in 1704, Elizabeth, dau. of Charles Jones, Esq., of Halkin, co. Flint, and by her (who m. 2ndly, Nicholas Netterville, Esq., of Hollymount, co. Meath), left two sons,

ROBERT LUTTRELL, Esq., the elder, who s. his father, and d. abroad upon his travels, and

SIMON LUTTRELL, Esq., b. 1713, who s. his brother at Luttrellstown. This gentleman was advanced to the peerage of Ireland, 13 October, 1768, by the title of Baron Ingham (a title anciently borne by his ancestors in England, as stated in the preceding article), of Luttrellstown, co. Dublin; created Viscount Carhampton, of Castlehaven, co. Cork, 9 January, 1781: and EARL OF CARHAMPTON, 23 June, 1785. His lordship m. in 1737, Maria, dau. and eventually heiress of Sir Nicholas Lawes, Knt., governor of Jamaica, by whom he had issue, five sons and three daus. The earl's youngest dau., Lucy, m. Capt. Moriarty; and the eldest, Anne, after the demise of Christopher Horton, Esq., of Catton, her 1st husband, m. H. R. H. the Duke of Cumberland, brother to King GEORGE III. The earl d. 14 January, 1787, and was s. by his eldest son,

HENRY-LAWES LUTTRELL, 2nd Earl of Carhampton, b. 7 August, 1743; a general officer in the army, and colonel of the 6th dragoon guards. His lordship m. Jane, dau. of George Boyd, Esq.; but d. s. p. in 1821, when the honours devolved upon his only surviving brother,

JOHN LUTTRELL, 3rd Earl of Carhampton, who m. 1st, 1 July, 1766, the Hon. Elizabeth Olmuis, only dau. of John, Lord Waltham, and eventually heiress of her brother, the last Lord Waltham. (See that title.) The earl thereupon assumed by sign-manual in 1787, the additional surname and arms of OLMUIS. They had issue,

- I. John, d. young, 1769.
- II. James, d. young, 1772.
- I. LADY FRANCES-MARIA LUTTRELL-OLMUIS, m. in 1789, Sir Simeon Stuart, 4th Bart., whom she survived to 4 January, 1848.

The earl m. 2ndly, in 1798, Maria, eldest dau. of John Morgan, Esq., recorder of Maidstone, and by her, who d. 18 January, 1867, had another dau.,

- II. LADY MARIA-ANNE LUTTRELL-OLMUIS, m. in 1821, Lieut.-Colonel Hardress-Roberts Saunderson, grenadier guards, of Northbrook House, Hants, son of Francis Saunderson, Esq., of Castle Saunderson, co. Cavan. She d. 14 November, 1861, leaving issue. (See Landed Gentry).

Lord Carhampton d. 17 March, 1829, when all his honours EXPIRED: the heirs-general of his lordship's family are SIR SIMON HENRY STUART, Bart., and HARDRESS-LUTTRELL SAUNDERSON, Esq.

Creation not accurately ascertained.

Lineage.

SIR ROBERT LYLE (son of Sir John Lyle, by his wife, one of the daus. and co-heirs of the family of Marr), was created a peer by King JAMES II. of Scotland, about 1446; and d. about 1470. He m. 1st, Margaret, eldest dau. of Andrew, Lord Gray, and by her he had a dau.,

Margaret, m. to Alexander, son and heir of Alan Lyle, of Craighate.

He m. 2ndly, Margaret Wallace, by whom he had a son and a dau.,

ROBERT, 2nd Lord Lyle.

Elizabeth, m. to John Stewart, of Blackhall.

The only son,

ROBERT LYLE, 2nd Lord Lyle, was a privy councillor to JAMES III., and an ambassador to England in March, 1472, when he concluded a truce with that nation. He m. 1st, a dau. of John, Master of Seton, who d. s. p.; and 2ndly, Lady Elizabeth Douglas, 2nd dau. of Archibald, 5th Earl of Angus, by whom he had a son,

ROBERT LYLE, 3rd Lord Lyle; who d. 1511, leaving by Mariot Lindsay, his wife, a dau. of the house of Dunrod, a son and two daus., viz.,

JOHN, 4th Lord Lyle.

Helen, m. to Alan, Master of Cathcart.

Catherine, m. to Archibald MacIachlan, of MacIachlan.

The only son,

JOHN LYLE, 4th Lord Lyle, being under age at his father's death, the king assigned his wardship and marriage to James Betoun, archbishop of Glasgow, and he m. a niece of the archbishop's, Grissel, dau. of David Betoun, of Creich, by whom he had an only dau.,

JEAN LYLE, m. to SIR NIEL MONTGOMERY, of Lainshaw, 2nd son of Sir Niel Montgomery, of Lainshaw, 3rd son of Hugh, 1st Earl of Eglinton. (See BURKE's Extant Peerage.) Her descendant, James Montgomery, of Lainshaw, tendered his vote as Lord Lyle at the election of representative peers for Scotland in 1721 and 1722, as did Sir Walter Montgomery at the general election, 1784. LYTTLETON—BARONS LYTTLETON OF FRANKLEY, CO. WORCESTER.

By Letters Patent, dated 18 November, 1756.

Lineage.

The Harleian MS. 6814, f. 40-65, contains valuable collections relating to this family. Selden was possessed of two grants of Lands to the monastery of Evesham, co. Worcester, in 7th HENRY II. (1161), to both of which JOHN DE LYTTLETON was a witness. This is the most ancient mention of the name of Lyttleton which has been met with; and as the land conveyed was at Lench, near South Lyttleton, it is probable that this John was ancestor of the Lyttletons, of Frankley, in Worcestershire.

The family of LUTTLETON or LYTTLETON has been of long standing in Worcestershire, and from an ancient pedigree it appears that it was seated at Frankley about 1235, when it is recorded that,

THOMAS DE LYTTLETON m. his 1st wife, Emma de Frankley, an heiress, lady of the manor of Frankley, dau. of Sir Simon de Frankley, Knt., but whether he was a stranger in the country or resided in the town of South Lyttleton in the vale of Evesham, as there is reason to think he did, is a matter of doubt. They had an only dau.,

EMMA, who m. 1st, Angerus de Tatlington of Tredington, in Worcestershire; and 2ndly, Nicholas Whetastede. She was a benefactress to the abbey of Haileowen, in Shropshire, and d. in 1298.

Thomas Lyttleton m. 2ndly, Aeseline, dau. and heiress of William Fitz-Waryn of Upton, in Worcestershire, one of the justices-itinerant and judge of the Common Pleas, 12th HENRY III. (1228), and sheriff of Worcestershire in the following year, and by her he had three sons,

THOMAS.

Edmund, a priest.

John, d. unm.

Thomas de Lyttleton was s. by his eldest son (or, as some say, by his son Edmund, who d. s. p., and was s. by his youngest and only surviving brother)

THOMAS DE LYTTLETON, who resided at his manor of Coulesdon, and had lands at Newenton (vulgo Walton Beauchamp), co. Worcester. He was elected M.P. for that shire 9th EDWARD II. (1318-6) and 24th EDWARD III. (1360). He m. Lucia, dau. of John du Bois, of Allwood, of a considerable family at Wolverly, in that co. and was s. by his son,

THOMAS DE LYTTLETON, who m. Julian, dau. of Robert de Somery, and had,

I. THOMAS, his successor.

II. John, who was appointed a commissioner of array, with other the chief gentlemen of the co. Worcester, 1st HENRY IV. (1400) on a rumour of foreign invasion, m. Beatrice Freshevel, of a noble family in the co. Warwick, by whom he had an only dau., m. to Jeffery Frere, Esq.

The elder son,

THOMAS DE LUTTELTON (who thus spelled the name and sealed with the chevron between three escallops, as used by his posterity), recovered the manor of Frankley, by writ of right, on failure of the issue of his cousin, Thomas de Tatlington. He was esquire of the body to (RICHARD II.?) HENRY IV., and HENRY V., and had annual pensions to him by both kings out of the fee farm rents of Worcester pro bono et gratuito servicio, as expressed in the grants. He m. Maud, dau. of Richard Quartermain (and heir of a large estate at Ricote and North Weston in Oxfordshire), by Joan, his wife, dau. and heir of Grey of Rotherfield, by whom he had an only dau. and heiress, ELIZABETH. He d. about 1421, and his wife surviving, and holding Frankley in dower or jointure, m. 2ndly, John Massey, Esq. The only child,

ELIZABETH DE LUTTELTON m. THOMAS WESTCOTE, Esq., the king's servant in court, a gentleman of Devonshire, anciently descended; but she being fair and of noble spirit (to use the phraseology of Lord Coke) and having large possessions and inheritances from her ancestors, De Luttleton, and from her mother and other ancestors, resolved to retain her name, and therefore provided by Westcote's assent before marriage, that her issue inheritable should be called by the name of LUTTELTON. Upon this marriage her husband settled at Frankley, and served the office of escheator of Worcester, 29th HENRY VI., 1451, and d. soon after. By Mr. Westcote, his wife (who m. 2ndly, Thomas Hewster, Esq. of Lichfield,) had issue, with four daus., of whom Anne m. Thomas Porter, Esq., of Barston, in Warwickshire, four sons, viz.,

I. THOMAS, their heir.

II. Nicholas m. Agnes, dau. and heir of Edmund Vernon of Staffordshire, and was ancestor of the Westcotes of that co.

III. Guy, m. Greneville of Gloucestershire, and from him descend the Westcotes of Devon and Somerset.

Nicholas and Guy retained their paternal surname of WESTCOTE, though often solicited by their mother to call themselves LYTTLETON. She once expostulating with them at their so refusing, as if they thought better of themselves than their elder brother, they answered that he had a fair estate for a reason to change his name, and if they might share with him they would do the same.

IV. Edmund, d. unm.

The eldest son and heir,

SIR THOMAS LUTTLETON, or (as he begun to write it) LYTTLETON, or (as with him more invariably spelled), LITTLETON, became one of the great law luminaries of his country. Having been bred to the bar, he was called to the degree of serjeant-at-law, in 1464, and appointed steward of the marshalsea of the king's household. In the next year he was constituted king's serjeant, and 13 May, 1455, rode justice of the assize on the northern circuit. Having shown some inclining to the Lancastrian party during the war of the Roses, Littleton, on the accession of EDWARD IV., sued a general pardon which was granted to him, and in the 4th of that reign, 1464, he was appointed one of the judges of the Court of Common Pleas, when he had a grant of 110 marks out of the customs of London, Bristol, and Hull: and moreover, 106s. 11½d. for a robe and furs, and 6s. 6d. for a summer robe. In the 14th of EDWARD IV. (1473), he was made a knight of the Bath, with the Prince of Wales and several persons of the highest distinction.

Sir Thomas wrote his celebrated Treatise on Tenures, after he had become a judge; a book which Lord Coke has described "as the ornament of the common law, and the most perfect and absolute work that ever was wrote in any human science."

To this work, says Dr. Holand, in his additions to Camden, "the students of the common law are no less beholden, than the civilians are to Justinian's Institutes."

The celebrity and usefulness of the Tenures have endured to our own time; and notwithstanding the prodigious accession of statutes and reports, the changes in the law, and the accumulation of publications, Littleton, with Coke's Commentary, will ever continue a guide to student, advocate, and judge.

Sir Thomas m. Joan, dau. and co-heir of William Burley, Esq., of Broomcroft Castle, Shropshire, M.P., and Speaker of the House of Commons, 1436-1443, and relict of Sir Philip Chetwynd of Ingestre, in Staffordshire. By her, with whom he acquired large possessions, he had three sons,

- I. WILLIAM, his heir, of whom presently.
- II. Richard, from whom descends LORD HATHERTON. See BURKE's Extant Peerage, for full details of intermediate pedigree.
- III. Thomas, from whom descended the Lord-keeper Littleton, created BARON LITTLETON of Mounslow. (See next article.)

Judge Littleton made his will 22 August, 1481, and d. the next day at Frankley, in a great and good old age. His widow survived him twenty-four years, and d. 22 March, 1506, aged nearly fourscore years, leaving a great estate which came by her father and mother (the dau. and heir of Grendon of Grendon), to her eldest son, Sir William. This son,

SIR WILLIAM LITTLETON, of Frankley, was knighted by HENRY VII., for his conduct at the battle of Stoke. He m. 1st, Ellyn, widow of Thomas Fielding, Esq., and dau. and co-heir of William Walsh, Esq., of Wanslip, co. Leicester, by whom he had an only dau., Joan, who m. Sir John Aston, of Heywood, in Staffordshire, and carried the manor of Tixhale, in that co., and Wanslip, into the Aston family. Sir William m. 2ndly, Mary, dau. of William Whittington, of Pauntley, co. Gloucester, and had issue,

JOHN, his successor.
Elizabeth, m. to Thomas Rouse, Esq., of Rouse-Lench, in Worcestershire, from the issue of which marriage descend the ROUSE-BOUGHTONS, Barts.

Sir William d. at Frankley, in 1507, and was s. by his son,

JOHN LITTLETON, Esq., of Frankley, who endowed his family (saith Habington, in his MS. Antiquities of Worcestershire), with abundance of noble blood, by having in marriage, Elizabeth, the dau. and co-heir of Sir Gilbert Talbot, of Grafton, by Anne, his wife, dau. and co-heir of Sir William Paston, by Anne, 3rd sister and co-heir of Edmund Beaufort, Duke of Somerset. She was great-great-grand-dau. (maternally) of John of Gaunt, Duke of Lancaster, son of EDWARD III., and in her right the family of Lyttelton quarters the arms of France and England within a bordure gobony. By this marriage, Mr. Lyttleton had seven sons and two daus. Dying 17 May, 1532, he was s. by his eldest son,

JOHN LITTLETON, Esq., then a minor, whose wardship was granted by the king to Sir John Pakington, Knt., of Hampton Lovell. Mr. Lyttleton m. Bridget, dau. and heir of his guardian, and acquired a considerable increase of fortune by the alliance. He was thus enabled to rebuild, in a magnificent manner, his seat at Frankley, and to purchase other estates. In 1553, Queen MARY granted him for life the office of Constable of Dudley Castle, co. Stafford, together with the rangership of the old and new parks there. The same year he was chosen one of the knights for Worcestershire, and served the office of sheriff once in the reign of MARY, and twice in that of ELIZABETH; in which latter reign, although adhering to the Roman Catholic religion, he enjoyed places of honour and trust, and the confidence of his sovereign, being during Her Majesty's reign, one of the council of the Marches of Wales, deputy-lieutenant and custos-rotulorum of Worcestershire, and a magistrate for that co. and Staffordshire. He was also knighted by the queen, with other gentlemen of great distinction, at Kenilworth Castle, when her Majesty honoured the Earl of Leicester with a visit there. Sir John had, with other issue,

- I. GILBERT, his successor.
- II. Edward, whose picture, dated 1568, with an atchivement of arms, is preserved at Hagley Park.
- III. John (Sir).
- IV. William, m. to Margaret, only dau. and heir of William Smyth, Esq., of Sherford, co. Warwick, but d. before the age of consummation, by a fall from his horse in hunting.
- V. George, settled at Holbeach, co. Stafford, and m. Margaret, his brother's widow.
1. Elizabeth, m. to Francis Willoughby, Esq., of Wollaton, co. Nottingham.

II. Margaret, m. to Samuel Marrow, Esq., of Berkeswell, co. Warwick.

III. Amphilis, m. to William Barneby, Esq., of Bockleton, in Worcestershire.

Sir John d. 15 February, 1591, and was s. by his eldest son,

GILBERT LITTLETON, Esq., M.P. for Worcestershire, 13th and 14th ELIZABETH, 1571-2, and high sheriff in the 25th of the same reign. This gentleman resided chiefly at Prestwood, in Worcestershire, where his father had erected a large mansion. It was purchased by him from Sutton, Lord Dudley; but there was great contention between the two families, before the Lyttletons could obtain quiet possession of the estate. In the month of October, 1592, Lord Dudley armed 140 persons, and coming by night to Prestwood, forcibly carried off 341 sheep, 14 kine, 1 bull, and 8 fat oxen, which they drove to Dudley, and there kept. Replevins were immediately taken, but not delivered by the bailiffs, for fear of being cut to pieces. After Lord Dudley had killed and eaten part of those cattle, the remainder were sent towards Coventry, accompanied by sixty armed men, in order to be sold; but his lordship changing his mind, he raised the inhabitants of several villages to the number of six or seven hundred, who brought them back to Dudley Castle, where they roasted them all. Upon this violent proceeding, a bill was filed in the Star Chamber against Lord Dudley and his adherents; where, on full proof of these illegal outrages, a reference was proposed, and accepted, and articles were signed 24 May, 1595, whereby Lord Dudley agreed to pay 1000 marks to Mr. Lyttleton, and all further suit to cease. This Gilbert m. Elizabeth, dau. of Humphrey Coningsby, Esq., of Nyend-Solers, in Shropshire, and of Hampton Court, co. Hereford, and dying 1 June, 1599, was s. by his eldest son,

JOHN LITTLETON, Esq., M.P. for Worcestershire, temp. ELIZABETH. This gentleman (to use the words of Sir Francis Bacon), being much respected for his wit and valour, and a Roman Catholic, was courted by Lord Essex and his friends, and in some measure drawn in by Sir Charles Danvers to that conspiracy which cost Essex his head, and Lyttleton his estate; for he was tried and convicted of high treason at the Queen's Bench bar on 20 February, 1600-1, and d. in prison the July following, his execution having been averted through the interest of Sir Walter Raleigh. Mr. Lyttleton m. Muriel, dau. of Sir Thomas Bromley, Knt., Lord Chancellor of England, which lady obtained upon the accession of JAMES I., a reversal of the attainder of her late husband, and a grant by letters patent of the whole of his estate. She was a person of so much prudence that she was enabled not only to discharge debts of her husband and his father to the amount of £9,000, but also to acquire a high reputation for benevolence and hospitality. She survived Mr. Lyttleton twenty-eight years, and brought up her children, of whom there were three sons and five daus., in the Protestant religion. The eldest son,

SIR THOMAS LITTLETON, Knt., M.P. for Worcestershire, and sheriff of that county in 1613, was created a Baronet, 25 July, 1618.

From Sir Thomas lineally descended (refer to BURKE's Extant Peerage for intermediate lineage)

SIR GEORGE LITTLETON, 5th baronet, b. 17 January, 1709, who was M.P. for the borough of Okehampton, and in 1737, was appointed secretary to the Prince of Wales, in 1744, one of the commissioners of the Treasury; cofferer of the household in 1754, when he was sworn of the privy council; and in 1765 Chancellor and under-treasurer of the Exchequer. Sir George was elevated to the peerage 18 November, 1756, as BARON LITTLETON, of Frankley, co. Worcester. This nobleman acquired the reputation of an excellent scholar, and a great patron of literature. He was also justly esteemed as an author, and his works are still highly valued, especially his Persian Letters, Dialogues of the Dead, History of the Age and Reign of Henry II., &c., &c. His lordship m. 1st, Lucy, dau. of Hugh Fortescue, Esq., of Filleigh, co. Devon (see Landed Gentry), by whom, who d. 19 January, 1747, he had issue,

THOMAS, his successor.
Lucy or Nancy, m. in 1767, Arthur Annesley, Viscount Valentia, created Earl of Mountnorris. She d. in 1783, having eventually become heir to her father.

Lord Lyttleton m. 2ndly, Elizabeth, dau. of Sir Robert Rich, Bart., but had no child by that lady. His lordship d. 22 August, 1773, and was s. by his son,

THOMAS LITTLETON, 2nd baron. This nobleman was a person of great eccentricity, and the vision which is said immediately to have preceded his dissolution, has ever been a subject of interest and marvel, to those who place implicit reliance upon narratives of that description. His lordship m. in 1772, Apphia, 2nd dau. of Broome Witta, Esq., of Chipping Norton, and widow of Joseph Peach, Esq., governor of Calcutta. Her ladyship survived her husband to 9 April, 1840, but Lord Lyttleton having d. s. p. 27 November, 1779, the Barony of Lyttleton, of Frankley, of this creation, became EXTINCT.

Upon the death of Lord Lyttleton, the baronetcy reverted to his uncle, WILLIAM-HENRY LYTTLETON, who had shortly before been raised to the peerage of Ireland as BARON WESTCOTE, and was advanced to the peerage of Great Britain, 13 August, 1794, by the same title which had expired with his nephew as above-mentioned, and became Baron Lyttleton, of Frankley, co. Worcester.

LYTTLETON — BARON LYTTLETON, OF MOUNSLOW, CO. SALOP.

By Letters Patent, dated 18 February, 1640-1.

Lineage.

For earlier descent refer to LYTTLETON, Barons Lyttleton, of Frankley. The youngest son of the celebrated Judge, Sir Thomas Lyttleton, mentioned in the genealogy of that family,

THOMAS LYTTLETON was seated at Spechley, near Worcester, and m. Anne, dau. and sole heir of John Botreaux, Esq., of Botreaux Castle, in Cornwall. From a younger son of theirs descended,

Adam Littleton, Esq., of Stoke Milburgh, in Shropshire, who was created a Baronet, 14 October, 1642, and m. Awdrey, dau. and eventual heiress of Thomas Poyntz, Esq., of North Skynden, in Essex, and dying about 1647, left a son,

Sir Thomas Littleton, 2nd bart., who m. his cousin Anne, sole dau. and heiress of the Lord Keeper, Lord Lyttleton, of Mounslow, and dying in April, 1681, was s. by his son,

Sir Thomas Littleton, 3rd bart., Speaker of the House of Commons, temp. WILLIAM III., who m. Anne, dau. of Benjamin Bawn, Esq., of Westcoate, Gloucestershire, but d. s. p. in January, 1710, when the baronetcy expired.

From an elder son descended,

SIR EDMUND LYTTLETON, or LITTLETON, of Mounslow, co. Salop. This gentleman, like his great ancestor, attained fame, honour, and fortune, by the profession of the law. In the 10th year of King CHARLES I., 1634, Mr. Lyttleton was appointed solicitor-general, when he received the honour of knighthood. In five years afterwards he was made Lord Chief Justice of the court of Common Pleas, and the next year constituted Lord Keeper of the Great Seal, when he was elevated to the peerage, 18 February, 1640, as BARON LYTTLETON, of Mounslow, co. Salop. The patent for this peerage, which contains portraits of the grantor, King CHARLES, and of the grantee, Lord Littleton, is still extant, and in the possession of the present Lord Lyttleton (see the Herald and Genealogist, vol. i., p. 436). Lord Lyttleton held the Great Seal from 1640 to 1646. At the commencement of the civil wars, when CHARLES retired to the city of York, the lord keeper immediately followed his Majesty with the great seal, and continued afterwards in attendance upon him. Of this eminent person, Banks says: "his learning was various and useful; his skill in the maxims of government, and of the fundamental statutes and customs of the kingdom, was particular; as was his experience, long and observing. His eloquence was powerful and majestic: in fact, such a man was worthy of that honour to which he was advanced; namely, of a peer of the realm." His lordship m. Anne, dau. of John Lyttleton, Esq., of Frankley, M.P. for Worcestershire, by whom he had an only dau. and heiress,

ANNE, who m. her 2nd cousin, Sir Thomas Lyttleton, Bart.

Lord Lyttleton d. in 1646, when the Barony of Lyttleton, of Mounslow, became EXTINCT.

Arms—Arg., a chevron, between three escallops, sa., a mullet, or, for difference. (See the Herald and Genealogist, vol. i., p. 436, for interesting details of these arms.)

MACARTNEY—BARON, VISCOUNT, EARL MACARTNEY IN IRELAND, BARON MACARTNEY IN GREAT BRITAIN.

Barony of Ireland, by Letters Patent, dated 19 July, 1767.

Earldom of Ireland, by Letters Patent, dated 1794.

Barony of Great Britain, by Letters Patent, dated 8 June, 1796.

Lineage.

GEORGE MACARTNEY, Esq., of Lissanoure (younger son of George Macartney, Esq., of Auchinleck, near Kirkcudbright, in Scotland, who settled in Ireland in 1649), was called to the bar in 1700, served subsequently the office of high sheriff for the co. Antrim, was colonel of a regiment of militia dragoons there, and represented the town of Belfast for many years in parliament. He m. 1st, Letitia, dau. and co-heir of Sir Charles Porter, lord chancellor of Ireland; and 2ndly, Elizabeth, dau. and co-heir of William Dobbins, Esq., of Carrickfergus, and widow of Robert South, of Ballyeaston. By his 2nd wife he had no issue, but by the 1st he was father of three sons, the eldest and youngest of whom d. s. p.; the 2nd,

GEORGE MACARTNEY, Esq., of Lissanoure, co. Antrim, who s. his father in 1757, m. in 1782, Elizabeth, youngest dau. of the Rev. John Winder, prebendary of Kilroot, and rector of Carmony, and by her (who d. July, 1755) had issue,

GEORGE, his heir.

Letitia, m. in 1756, to Godfrey Echlin, Esq. of Echlinville, co. Down, but d. s. p. in 1767.

Elizabeth, m. in 1759, to John Balaquiere, Esq., major 13th dragoons; and d. in 1782, leaving an only dau., ELIZABETH, m. in 1787, to the Rev. TRAVERS HUME.

Mr. Macartney d. in 1778, and was s. by his only son,

THE RIGHT HON. SIR GEORGE MACARTNEY, K.B., b. in 1787; who was sent, in 1784, as envoy extraordinary to the Empress of Russia, and knighted on his return. In 1769, having previously been elected M.P. for Armagh, he received the appointment of chief secretary to Lord Townshend, the lord-lieutenant of Ireland; in 1772, was installed a knight of the Bath; in 1775, became governor of the Caribbee Islands; and 19 July, 1776, was raised to the Irish peerage as LORD MACARTNEY, Baron of Lissanoure, co. Antrim. In 1792, his lordship was appointed ambassador extraordinary and plenipotentiary to the Emperor of China, and was advanced, 19 July in the same year, to be VISCOUNT MACARTNEY, of Derroch, co. Antrim. He remained in the East until 1794, when he returned to England, and was created EARL MACARTNEY. In 1795, he proceeded on an important mission to Italy, and on its completion in the following year (8 June, 1796), was made a British peer, as BARON MACARTNEY, of Parkhurst, in Surrey, and of Auchinleck, in the stewartry of Kirkcudbright. The last public appointment the earl held was that of governor of the Cape of Good Hope, to which colony he sailed in January, 1797, and from which he came back in 1799. He m. 1 February, 1768, Lady Jane Stuart, 2nd dau. of John, Earl of Bute, but d. without issue, 31 March, 1806, when all his honours became EXTINCT. The whole of his property his lordship bequeathed, after the death of his widow, to his niece, ELIZABETH HUME, for life, with remainder to her children (beginning with the eldest son), who were to assume the surname and arms of MACARTNEY (see Landed Gentry, HUME MACARTNEY, of Lissanoure).

Arms—Or, a buck, trippant, within a bordure, gu.

MACAULAY—BARON MACAULAY.

By Letters Patent, dated 10 September, 1857.

Lineage.

THE REV. JOHN MACAULAY, A.M., Presbyterian minister of Inverary, had, by his wife, a Campbell, a son,

ZACHARY MACAULAY, Esq., the zealous and uncompromising advocate of Negro emancipation, b. 1768, who m. Selina Mills, a Quaker lady of Bristol, and d. 1838, leaving issue, THOMAS, Lord Macaulay; John, rector of Aldingham; Henry-William, deceased; and Hannah, m. to Sir Charles Trevelyan.

The eldest son,

THE RIGHT HON. THOMAS BABINGTON MACAULAY, b. 25 October, 1800, at Rothley Temple, co. Leicester, the seat of Thomas Babington, Esq., the husband of his father's sister, Jean. This distinguished statesman, orator, historian, essayist and poet, graduated at, and was for several years a fellow of, Trinity College, Cambridge. In 1826, he was called to the bar by the society of Lincoln's Inn; in 1832, became secretary of the Board of Control; and subsequently went to India as 5th member of, and legal adviser to, the supreme council of India. From 1839 to 1841, he held office as secretary at war, and from 1846 to 1848, as paymaster-general of the forces. In the latter year he was elected lord rector of the University of Glasgow, and in 1850, professor of ancient history in the Royal Academy. He sat in the House of Commons as member for Calne in 1830, for Leeds in 1832, and for Edinburgh from 1840 to 1847 and from 1852 to 1856. On 10 September, 1857, he was elevated to the peerage of the United Kingdom as BARON MACAULAY, of Rothley, co. Leicester. He d. unm. 28 December, 1859, at Holly Lodge, his residence at Kensington, when his title became EXTINCT. He was buried 9 January following, in Poet's Corner, Westminster Abbey.

M'CARTY—EARL OF CLANCARE.

By Letters Patent, dated 22 June, 1556.

Lineage.

The M'Carty, the most illustrious, as Dr. O'Brien observes, of all those families whose names begin with Mac, trace their origin to Heber, the eldest son of MILESIA, King of Spain, through Oilioll Olum, King of Munster, in the third century; but the first who bore the appellation of M'Carty, or "son of Cartagh," was the grandfather of Diarmod M'Carty More, whom the English found in possession of Cork, and who subjected his kingdom to HENRY II. Diarmod was slain by Theobald Butler, founder of the house of Ormonde, in 1186. His successors were, DONALD, CORMAC FIONN, DONALD ROE, DONALD OGE, and CORMAC, all of whom were distinguished as M'CARTY MORE (or Great), an adjunct continued in this senior branch until 1556, when DONOGH M'CARTY MORE, the 7th in descent from the eldest son* of the last mentioned Cormac, was created 22 June, 1556, Baron of Valentia, and EARL OF CLANCARE, co. Kerry, on resigning his estates to Queen ELIZABETH, from whom he again received the investiture of them, "to hold of the crown of England, in the English manner." The earl sat in the parliament held at Dublin, 26 April, 1584, but he soon (1597) resigned his title, which he considered as a badge of slavery, and resumed the native distinction of M'CARTY MORE. He m. Lady Honora Fitz-Gerald, dau. of James, Earl of Desmond, and had issue a son Tiege Mac Carthy More, who d. s. p., and a dau. Helena, wife of Florence Mac Carthy. The Earl having d. without male issue, he was s. by his son-in-law, Florence Mac Carthy, who thereupon assumed the native title of Mac Carthy More, and whose male descendant, Charles Mac Carthy, Esq., d. s. p. In 1776, having devised his estates to his cousin, Mr. Herbert, of Mucross. The Earl of Kenmare, and O'Donoghue, of the Glyns, are the presumed representatives of this ancient sept in the female line.

Arms—Arg., a stag, trippant, gu., attired and unguled, or.

MACCARTHY—EARL OF CLANCARTY.

By Letters Patent, dated 27 November, 1658.

Lineage.

DERMOT MAC CARTHY, 2nd son of Cormac More Mac Carthy, and 1st feudal lord and founder of the house of Muskerry, killed by the O'Mahonys in 1367, was great-grandfather of

CORMAC MAC CARTHY, surnamed "Laidhir or the Stout," Lord of Muskerry forty years. He built the castle of Blarney. He m. Sarah, dau. of Mulroony Ballogh O'Carrick, and being slain in 1494, left issue an only son,

CORMAC OGE LAIDHIR MAC CARTHY, Lord of Muskerry. He defeated the Earl of Desmond in the battle of Cluhar and Morno Abbey, in 1521. He m. the Hon. Catherine, dau. of the Right Hon. John Viscount Buttevant, and sister of Elizabeth, Countess of Desmond, dying in 1536, left with other issue an eldest son,

* The 2nd son of Cormac More, DERMOT MAC CARTY, 1st feudal Lord of Muskerry, was ancestor of the Earls of Clancarty.

iii. Eleanor, m. to John Power, and was ancestress of Frances Power, who m. Richard Trench, Esq., of Garbally, father of the 1st Earl of Clancarty, of the Trench family.

The 2nd son,

DONOGH M'CARTY, was created Earl of Clancarty, 27 November, 1658. His lordship, who commanded the king's forces in Munster, against Cromwell, m. Lady Eleanor Butler, sister of James, 1st Duke of Ormonde, and had issue,

CHARLES, who lost his life in a sea-fight against the Dutch, 3 June, 1665. He m. Lady Margaret Burke, dau. of Ullick, Earl of Clanricarde, and left a son, Charles, 2nd earl, who d. a child, in 1668, and was s. by his uncle, CALLAGHAN, 3rd Earl.

CALLAGHAN, s. to his nephew.

Justin, (See VISCOUNT MOUNTCASHELL.)

Helena, m. William, 7th Earl of Clanricarde.

Margaret, m. Luke, Earl of Fingall.

The 2nd son,

CALLAGHAN M'CARTY, 3rd Earl of Clancarty, m. Lady Elizabeth Fitzgerald, 6th and youngest dau. of George, Earl of Kildare, and d. 16 November, 1676, having had issue,

i. DONOGH, of whom presently.

i. Catherine, m. to the Right Hon. Paul Davis, Viscount Mountcashel.

ii. Margaret, d. s. p.

iii. Elizabeth, d. s. p.

The son and heir,

DONOGH M'CARTY, 4th Earl of Clancarty, forfeited on account of his adhesion to JAMES II., the immense estates of the family, equivalent at this day to £200,000 per annum. His lordship m. 30 October, 1684, Elizabeth, 2nd dau. of Robert Spencer, Earl of Sunderland, and had, with a dau., (Charlotte, m. to John West, 7th Lord Delawarr,) two sons, Robert and Justin. The younger was an officer in the Neapolitan army, and the elder, Robert MacCarthy, called Earl of Clancarty, captain R.N., commanded the "Adventure" man-of-war, but on Sir Robert Walpole's refusal to restore him to his earldom, he deserted to France, and resided for many years at Boulogne-sur-Mer, on a pension of £1,600 per annum. He m. the dau. of — Pleyer, of Gosport, Hants, and dying, 1770, aged eighty-four, left two sons in the French service, who d. s. p.

MACKENZIE — EARL OF SEAFORTH, IN SCOTLAND, VISCOUNT FORTROSE AND EARL OF SEAFORTH, IN IRELAND, AND BARON SEAFORTH, OF GREAT BRITAIN.

Scottish Earldom, by Letters Patent, dated 3 December, 1623.

Lineage.

There is a tradition, not borne out, however, by any tangible evidence or confirmation, that this very ancient family deduced its descent from a member of the house of Geraldine, in Ireland (whence sprang the noble families of Leinster, Desmond, &c.), who, with a considerable number of his followers, is stated to have settled in Scotland about the year 1261, and to have so powerfully aided ALEXANDER III., a few years afterwards, in repelling the invasion of Haco, King of Norway, that he was rewarded by a grant of the lands of Kintail, in the co. Ross, which were erected into a free barony by charter, dated 9 January, 1266.

COLIN, 1st feudal baron of Kintail, is said to have m. a dau. of Walter, lord high steward of Scotland; and dying in 1278, was s. by his son,

KENNETH, 2nd Baron of Kintail; who was s. in 1304, by his son,

KENNETH, 3rd Baron of Kintail, who in the Gaelic was called Kenneth Mac Kenneth, which became corrupted in English into Mackenny, or Mackenzie, and hence arose all the families of Mackenzie in Scotland. From this Kenneth, 3rd baron, we pass to his great-great-grandson,

ALEXANDER, 7th Baron of Kintail; who m. 1st, Lady Agnes Campbell, and 2ndly, Margaret, dau. of Sir John Macdougall, Lord of Lorn. By the latter he had two sons; of whom the elder, HECTOR, was ancestor of the present SIR KENNETH-SMITH MACKENZIE, Bart., of Gairloch; and by the former a son and heir,

SIR KENNETH MACKENZIE, of Kintail, who m. for his 2nd wife Agnes, dau. of Hugh, Lord Lovat, and had four sons and two daus., namely,

JOHN, his heir.

Alexander, of Davochmaluach, ancestor of several families of Mackenzie.

Roderick, from whom derived the Mackenzies of Achilty, Fairburn, &c.

Kenneth, progenitor of the Mackenzies of Suddy, Ord, Corrovalzie, Highfield, Inverlal, Little Findon, Scotwell, &c.

Agnes, m. to Roderick Macleod, of Lewis.

Catherine, m. to Hector Monro, of Foulis.

The Chief of Kintail d. about 1506, and was s. by his son,

JOHN MACKENZIE, of Kintail, father of Kenneth, father of COLIN MACKENZIE, of Kintail, who fought for Queen MARY at Langside. He m. 1st, Barbara, eldest dau. of John Grant, of Grant, and by her had, with two daus., four sons, viz.,

KENNETH, his heir.

Roderick, of Tarbat, from whom the Earls of Cromarty derived.

Colin, ancestor of the Mackenzies of Kennock and Pitlundie.

Alexander, ancestor of the Mackenzies of Kilcoy.

He m. 2ndly, Mary, dau. of Roderick Mackenzie, of Davochmaluach, and had by her another son, Alexander, progenitor of the Mackenzies of Applecross, Coul, Delvin, Assint, &c. The eldest son,

KENNETH MACKENZIE, of Kintail, was raised to the peerage of Scotland, 19 November, 1609, as BARON MACKENZIE, of Kintail. He m. 1st, Anne, dau. of George Ross, of Balnagowan, and had by her two sons and two daus., COLIN, his heir; John, of Lochslyne, whose dau. m. Sir Norman Macleod, of Bernera; Barbara, wife of Donald, 1st Lord Reay; and Janet, m. to Sir Donald Macdonald, of Slate. His lordship m. 2ndly, Isabel, dau. of Sir Alexander Ogilvy, of Powrie, and had by her four sons and one dau.,

Alexander, who d. unm. in 1614.

GEORGE, 2nd Earl of Seaforth.

Thomas, of Pluscardine.

Simon, of Lochslyne, father of the learned and accomplished Sir George Mackenzie, of Rosehaugh, lord advocate to CHARLES II. and JAMES II., whose extensive estates eventually centered in his great-great-grandson, the Hon. James-Archibald Stuart, who assumed the surname of Mackenzie, and was father of James-Archibald, LORD WHARNCLETTE. Sibylla, m. to John Macleod, of Macleod.

Lord Kintail d. in 1611, and was s. by his son,

COLIN MACKENZIE, 2nd Lord Kintail, who was created, 3 December, 1623, EARL OF SEAFORTH, to him and his heirs male. Very shortly after he built the stately mansion of Brahan Castle. He m. Lady Margaret Seton, 3rd dau. of Alexander, 1st Earl of Dunfermline, and had two daus.,

ANNE, m. 1st, to Alexander, 2nd Earl of Balcarras; and 2ndly, to Archibald, 9th Earl of Argyll.

JANE, m. 1st, to John, Master of Berriedale; and 2ndly, to Alexander, 1st Lord Duffus.

The earl d. 15 April, 1633, and was s. by his half-brother,

GEORGE MACKENZIE, 2nd Earl of Seaforth, a staunch royalist and adherent of the gallant Montrose. His lordship m. Barbara, eldest dau. of Arthur, 9th Lord Forbes, and had issue,

KENNETH, his heir.

Colin, who m. Miss Jean Laurie, and had (with a dau., Barbara, wife of Patrick Oliphant, of Bachilton) a son, GEORGE MACKENZIE, M.D., author of a work of authority and research, entitled The Lives and Characters of the Most Eminent Writers of the Scottish Nation.

Mary, m. to John, 9th Earl of Marr.

Margaret, m. to Sir William Sinclair, Bart.

His lordship d. in 1651, and was s. by his eldest son,

KENNETH MACKENZIE, 3rd Earl of Seaforth, who suffered a long imprisonment under the Commonwealth. He m. Isabella, dau. of Sir John Mackenzie, Bart., of Tarbat; and dying in 1678, left (with four daus., Margaret, Lady Duffus; Anne, who d. unm.; Isabel, m. 1st, to Roderick Macleod, of Macleod; and 2ndly, to Sir Duncan Campbell, of Lochneil; and Mary, wife of Alexander Macdonell, of Glengarry) two sons, KENNETH, his heir; and John, of Assint. The elder,

KENNETH MACKENZIE, 4th Earl of Seaforth, K.T., accompanied King JAMES to France at the Revolution, went with the expedition to Ireland, and was created, by the exiled monarch, MARQUESS OF SEAFORTH. He m. Lady Frances Herbert, 2nd dau. of William, Marquess of Powis, and had by her, who d. in 1732,

WILLIAM, his heir.

Alexander, who m. Elizabeth, dau. of John Paterson, bishop of Ross, and had (with four daus., of whom the eldest, Isabella, m. Basil Hamilton, of Baldoon; the 2nd, Jane, Dr. Alexander Mackenzie; the 3rd, Mary, Captain Dougal Stewart; and the 4th, Maria, Nicholas Price, Esq., of Saintfield, co. Down) a son,

WILLIAM, major in the army; who m. Mary, only dau. of Matthew Humberston, Esq., of Humberston, in Lincolnshire, and d. 12 March, 1770, having had issue,

MACKENZIE—EARL OF CROMARTY.

By Letters Patent, dated 1 January, 1703.

Lineage.

This was a branch of the ancient family of Mackenzie of Kintail, founded by

SIR RODERICK MACKENZIE, Knt. of Tarbat (2nd son of Colin Mackenzie, of Kintail, and brother of Kenneth, 1st Lord Mackenzie, of Kintail), who m. Margaret, dau. and heir of Torquil Macleod, of Lewes, and thereupon added to his armorial bearing the achievement of Macleod; namely, "or, a rock in flames, ppr." Sir Roderick d. in September, 1626, having had issue,

JOHN, his successor.

Kenneth, of Seatwell, ancestor of the present SIR JAMES JOHN-RANDALL MACKENZIE, Bart.

Colin.

Alexander, of Bellone.

Margaret, m. to Sir John Mac Donald, Bart., of Slate.

He was s. by his eldest son,

JOHN MACKENZIE, Esq. of Tarbat, who was created a baronet of Nova Scotia, 21 May, 1628. Sir John m. Margaret, dau. and co-heir of Sir George Erskine, of Innertell, by whom he had, with other issue,

GEORGE, his successor.

Roderick, of Preston Hall, M.P. for Cromarty in 1700, and for Fortrose in 1703, in which year he was constituted one of the senators of the college of Justice, as Lord Prestonhall, which office he resigned in favour of his nephew, Sir James Mackenzie, of Roystoun, in 1710.

Sir John was s. by his elder son,

SIR GEORGE MACKENZIE, 2nd baronet, who, for the good services he had rendered to CHARLES II., during his Majesty's exile and the Restoration, was made by that monarch one of the judges of Session, clerk register, sworn of the privy council, and constituted justice general. His lordship was elevated to the peerage by JAMES II., 15 April, 1685, in the dignities of Lord Macleod and Castlehaven, and Viscount of Tarbat. At the Revolution he went up to court and was well received by WILLIAM; but his arbitrary proceedings in the former reigns had rendered him so unpopular in Scotland, that his name was not included in the new commission of lords of Session, 1 November, 1689. He was, however, restored to his office of lord clerk register in 1692, from which he retired in four years afterwards upon a pension of £400 per annum. On the accession of QUEEN ANNE, Lord Tarbat was sent for to court, and created by letters patent, dated 1 January, 1703, Lord Macleod and Castlehaven, Viscount of Tarbat, and EARL OF CROMARTY, with remainder to his heirs male and of entail.

* To this lady Sir Walter Scott addressed the last verse of his Farewell to Mackenzie—

"And thou, gentle dame, who must bear, to thy grief,
For thy clan and thy country, the cares of a chief,
Whom brief rolling moons in six changes have left,
Of thy husband, and father, and brethren bereft;
To thine ear of affection how sad is the hail
That salutes thee, the Heir of the line of Kintail."

He was at the same time appointed one of the principal secretaries of state, which office he soon after, on account of his great age, exchanged for that of lord justice general, and finally retired in 1710, after zealously promoting the Union by his parliamentary influence, as well as his writings. His lordship m. 1st, Anne, dau. of Sir James Sinclair, Bart., of Mey, by whom he had, with four daus. (Margaret, m. to Sir David Bruce; Elizabeth, m. to Sir George Broun, Bart., of Colstoun; Jean, m. to Sir James Stewart, Bart. of Balcaiskie; and Anne, m. to the Hon. John Sinclair, of Murkle), three sons,

JOHN, who s. as 2nd Earl of Cromarty.

Kenneth, of Cromarty, created a baronet in 1704.

James, created a baronet in 1704. Upon the resignation of his uncle, Lord Prestonhall, he was appointed one of the senators of the college of Justice, and a lord of Justiciary, under the title of Lord Roystoun.

The eldest son,

JOHN MACKENZIE, 2nd Earl of Cromarty, was father (by Mary, his 2nd wife, eldest dau. of Patrick, 3rd Lord Elibank) of GEORGE MACKENZIE, 3rd Earl of Cromarty, who m. in 1724, Isabel, dau. of Sir William Gordon, Bart., of Invergordon, and had issue,

i. JOHN, Lord M'Leod, m. Margery, eldest dau. of James, 16th Lord Forbes, and d. s. p. 2 April, 1789. His widow m. John, 4th Duke of Atholl.

ii. William, d. aged seven years, in 1786.

iii. George, lieutenant-col. of the 71st regiment of foot; d. unm. 4 June, 1787.

i. Isabella, m. in January, 1760, to George, 6th Lord Elibank. Her ladyship inherited the estates of the Cromarty family in 1796; and d. 28 December, 1801, leaving two daus., her co-heirs, viz.,

1. Maria, m. to Edward Hay, Esq. of Newhall (brother of the 7th Marquess of Tweeddale), who thereupon assumed the additional surname of MCKENZIE. Mr. Hay-Mackenzie left at his decease a son, John Hay-Mackenzie, Esq., of Newhall, Cromarty, who m. Anne, 3rd dau. of Sir James Gibson-Craig, Bart., and dying in 1849, left an only child and heiress, Anne, present Duchess of Sutherland, created Countess of Cromartie 21 October, 1861 (see BURKE'S Extant Peerage).

2. Isabella.

ii. Mary, m. 1st, to Capt. Clarke; 2ndly, to Thomas Drayton, Esq.; and 3rdly, to John Ainslie, Esq.

iii. Anne, m. 1st, to the Hon. Edmond Atkins; and 2ndly, to John Murray, Esq., M.D.

iv. Caroline, m. 1st, to Mr. Drane; and 2ndly, to Walter Hunter, Esq. of Polmood.

v. Jean.

vi. Margaret, m. to John Glassford.

vii. Augusta, m. to Sir William Murray, Bart.

Lord Cromarty and his eldest son, Lord Macleod, having taken an active part in the rising of 1745, and being both made prisoners in the field, were tried, convicted, and attainted of high treason, but their lives were spared. The honours, however, became forfeited; the earl was permitted to reside in England, and his son obtained leave in 1760, to accept a commission in the Swedish service, of which kingdom he was created Count Cromarty, &c. He returned in 1777, raised two battalions of highlanders, and became colonel of the 71st foot, with which he served in India, with the local rank of major-general. His lordship came home in 1784, when his forfeited estates were restored to him, and he d. in 1789 without issue. For more ample details of the Earls of Cromarty, see BURKE'S Extant Peerage.

MACLELLAN—LORD KIRKCUDBRIGHT.

By Letters Patent, dated 25 May, 1633.

Lineage.

The Maclellans were anciently sheriffs of Galloway and Barons of Bombie; but

SIR PATRICK MACLELLAN, nephew, maternally, of the Lord Gray, happening to side with his kinsman, Lord Herries, against the Earl of Douglas, was besieged by that nobleman in his castle of Raeberry, and put to death; whereupon the Maclellans, without warrant or authority, making reprisal on the lands of Douglas, in Galloway, the office of sheriff and barony of Bombie became forfeited to the crown; but the latter was recovered, and tradition assigns the following circumstance as the cause:—In the reign of JAMES II., of Scotland, a troop of gipsies, coming from Ireland, so infested the county of Galloway, that a royal proclamation issued, offering the barony of Bombie to any person who should bring the captain, dead or alive, before the king, an exploit which was accomplished by the Laird of Bombie's son, who carried the marauder's head upon the point of his sword to his Majesty; whence, to perpetuate the affair, he assumed that figure for his crest, with the motto of "Think on."

THOMAS MACLELLAN, of Bondby, the direct ancestor of the Lords Kirkcubright, m. Agnes, dau. of Sir James Dunbar, of Mochrum, and d. about 1504, having had three sons,

- I. WILLIAM, of whom presently.
- II. GILBERT, of whom hereafter.
- III. John of Auchlean, whose male line becoming extinct his estate returned to the family.

The eldest son,

SIR WILLIAM MACLELLAN, of Bombie, fell at the battle of Flodden, 9 September, 1513, leaving by Elizabeth Mure, his wife, a son and successor,

THOMAS MACLELLAN, of Bombie, who was killed in the high street of Edinburgh, 11 July, 1526, by the Barons of Drumlanrig, and Lochinvar, leaving a son,

SIR THOMAS MACLELLAN, of Bombie, who m. Helen, dau. of Sir James Gordon, of Lochinvar, by whom he had a son,

SIR THOMAS MACLELLAN, of Bombie, who d. in July, 1597, and was buried in the church of Kirkcubright. He m. Grisel Maxwell, dau. of John Lord Herries, and had three sons,

- I. ROBERT (Sir), his heir.
- II. William, of Glenshannock, father of THOMAS, 2nd baron.
- III. John, of Bourg, father of JOHN, 3rd baron, and of William of Auchlean.

The eldest son,

SIR ROBERT MACLELLAN, knight, gentleman of the bedchamber to the two first English sovereigns of the house of Stuart, was created, 25 May, 1633, BARON KIRKCUDBRIGHT, with remainder to his heirs male bearing his name and arms. His lordship m. Margaret, dau. of Sir Matthew Campbell, of Loudoun, by whom he had an only dau. Anne, m. to Sir Robert Maxwell, of Orchardtoun. The baron m. 2ndly, Mary, dau. of Hugh, Viscount Airds; but d. in 1641, without male issue, when the barony devolved according to the limitation of the patent, upon his nephew,

THOMAS MACLELLAN, 2nd baron; who m. Janet, dau. of William, 1st Earl of Queensberry: but dying s. p. in 1647, was s. by his 1st cousin,

JOHN MACLELLAN, 3rd baron. This nobleman raised a regiment of foot, at his own charge, for the service of King CHARLES II., whose train he helped to support at his Majesty's coronation, at Seone, in 1651. His lordship m. Anne, dau. of Sir Robert Maxwell; and dying in 1664, was s. by his son,

WILLIAM MACLELLAN, 4th baron; who d. in minority, in 1669, when the whole estate was carried off by his father's creditors, so that when the succession opened to the deceased lord's cousin, John Maclellan, there being nothing left to support the dignity, the said John never assumed it, nor did his brother James who succeeded him, whereby the Lords Kirkcubright do not appear as sitting in parliament from the time of John, the 3rd lord. But the right of the collateral male heir was so indisputably known and acknowledged, that at the Union, this peerage was considered as a subsisting one, and as such preserved in the roll.

JAMES MACLELLAN, son of William Maclellan, of Auchlean, and nephew of John, 3rd lord, b. in 1661, did not assume the title of Baron Kirkcubright until the great struggle for a representative of the Scottish peerage between the Earls of Eglinton and Aberdeen, in 1721, and then his right of voting was protested against; but he voted at all elections subsequently, until 1729, when he was served nearest and lawful male heir to his uncle, Lord Kirkcubright. His lordship d. in 1730, leaving three daus. only (viz., 1 Margaret, m. to Samuel Brown of Mollaner, 2 Mary, d. unm., and 3 Janet, m. to William Maxwell, of Milton), whereupon the barony passed to the next male heir.

WILLIAM MACLELLAN, of Bourness, who experienced great difficulty in establishing his right; and at the general election, of 1741, himself and his competitor, James, eldest son of the deceased Sir Samuel Maclellan, provost of Edinburgh, voted as Lords Kirkcubright; nor was it confirmed during his lifetime; his lordship left by Margaret Murray, his wife, a son,

JOHN MACLELLAN, Esq., a colonel in the army, who, following up his deceased father's proceedings, had his right as 7th Baron Kirkcubright, confirmed by the House of Lords, 3 May, 1773. His lordship m. Miss Banister, of the Isle of Wight, by whom he had issue,

SHOLTO-HENRY, his heir.

CAMDEN-GRAY, 9th baron.

Elizabeth, m. in 1795, to Finlay Ferguson, Esq.

His lordship d. 24 December, 1801, in his seventy-third year, and was s. by his eldest son, SHOLTO-HENRY MACLELLAN, 8th baron, b. 1771, who m. in 1820, Miss Cantes; but d. s. p., 16 April, 1827, when the title devolved upon his brother.

CAMDEN-GRAY MACLELLAN, 9th Lord Kirkcubright, b. 20 April, 1774; who m. Sarah, dau. of the late Colonel Thomas Gorges, and had an only dau. and heir,

CAMDEN-ELIZABETH, m. in 1832, to James-Staunton Lambert, Esq., of Creg Clare, co. Galway, M.P. for that shire, and has issue, Walter Maclellan, captain 41st regiment, b. 31 August, 1833.

Charles-James, b. 11 October, 1837; d. 6 February, 1855.

MAGENNIS—VISCOUNT MAGENNIS. OF IVEAGH.

Created by Letters Patent, dated 18 July, 1623.

Lineage.

"The Magennises," says Mr. D'Alton (King James's Army List) "were from very ancient time, territorial Lords of Iveagh, in Dalaradia (co. Down), claiming their descent from the famous warrior, Connall Cearnach, and ranking as the head of the Clanna Rory. In 1314, when EDWARD II. sought the aid of the magnates of Ireland, he directed an especial letter missive to Admills 'Mac Anegua, Duci Hibernicorum de Onenagh,' he being then the Magennia. In 1380, when Edmund Mortimer, who had m. the grand-dau. of EDWARD III., came over to Ireland, various native chiefs waited upon him, and amongst them, Art Magennis, the Lord of Iveagh, 'who,' says the Four Masters, 'was treacherously taken prisoner at Mortimer's residence, in consequence of which the Irish, and many of the English themselves, became afraid to place any confidence in him, or trust themselves to his power.'"

SIR ARTHUR MAGENNIS, Knt., of Rathfriland, co. Down, was raised to the peerage of Ireland, as Viscount Magennis, of Iveagh, in the same co., 18 July, 1623. He m. Sarah, dau. of Hugh O'Neill, Earl of Tyrone, and had issue

I. HUGH, his heir.

II. CON (Sir), Knt., m. Evelyn, dau. of Ever Magennis, Esq., of Castle-Wellan, co. Down.

III. ARTHUR.

IV. DANIEL.

V. RORY.

I. ROSE, m. 1st, to Moelmurry Oge O'Reilly; and 2ndly, to Melaghlín O'Kelly, of Aughrim, co. Galway.

II. EVELYN, m. to Sir Alexander MacDonnell, of Moyane, Bart.

III. ELIZABETH.

The 1st Lord Magennis, of Iveagh, d. 7 May, 1629, and was buried at Drumbalong, 15 June following. His eldest son and heir, HUGH MAGENNIS, 2nd Viscount, b. 1599, m. Mary, dau. of Sir John Bellew of Castleton, and d. April, 1630, leaving issue, a dau., the wife of Lieut.-Gen. Lee, and three sons, successively viscounts. The eldest,

ART MAGENNIS, 3rd Viscount, was buried 1 May, 1683, in St. Catherine's Church, Dublin; his next brother,

HUGH MAGENNIS, 4th Viscount, was buried 5 December, 1694, in the same church, and was s. by his brother,

BRYAN MAGENNIS, 5th Viscount Magennis, of Iveagh, who m. in 1689, Lady Margaret Burke, dau. of William, 7th Earl of Clanricarde; but d. s. p. in 1693. His lordship's widow m. 2ndly, Thomas Butler, Esq., of Kilcaash.

"At the close of the war of the Revolution in Ireland (we again quote from Mr. D'Alton's Army List of JAMES II.), Lord Iveagh did not accompany the Irish army to France, but entered the Imperial or Austrian service, with a choice battalion of 800, part of 2,000 Irish troops of King JAMES's old army, who were landed from Cork at Hamburg, in June, 1692.

Another portion of this sept did, however, go to France, and was there embodied with followers of M'Mahon, Maguire, and other Ulster regiments."

MAITLAND—DUKE OF LAUDERDALE, EARL OF GUILDFORD.

Dukedom, by Letters Patent, dated 2 May, 1672.

Earldom, by Letters Patent, dated 25 June, 1674.

Lineage.

JOHN MAITLAND, 2nd Earl of Lauderdale, in the peerage of Scotland, having distinguished himself by his zealous support of the royal cause during the civil wars, was advanced to the Scottish titles of Marquess of March and DUKE OF LAUDERDALE, 1672, and created a peer of England, 25 June, 1674, as Baron Petersham, and EARL OF GUILDFORD. This nobleman was a conspicuous public character in the reign of CHARLES II., and under the title of Lauderdale, supplied the letter L to the CABAL administration. His grace was knight of the Garter, and high commissioner of the church of Scotland. The duke m. 1st, Anne, 2nd dau. and co-heir of Alexander, Earl of Home, and had an only dau. and heiress, ANNE, who m. John Hay, 2nd Marquess of Tweeddale.

His grace d. 24 August, 1682, when the English Barony of Petersham and Earldom of Guildford, with the Scottish Dukedom of Lauderdale and Marquessate of March, became EXTINCT, and his other honours devolved upon his brother, the Hon. Charles Maitland, as 3rd Earl of Lauderdale.

Arms—Or, a lion rampant dechaussée, within a double tressure, flory, counter-flory, gu.

MALISE—EARL OF STRATHERN.

Lineage.

MALISE, or MALLUS, Earl of Strathern, is named among those who witnessed the foundation of the priory of Scone, by ALEXANDER I., in 1115. He signalized himself eminently at the battle of the Standard, 22 August, 1138, when he said to King DAVID I., "I wear no armour, but they who do, will not advance beyond me this day," (Wood's Douglas). He was father of

FERQUHARD, FERCHARD, or FERETH, 2nd Earl of Strathern, who is mentioned by Fordun as having leagued with five other earls, against MALCOLM IV. He witnessed a charter of that monarch to the monastery of Scone, 1160. He d. leaving two sons, GILBERT, 3rd Earl of Strathern.

Malise, designed brother of Gilbert, Earl of Strathern, in the foundation charter of Inchaffray.

GILBERT, 3rd Earl of Strathern, the elder son, founded the monastery of Inchaffray, Insula Mearum, the isle of Masses, in Strathern, and largely endowed it for canons regular. H. had a son and successor,

ROBERT, 4th Earl of Strathern, who witnessed a charter of ALEXANDER II., of the Earldom of Fife, in the eleventh year of his reign, 1224-5. When the differences between that monarch and HENRY II. were accommodated by the cardinal legate, at York, in 1237, the Earl of Strathern was one of the witnesses to the treaty. He d. before 1244, leaving two sons, (Annabella, m. to Sir David Graham, ancestor of the Duke of Montrose, who got with her the Barony of Kincardine; and Lucia, m. to Sir William Sinclair), and a son,

MALISE, 5th Earl of Strathern, who was one of the guaranties of a treaty between ALEXANDER II. and HENRY III., 1244. He m. a dau. of Eugene, of Ergadia, relict of the King of Man, and had a son,

MALISE, 6th Earl of Strathern, who was one of the guaranties of the marriage treaty of Margaret of Scotland with Eric, king of Norway, 1281. He sat in the parliament at Scone, 3 February, 1283-4, when the Scottish nobles became bound to acknowledge Margaret of Norway as their sovereign in the event of the demise of ALEXANDER III. He was one of the nobles summoned to attend EDWARD I. into Gascony, 1 September, 1294; and was in the Scottish army that invaded England in March, 1296, for which it appears that his estates were sequestered. He, however, again swore fealty to EDWARD, 13 July, 1296, when the English monarch issued an order to the sheriff of Perth to reponne Maria (qum uxor Malisil comitis de Strathern) in her lands. Malise, Earl of Strathern, is said to have m. Lady Egidia Cumyn, dau. of Alexander, 2nd Earl of Buchan, by whom he had issue, MALISE, 7th Earl of Strathern.

Mary, m. to Sir John Moray, of Drumsargard.

MALISE, 7th Earl of Strathern, the only son, was one of the adherents of ROBERT I. Malisius, comes de Stratheryne, signed the letter to the Pope, asserting the independence of Scotland, 1320. According to Knighton, he fell at the battle of Halidon-hill, 19 July, 1333; and his name occurs in the list of those slain in that engagement, in Dalrymple's Annals. This, however, appears to be a mistake. EDWARD BALIOL granted the Earldom of Strathern to John de Warren, Earl of Warren and Surrey; and 2 March, 1334, addressed a letter to Henry de Bellomonte, Earl of Bughan (Buchan), indicating that Malise, Earl of Strathern, was then alive. Considerable difficulties occur respecting the marriage and issue of Malise, Earl of Strathern. Marjory de Muscocompo (Muschamp), Countess of Strathern, was probably the 1st wife of Malise, Earl of Strathern; perhaps his stepmother, which is most consistent with chronology. Johanna, dau. of Sir John Menteth, appears to have been his 2nd wife, and mother of Johanna, Countess of Surrey and Strathern, who, according to Crawford, was the Countess of Strathern engaged in the conspiracy against ROBERT I., in 1320. Isabella, dau. of Magnus, Earl of Caithness and Orkney, appears to have been his third wife, and it would seem that he had by her four sons, one m. to William, 7th Earl of Ross; Isabel, m. to Sir William Sinclair, of Roslin; Matilda de Strathern, mother of Alexander de L'Arde; and the 4th, m. to Reginald Chene, mother of Mariot Chene; and that these four sons inherited the Earldom of Caithness and Orkney, in right of their mother, untouched by their father's forfeiture. Wood's Douglas.

The Earldom of Strathern was, by DAVID II., granted to

SIR MAURICE MORAY, of Drumsargard, Lord of Clydesdale, nephew of Malise, 7th Earl of Strathern. He joined the Steward of Scotland at the siege of Perth, 1339, and fell at the battle of Durham, 17 October, 1346, s. p., when the Earldom of Strathern reverted to the crown.

MALTRAVERS—BARON MALTRAVERS.

By Writ of Summons, dated 5 June, 1330.

Lineage.

Although none of this family were barons by tenure, or had summons to parliament before the time of the 3rd EDWARD, yet were they anciently persons of note. Referring to NICHOLS' Collectanea for a great deal of curious and authentic information regarding this family of Maltravers, we will commence with

SIR JOHN DE MAUTRAVERS, of Wellecombe, co. Dorset, a joint witness with Sir Walter de Mautravers to a charter between 1160 and 1184; he was father by Alice, his wife, of

JOHN MALTRAVERS, of Sumerford, Cotes, &c., co. Wilts, A.D. 1221, who left a son and heir,

SIR JOHN MALTRAVERS, seneschal of the king's household, 1274. He d. 1296, seized, amongst others, of the manors of Lychet and Wychampton, co. Dorset, leaving his son and heir,

SIR JOHN MALTRAVERS, b. 1266, who m. 1st, Alianore —, by whom he had a son, JOHN, his heir; and 2ndly, Joan, dau. and heir of Sir Walter Folliott, by whom he had three daus. He was made a knight, with Prince Edward and others, by bathing, &c., in 1306, whereupon he attended that prince into Scotland, being of the retinue with Maurice de Berkeley; and the same year he obtained a charter for free warren in all his demesne lands at Lychet-Maltravers, co. Dorset. In the 7th EDWARD II., he was again in the wars of Scotland, and the next year had a military summons to attend the king with horse and arms at Newcastle-upon-Tyne, to restrain the incursions of the Scots: in which year he had a grant for a market weekly on the Tuesday in Limerick, in Ireland, but wherefore does not appear; for although large possessions of his are enumerated in the counties of Dorset, Somerset, Wilts, Gloucester, and Berks, none are mentioned as lying out of England. Sir John d. before 5 July, 1344; his son and heir,

SIR JOHN MALTRAVERS, Knt., was at the battle of Bannockburn, 24 June, 1314, and was there made prisoner. In 1330, being in high estimation with those who were then in power, he was summoned to the parliament held in the 4th EDWARD III., as "John Maltravers, sen." The part which this nobleman is said to have taken in the murder of King EDWARD II., is too well known to need recitation here—enough, that the wretched monarch was removed from the custody of Lord Berkeley, who had treated him with some degree of humanity, and placed under Lord Maltravers and Sir Thomas Gournay, and that while in their charge the king was killed in a most cruel manner at Berkeley Castle. According to the judgment of the House of Peers, Mortimer commanded Gournay and Ogle to perpetrate the deed, and, as Maltravers was condemned by the same parliament which condemned the king's murderers, it was for a different crime, it forms a presumption that he was innocent of this (Lingard). Maltravers fled immediately after into Germany, where he remained for several years, having had judgment of death passed upon him in England for the murder of the Earl of Kent, but in the 19th of the same reign, King EDWARD III. being in Flanders, Lord Maltravers came and made a voluntary surrender of himself to the king, who, in consideration of his services abroad, granted him a safe convoy into England to abide the decision of parliament; in which he had afterwards a full and free pardon (25th EDWARD III.) That was not, however, sufficient—King EDWARD constituted him, soon after, governor of the Isles of Guernsey, Jersey, Alderney, and Sark. His lordship m. 1st, Ela, dau. of Maurice, Lord Berkeley, and had issue,

JOHN, who was knighted, and in the reign of EDWARD III., had summons to parliament as a Baron, but d. v. p., 13 October, 1360, leaving, by Wensiana, his wife, a son and two daus.,

HENRY, d. s. p.

Joan, m. 1st, to Sir John de Keynes, and 2ndly, to Sir Robert Rouse, but d. s. p.

Eleanor, m. 1st, to John Fitz-Alan, 2nd son of Richard, 9th Earl of Arundel, and had issue,

Lord Maltravers, m. 2ndly, Agnes, dau. of William Boreford, and 1st relict of Sir John Argentine, Knt., and 2ndly, of Sir John Nerford, by whom he had no issue. He d. 16 February 1365.

After the decease of John, Lord Maltravers, the barony passed to his grand-dau. (the eventual sole heiress of his deceased son, Sir John Maltravers), Eleanor, wife of the Hon. John Fitz-Alan, whose son, JOHN, was summoned to parliament as Lord Maltravers, and s. as 11th Earl of Arundel—and the Barony of Maltravers has since merged in the superior dignity of Arundel. Lady Mary Fitz-Alan, the dau., and ultimately the sole heiress of Henry, 18th Earl of Arundel, m. Thomas Howard, Duke of Norfolk, and brought the barony and earldom into the Howard family. Those dignities descended to her son Philip, who was attainted in the 32nd ELIZABETH, when the barony fell under the attainder, but it was restored to his son, Thomas Howard, 20th Earl of Arundel, and by act of parliament, 3rd CHARLES I., the Barony of Maltravers, together with those of Fitz-Alan, Clun, and Oswaldestre, was annexed to the title, dignity, and honour of Arundel, and settled upon Thomas Howard, then Earl of Arundel (see FITZ-ALAN, Earls of Arundel).

SIR JOHN MALTRAVERS, who m. Elizabeth, dau. and heir of Robert Sifrewast, of Hooke, co. Dorset, and Crowel, co. Oxford, and became ancestor of the Maltravers, of Hooke and Crowel, grandson of Robert Maltravers, who is supposed to have been brother of Sir John Maltravers knighted in 1306. He was father of

JOHN (Sir), of Hooke and Crowel, who m. Elizabeth, dau. and co-heir of Sir William d'Aumerle, and left two daus., viz.,

MANDEVILLE—EARLS OF ESSEX.

By Special Charter of King STEPHEN.

Lineage.

On the first arrival in England of William, Duke of Normandy, there was amongst his companions a famous soldier, called

Geoffrey de Magnavil, so designated from the town of Magnavil, in the duchy, which he then possessed, who obtained as his share in the spoil of conquest, divers fair and widespread domains, in the coa. Berks, Suffolk, Middlesex, Surrey, Oxford, Cambridge, Herts, Northampton, Warwick, and Essex; whereof Waldene was one, which afterwards became the chief seat of his descendants. He was subsequently made constable of the Tower of London, and continued to execute the duties of that important office for the remainder of his life. This Geoffrey, among other benefactions to the church, founded a Benedictine monastery at Hurley, in Berkshire, conferring upon it the whole lordship of that place, and the woods adjoining thereto. He was s. at his decease by his son,

William de Magnavil, corrupted into MANDEVILLE, who was keeper of the Tower of London. He m. Margaret, only dau. and heiress of Eudo de Rie Dapifer,* and had issue, Geoffrey, who inherited from his mother the stewardship of Normandy.

Betrix, m. 1st, Hugh Talbot, from whom she was divorced, and 2ndly, William de Say.

He was s. at his decease by his son,

Geoffrey de Mandeville, who in the 5th year of King STEPHEN, had livery of his inheritance, upon paying the sum of £466 13s. 4d. to the crown; and was advanced by that monarch, from the degree of baron (by special charter, dated at Westminster), to the dignity of EARL of the county of Essex, unto which charter were witnesses: "William de Ippe, Henry de Essex, John, the son of Robert Fitz-Walter, Robert de Newburgh, William de St. Clair, William de Dammartin, Richard Fitz-Urse, and William de Owe;" but notwithstanding this high honour conferred upon him by King STEPHEN, the Empress MAUD, by a more ample charter, made at Oxford, allured him to her party; for she not only conferred whatsoever Geoffrey, his grandfather, or William, his father, ever enjoyed, either in lands, forts, or castles, particularly the Tower of London, with the castle under it, to strengthen and fortify at his pleasure; but bestowed upon him the hereditary sheriffalty of London and Middlesex, as also that of Hertfordshire, with the sole power of trying causes in those counties: for which offices and privileges he paid the sum of £300. Moreover she granted him all the lands of Eudo Dapifer, in Normandy, with his office of steward, as his rightful inheritance, and numerous other valuable immunities, in a covenant witnessed by Robert, Earl of Gloucester, and several other powerful nobles—which covenant contained the singular clause, "that neither the Earl of Anjou, her husband, nor herself, nor her children, would ever make peace with the burgesses of London, but with the consent of him, the said Geoffrey, because they were his mortal enemies." Besides this, he had a second charter, dated at Westminster, re-creating him EARL OF ESSEX, to hold to himself and his heirs, and to have the third penny of the pleas of the sheriffalty, as an earl ought to enjoy in his earldom. Of which proceedings King STEPHEN having information, seized upon the earl in the court, then at St. Alban's, some say after a bloody affray, in which the Earl of Arundel, being thrown into the water with his horse, very narrowly escaped drowning; certain it is, that to regain his liberty, the Earl of Essex was constrained, not only to give up the Tower of London, but his own castles of Walden and Blessey. Wherefore, being transported with wrath, he fell to spoil and rapine, invading the king's demesne lands and others, plundering the abbey of St. Alban's and Ramsey; which last having surprised at an early hour in the morning, he expelled the monks therefrom, made a fort of the church, and sold their religious ornaments to reward his soldiers; in which depredations he was assisted by his brother-in-law, William de Say, a stout and warlike man, and one Daniel, a counterfeit monk. At last, being publicly excommunicated for his many outrages, he besieged the castle of Burwell, in Kent, and going unhelmed, in consequence of the heat of the weather, he was shot in the head with an arrow, of which wound he soon afterwards died, 14 September, 1144. This noble outlaw had m. Rohesia, dau. of Alberic de Vere, Earl of Oxford, chief justice of England, and had issue, Ernulph, Geoffrey, William, and Robert; and by a former wife, whose name is not mentioned, a dau., Alice, who m. John de Lacy, constable of Chester. Of his death, Dugdale thus speaks:—"Also that for these outrages, having incurred the penalty of excommunication, he happened to be mortally wounded, at a little town, called Burwell; whereupon, with great contrition for his sins, and making what satisfaction he could, there came at last some of the Knights Templars to him, and putting on him the habit of their order, with a red cross, carried his dead corpse into their orchard, at the old Temple, in London, and confining it in lead, hanged it on a crooked tree. Likewise, that after some time, by the industry and expenses of William, whom he had constituted prior of Walden, his absolution was obtained from Pope Alexander III., so that his body was received among christians, and divers offices celebrated for him; but that when the prior endeavoured to take down the coffin and carry it to Walden, the Templars being aware of the design, buried it privately in the church-yard of the New Temple, viz., in the porch before the west door."

After the decease of this Earl Geoffrey, his son, ERNULPH, within the same year, was taken prisoner in the castle of Ramsey, which he had fortified, banished, and d. s. p., when

Geoffrey, surnamed the younger (the 2nd son), was restored by King HENRY II. to all the lands of his ancestors, and confirmed in the EARLDOM OF ESSEX. This nobleman being an eloquent and accomplished person, was associated with Richard de Lacy, to march against the Welsh, then near Chester, at which city falling sick, it happened that his servants being all gone to dinner, and nobody left with him, he died. Whereupon divers ancient knights then assembled there, who had served his father, and enjoyed large possessions through his bounty, consulting together, resolved to carry his corpse to Walden, there to be interred as patron of that house: and for that purpose having taken out his brain and bowels, and committed them to holy sepulture, with honour and alms, they seasoned the rest of his body with salt, then wrapt it in a good hide, and confined it: and thus proceeded, accompanied by the earl's servants, towards Walden; but upon the way, one of the deceased lord's chaplains, named Hasculf, took out his best saddle horse, in the night, and rode to Chicksand, where the Countess Rohese then resided with her nuns, and having acquainted her with the death of her son, advised her to send speedily, whatever force she could, to intercept the corpse, and to bring it thither, to the end that the kindred and friends of the deceased, might become benefactors to the convent of Chicksand; of which design the conductors of the corpse having, however, been apprised, they immediately drew their swords, and thus brought the noble remains in safety to Walden, where they were most magnificently interred. His lordship m. Eustachia, a kinswoman of King HENRY II., but did not live long with her, and, the lady, thereupon, making a complaint to her royal relative, the king is said to have caused, in great wrath, a divorce betwixt them. The earl d. 12 November, 1165, and leaving no issue, was s. by his brother,

* Dapifer, id est, Steward, to King WILLIAM for Normandy.

WILLIAM DE MANDEVILLE, as 3rd EARL OF ESSEX. This nobleman attended King HENRY II. into France, in the 19th of that monarch's reign, as one of the generals of his army. In two years afterwards (1176,) his lordship was one of the witnesses of the agreement made at Windsor, between the English monarch and Roderic, King of Connaught. In 1177, the earl made a pilgrimage to the Holy Land, and upon his return, repairing to Walden, was received by the whole convent in solemn procession, "all of them singing with one heart and voice, Benedictus qui venit in nomine Domini." After which, ascending to the high altar, and there receiving formal benediction from the prior, he offered divers precious relics, some of which he had acquired in the Holy Land, and others from the Emperor of Constantinople, and the Earl of Flanders. Then standing before the altar, the prior began the hymn of Te Deum Laudamus, which being ended, he went into the chapter house, and salutated all the monks, and thence into the abbey, where he was feasted honourably. His lordship m. 1st, Hawise, dau. and heiress of William le Gros, Earl of Albemarle, in whose right he bore that additional title; and 2ndly, Christian, dau. of Robert, Lord Fitz-Walter (who m. after the earl's decease, Raymond de Burgh), but had issue by neither of those ladies. The earl being a person chiefly engaged in military affairs, spent the greater part of his life in Normandy, where he was entrusted with divers forts and castles, by King HENRY. He d. in 1190, when the Earldom must have EXPIRED, but the feudal lordship and estates devolved upon his aunt, BEATRIX, wife of William de Say, whose eldest son, William de Say, dying v. p., left two daus., viz.,

Beatrix, m. to Geoffrey Fitz-Piers.
Maud, m. to William de Boeland.

Upon the decease of William de Mandeville, Earl of Essex, as mentioned above, much dispute arose regarding the inheritance; Beatrix, his aunt and heir, in the first place, preferring her claim, sent Geoffrey de Say, her younger son, to transact the business for the livery thereof; but Geoffrey Fitz-Piers insisted upon the right of Beatrix, his wife; nevertheless, Geoffrey de Say, in consideration of 7,000 marks, promised to be paid on a certain day, obtained an instrument in right of his mother, under the king's seal, for the whole of the barony, but the said Geoffrey de Say, making default of payment, this

Geoffrey FITZPIERS, being a man of great wealth and reputation, made representation that the barony was the right of his wife; and promising to pay the money, obtained livery thereof, and procured the king's confirmation of his title. One of the earliest acts of this feudal lord, was to dispossess the monks of Walden, of certain lands which they had derived from his predecessors, a proceeding followed by a long controversy, which, after being referred to the Pope and the King, was finally compromised. Upon the removal of Hubert, archbishop of Canterbury, from the office of Justice of England, by RICHARD I., this Geoffrey was appointed to succeed him; and at the coronation of King JOHN, 26 June, 1199, he was girt with the sword, as EARL OF ESSEX, and then served at the king's table. Being nominated patron of the monastery of Walden, he appears soon after to have been received with great ceremony by the monks, and perfectly reconciled to those holy fathers. In the 7th King JOHN, he had a grant of the castle and honour of Berkhamstead, with the knights' fees therunto belonging, to hold to him and the heirs of his body, by Aveline, his 2nd wife. His lordship m. 1st, as already stated, Beatrix de Say, by whom he had issue,

Geoffrey, his successor.

William, successor to his brother, } These all assumed the Henry, dean of Wolverhampton. } name of MANDEVILLE.

Maud, m. to Robert de Bohun, Earl of Hereford, whose son and heir became eventually EARL OF ESSEX, as well as Earl of Hereford.

He m. 2ndly, Aveline —, and had an only son, John Fitzpiers, Lord of Berkhamstead. His lordship, whom Matthew Paris characterizes as "ruling the reins of government so that after his death the realm was like a ship in a tempest without a pilot," d. 2 October, 1213, and was s. by his eldest son,

Geoffrey DE MANDEVILLE (which surname he assumed), who, in the 15th King JOHN, had livery of the lands of his inheritance, and the same year, bearing the title of EARL OF ESSEX, the king gave him to wife, Isabel, Countess of Gloucester, 3rd dau. and co-heir of William, Earl of Gloucester, and was so styled in the convention with King JOHN, 1215 (which Isabel had first been m. to King JOHN himself, but repudiated on account of consanguinity). This nobleman afterwards distinguished himself amongst the barons, who rebelled against the tyrannical power of JOHN, and was one of the twenty-five lords chosen to enforce the observance of Magna Charta: about which period, attending a tournament at London, he received a wound from a lance, which proved mortal. His lordship d. in 1216, and leaving no children, was s. by his brother,

William Mandeville, as Earl of Essex. This nobleman, like his deceased kinsman, espoused the cause of the barons, and stoutly maintained it even after the decease of King JOHN; being one of those who then assisted Lewis of France, in the siege of Berkhamstead Castle, occupied by the king's forces. A sally having been made, however, from the garrison, much of the baggage of the besiegers was captured, and amongst other things the banner of this Earl William. His lordship seems to have made his peace soon after, for we find him engaged in the Welsh wars. He d. in the flower of his age, 25 December, 1227, and, as he left no issue, the Earldom of Essex devolved upon his sister, Mary, Countess of Hereford (see BOHUN, Earl of Hereford), while the lands which he inherited passed to his half-brother,

John Fitz-Piers, who was sheriff of Yorkshire, in the 18th HENRY III. He m. Isabel, sister of John Bigod, and was s. by his son,
John Fitz-John Fitz-Geoffrey, whose son and heir, John Fitz-John, was summoned to parliament as a Baron, temp. HENRY III. (see Fitz-John).

MANNY—BARON MANNY.

By Writ of Summons, dated 13 November, 1347.

Lineage.

WALTER DE MANNY (an alien, born in the diocese of Cambrai), being a person of high military repute, was made a knight of the Bath, in the 6th EDWARD III.; after which we find him one of the most gallant and enterprising characters of the martial period in which he lived. In the 8th, 9th, and 10th of the same reign, Sir Walter was engaged in the Scottish wars, and in the 11th, was constituted admiral of the king's fleet, northwards, being the same year sworn of the privy council. "Shortly after this," says Dugdale, "he was in the battel of Cagant, against the French; and seeing Henry, Earl of Derby, son to Henry, Earl of Lancaster, felled to the ground, he brought him out of danger, and cried, Lancaster for the Earl of Derby." In the week also, that defiance was made to the French king, he rode through Brabant night and day, with forty spears, until he reached Hainault; having pledged himself to divers "ladies fair," previously to leaving England, that he should be the first to invade France, and to win some town or castle there; in redemption of which chivalrous promise, he entered Mortaigne, with his pennon borne before him, through the high-street; but coming to the great tower, found the gate closed against him. Upon which, causing the watch of the castle to sound his horn, and cry, Treason, treason, he retraced his steps, and fired the adjoining street. Thence he proceeded to Condé, and on to Valenciennes, from which place he marched to China, and took by assault, the strong castle there; whereof, making it a garrison, he appointed his brother, Giles Manny, governor. He thence joined the King at Machline. In about two years after this, Sir Walter Manny was in an expedition made into the north of France, and there his usual fortune attended him—he spoiled the country, slew more than 1000 soldiers, and burnt 300 villages. In the same year (14th EDWARD III.) he was in the great sea fight, between the French and English before Sluice, in Flanders; and for his disbursements in that and other services, had an assignation of £2000 payable by the receiver of the subsidy then levied in Essex. In the 16th EDWARD III., he attended the king to the siege of Nantes; and in consideration of £4000, which he remitted of the sum of £8000, then due to him from the crown, he obtained a grant for life, of the sheriffalty of Merionethshire; and an assignation of sixty-eight sacks, and one quarter of the king's wools in Sussex, for the support of himself, and fifty men at arms, with fifty archers on horseback, in the expedition then made into France. His own wages as a banneret, being 4s. per day; the knights (twelve in number), 2s. each, per day; the esquires, &c., and the archers, &c. In two years afterwards, being one of the marshals of the host to the Earl of Derby, when he went to assault Bergerath, he said to his lordship, as he sat at dinner, "Sir, if we were good men at arms, we should drink this evening with the French lords at BERGERATH." Whereupon all that heard him, cried, "to arms," and the town being immediately assaulted, surrendered to its gallant assailants.

"Amongst other towns," saith Dugdale, "then won by the Earl of Derby, Ryol being one; this Walter found the tombe of his father, who had been buried there, and of whose death Freisart makes this relation; viz. "That at a certain tournament before Cambray (there being on both parts 500 knights), he tourneyed with a knight of Gascoigne, a kinsman to the bishop of Cambray, and wounded him so sore, as that he died soon after. Which so incensed the kindred of that knight, that upon a pacification made, he was, for expiation of the knight's death, to go on a pilgrimage to St. James; and that upon his return thence, finding Ryol besieged by Count CHARLES, OF VALOIS, brother to King PHILIP (it being then in the hands of the English), coming back at night towards his lodging from a visit, which he had made to that count, he was murdered by some of the knight's kindred, who lay purposely in wait for him. And that upon tidings brought to the count, he caused his body to be buried in a little chapel without the town; which when the town came to be enlarged, was encompassed by the walls."

Sir Walter Manny was one of the most conspicuous heroes of Cressy, having a principal command in the van of the English army. From this celebrated field he repaired to the siege of Calais, where King EDWARD and his victorious son, the Black Prince, condescended to array themselves under Sir Walter's banner, and fighting beneath it, reduced that strong and important place. About this period, in reward of all these heroic achievements, Sir Walter Manny was summoned to parliament as a Baron, 13 November, 1347, and thenceforward during the remainder of his life. He had likewise large grants from the crown, and was made a knight of the Garter. His lordship continued actively engaged in the French war, until the peace concluded with France in the 42nd EDWARD III., when he was one of those who swore to observe the articles of the treaty. His lordship m. the Lady Margaret Plantagenet, styled Duchess of Norfolk, eldest dau., and eventually co-heiress of Thomas of Brotherton, Duke of Norfolk, and widow of John, Lord Segrave, by whom he left an only dau. and heiress.

ANNE MANNY, who m. John de Hastings, Earl of Pembroke.

This great and gallant nobleman d. in 1372. His will bears date at London, upon St. Andrew's Day, in the preceding year. By that testament he bequeathed his body to be buried in the midst of the quire of the Carthusians (commonly called the Charter House), near West Smithfield, in the suburbs of London, of his own foundation, but without any great pomp; appointing that his executors should cause twenty masses to be sung for his soul; and that every poor body coming to his funeral, should have a penny to pray for him, and for the remission of his sins. To Mary, his sister (at that time a nun), he bequeathed £10. To his two bastard daus., nuns also (namely, Mailloel and Malplesant), the one 200 franks, the other 100. To Margaret, his wife, all his silver vessels; likewise his girdle of gold, with all his girdles and knives. Also his beds, and drawers in his wardrobe; excepting his folding bed, pale of blue and red, which he gave to his dau. of Pembroke. Moreover, he ordained, that a tomb of alabaster, with his image as a knight, and his arms thereon, should be made for him, like unto that of Sir John Beauchamp, in the cathedral of St. Paul, at London, as a remembrance of him, and that men might pray for his soul. And whereas the king did owe him an old debt of £1000, by bills of his wardrobe; he appointed, that if it could be had, it should be given to the prior and monks of the Charter House, whereof he was founder. And whereas, there was due to him from the prince, from the time he had been Prince of Wales, the sum of 100 marks per annum for his salary as governor of Hardelegh Castle, he bequeathed a moiety thereof to the said prior and monks of the Charter House before-mentioned, and the other moiety to his executors (of which he constituted Sir Guyde de Bryene one), for the performance of his testament.

Upon the decease of Lord Manny, the Barony of Manny devolved upon his dau. ANNE, Countess of PEMBROKE, and at the decease of her son, John Hastings, 3rd Earl of Pembroke, without issue, in 1391, it became EXTINCT.

MARE—BARON LA MARE.

By Writ of Summons, dated 6 February, 1299.

Lineage.

Families of the surname of DE LA MARE flourished simultaneously in the cos. of Wilts, Somerset, Hereford, and Oxford, whereof

HENRY DE LA MARE (of the Oxfordshire House), upon the demise of his father, in the 6th year of King STEPHEN, paid a fine of £28 6s. 8d., that he might enjoy his office of huntsman to the king; for so he was, holding the post by petty serjeanty. To this Henry s.

ROBERT DE LA MARE, who was sheriff of Oxfordshire in the 34th HENRY II., and of Oxford and Berks, in the 1st and 2nd RICHARD I. He was s. by

GEFFERY DE LA MARE, who gave a fine of 100 marks and one palfrey, for warranty of his lands at Duderote, in the co. Berks. From this Geffery descended

JOHN DE LA MARE, of Gersyndon, afterwards Garsynton, co. Oxford, who, having been engaged in the French and Scottish wars of King EDWARD I., was summoned to parliament as a Baron from 6 February, 1299, to 26 July, 1313. He d. 9th EDWARD II., 1315-6. But of his lordship nothing further is known, and Dugdale says that his descendants had never afterwards summons to parliament.

MARMYON, OF MARMION—BARONS MARMYON.

FEUDAL.

(Although it is not intended that this work shall embrace personages who were merely feudal lords, the present family, as that from which the CHAMPIONSHIP OF ENGLAND is inherited, demands to be noticed.)

Lineage.

At the period of the Norman conquest,

ROBERT DE MARMYON, Lord of Fontney, in Normandy, having by grant of King WILLIAM, the castle of Tamworth, in the co. Warwick, with the adjacent lands, expelled the nuns from the abbey of Polesworth, to a place called Oldbury, about four miles distant. "After which" (writes Sir William Dugdale), "within the compass of a twelvemonth, as it is said, making a costly entertainment at Tamworth Castle, for some of his friends, amongst whom was Sir Walter de Somerville, Lord of Whichever, in the co. Stafford, his sworn brother, it happened, that as he lay in his bed, St. Edith appeared to him in the habit of a veiled nun, with a crozier in her hand, and advertised him, that if he did not restore the abbey of Polesworth, which lay within the territories belonging to his castle of Tamworth, unto her successors, he should have an evil death, and go to hell. And, that he might be the more sensible of this her admonition, she smote him on the side with the crozier, and so vanished away. Moreover, that by this stroke being much wounded, he cried out so loud, that his friends in the house arose, and finding him extremely tormented with the pain of his wound, advised him to confess himself to a priest, and vow to restore the nuns to their former possessions. Furthermore, that having so done, his pain ceased; and that in accomplishment of this vow, accompanied by Sir Walter de Somerville, and the rest, he forthwith rode to Oldbury, and craving pardon of the nuns for the injury done, brought them back to Polesworth, desiring that himself, and his friend Sir Walter de Somerville, might be reputed their patrons, and have burial for themselves and their heirs in the abbey—the Marmions in the chapter house—the Somervilles in the cloyster. However (continues Dugdale), some circumstances in this story may seem fabulous, the substance of it is certainly true; for it expressly appeareth by the very words of his charter, that he gave to Osanna, the prioress, for the establishing of the religion of those nuns there, the church of St. Edith, of Polesworth, with its appurtenances, so that the convent of Oldbury should remain in that place. And likewise bestowed upon them the whole lordship of Polesworth: which grant King STEPHEN afterwards confirmed." The castle and manor of Tamworth, in Warwickshire, and the manor of Scrivelaby, co. Lincoln, were granted by the CONQUEROR to this Robert de Marmion, to be held by grand serjeanty, "to perform the office of champion at the king's coronation" (the Marmions, it is said, were hereditary champions to the Dukes of Normandy, prior to the conquest of England). Robert Marmion was s. at his decease, by his son and heir,

ROBERT DE MARMYON, Lord of Fontney, in Normandy, where he possessed a fortified castle, which was besieged by Geoffrey, of Anjou, in the 4th King STEPHEN, and demolished. This Robert having a great enmity to the Earl of Chester, who had a noble seat at Coventry, entered the priory there in the 8th STEPHEN, and expelling the monks, turned it into a fortification, digging at the same time divers deep ditches in the adjacent fields, which he caused to be covered over with earth, in order to secure the approaches thereto; but the Earl of Chester's forces drawing near, as he rode out to reconnoitre, he fell into one of those very ditches, and broke his thigh, so that a common soldier, presently seizing him, cut off his head. He was s. by his son,

ROBERT DE MARMION, who, in the 31st HENRY II., being constituted sheriff of Worcestershire, continued in that office until the end of the 34th year. He was also justice itinerant in Warwickshire, and some other counties—and again sheriff of Worcester in the 1st RICHARD I. In five years afterwards he attended that monarch into Normandy, and in the 15th King JOHN he was in the expedition then made into Poitou. This feudal lord d. about the year 1217, leaving issue, by different mothers,

ROBERT, his successor.

Robert, junior, who had the estates of Witrington and Coningsby, co. Lincoln (see Marmion, Barons Marmion, of Witrington).

William, of Torington (see Marmion, Barons Marmion).

He was s. by his eldest son,

ROBERT DE MARMION, who appears to have sided with the French, when they seized upon Normandy in the beginning of King JOHN's reign, for the murder of Arthur, Duke of Brittany; but afterwards made his peace, for in the 5th HENRY III. he had livery of Tamworth Castle, and his father's other lands. He is supposed to have returned to Normandy in twelve years afterwards, and to have d. there in 1241, when he was s. by his son,

PHILIP DE MARMION, who was sheriff for the co. Warwick and Leicester, from the 33rd to the 36th HENRY III. In the latter of which years he was questioned for sitting with Richard de Mundervill, and the rest of the justices, for gaol-delivery at Warwick, having no commission so to do. The next year he attended the king into Gascony; upon his return whence he was taken prisoner by the French at Pontes, in Poitou, with John de Plesssets, then Earl of Warwick, notwithstanding they had letters of safe conduct from the king of France. In the 45th of the same reign this feudal lord had summons to be at London with divers of the nobility, upon the morrow after Simon and Jude's day; in which year the defection of many of the barons began further to manifest itself, by their assuming the royal prerogative, in placing sheriffs throughout different shires. In this period of difficulty Philip de Marmion, being of unimpeachable loyalty, had, by special patent from the king, the co. Suffolk and Norfolk committed to his custody, with the castles of Norwich and Oxford: a well-judged confidence, for through all the subsequent fortunes of HENRY III. he never once swerved from his allegiance. He was present at the battle of Lewes—and his fidelity was rewarded after the royal victory of Evesham, by some valuable grants for life, and the governorship of Kenilworth Castle. He m. Joane, youngest dau., and eventually sole heiress of Hugh de Kilpec, by whom he had three daus., his co-heirs, viz.,

Joane, m. to William Morteyn, and d. s. p. in 1294.

Mazera, m. to Ralph Cromwell, and had an only dau. and heiress,

Joane, m. to Alexander, Baron Freville, whose grandson,

Sir Baldwin de Freville, Lord Freville, claimed the championship in the 1st RICHARD II., by the tenure of Tamworth Castle, but the matter was determined against him in favour of Sir John Dymoke.

Maud, m. to Ralph Botiller, and d. s. p.

By a 2nd marriage Philip de Marmion had another dau. and co-heir, viz.,

Joane, m. 1st, to Sir Thomas de Ludlow, Knt., and 2dly, Henry Hillary. By the former she had,

Thomas, who, by Catherine, his wife, left an only dau. and heir,

Margaret de Ludlow, who m. Sir John Dymoke, Knt., and brought into the family of her husband the manor of SCRIVELBY, in Lincolnshire, by which the Dymokes have from the accession of RICHARD II. exercised the chivalrous office of Champion at the coronations of the kings of England. Our space compels us to pass over the various Champions to SIR EDWARD DYMOKE, Champion at the coronation of King CHARLES II. This gentleman m. 21 June, 1624, Jane, dau. of Nicholas Cressy, Esq., of Fulnetby, and had, with other issue,

1 CHARLES, his successor.

2 Edward, of Grebby Hall, who d. 1 April, 1694, leaving, by Abigail Snowden, his wife,

ROBERT, whose great-grandson,

DYMOKE WELLS, Esq., of Grebby Hall, co. Lincoln, m. in 1793, Anne, dau. and co-heir of Thomas Waterhouse, Esq., of Beckingham Hall, high sheriff of Notts, in 1787; and d. in 1832 (his widow d. 25 December, 1848), leaving issue,

THOMAS-WATERHOUSE WELLS, of Grebby Hall, d. in 1833.

DYMOKE WELLS, of Grebby Hall, d. 2 February 1892, s. p.

EDMUND-LIONEL WELLES, barrister-at-law, of the Grange, West Moulsey, Surrey.

Georgiana, m. to Capt. Rowland Pennington, of Whitehaven.

John, whose grandson, John Dymoke, Esq., of Tetford, co. Lincoln, who d. 21 August, 1782, was the next male heir to the Scrivelaby baronial estates, on the death of the hon. Champion, Lewis Dymoke, in 1760.

3 John, who m. Elizabeth, dau. of Thomas Welborne, Esq., and left a son, Charles, father of EDWARD, who s. to the estates and Championship under the will of his cousin, the hon. Champion, Lewis Dymoke.

Sir Edward was sheriff of Lincolnshire in 1662. He d. soon afterwards, and was buried at Scrivelsby, 8 January, 1663-4. He was s. by his eldest son,

SIR CHARLES DYMOKE, who officiated as Champion at the coronation of King JAMES II. He m. Eleanor, dau. of Lewis Watson, Lord Rockingham, and had issue,

CHARLES, his heir.

LEWIS, successor to his brother.

ELEANOR, wife of Matthew Lister, Esq., of Burwell Park, co. Lincoln, and great-great-grandmother of the late MATTHEW-BANCROFT LISTER, Esq., of Burwell Park.

He d. about the year 1688, and was s. by his eldest surviving son,

CHARLES DYMOKE, Esq. This gentleman fulfilled the duties of Champion at the coronation of WILLIAM and MARY, and likewise at the coronation of Queen ANNE. He m. Jane, dau. of Robert Snoden, Esq., but dying s. p. 17 January, 1702-3, was s. by his brother,

LEWIS DYMOKE, Esq., who officiated as Champion at the coronation of the first two monarchs of the line of Brunswick. He was M.P. for Lincolnshire from 1702 to 1706, inclusive, and from 1710 to 1713. He d. unm. in 1760, having completed his ninety-first year, and was s. by his cousin,

EDWARD DYMOKE, Esq., of Scrivelsby, who m. Elizabeth Segrave, relict of James Coward, and dying 12 September, 1760, was s. by his son,

JOHN DYMOKE, Esq., of Scrivelsby, Champion at the coronation of GEORGE III., who m. Martha, dau. and heir of Josiah Holmes, Esq., and dying 6 March, 1784, was s. by his elder son,

LEWIS DYMOKE, Esq., of Scrivelsby, who claimed before the House of Lords the old barony of Marmion, but unsuccessfully. He d. unm. 12 May, 1820, and was s. by his brother,

THE REV. JOHN DYMOKE, rector of Scrivelsby, prebendary of Lincoln. This gentleman being called upon to officiate as Champion at the coronation of GEORGE IV., was obliged, owing to his clerical character, to act by deputy, and he therefore appointed his eldest son, HENRY DYMOKE, who fulfilled the duties of the office accordingly. Mr. Dymoke m. 19 July, 1799, Amelia-Jane-Alice, dau. of Captain Elphinstone, of the British navy, and Admiral of the Russian fleet, by whom (who d. 26 April, 1856), he had issue. He d. 3 December, 1828, and was s. by his elder son, the said Henry, who was created a Baronet, and was the late SIR HENRY DYMOKE, Bart., of Scrivelsby, the hon. the Queen's Champion.

Upon the decease of Philip de Marmion, about 1292, his estates passed to his co-heiresses, barony and manor of Tamworth to Freville, and Scrivelsby to Dymoke.

At the coronation of King RICHARD II., Sir Baldwin Freville, then Lord of Tamworth, exhibited his claim to be king's Champion that day, and to do the service appertaining to that office, by reason of his tenure of Tamworth Castle, viz., "To ride completely armed upon a barbed horse into Westminster Hall, and there to challenge the combat with whomsoever should dare to oppose the king's title to the crown." Which service the Barons de Marmion, his ancestors, lords of that castle, had theretofore performed. But Sir John Dymoke counterclaimed the same office as Lord of Scrivelsby. Whereupon the Constable and Marshal of England, appointed the said Sir John Dymoke to perform the office at that time.

The chief part of Scrivelsby Court, the ancient baronial seat, was destroyed by fire during the last century. In the part consumed was a very large hall, on the panels of the wainscoting of which were depicted the various arms and alliances of the family through all its numerous and far-traced descents. The loss has been, in some degree, compensated by the addition which the late proprietors made to those parts which escaped the ravages of the flames. Against the south wall of the chancel in the parish church of Scrivelsby, is a very handsome marble monument, ornamented with a bust of the Hon. Lewis Dymoke, Champion at the coronation of the two first sovereigns of the House of Brunswick. On the north side of the chancel is a marble tablet to the memory of the Hon. John Dymoke, who performed the duties of Champion at the coronation of King GEORGE III. On the floor of the south side of the communion table is a plate of copper, on which is an inscription to the memory of Sir Charles Dymoke, Knt., who was Champion at the coronation of King JAMES II. At the eastern end of the aisle are two tombs, on one of which is the figure of a knight in chain armour, cross-legged, on the other that of a lady with a lion at her feet. By the side of these is the tomb of Sir Robert Dymoke, who was Champion at the coronations of RICHARD III., HENRY VII., and HENRY VIII.

On the floor of the aisle is also a stone which once contained a brass figure, with corner shields, and an inscription, all of which are now gone.

In July, 1814, Lewis Dymoke, Esq., the descendant of Sir John Dymoke above-mentioned, uncle of the late Champion, Sir Henry Dymoke, Bart., of Scrivelsby Court, co. Lincoln, presented a petition to the crown, praying to be declared entitled to the Barony of Marmion, of Scrivelsby, in virtue of the seizure of the manor of Scrivelsby; which petition was referred to the attorney-general, who having reported thereon, the same was referred to the House of Lords, where evidence was received at the bar, and the claimant's counsel summoned up, when the attorney-general was heard in reply, and tendered some documents on the part of the crown; but the claimant died before the judgment of the House was given.

"With respect to this claim," says Sir Harris Nicolas, "it is to be observed, that though the manor of Scrivelsby was held by the service of performing the office of king's Champion by Robert de Marmyon, in the reign of WILLIAM THE CONQUEROR, he was not by seizure thereof a baron, but by seizure of the barony and castle of Tamworth, which he held of the king in capite by knight's service; so that, if at this period baronies by tenure were admitted, the possessor of the manor and lordship of Tamworth (which in the division of his property fell to the share of Joane, his eldest dau., wife of William Morteyn, and on her death s. p. to Alexander Freville, husband of Joan, dau. and heir of Ralph Cromwell, by Mazer, the next sister of the said Joan de Morteyn), would possess the claim to the barony enjoyed by Robert de Marmyon, he having derived his dignity from that barony instead of from the seizure of the manor of Scrivelsby. Moreover, if Philip Marmyon, the last baron, had died seized of a barony in fee, Lewis Dymoke was not even a co-heir of the said Philip, though he was the descendant of one of his daus. and co-heirs."

MARMYON, OR MARMION—BARONS MARMION OF WETRINGTON, CO. LINCOLN.

By Writ of Summons, dated 8 June, 1294, 26 January, 1297, and 26 July, 1313.

Lineage.

ROBERT DE MARMYON, eldest son by his 2nd wife of Robert de Marmyon, 3rd feudal Lord of Tamworth, had the lordships of Witringham, and Coningsby, co. Lincoln; Dueinton, co. Gloucester; and Berwick, co. Suffolk, by especial grant of his father; and in the 16th King JOHN, he gave to the king 350 marks, and five palfreys, for license to marry Amice, the dau. of Jerneygan Fitz-Hugh. After which, being in arms with the rebellious barons, he obtained letters of safe conduct for coming in to the king, to make his peace. He again, however, took up arms in the baronial cause, in the ensuing reign, along with his brother William, and appears to have held out to the last. This Robert acquired a large accession of landed property with his wife, Alice Fitz-Hugh, and was s. at his decease, by his son,

WILLIAM DE MARMION, who m. Lora, dau. of Roesse de Dover, by whom he acquired the town of Ludington, in Northamptonshire, and was s. by his son,

JOHN DE MARMION, who, in the 22nd EDWARD I., had summons, with other great men, to attend the king to advise upon the affairs of the realm, and was summoned to parliament as a Baron, 8 June, 1294, 26 January, 1297, and from 26 July, 1313, to 14 March, 1322. In the 4th EDWARD II., his lordship had license to make a castle of his house, called the Hermitage, in the co. York. He d. in 1322, and was s. by his son,

JOHN DE MARMION, 2nd baron, summoned to parliament from 3 December, 1326, to 1 April, 1335. This nobleman was engaged in the Scottish wars. His lordship m. Maud, dau. of Lord Furnival, and had issue,

ROBERT, his successor.

Joane, m. to Sir John Bernack, Knt.

Alice, 2nd wife of Sir John de Grey, Lord Grey, of Rotherfield, and had issue,

John de Grey, who assumed the surname of Marmion, d. s. p. in 1385.

Robert de Grey assumed the name of Marmion, m. Lora, dau. and co-heir of Herbert de St. Quintin, and had an only dau. and heiress, Elizabeth Marmion, who m. Henry, Lord Fitz-Hugh, K.G.

The baron d. in 1335, and was s. by his son,

ROBERT DE MARMION, 3rd baron, but never summoned to parliament. This nobleman being of infirm constitution, and having no issue, married his younger sister, Avice, by the advice of his friends, to Sir John Grey, Lord Grey of Rotherfeld, upon condition that the issue of the said Sir John Grey and Avice should bear the surname of Marmion. At the decease of his lordship, the Barony of Marmion, of Wittrington, fell into ABEYANCE between his sisters (refer to children of 2nd baron), the elder of whom, Joane, Lady Bernack, d. s. p. The younger, Avice, as stated above, m. Lord Grey, and her grand-dau., Elizabeth, m. Henry, Lord Fitz-Hugh, amongst whose representatives this barony continues in abeyance.

MARMYON, OR MARMION—BARON MARMION.

By Writ of Summons, dated 24 December, 1264.

Lineage.

WILLIAM DE MARMYON, youngest son of Robert de Marmyon, 3rd feudal lord of Tamworth, having taken a leading part in the baronial wars against King HENRY III., was summoned as a Baron to the parliament called in the king's name, by those turbulent lords, after their triumph at Lewes, 24 December, 1264, but never subsequently. His lordship appears to have d. s. p. when the barony became, of course, EXTINCT.

MARNEY—BARONS MARNEY, OF LAYR-MARNEY, CO. ESSEX.

By Letters Patent, dated 9 April, 1523.

Lineage.

In 1254, Ralph de Mareny, uncle of William, son of Roger de Mareny, held lands in Layr-Marney, and in 1262, William de Marney purchased lands here of Robert le Carpenter and Mary, his wife.

ROBERT DE MARNEY, son of William de Marney, living temp. EDWARD III., m. a dau. of — Gernon, and was father of William de Marney, who m. the dau. and co-heir of — Venables, and left a son and successor.

SIR ROBERT DE MARNEY, Knt., who m. Alice, dau. and heir of Richard Layer, of Suffolk, and relict of Sir William Bruyn, of South Okendon, and was father of

SIR WILLIAM MARNEY, high sheriff of Essex and Herts in 1402. He m. Elizabeth, dau. and co-heir of Richard Sergeants, and had three sons and one dau., Thomas (Sir), d. in 1417, leaving an only dau., who d. unm.; William, d. unm.; and John (Sir), of whom presently; and Anne, m. to Sir Thomas Tyrell, of East Horndon. Sir William d. in 1414. His youngest son, and eventual heir,

SIR JOHN MARNEY, was s. by his son,

SIR HENRY MARNEY, Knt., who being "a person of great wisdom, gravity, and of singular fidelity to that prudent prince King HENRY VII.," was made choice of for one of his privy council, in the first year of his reign, and the next year he commanded against the Earl of Lincoln, at the battle of Stoke. He was subsequently engaged against Lord Audley and the Cornish rebels, at Blackheath. Upon the accession of HENRY VIII., he was re-sworn of the privy council, and soon afterwards installed a knight of the Garter. Sir Henry was subsequently appointed captain of the guard to the king, and upon the attainder of Edward Stafford, Duke of Buckingham, he had grants of a large portion of that nobleman's estates. He was appointed keeper of the privy seal in February, 1522, and devoted to the peerage in the April following, as BARON MARNEY, of Leyr-Marney, co. Essex.

His lordship m. 1st, Thomasine, dau. of Sir John Arundel, of Lanherne, in Cornwall, by whom he had two sons, John, his successor, and Thomas, who d. young, and a dau. Catharine, who m. Thomas Bonham, Esq. He m. 2ndly, Elizabeth, dau. of Alderman Nicholas Wisfeld, lord mayor of London, and had a dau., who m. Sir Henry Bedingfield. His lordship d. 24 May, 1523, and was s. by his son,

JOHN MARNEY, 2nd baron. This nobleman, in the time of his father, was one of the esquires of the body to King HENRY VIII., and governor of Rochester Castle. His lordship m. 1st, Christian, dau. and heir of Sir Roger Newburgh, by whom he had two daus., viz.,

Katherine, m. 1st, to George Ratcliffe, Esq. (of the Sussex family), and 2ndly, to Thomas, Lord Poynings.

Elizabeth, m. to Lord Thomas Howard, afterwards created Viscount Bindon.

Lord Marney, m. 2ndly, Bridget, dau. of Sir William Waldegrave, Knt., and widow of William Finderne, Esq., but had no issue. He d. 27 April, 1525, when the Barony of Marney became EXTINCT, and his estates devolved upon his dau., as co-heirs.

MARSHAL—BARONS MARSHAL.

By Writ of Summons, dated 9 January, 1303.

Lineage.

The earliest notice of this family occurs in the time of HENRY I., when GILBERT MARESCALL, and JOHN, his son, were impleaded by Robert de Venoiz, and William de Hastings, for the office of MARESCAL to the king, but without success. The son (bearing the same surname, derived from his office),

JOHN MARESCALL, attaching himself to the fortunes of MAUD, against King STEPHEN, was with Robert, the consul, Earl of Gloucester, at the siege of Winchester Castle, when the party of the empress sustained so signal a defeat. Upon the accession of HENRY II., however, his fidelity was amply rewarded by considerable grants in the co. Wilts: and in the 10th of that monarch's reign, being then marshal, he laid claim, for the crown, to one of the manors of the see of Canterbury, from the celebrated prelate, Thomas à Becket, who about that period had commenced his contest with the king. To this John s. his son and heir,

JOHN MARESCALL, to whom King HENRY II. confirmed the office of marshal, and the lands which he held of the crown of England, and elsewhere. At the coronation of RICHARD I., this John Mareschall bore the great gilt spurs, and the same year obtained a grant from the crown of the manor of Boseham, in Sussex, in fee farm, paying £42 yearly, to the exchequer; with other extensive lordships. He d. soon after, and it appears without issue, for his brother, William Mareschall, Earl of Pembroke, s. as his heir. We now come to the nephew of the said William, Earl of Pembroke,

SIR JOHN MARSHAL, who m. Aliva, elder dau. and co-heir of Hubert de Bie, feudal lord of Hingham, co. Norfolk, by whom he acquired that lordship. Espousing the cause of King JOHN against the barons, Sir John Marshal acquired from the crown, all the forfeited lands of the Earl of Eversux, in England, as also the lands of Hugh de Gornal, lying in the co. of Norfolk and Suffolk, whereof the said Hugh was possessed when he deserted the royal banner; and he likewise obtained a grant in fee, of the office of marshal of Ireland. He was, subsequently, in the same reign, constituted guardian of the marches of Wales, and sheriff of Lincolnshire, and afterwards joined with John Fitz-Robert, in the sheriffalty of the co. of Norfolk and Suffolk, and the custody of the castles of Norwich and Orford. He was likewise made governor of Dorchester Castle; moreover, he had the same year, livery of the office of marshal of Ireland, and whatsoever did appertain thereto; so that he should appoint a knight to execute its duties effectually. Continuing steadfast in his allegiance to King JOHN, he was made sheriff of Worcestershire, and governor of the Castle of Worcester: and he was one of those who marched with the king into the north, to waste the lands of the insurrectionary barons there. Upon the accession of HENRY III., Sir John Marshal was constituted sheriff of Hampshire, and governor of the castle of Devizes, in Wilts, and retained, during the remainder of his life, the favour of that monarch. He d. in 1234, and was s. by his son,

JOHN MARSHAL, who, dying in 1242, was s. by his son and heir,

WILLIAM MARSHAL, who, adopting a different line of politics, joined the baronial standard, in the 49th HENRY III., and d. about the same period, (1264) leaving two sons, John and William, then underage, who, the next year, through the intercession of William de Saye, obtained the king's pardon for their father's transgression, and had permission to enjoy his lands, with whatever possessions they had, by gift of Aliva, their grandmother. The elder of these sons,

JOHN MARSHAL, d. in the 12th EDWARD I., and was s. by his son,

WILLIAM MARSHAL, who, in the 34th EDWARD I., was in the wars of Scotland, and was summoned to parliament as a Baron, from 9 January, 1309, to 26 November, 1313. His lordship d. in the next year, and was s. by his son,

JOHN MARSHAL, 2nd baron. In the 7th EDWARD II., this John attended the Queen into Scotland, and the ensuing year doing his homage, had livery of his lands, lying in the cos. of Norfolk and Lincoln. He d. soon after, about the year 1316, leaving his sister, Hawyse, wife of ROBERT, Lord Morley, his heir, who carried the Barony of Marshal into the Morley family, from which it passed into that of Lovel, and thence to the Parkers, when it finally fell into ARYANCE, at the decease of Thomas Parker, Lord Morley, in 1686, between the issue of that nobleman's aunt, Katherine, wife of John Savage, 2nd Earl Rivers.

Elizabeth, wife of Edward Cranfield, Esq., and amongst whose descendants it so continues.

MARSHAL—EARLS OF PEMBROKE.

Earldom, conferred upon the family of CLARE in 1138.
Conveyed to the MARSHALS by an heiress.

Lineage.

ISABEL DE CLARE, only child and heiress of RICHARD DE CLARE (surnamed STRONGBOW), EARL OF PEMBROKE, and justice of Ireland, who had been under the guardianship of HENRY II., was given in marriage by King RICHARD I., to

WILLIAM MARSHAL, of the great baronial family of Marischal (see MARSHAL, Barons Marshal), marshal to the king. This William is first noticed as receiving from Prince Henry, the rebellious son of HENRY II., upon the prince's deathbed, his cross, as his most confidential friend, to convey to Jerusalem. He m. the great heiress of the Clares, in 1183, and with her acquired the Earldom of Pembroke—in which rank he bore the royal sceptre of gold, surmounted by the cross, at the coronation of King RICHARD I.; and he was soon afterwards, on the king's purposing a journey to the Holy Land, appointed one of the assistants to Hugh, bishop of Durham, and William, Earl of Albemarle, Chief Justice of England, in the government of the realm. Upon the decease of his brother,* John Mareschall, marshal of the king's house, in 1199, he became lord marshal; and on the day of the coronation of King JOHN, he was invested with the sword of the Earldom of Pembroke, being then confirmed in the possession of the said inheritance. In the first year of this monarch's reign, his lordship was appointed sheriff of Gloucestershire, and likewise of Sussex, wherein he was continued for several years. In the 5th he had a grant of Goderich Castle, in the co. Hereford, to hold by the service of two knights' fees; and in four years afterwards, he obtained, by grant from the crown, the whole province of Leinster, in Ireland, to hold by the service of one hundred knights' fees. Upon the breaking out of the baronial insurrection, the Earl of Pembroke was deputed, with the archbishop of Canterbury, by the king, to ascertain the grievances and demands of those turbulent lords; and at the demise of King JOHN, he was so powerful as to prevail upon the barons to appoint a day for the coronation of HENRY III., to whom he was constituted guardian, by the rest of the nobility, who had remained firm in their allegiance. He subsequently took up arms in the royal cause, and after achieving a victory over the barons at Lincoln, proceeded directly to London, and investing that great city, both by land and water, reduced it to extremity, for want of provisions. Peace, however, being soon after concluded, it was relieved. His lordship, at this period, executed the office of sheriff for the cos. of Essex and Hertford. This eminent nobleman was no less distinguished by his wisdom in the council and valour in the field, than by his piety and his attachment to the church, of which his numerous munificent endowments bear ample testimony. His lordship had, by the heiress of Clare, five sons, who s. each other in his lands and honours, and five daus., viz.,

* He was brother and heir male, of John Marshal, otherwise Mareschall (for whose descent, see Marshal, Barons Marshal). This family enjoyed the office of marshal of the King's House, and from that post assumed its surname; which gave occasion, says Banks, to their being often styled Earls Marshal, as well as Earls of Strigill and Pembroke; but such denomination was matter of curiality more than of reality. The manor of Hempsted-Marshal, in Berkshire, belonging to the Marshals, was held of old by grand serjeanty of the Kings of England, to be the knights marshals, as the offices of steward, constable, &c., were in those times granted.

Maud, m. 1st, to Hugh Bigod, Earl of Norfolk; 2ndly, to William de Warren, Earl of Surrey; and 3rdly, to Walter de Dunstanville. This lady, upon the decease of her youngest brother, Anselm, Earl of Pembroke, s.p., in 1245, and the division of the estates, obtained, as her share, the manor of Hempsted-Marshal, in Berks, with the office of marshal of England, which was inherited by her son Roger Bigod, 4th Earl of Norfolk, and surrendered to the crown by her grandson, Roger Bigod, 5th Earl of Norfolk. Maud, Countess of Norfolk, had likewise the manors of Chepatow and Carlogh.

Joane, m. to Warine de Montchenay.

Isabel, m. 1st, to Gilbert de Clare, Earl of Gloucester; and 2ndly, to Richard, Earl of Cornwall. This lady had, as her portion, Kilkenny.

Sybil, m. to William de Ferrers, Earl of Derby, to whom she brought Kildare.

Eve, m. to William de Broose, of Brecknock.

The earl d. in 1219, and was s. by his eldest son,

WILLIAM MARSHAL, Earl of Pembroke, who, in the time of his father, was as strenuous a supporter of the baronial cause as that nobleman was of the royal interests, and was constituted one of the twenty-five barons appointed to enforce the observance of Magna Charta, being then styled "Comes Mareschal, Jun." After the decease of King JOHN, however, he made his peace, and, becoming loyally attached to the new monarch, obtained grants of the forfeited lands of his former companions, Saler de Quincey, Earl of Winchester, and David, Earl of Huntingdon. His lordship was subsequently engaged against the Welsh, and defeated their Prince, Llewelyn, with great slaughter; and in the 14th HENRY III., he was captain-general of the king's forces in Brittany. He m. 1st, Alice, dau. of Baldwin de Betun, Earl of Albemarle; and 2ndly, the Lady Alianore Plantagenet, dau. of King JOHN, and sister of HENRY III., but had issue by neither. He d. in 1231, and was s. by his next brother,

RICHARD MARSHAL, Earl of Pembroke. This nobleman returned to England upon the decease of his brother, and repairing to the king, then in Wales, offered to do homage for his inheritance, but Henry, at the suggestion of Hubert de Burgh, justiciary of England, declined receiving it, under the plea that the late earl's widow had been left in a state of pregnancy, and the king, at the same time, commanded Marshal forthwith to depart the realm within fifteen days; upon which he repaired to Ireland, where his brothers then were, who, with the army, received him cordially, and, delivering up the castles to him, did their homage. He immediately afterwards took possession of the castle of Pembroke, and prepared to enforce his rights by arms; but the king, fearing to disturb the public tranquillity, accepted his fealty, and acknowledged him EARL OF PEMBROKE. This reconciliation was not, however, of long endurance, for we find him soon afterwards in open hostility to the king, defending his own castles, storming and taking others, fighting and winning pitched battles, until his gallant career was finally arrested by the treachery of his own followers in Ireland, where, being inveigled, under the pretext of entering into a league of amity, he was assailed by superior numbers, and mortally wounded. His lordship, who is termed by Matt. Paris "the flower of chivalry," d. in 1234, and was buried in the oratory of the Friars Minor, at Kilkenny. As he d. unm., his estates and honours devolved upon his brother,

GILBERT MARSHAL, 4th Earl of Pembroke, who was restored to the whole of the late earl's lands by the king, although he had taken part in the proceedings of that nobleman. But notwithstanding this act of grace, his lordship never appears to have been cordially reconciled to the crown. His death occurred in 1241, and was occasioned by a fall from his horse at a tournament. He had m. 1st, Margaret, dau. of WILLIAM, King of Scotland, and 2ndly, Maud de Lanvailey; but having no issue, he was s. by his brother,

WALTER MARSHAL, 5th Earl of Pembroke. This nobleman had no little difficulty in obtaining livery of his inheritance, for when he came to do his homage, the king upbraided him with the injuries he had sustained from his predecessors. First, that Earl William, his father, had traitorously suffered LEVIS of France to escape out of England. Next, that Earl Richard, his brother, was a public enemy, and slain in flight as his enemy. That Gilbert, his brother, to whom at the instance of Edmund, archbishop of Canterbury, he had more through grace than favour, vouchsafed livery of his lands, had against his express prohibition, met at the tournament, wherein he was killed. "And thou," continued the king, "in contempt of me, wast also there. With what face, therefore, canst thou lay claim to that inheritance?" Whereupon Walter replied: "Though I could give a reasonable answer to what you have said, nevertheless I refer myself solely to your highness. You have hitherto been gracious to me, and reputed me as one of your family, and not amongst the meanest of your servants. I never demerited your favour, but now, in being at this tournament with my brother, whom I could not deny; and if all who were there should be thus disinherited, you would raise no small disturbance in your realm. Far be it from a good king, that I should suffer for the faults of all, and that amongst so great a number be the first punished." The king soon after, through the intercession of the bishop of Durham, vouchsafed him livery of the earldom and marshal's office. His lordship m. Margaret, dau. and heir of Robert de Quincy, but dying s. p. in 1245, was s. by his only remaining brother,

ANSELME MARSHAL, 5th Earl of Pembroke, who enjoyed the honours but eighteen days. He d. 5 December, 1245, leaving no issue by his wife, Maud, dau. of Humphrey de Bohun, Earl of Hereford, whereupon all his honours became EXTINCT, and his great inheritance devolved on his sisters, as co-heirs (refer to issue of the 1st earl.)

Arms—Per pale, or and vert, a lion rampant, gu., armed and langued, az.

These arms were not borne until the family came to be Marshals of England, prior to which period the coat was, "Gu., a bend loazengé, or."

MATHEW—EARL OF LLANDAFF.

By Letters Patent, dated November, 1701.

Lineage.

Captain GEORGE MATHEW, the eldest son of Edmund Mathew, m. Elizabeth, widow of Thomas Butler, Viscount Thurles, son of Walter, 11th Earl of Ormonde, who was lost at sea on the Skerries, on the 15th December, 1619. By her, George Mathew had two sons and two daus., Toby and George; Frances, a nun; and Elizabeth, m. to Edward Butler, of Ballyragget. Captain George Mathew d. in 1630, at Tenby. Of TOBY MATHEW, the eldest son, more hereafter.

GEORGE MATHEW, of Reaghill, 2nd son of Captain George and Lady Thurles, settled on the demesne of Thomastown, co. Tipperary. He m. Eleanor, widow of Edmund Butler, Lord Cahir, which is thus recorded in LODGE'S PEERAGE, 1757. "Eleanor, 2nd dau. of Edmund Butler, Lord Dunboyne, m. in 1641, Edmund Butler, son and heir of Thomas, Lord Cahir, who d. before his father, when she re-married with George Mathew, of Thomastown, a gentleman of great fortune, honour, ability, and integrity," and had one son, Theobald Mathew, more familiarly called Toby. This

THEOBALD MATHEW, of Thomastown, m. the dau. and heiress of Bartholomew Faulkes, and had three sons and four daus.,

- I. GEORGE, of Thomastown, styled Grand George, of whom hereafter.
- II. Toby, d. unm. in 1720.
- III. Bartholomew, d. unm. in 1712.
1. Elizabeth, m. Christopher O'Brien, heir of Donogh O'Brien, of Duagh.
- II. Frances, the wife of Captain John Butler, of Kilvoleghan, co. Tipperary.
- III. Eleanor, wife of Kane O'Hara, of Nymphsfield.
- IV. Anne, m. Pierce, 3rd Lord Galmoy.

Theobald Mathew d. 6 January, 1693, and was s. by his son,

GEORGE MATHEW, of Thomastown, (styled Grand George, for his great acquirements and style of living). He m. 1st, Elizabeth Butler, of Ballyragget, and had four sons,

- I. George, d. unm., v. p.
- II. Edmund.
- III. Theobald, m. Mary-Anne, dau. of George Mathew, the younger, in 1731. He d. and she re-married Charles O'Hara. They had two children, a son George, who d. an infant, and a dau. who d. a minor, in 1750, when thus failed the line of George Mathew, of Thomastown, 2nd son of Captain George and Lady Thurles.

"Grand George" m. 2ndly, Anne, widow of James de la Poer, Earl of Tyrone, and d. in 1740, leaving no issue male, when the estate came to George Mathew, the youngest, of Thurles, brother of the Mary-Anne Mathew who had m. Toby, son of Grand George. We must now revert to the Thurles branch, commencing with

TOBY MATHEW, of Thurles and Annefield, the eldest son of Captain George and Lady Thurles. Toby Mathew, who obtained of his half-brother, the Duke of Ormonde, the manor, castle, and town of Thurles, with a vast estate surrounding, m. three times: 1st, Margaret, dau. of Sir Valentine Browne, of Hospital; 2ndly, Anne Saul; and 3rdly, Catharine Neville. By his 1st wife he had, with one dau., Elizabeth, (who m. Pierce Butler, Lord Cahir), two sons, George and James, who m. a dau. of Theobald Bourke, Lord Brittas. The elder son,

GEORGE MATHEW, Esq. (called Major George, and also George Mathew, the elder, of Thurles), m. 1st Cecilia, dau. of Francis Arundel, of Dykes, and brother of Sir John Arundel, and had one son, GEORGE, the younger, of Thurles, by whom hereafter. He m. 2ndly, the widow of Sir Simon Eaton, Bart., dau. of Sir Richard Aldworth, of Newcastle, co. Cork; by her he had one son, Justyn, who d. unm. in 1728, and two daus. The son and heir,

GEORGE MATHEW, the younger, m. 1st, Mary, Lady Shelley, widow of Sir John Shelley, of Michell Grove, and dau. of Sir John Gage, of Firie, and by her had one son, GEORGE, the youngest, of Thurles, afterwards of Thomastown, and one dau., Mary-Anne, who, as before related, m. Theobald, 3rd son of Grand George, and afterwards, Charles O'Hara. He m. 2ndly, Martha Eaton, dau. of his step-mother, but by her had no issue. The only son,

GEORGE MATHEW, Esq., the youngest, of Thurles, who s. to Thomastown, on the decease of Grand George, m. 1st, Margaret, dau. of Thomas Butler, of Kilcash, by his wife, Lady Margaret Burke, eldest dau. of the Earl of Clanricarde, and widow of Bryan, Lord Viscount Iveagh; by her, who d. in July, 1743, he had one son, who d. an infant, and a dau., Margaret, wife of Michael Aylmer, of Lyons, co. Kildare. She disputed her father's will against Thomas Mathew, of Annefield, and failed. She was ancestress of the present Earl of Kenmare. He m. 2ndly, Isabella, dau. of W. Brownlow, Esq., of Shankill, M.P. for the co. Armagh, but had no issue. He d. 30 March, 1760, when both the Thurles and Thomastown families became extinct. He bequeathed the estates of Thurles and Thomastown, &c., to his nearest kinsman, Thomas Mathew, of Annefield, who then represented the family, entailing the whole in the strictest possible manner, first to the sons of Thomas, and then to his brothers, John, George, and Charles, of Annefield, and their issue male only, by right of priority and seniority, then to Edmund and James, and their issue male, and then to sundry female members, on failing male heirs, but all confined to the Irish descent, recognizing no others whatever, then to his own right heirs, who must take and use the name of Mathew. We now come to the ANNEFIELD family, descendants of the first Toby Mathew, (son of Captain George), by his 2nd marriage with Anne Saul, as before related.

TOBY MATHEW, eldest son of Captain George and Lady Thurles, m. three times. By his 2nd wife, Anne Saul, he had two sons and one dau.,

- I. THOMAS, on whom Annefield was settled by his father. He signed an address to King CHARLES II., in 1683, and d. in 1714.
- II. James, d. v. p., having m. Elizabeth, dau. of Theobald, Bourke, Lord Brittas.
1. Mary, d. unm. about 1696.

The elder son,

THOMAS MATHEW, of Annefield, m. Honora, dau. of Thomas Ryan, of Clonmell, and relict of — Furlley, and by her, who d. in 1735, he had seven sons,

- I. THEOBALD, his heir, of Annefield.
- II. Thomas, d. young.
- III. George, d. unm.
- IV. Charles, of Anabeg, co. Galway.
- V. James, of Borris, m. Anne, dau. of James Morris.
- VI. John, d. unm.
- VII. Edmund, of Annefield, who d. unm. in 1772, leaving his property to his nephews, John, George, and Charles (of whom hereafter), and appointing his well-beloved friend and kinsman, Walter Butler, of Garryricken, his executor, who was, of right, 16th Earl of Ormonde.

Thomas Mathew d. in 1714, and was s. at Annefield by his eldest son,

THEOBALD MATHEW, of Annefield, who, besides, possessed estates in the counties of Limerick and Galway. He m. Catharine, dau. of Sir John and Mary, Lady Shelley, which latter had re-married George Mathew, the younger, as before related. She left her dau., Catharine, wife of Toby Mathew, of Annefield, £2,000 in her will, dated 1722. Theobald Mathew, of Annefield, and Catharine Shelley, his wife, left four sons and one dau.,

- I. THOMAS, of Annefield, who, at the demise of George Mathew, of Thurles and Thomastown, became chief of the family, and who s. to all the estates of the family by George Mathew's will and entail.

ii. John, believed to have d. unm.

iii. GEORGE, an officer much on foreign service, of whom hereafter.

iv. Charles, also an officer in the army; m. Honora, dau. of James Mathew, of Borris, and had a dau. m. to Sir Hugh O'Reilly, afterwards Nugent, of Westmeath.

i. Mary, d. unm. in Dublin, in 1777.

Toby Mathew d. at Crumlin, 24 September, 1745, and was s. by his son,

THOMAS MATHEW, Esq. of Annefield, who m. very young Miss Mathews, dau. of Richard Mathews, of Dublin, and by her had one dau., (Catharine-Anne-Marie, m. 1st, to Philip Roe, Esq., and 2ndly, to John Scott, Earl of Clonmell,) and a son,

FRANCIS MATHEW, Esq., M.P. for co. Tipperary, who s. his father, Thomas, in 1777, to all the united estates. He was created a peer of Ireland as Baron Llandaff, 12 October, 1783, advanced to be Viscount Llandaff, 20 December, 1793, and made EARL OF LLANDAFF, November, 1797: he m. in 1764, Ellis, dau. of James Smyth, Esq., of Tinny Park, co. Wicklow, and by her, who d. in 1781, had issue three sons and one dau.,

i. FRANCIS-JAMES, 2nd earl.

ii. Montague, a general in the army, colonel of the 99th regiment of foot (which his father raised), and M.P. for co. Tipperary, d. unm. in 1819.

iii. George-Toby-Skeffington, in the army, d. unm. in 1832.

i. LADY ELIZABETH, who survived all her brothers, and d. unm. in 1842.

The Earl of Llandaff m. 2ndly, 1784, Elizabeth, dau. of Clotworthy Skeffington, Earl of Massereene, and 3rdly, a dau. of Jeremiah Coghlan, Esq., but had no issue by these marriages. The earl d. at Swansea, in Wales, in September, 1806, and was s. by his son and heir, FRANCIS-JAMES MATHEW, 2nd Earl of Llandaff, K.P., who, m. 10 July, 1797, Gertrude, dau. of John La Touche, Esq., of Haristown, co. Kildare, and d. 12 March, 1833, leaving no issue, when all his honours became EXTINCT. At his death, intestate, his sister, Lady Elizabeth Mathew, was put into possession of the estates, and she dying in 1842 bequeathed the property to her cousin, the Vicomte de Châbot, whose mother was Elizabeth Smyth, sister of Ellis, Countess of Llandaff.

MAUDUIT—EARL OF WARWICK.

(See NEWBURN, Earls of Warwick.)

MAUDUIT—BARON MAUDUIT.

By Writ of Summons, dated 12 September, 1342.

Lineage.

Of the same family as William Mauduit, Earl of Warwick, was (according to Dugdale),

JOHN MAUDUIT, who in the 8th EDWARD II., had a military summons, amongst other great men, to march against the Scots, and was engaged for some years afterwards in the wars of Scotland. In the 3rd EDWARD III., he was constituted sheriff of Wiltshire, and governor of the castle of Old Sarum; and was summoned to parliament as a Baron, 12 September, 1342. In the 19th of the same reign, his lordship obtained a charter for free warren in all his demesne lands at Farnhill, Somersford, Mauduit, Funtel and Uptele, co. Wilts, as also at Stanlake and Broughton, in Oxfordshire. His lordship d. in 1347, leaving a son and heir,

JOHN MAUDUIT, but neither this John nor any of his posterity were ever summoned to parliament, or deemed barons of the realm.

The Barony of Mauduit is therefore presumed to have become EXTINCT upon the demise of the said John, Lord Mauduit.

MAULE—EARL OF PANMURE.

By Letters Patent, dated 2 August, 1646.

Lineage.

The family of Maule, of Panmure, was one of great antiquity and eminence.

PATRICK MAULE, of Panmure (son of Patrick Maule, of Panmure, by Margaret, his wife, dau. of John Erskine, of Dun, and nephew of Robert Maule, commissary of St. Andrews, author of "De Antiquitate Gentis Scottorum,") accompanied King JAMES VI. into England in 1603, and was appointed one of the gentlemen of the bedchamber to that monarch, an office which he afterwards held under CHARLES I., who constituted him keeper of the palace and park of Eltham, and sheriff of the co. Forfar. He subsequently adhered with great fidelity to the king in his troubles, for which services he was elevated to the peerage of Scotland, 2 August, 1646, as Baron Maule, of Brechin and Navar, and EARL OF PANMURE. His lordship m. thrice; but had issue only by his 1st wife, Frances, dau. of Sir Edward Stanhope, of Grimston, co. York. He d. 22 December, 1661, and was s. by his eldest son,

GEORGE MAULE, 2nd Earl of Panmure, who m. Lady Jean Campbell, eldest dau. of John, Earl of Loudoun, high chancellor of Scotland, by whom he had issue,

GEORGE, his successor.

JAMES, who s. his brother.

HARRY, of Kelly. This gentleman was a member of the convention of estates in 1689, but retired from the assembly when he discovered the determination to dethrone JAMES II. He subsequently joined the banner of the Chevalier St. George, in 1716, and d. at Edinburgh in 1731. He m. 1st in 1695, Lady Mary Fleming, only dau. of William, 1st Earl of Wigton, and had surviving issue,

WILLIAM, his successor.

JEAN, m. 1st to George, Lord Ramsay, eldest son of William, 6th Earl of Dalhousie, and was mother of CHARLES RAMSAY, 7th earl, and of GEORGE RAMSAY, 8th Earl of Dalhousie, whose 2nd son, WILLIAM RAMSAY, assumed the surname and arms of Maule, and was created Lord Panmure: his son, FOX MAULE, 2nd Lord Panmure, is now also EARL OF DALHOUSIE.

Mr. Maule, of Kelly, m. 2ndly, Anne dau. of the Hon. Patrick Lindsay-Crawford, of Kilbirnie, and had a son,

John, of Inverkeilor, one of the barons of the Court of Exchequer in Scotland; who d. unm. in 1781.

Mr. Harry Maule, of Kelly, was much given to the study of the history and antiquities of Scotland: his eldest son,

WILLIAM MAULE, of Kelly, who was created a peer of Ireland in 1743, as Viscount Maule, of Whitechurch, and EARL OF PANMURE, of Forth. He d. unm. in 1782, when his honours became EXTINCT, and his estate devolved, by a decree of the Court of Session, upon his nephew, GEORGE, EARL OF DALHOUSIE.

George, 2nd Earl of Panmure d. 24 March, 1671, and was s. by his eldest son,

GEORGE MAULE, 3rd Earl of Panmure, who d. s. p. in 1696, when the honours and estates passed to his brother,

JAMES MAULE, 4th Earl of Panmure. This nobleman joining the rising of 1715, was taken prisoner at the battle of Sheriffmuir, but rescued by his brother Harry, when he effected his escape into France. An attainder, by act of parliament, followed, and his honours and estates became forfeited to the crown. They were, however, at two different times, offered to be restored to him, provided he returned to his native land and subscribed the oath of allegiance to the house of Hanover, but he preferred sharing the fortunes of the exiled prince, and d. at Paris, 11 April, 1723. This Earl of Panmure made a fine collection of family charters and documents which were arranged by Mr. Crawford, and are known as the "Registrum de Panmure." His lordship m. Lady Margaret Hamilton, 3rd dau. of William and Anne, Duke and Duchess of Hamilton. In 1717, an act was passed to enable his Majesty to make such provision for, and settlement upon, the wife of James, late Earl of Panmure, as she should have been entitled to had her husband been naturally dead. Her ladyship d. in 1731. The Scottish Earldom of Panmure and Barony of Maule remain yet under the attainder; but the attainted lord's great grand-nephew, the Hon. WILLIAM MAULE was created a peer of the United Kingdom, in the dignity of BARON PANMURE, of Brechin and Navar: his son, FOX MAULE, 2nd LORD PANMURE, is now also EARL OF DALHOUSIE.

MAULE—EARL OF PANMURE.

By Letters Patent, dated 2 May, 1743.

Lineage.

THE HON. HARRY MAULE, of Kelly, 2nd son of George, 2nd Scottish Earl of Panmure, was a member of the convention of estates in 1689, but retired from the assembly when he discovered the determination to dethrone JAMES II. MAULEY—BARONS MAULEY.

By Writ of Summons, dated 23 June, 1295

Lineage.

The first mention of this name and family occurs shortly after the decease of King RICHARD I., when his brother JOHN, Earl of Moreton, to clear his own way to the throne, employed Peter de Mauley, a Poictovin, his esquire, to murder his nephew, Prince Arthur of Brittany, and in reward of the foul deed, gave to the said

PETER DE MAULEY, in marriage, Isabel, dau. of Robert de Turnham, and heiress of the Barony of Mulgrave. This Peter, throughout the whole reign of King JOHN, adhering to his royal master, obtained considerable grants from the crown, and was esteemed amongst the evil advisers of the king. In the height of the baronial war, most of the prisoners of rank were committed to his custody, and he was constituted (18th JOHN), sheriff of the cos. of Dorset and Somerset. In the 4th HENRY III., upon the coronation of that monarch, Peter de Mauley had summons to assist thereat, and to bring with him the regalia, then in his custody at Corfe Castle, which had been entrusted to him by King JOHN; and the next year, being again sheriff of the cos. Somerset and Dorset, he delivered up the castle of Corfe to the king, with Alianore, the king's kinswoman, and Isabel, sister to the King of Scots, as well as all the jewels, military engines, and ammunition there, which the late monarch had formerly committed to his custody. Soon after this, he was made governor of Sherburne Castle, co. Dorset, and dying in 1221, was s. by his son,

PETER DE MAULEY, who giving 100 marks for his relief, had livery of his lands. Amongst the causes of discontent avowed by Richard Mareschall in his contest with HENRY III. was, that the king by the advice of foreigners, had dispossessed Gilbert Basset, a great baron of the time, of the manor of Nether-Haven, co. Wilts, and conferred it upon this Peter de Mauley. The king, nevertheless, continuing his favour to Peter, constituted him governor of the castle of Devizes, and the next year (20th HENRY III.) made him sheriff of Northamptonshire. Moreover, in 1239, he was one of the godfathers, at the baptismal font to Prince Edward (the king's eldest son), and in 1241 he accompanied William de Fortibus, Earl of Albemarle, and divers other noble persons, to the Holy Land. This feudal lord m. Joane, dau. of Peter de Brus, of Skelton, and d. in 1242. Upon his decease Gerard le Grue paid 500 marks for the ferme of his lands, and had the custody of the castle of Mulgrave; maintaining his widow with necessaries, keeping the buildings in repair, and not committing waste in the woods. Peter de Mauley was s. by his son,

PETER DE MAULEY (commonly called the 3rd), who doing his homage in the 31st HENRY III., had livery of his lands. In the 42nd of the same reign, the Scots having made a prisoner of their King ALEXANDER III. (son-in-law of the English monarch), Peter de Mauley received summons with the other northern barons to fit himself with horse and arms for the relief of the Scottish prince. He m. Nichola, dau. of Gilbert de Gant, son of Gilbert, Earl of Lincoln, and had issue,

PETER, his successor.

Edmund, a very eminent person in the reigns of EDWARD I. and II., and greatly distinguished in the Scottish wars. He had a grant of the manor of Seton, co. York. He was successively governor of the castle of Bridgnorth, of the town and castle of Bristol, and the castle of Cockermouth. He fell at the battle of Bannockburn, and dying s. p., his estates passed to his nephew,

Peter de Mauley.

He was s. at his decease by his elder son,

PETER DE MAULEY (called the 4th), who, in the 7th EDWARD I., doing his homage, and paying £100 for his relief, had livery of all his lands, which he held of the king in capite by barony of the inheritance of William Fossard (whose grand-dau. and heir, Isabel de Turnham, was wife of the first Peter de Mauley). This feudal lord having been engaged in the Welsh and Scottish wars, was summoned to parliament as a Baron by King EDWARD I., 23 June, 1295, and he had regular summons from that period to 12 December, 1309. In the 25th EDWARD I. his lordship was in the expedition then made into Gascony, and in consideration of his good services there, obtained from the king a grant of the marriage of Thomas, the son and heir of Thomas de Multon, of Gillesland, deceased. For several years after this he was actively engaged in the warfare of Scotland. His lordship m. Eleanor, dau. of Thomas, Lord Furnival, and dying in 1310, was s. by his son,

SIR PETER DE MAULEY, 2nd baron, summoned to parliament from 19 December, 1311, to 15 March, 1354. This nobleman was for several years actively engaged in the wars of Scotland, and was a commander at the battle of Durham (20th EDWARD III.), wherein the Scots, under their king, DAVID BATA, sustained so signal a defeat, the monarch himself being made prisoner. His lordship m. Margaret, dau. of Robert, Lord Clifford, and dying in 1355, was s. by his son,

PETER DE MAULEY, 3rd baron, summoned to parliament from 20 September, 1355, to 7 January, 1383. This nobleman, in the 30th EDWARD III., shared in the glorious victory of Poitiers, and in three years afterwards he was in the expedition then made in Gascony. In the 41st of the same reign he was joined in commission with the bishop of Durham, Henry, Lord Percy, and others, for guarding the marches of Scotland; and again, in the 3rd RICHARD II., with the Earl of Northumberland. His lordship m. 1st, in the 31st EDWARD III., Elizabeth, widow of John, Lord Darcy, and dau. and heir of Nicholas, Lord Meinill, without license, for which office he paid a fine of £100, and obtained pardon. He m. 2ndly, Margery, one of the daus. and co-heirs of Thomas de Sutton, of Sutton in Holderness, and had issue (by which wife not known),

Peter, who m. Margery, one of the daus. and co-heirs of Sir Thomas de Sutton, Knt., and dying in the life-time of his father, left issue,

PETER, successor to his grandfather.

Constance, m. 1st, William Fairfax, s. p., and 2ndly, Sir John Bigot, ancestor by her of the Bigots of Moulgrave.

Elizabeth, m. to George Salvaine, Esq. "The present heir-general of the said Elizabeth Salvaine" (we quote COVENTRUP'S Historic Peerage), "and consequently one of the co-heirs of the barony is Charles-Frederick-Ashley-Cooper Ponsonby, Lord de Mauley, son of William-Francis Spencer Ponsonby, Lord de Mauley, by Lady Barbara, dau. and sole heir of Anthony, 5th Earl of Shaftesbury, by Barbara, his wife, dau. and heir of Sir John Webb, Bart., by Mary, sister and eventually sole heir of Thomas Salvaine, Esq., the heir male and heir general of the above-mentioned George Salvaine, and Elizabeth Mauley, his wife."

His lordship d. in 1383, seized of the manor and castle of Mulgrave, the manor of Doncaster with its members, and a moiety of the manor of Helagh, all in the co. York. He was s. by his grandson,

PETER DE MAULEY, 4th baron, who making proof of his age in the 22nd RICHARD II., had livery of the lands of his inheritance, as well as those derived from his grandfather, as from Thomas, his uncle. This nobleman was made a knight of the Bath at the coronation of King HENRY IV., and was summoned to parliament from 15 August, 1399, to 12 August, 1415. His lordship m. the Lady Maud Nevil, dau. of Ralph, Earl of Westmoreland, but d. in 1415, s. p., when his sisters (referred to Issue of 3rd baron) became his heirs, and between those the Barony of Mauley fell into ABEYANCE, as it still continues amongst their representatives. In the distribution of the Mauley estates, Leland says, "Bigot had the castle of Maugreave, (Mulgrave), with eight townettes therabout the so cost long-ging to it, whereof Seton thereby was one. Saulwayne had, for his part, the Barony of Eggeston on Eske, not far from Whitby; also Lokington-Barugh, not far from Watton-on-Hull ryver. Nessark, and the lordship of Doncaster."

MAXWELL—EARL OF FARNHAM.

(See BURKE'S Extant Peerage, article BARON FARNHAM.)

MAXWELL—EARL OF DIRLETOUN.

By Letters Patent, dated 1646.

Lineage.

SIR JAMES MAXWELL, son of John Maxwell, by Jean Murray, sister of John, 1st Earl of Annandale, was appointed one of the gentlemen of the bedchamber to King JAMES VI., and continued in that office under CHARLES I. He was created a peer by the title of EARL OF DIRLETOUN and Lord Ribottle, 1646, but d. without male issue, when the title became EXTINCT. By his wife, Elizabeth de Boussoyne, he had two daus.,

Elizabeth, m. 1st, to William, 2nd Duke of Hamilton, and had six children; 2ndly, to Thomas Dalmahoy, Esq., without issue.

Diana, m. to Charles, Viscount Cranburne, eldest son of William, 2nd Earl of Salisbury, and was mother of the 3rd Earl of Salisbury.

MAXWELL—EARLS OF NITHSDALE.

Lineage.

For ample details of the great house of MAXWELL, from which sprang the EARLS OF NITHSDALE, the Maxwells of Pollok, the Maxwells of Calderwood, the Maxwells, Lords Farnham, &c., reference should be made to "The Memoirs of the Maxwells of Pollok," by William Fraser, Esq., and Anderson's "Scottish Nation."

SIR HERBERT MAXWELL, of Carliaverock, knighted 21 May, 1424, and created LORD MAXWELL circa 1440, m. 1st, a dau. of Sir Herbert Herries, of Terregles, and had two sons,

ROBERT, his successor.

Edward (Sir), of Monreith, ancestor of the Maxwells, baronets, of that place.

His lordship m. 2ndly, Katherine, dau. of Sir William Seton, of Seton, and had, with other children, George, from whom sprang the Maxwells of Carnsalloch; and Adam, from whom the Maxwells of Southbar. Lord Maxwell's eldest son,

ROBERT MAXWELL, 2nd Lord Maxwell, was served heir to his father 4 February, 1453, and he sat as a peer in parliament, anno 1467. His lordship m. Janet Forrester, of Corstorphine, and was s. by his son,

JOHN MAXWELL, 3rd Lord Maxwell; who m. Janet, dau. of George Crichton, Earl of Caithness, and, falling at the battle of Kirtle, 22 July, 1484, was s. by his son,

JOHN MAXWELL, 4th Lord Maxwell, who m. Agnes, dau. of Sir Alexander Stewart, of Garlies, and was slain at Flodden, 9 September, 1513. His eldest son,

ROBERT MAXWELL, 5th Lord Maxwell, hereditary sheriff of Kirkcudbright, and guardian of the west marches. This nobleman m. 1st, Janet, dau. of William, 6th Lord Douglas, of Drumlanrig (ancestor of the Dukes of Queensberry), and had issue,

ROBERT, his successor.

John (Sir), who m. Agnes, eldest dau. and heiress of William Herries, 4th Lord Herries, of Terregles, co. Dumfries, and became, jure uxoris, LORD HERRIES, of Terregles. His lordship d. 1582, and was s. by his son,

SIR WILLIAM MAXWELL, 6th Lord Herries, of Terregles; who m. Katharine Kerr, sister of Mark, 1st Earl of Lothian, and dying in 1603, was s. by his son,

JOHN MAXWELL, 7th Lord Herries, of Terregles; who m. Elizabeth, dau. of John, 7th Lord Maxwell, and dying in 1631, left, inter alios, JOHN MAXWELL, 8th Lord Herries, of whom hereafter, as 3rd Earl of Nithsdale.

James Maxwell, ancestor of the MAXWELLS of Carriuchan.

The 5th Lord Maxwell m. 2ndly, Agnes, natural dau. of James, Earl of Buchan, relict of Adam, 2nd Earl of Bothwell. He d. 9 July, 1546, and was s. by his elder son,

ROBERT MAXWELL, 6th Lord Maxwell, of Carliaverock, warden of the west marches; who m. Lady Beatrix Douglas, 2nd dau. of James, Earl of Morton; and dying 14 September, 1552, was s. by his son,

JOHN MAXWELL, 7th Lord Maxwell, who was guardian of the west marches. Upon the execution and attainder of the Regent Morton, Lord Maxwell obtained, as representative of his mother, a new charter of the Earldom of Morton, ratified by parliament; but the attainder being rescinded, he was deprived of the dignity, which passed, in 1585, to the heir of entail. His lordship m. Elizabeth Douglas, dau. of David, 13th Earl of Douglas, and 7th Earl of Angus, and had issue,

JOHN, Lord Maxwell.

ROBERT, who inherited after his brother.

Elizabeth, who m. John Maxwell, 7th Lord Herries, of Terregles, and had a son,

JOHN, 8th Lord Herries, who s. his cousin as 3rd Earl of Nithsdale.

Margaret, Lady Craigie.

Agnes, Lady Penzerie.

He was killed by the Johnstones at Lockerbie in 1593, and was s. by his eldest son,

JOHN MAXWELL, 8th Lord Maxwell. A feud subsisting between the houses of Maxwell and Johnstone, this nobleman slew Sir James Johnstone, of Annandale, in a rencounter, and fleeing from Scotland in consequence, he was betrayed by the Earl of Caithness, and subsequently tried, beheaded, and attainted in 1613. His lordship had m. the Lady Margaret Hamilton, dau. of John, 1st Marquess Hamilton, Duke of Chatelherault, but had no issue. His brother,

ROBERT MAXWELL, 9th Lord Maxwell, was created, in 1620, Lord Maxwell, of Biddale and Carigle, and EARL OF NITHSDALE, in remainder to his heirs male, and with precedency of his father's Earldom of Morton (in 1581). This nobleman was celebrated, like his gallant ancestor, Sir Eustace Maxwell, in the time of EDWARD I., by a brave defence of Carliaverock, against the parliamentarians of 1640. His lordship m. Elizabeth, dau. of Sir Francis Beaumont, and dying in 1646, was s. by his son,

ROBERT MAXWELL, 2nd Earl of Nithsdale, hereditary sheriff of Kirkcudbright. His lordship dying nam. 5 October, 1667, was s. by his cousin,

JOHN MAXWELL, 8th Lord Herries, of Terregles, as 3rd Earl of Nithsdale. His lordship m. Elizabeth, sister of John Gordon, 1st Viscount Kenmure, and was s. at his decease by his son,

ROBERT MAXWELL, 4th Earl of Nithsdale; who m. the Lady Lucy Douglas, dau. of William, 1st Marquess Douglas. His lordship d. in 1685, and was s. by his son,

WILLIAM MAXWELL, 5th Earl of Nithsdale. This nobleman, so celebrated for effecting his escape from the Tower of London, 23 February, 1716, the night before his intended execution, through the agency of his devoted and heroic countess, was attainted, and the Earldom of the senior branch of the house of Maxwell, "the Maxwells of Carliaverock," has ever since been obscured by that penal proceeding. His lordship m. the Lady Winifred Herbert, youngest dau. of William, 1st Marquess of Powis; and dying at Rome, in 1744, was s. by his only surviving son,

WILLIAM MAXWELL, styled Earl of Nithsdale; who m. his 1st cousin, Lady Catharine Stewart, dau. of Charles, 4th Earl of Traquair (by Lady Mary Maxwell, dau. of Robert, 4th Earl of Nithsdale), and had an only dau., his successor at his decease in 1776,

LADY WINIFRED MAXWELL, who, but for the attainder of her grandfather, would have inherited the Barony of Herries, of Terregles. Her ladyship had m. in 1758, William Haggerston-Constable, Esq. (2nd son of Sir Carnaby Haggerston, Bart., of Haggerston Castle, in the county of Northumberland), and had three sons and two daus. The eldest son,

MARMADUKE-WILLIAM CONSTABLE-MAXWELL, Esq., of Everingham, d. in 1819, and was s. by his eldest son, WILLIAM CONSTABLE-MAXWELL, of Carliaverock and Everingham, now LORD HERRIES, whose right to the Barony of Herries was confirmed by the House of Lords, 23 June, 1858.

MEINILL—BARON MEINILL.

By Writ of Summons, dated 23 June, 1295.

Lineage.

About the close of King HENRY I.'s reign,

ROBERT DE MEINEL, bestowed certain lands upon the monks of St. Mary's Abbey, at York, which his son and successor,

STEPHEN DE MEINEL, ratified. In the 25th HENRY II., this Stephen was fined £100 for trespassing in the forests of Yorkshire. He d. about the 2nd RICHARD I., and was s. by his elder son,

ROBERT DE MEINEL, who m. Emme, dau. of Richard de Malbisse, and had a son, STEPHEN, who predeceased him, leaving a son,

NICHOLAS DE MEINEL, who s. his grandfather in the 8th King JOHN. This Nicholas was in the Welsh wars, and in consideration of his services had a debt of 100 marks remitted by King EDWARD I., besides obtaining grants of free warren throughout all his lands and lordships in the co. York. In the year 1290 he brought a charge against Christian, his wife, of an intent to poison him, and although she clearly established her innocence, he refused ever afterwards to be reconciled to her. In the 22nd EDWARD I. he had summons, amongst many other persons of note, to attend the king, to advise about the affairs of the realm; and he was summoned to parliament as a Baron from the 23 June, 1295, to 6 February, 1299, during which interval he took a prominent part in the wars of Scotland. His lordship d. in 1299, and was s. by NICHOLAS DE MEINILL, who was summoned to parliament from 22 May, 1313, to 14 March, 1322, and d. in the last year without issue, when the barony appears to have become extinct.

Arms—Az., three bars gemels, and a chief, or.

MEINILL—BARON MEINILL.

By Writ of Summons, dated 22 January, 1336.

Lineage.

NICHOLAS DE MEINILL (natural son of Nicholas, Lord de Meinill), was summoned to parliament as a Baron from 23 January, 1336, to 25 February, 1342. His lordship m. Alice,

dau. of William, Lord Roa, of Hamlake, and left an only dau. and heiress, ELIZABETH, who m. 1st, John, 2nd Baron D'Arcy, and conveyed the Barony of Meinill to the D'Arcy family, in which it remained till the decease of Philip, 11th Baron D'Arcy, in 1418, when, with the Barony of D'Arcy, it fell into ABEYANCE between his lordship's dau., and co-heirs, Elizabeth, m. to Sir James Strangways, Knt., of Harlesey Castle, co. York, and Margery, m. to Sir John Conyers, of Hornby, also in Yorkshire. Elizabeth Meinill m. 2ndly, Peter, 6th Baron Manley. Her ladyship d. in the 42nd EDWARD III.

His lordship d. in 1342, when the Barony of Meinill devolved as stated above upon his dau. Elizabeth, who m. Lord D'Arcy.

"Although," says Nicolas, "the abeyance of the Baronies of Meinill and D'Arcy has never been terminated, yet Conyers D'Arcy, 2nd Baron D'Arcy, under the patent of 10 August, 1641, and Baron Conyers, in right of his grandmother, probably, under the presumption that the said patent not only restored the ancient Barony of D'Arcy, but also that of Meinill, was styled, in the writs of summons to parliament of 7 October (31st CHARLES II.), 1679, 1 March, and 31 March, 1680, 'Conyers D'Arcy de D'Arcy and Meinill, Ch'l'r.' He was created Earl of Holderness in 1682, which title, as well as the Barony of D'Arcy, created by the patent of 1641, became EXTINCT in 1778; but it is manifest that the assumption of the title of the Barony of Meinill was without any legal foundation."

MENTETH—EARL OF MENTETH.

Lineage.

The name of Menteth is local, a considerable district in Scotland, through which the river Teith runs, being called the stewartry of Menteth.

WALTER (3rd son of Walter, 3rd High-Steward of Scotland), m. in 1258, the Countess of Menteth, and thus acquired that earldom. His name occurs frequently in the transactions of the 13th century, and we find him gallantly distinguished at the battle of Larga, in 1263, when his brother, the High-Steward, had the chief command. The earl left two sons (who both assumed the surname of Menteth), viz.,

ALEXANDER.

John (Sir), governor of Dumbarton Castle, who took an active part in the political convulsions of his time. To him tradition ascribes, whether truly or not is still a matter of historical dispute, the surrender of Sir William Wallace. Sir John's representative is the present Earl of Marr.

The elder son,

ALEXANDER MENTETH, 6th Earl of Menteth, one of the boldest defenders of Scottish independence against EDWARD I., had two sons,

ALAN.

John, of Ruskey, from whom Sir Charles-Granville-Stuart-Menteth, Bart., of Closeburn, co. Dumfries, deduces his descent.

The elder son,

ALAN MENTETH, 7th Earl of Menteth, was living in 1296; his dau. and heir,

MARY, Countess of Menteth, m. Sir John Graham (executed in 1346), and had a dau.,

MARGARET, who m. Robert Stewart, Duke of Albany, and was mother of MURDOCK, Duke of Albany, who was attainted in 1406.

MESCHINES—EARLS OF CHESTER.

Grant, temp. HENRY I.

Lineage.

RANULPH OF RANDLE DE MESCHINES, surnamed de Bricasard, Viscount Bayeux, in Normandy (son of Ralph de Meschines, by Maud, his wife, co-heiress of her brother, Hugh Lupus, the celebrated Earl of Chester), was given by King HENRY I., the EARLDOM OF CHESTER, at the decease of his 1st cousin, Richard de Abrincis, 2nd Earl of Chester, of that family (see Abrincis), without issue. By some of our historians this nobleman is styled Earl of Carlisle, from residing in that city; and his further state, that he came over in the train of the CONQUEROR, assisted in the subjugation of England, and shared, of course, in the spoil of conquest. He was lord of Cumberland and Carlisle, by descent from his father, but having enfeoffed his two brothers, William, of Coupland, and Geffery, of Gillesland, in a large portion thereof, he exchanged the Earldom of Cumberland for that of Chester, on condition that those whom he had settled there, should hold their lands of the king, in capite. His lordship m. Lucia, widow of Roger de Romara, Earl of Lincoln, and dau. of Algar, the Saxon, Earl of Mercia, and had issue,

RANULPH, his successor.

William, styled Earl of Cambridge, but of his issue nothing is known.

Adeliza, m. to Richard Fitz-Gilbert, ancestor of the old Earls of Clare.

Agnes, m. to Robert de Grentemaisnil.

The earl d. in 1128, and was s. by his elder son,

RANULPH DE MESCHINES (surnamed de Gernons, from being born in Gernon Castle, in Normandy), as EARL OF CHESTER. This nobleman, who was a leading military character, took an active part with the Empress MAUD, and the young Prince Henry, against King STEPHEN, in the early part of the contest, and having defeated the king, and made him prisoner at the battle of Lincoln, committed him to the castle of Bristol. He subsequently, however, sided with the king, and finally, distrusted by all, died, under excommunication, in 1155, supposed to have been poisoned by William Peverell, Lord of Nottingham, who being suspected of the crime, is said to have turned monk, to avoid its punishment. The earl m. Maud, dau. of Robert, surnamed the Consul, Earl of Gloucester, natural son of King HENRY I., and had issue,

HUGH, his successor, surnamed Kereulik, from the place of his birth, in Merionethshire.

Richard.

Beatrice, m. to Ralph de Malpas.

His lordship was s. by his elder son,

HUGH (Kereulik), 3rd Earl of Chester. This nobleman joined in the rebellion of the Earl of Leicester and the King of Scots, against King HENRY II., and in support of that monarch's son, Prince Henry's pretensions to the crown. In which proceeding he was taken prisoner, with the Earl of Leicester, at Alnwick, but obtained his freedom soon afterwards, upon the king's reconciliation with the young prince. Again, however, hoisting the standard of revolt, both in England and in Normandy, with as little success, he was again seized, and then detained a prisoner for some years. He eventually, however, obtained his liberty and restoration of his lands, when public tranquillity became completely re-established some time about the 23rd year of the king's reign. His lordship m. Bertred, dau. of Simon, Earl of Evereux, in Normandy, and had issue,

RANULPH, his successor.

Maud, m. to David, Earl of Huntingdon, brother of WILLIAM, King of Scotland, and had one son and four daus, viz.,

1 JOHN, surnamed Le Scot, who s. to the Earldom of Chester. d. s. p. 7 June, 1237.

1 Margaret, m. to Alan de Galloway, and had a dau.,

Devorguill, m. to John de Balliol, and was mother of JOHN DE BALLIOL, declared King of Scotland in the reign of EDWARD I.

2 Isabel, m. to Robert de Brus, and was mother of ROBERT DE BRUS, who contended for the crown of Scotland, temp. EDWARD I.

3 Maud, d. non.

4 Ada, m. to Henry de Hastings, and had issue,

HENRY DE HASTINGS, one of the competitors for the Scottish crown, temp. EDWARD I.

Mabill, m. to William de Albini, Earl of Arundel.

Agnes, m. to William de Ferrers, Earl of Derby.

Hawise, m. to Robert, son of Sayer de Quincy, Earl of Winchester.

The earl had another dau., whose legitimacy is questionable, namely,

Amicia,* m. to Ralph de Mesnilwarin, Justice of Chester, "a person," says Dugdale, "of very ancient family," from which union the Mainwaringa, of Over Peover, in the co. Chester, derive. Dugdale considers Amicia to be a dau. of the earl by a former wife. But Sir Peter Leicester, in his Antiquities of Cheshire, totally denies her legitimacy. "I cannot but dislike," says he, "the boldness and ignorance of that herald who gave to Mainwaring (late of Peover), the elder, the quartering of the Earl of Chester's arms: for if he ought of

* Upon the question of this lady's legitimacy there was a long paper war between Sir Peter Leicester and Sir Thomas Mainwaring—and eventually the matter was referred to the judges, of whose decision Wood says, "at an assize held at Chester, 1675, the controversy was decided by the justices itinerant, who, as I have heard, adjudged the right of the matter to Mainwaring."

right to quarter that coat, then must he be descended from a co-heir to the Earl of Chester; but he was not; for the co-heirs of Earl Hugh married four of the greatest peers in the kingdom."

The earl d. at Leek, in Staffordshire, in 1181, and was s. by his only son, RANULPH OF RANULPH, surnamed Blundevil (or rather Blandevil, from the place of his birth, the town of Album Monasterium, modern Owsestry, in Powys), as 4th EARL OF CHESTER. This nobleman was made a knight, in 1188, by King HENRY II., and the same monarch bestowed upon him in marriage, Constance, Countess of Brittany, dau. and heiress of Conan, Earl of Brittany, and widow of King HENRY's son Geoffrey, with the whole of Brittany, and the Earldom of Richmond, wherefore he is designated in most charters, "Duke of Brittany and Earl of Richmond." In the 4th RICHARD I. we find his lordship aiding David, Earl of Huntingdon, and the Earl Ferrers, in the siege of Marlborough, then held for John, Earl of Moreton, the king's brother; and in two years afterwards with the same parties, besieging the castle of Nottingham. In which latter year he was also with the army of King RICHARD in Normandy, and so highly was he esteemed by the lion-hearted monarch, that he was selected to bear one of the three swords at his second coronation. In the commencement of King JOHN's reign his lordship divorced his wife Constance, "by reason," saith Dugdale, "that the king haunted her company," and m. Clementia, sister of Geoffrey de Pilgers, widow of Alan de Dinnan, and niece of William de Humet, constable of Normandy, with whom he acquired not only a large accession of landed property in France, but some extensive manors in England. In the 6th JOHN, his lordship had a grant from the crown of all the lands belonging to the honour of Richmond, in Richmondshire, excepting a small proportion, which the king retained in his own hands; and he gave in the same year to the king a palfrey for a lamprey, which shows the value of that description of fish in those days.

This was the earl, who, marching into Wales too slenderly attended, was compelled to take refuge in Rothelan Castle, in Flintshire; and being there closely invested by the Welsh, was delivered from his precarious situation by the rabble, which then happened to have been assembled at the fair of Chester. For sending to Roger de Lacy, Baron of Halton, his constable of Cheshire, to come with all speed to his succour, Roger (surnamed Hell, from his fiery spirit), gathered a tumultuous rout of fiddlers, players, cobbler, debauched persons, both men and women, and marched immediately towards the earl; when the Welsh, desecring so numerous a multitude advancing, at once raised the siege, and sought safety in flight. Wherefore the earl conferred upon the constable patronage over all the fiddlers and shoemakers in Chester, in reward and memory of this service. Of which patronage De Lacy retained to himself and his heirs that of the shoemakers, and granted the fiddlers and players to his steward, DUTTON, of Dutton, whose heirs still enjoy the privilege. For upon Midsummer-day, annually, the fair of Chester, a Dutton, or his deputy, rides attended through the city of Chester, by all the minstrelsy of the county playing upon their several instruments, to the church of St. John's where a court is held for the renewal of their licenses.

In the conflicts between JOHN and the barons the Earl of Chester remained stoutly attached to the former, and it was through his exertions chiefly that HENRY III. ascended the throne. Of which an old monk of Peterborough gives the following narrative:—

"Upon the death of King JOHN, the great men of England fearing that the son would follow his father's steps in tyranny over the people, resolved to extirpate him, and all of his blood, not considering that saying of the prophet, viz., 'That the son shall not suffer for the iniquity of the father.' And to that end determined to set up Lewes, son to the King of France (a youth then but fourteen years old), in his stead; whom, at the instance of the rebellious barons, that king, for the purpose alleged, sent over into England, in the last year of King JOHN, under the tuition of the Earl of Perch, and other great men of that realm. Who having landed himself in England accordingly, and received homage of the Londoners, expecting the like from the southern nobility, advanced to Lincoln. Which being made known to the Earl of Chester, who did abominate any conjunction with them in that their conspiracy, he convened the rest of the northern peers; and being the chief and most potent of them, taking with him young Henry, son of King JOHN, and right heir to the crown, raised a puissant army, and marched towards Lincoln. To which place, at the end of four days after Lewes got thither, expecting him, he came. To whom the Earl of Perch, observing his stature to be small, said, 'Have we staid all this while for such a little man, such a dwarf.' To which disdainful expression he answered, 'I rose to God and our lady, whose church this is, that before to-morrow evening I will seem to thee to be stronger, and greater, and taller than that steeple.' Thus parting with each other, he betook himself to the castle.

"And on the next morning, the Earl of Perch, armed at all parts, except his head, having entered the cathedral with his forces, and left Lewes there, challenged out our earl to battle: who no sooner heard thereof, but causing the castle gates to be opened, he came out with his soldiers, and made so fierce a charge upon the adverse party, that he slew the Earl of Perch, and many of his followers; and immediately seizing upon Lewes in the church, caused him to swear upon the gospel and relics of those saints then placed on the high altar, that he would never lay any claim to the kingdom of England, but speedily hasten out of the realm, with all his followers; and that when he should be king of France, he would restore Normandy to the crown of England. Which being done, he sent for young Henry, who during that time lay privately in a cow-house, belonging to Bardney Abbey, (near Lincoln, towards the west,) and, setting him upon the altar, delivered him seisin of this kingdom, as his inheritance by a white wand, instead of a sceptre; doing his homage to him, as did all the rest of the nobility then present.

"For which signal service, the king gave him the body of Gilbert de Gant, his enemy, with all his possessions: which Gilbert was a great baron, and founder of Vauvey Abbey, in Kesteven." Thus far for the monk of Peterborough. Further, it appears that after the coronation of the king, the Earl of Cheshire brought all his resources to bear upon the rebellious barons; first in the siege of Mountsorrell, in Leicestershire, and afterwards at Lincoln. "The castle whereof," saith Dugdale, "was then beleagured by a great strength of barons; which in that notable battle there, were utterly vanquished." In the course of the same year his lordship had the Earldom of Lincoln, forfeited by Gilbert de Gant, conferred upon him, to which dignity he had a claim, in right of his great grandmother, who bore the title of Countess of Lincoln. His lordship subsequently assumed the cross, for the second time, and embarked for the Holy Land, having previously granted to his Cheshire barons a very ample charter of liberties. As a soldier, the stout Earl of Chester was not less distinguished abroad than at home, and the laurels which he had so gallantly won upon his native soil, were not tarnished in the plains of Palestine. His lordship had a command at the celebrated siege of Damietta, "where," saith Henry, archdeacon of Huntingdon, "being general of the Christian army, he did glorious things." Ubi Dux Christianæ cohortis præstitit gloriosa. Immediately upon his return to England, anno 1220, the earl begun the structure of Chartley Castle, in Staffordshire, and of Breston Castle, in Cheshire, as also the abbey of Deulaerea, for white monks near Leek in the former shire; which monastery he had been incited, it was said, to found by the ghost of Earl Ranulph, his grandfather, which appeared to him one night while he was in bed, as the story went, and "bade him repair to a place called Cholpesdale within the territory of Leek, and there found and endow an abbey of white monks," adding, "there shall be joy to thee, and many others, who shall be saved thereby: for there, quoth he, shall be a ladder erected, by which the prayers of angels shall ascend and descend, and vows of men shall be offered to God, and they shall give thanks, and the name of our Lord shall be called upon in that place, by daily prayers; and the sign of this shall be when the Pope doth interdict England. But do thou in the mean time, go to the monks of Pulton, where Robert Butler hath in my name built an abbey, and thou shalt there be partaker of the sacrament of the Lord; for such privileges belong to the servants of the foundation. And in the seventh year of that interdict, thou shalt translate those monks to the place I have foretold." The earl having communicated this dream, or ghost-mandate to his wife, the Lady Clementia, she exclaimed in French, Dieu encrea, which exclamation his lordship deeming propitious, declared should give name to the projected monastery: hence the designation of Deulaerea.

After this period we find the earl coinciding with the barons rather than the king, in some misunderstanding regarding the charters, which was, however, peaceably settled in the 11th of HENRY's reign. The most remarkable subsequent event of his lordship's life was his resistance to one Stephen, a commissary from the Pope, who was deputed to collect the tenths from the bishops and all religious orders; and did so throughout England, Ireland, and Wales, except within the jurisdiction of the Earl of Chester, where his lordship's proclamation interposed. This potent nobleman d. at Wallingford, 26 October, 1232, after governing the county palatine of Chester for more than half a century; and as a proof of the simplicity of the age, so far as faith in supernatural events may be so characterized, we give the following story, which, according to Henry Huntingdon, met with general credence. "It is reported," saith our author, "of this earl, that when he died, a great company in the likeness of men, with a certain potent person, hastily passed by a hermite's cell, near Wallingford; and that the hermite asking one of them, what they were, and whither they went so fast? he answered, 'We are devils, and are making speed to the death of Earl Randolph, to the end we may accuse him of his sins.' Likewise that the hermites thereupon adjuring the devil, that he should return the same way, within thirty days, and relate what was become of this earl, he came accordingly, and told him, 'That he was, for his iniquities, condemned to the torments of hell; but that the great dogs of Deulacres, and with them many other, did bark so incessantly, and fill their habitations with such a noise, that their prince, being troubled with it, commanded he should be expelled his dominions; who is now, saith he, become a great enemy to us; because their suffrages, together with others, hath released many souls from purgatory.' " So much for the ingenuity of the good monks of Deulacres.

His lordship never having had issue, his great possessions devolved, at his decease, upon his nephews and sisters, viz.,

JOHN SCOT (son of Maud, Countess of Huntingdon, the earl's eldest sister, then dead), who s. to the Earldom of Chester (see Scot, Earl of Chester), with the whole county palatine, and the advowson of the priory of Coventry.

Hugh de Albany, EARL OF ARUNDEL (son of Mabel, the earl's second sister, then dead), who s. to Corentry, as his chief seat, with the manors of Campden, in Gloucestershire; Diney, in Buckinghamshire; and Ledes, in Yorkshire.

Agnes, Countess of Derby, who, with her husband, William de Ferrers, Earl of Derby, had the castle and manor of Chartley, in Staffordshire, with all the lands belonging to her late brother, which lay between the rivers Ribble and Merse, together with a manor in Northamptonshire, and another in Lincolnshire.

Hawise, wife of Robert de Quincy, who had the castle and manor of Bolingbroke, co. Lincoln, and other large estates in that shire. It appears that her brother, in his lifetime, had granted to this lady, the Earldom of Lincoln, in order that she might become countess thereof, and that her heirs might also enjoy it. Which grant seems to have been confirmed by the crown so far, that at her ladyship's desire, the king conferred the dignity of Earl of Lincoln upon John Lacy, constable of Chester, and the heirs of his body, by Margaret de Quincy, the Lady Hawise's dau.

MICKLETHWAIT—BARON AND VISCOUNT MICKLETHWAIT.

Viscounty, by Letters Patent, dated 6 June, 1727.

Barony, by Letters Patent, dated 14 August, 1724.

Lineage.

The descent of this family from the Micklethwaites of Ingburghworth, in the parish of Peniston, co. York, is given in the Visitation of Yorkshire, 1666. The Visitation pedigree was entered at York, 11 August, 1666, and begins with JOHN MICKLETHWAIT, father of another JOHN, of Ingburghworth, who had three sons, JOHN, of Ingburghworth; Francis, of York; and ELIAS. The last-named, ELIAS MICKLETHWAIT, settled as a merchant at York, became alderman, was twice lord mayor, and sat in parliament, temp. JAMES I. He m. 1st, Dorothy Jaques, by whom he had no issue; and 2ndly, a widow named Ardington. He d. circa 1630. His issue were,

I. ELIAS, of the Middle Temple, of whom no issue remained in 1666.

II. JOSEPH, of whom presently.

III. Mark, rector of Marston.

I. Susan, wife of Christopher Topham, Esq.

II. Tabitha, wife of Alderman John Geldart.

The 2nd son,

JOSEPH MICKLETHWAIT, Esq., of Swine, in Holderness, J.P., m. in 1621, Anne, dau. of Perceval Levett, Esq., and d. 1658, having had two sons, JOHN and Joseph; and two daus., Ann, m. to Thomas Dickenson, Esq., and Dorothy, m. to Thomas Stillington, Esq. The elder son,

JOHN MICKLETHWAIT, Esq., J.P., barrister-at-law, m. in 1653, Barbara, dau. of Timothy Middleton, Esq., of Stansted Montfitchet, co. Essex, and was s. by his son,

JOSEPH MICKLETHWAIT, Esq. of Swine, who m. in 1677, Constance, dau. of Sir Thomas Middleton, of Stansted Montfitchet, and had two sons, namely,

THOMAS, M.P. for Arundel, who inherited a considerable property from Sir John Cropley, Bart. In 1717, he was appointed one of the lords of the Treasury, and in the following year made lieutenant-general of the Ordnance; but d. a few days after, March, 1718.

JOSEPH, of whom we have to treat.

The 2nd son,

JOSEPH MICKLETHWAIT, Esq., of Swine and Cosham, co. Durham, b. in 1708, secretary to the Earl of Stanhope in Spain, was created a peer of Ireland, as BARON MICKLETHWAIT, of Portarlington, Queen's co., 14 August, 1724, and in three years after (6 June, 1727,) advanced to be VISCOUNT MICKLETHWAIT, of Longford, in the kingdom of Ireland. His lordship, who represented Arundel and Hull in parliament, d. ann. 16 January, 1733, and with him all the honours became EXTINCT.

MIDDLETON—EARL OF MIDDLETON.

By Letters Patent, dated 1 October, 1660.

Lineage.

JOHN MIDDLETON, the eldest son of John Middleton, of Caldham, joined at an early period the service of the parliament in the great civil war and was lieutenant-general under Sir William Waller. Returning into Scotland, he had a command in General Lealle's army, and contributed so much to the defeat of Montrose at Philliphaugh, 13 September, 1645, that the parliament voted him a gift of 25,000 marks. Subsequently aiding with the royal party, he fought with great gallantry at the battle of Worcester, where, being severely wounded, he was taken prisoner, and sent to the Tower of London, whence he effected his escape, and waited on King CHARLES at Paris. In 1653, he was sent to command the royalists in Scotland. His forces suffered a defeat at Lochgeary in 1654, and Middleton himself escaped, a second time, to the Continent, where he continued to reside until the Restoration, at which propitious event he was created EARL OF MIDDLETON, Lord Clermont and Fettercairn, by patent dated 1 October, 1660, to him and his heirs male bearing the name and arms of Middleton. He received also the appointments of commander-in-chief of the forces in Scotland, governor of Edinburgh Castle, and commissioner to the Scottish parliament. His lordship m. 1st, Grisel, only dau. of Sir James Durham, of Pitkerrow and Luffness, and by her, who d. at Cranston in September, 1666, had issue,

CHARLES, 2nd Earl of Middleton.

Grisel, m. at Holyrood House, 12 June, 1662, to William, 4th Earl of Morton; and d. in March, 1666.

Helen, m. at Holyrood House, 23 August, 1662, to Patrick, Earl of Strathmore, and had issue.

The earl m. 2ndly, at St. Andrew's, Holborn, in December, 1667, Lady Martha Cary, dau. of Henry, Earl of Monmouth, but by her had no issue. He d. at Tangier, of which he was governor, in 1673, and was s. by his son.

CHARLES MIDDLETON, 2nd Earl of Middleton, member for Winchelsea in the Long Parliament. He was bred up at the court of King CHARLES II., by whom he was appointed envoy extraordinary to the court of Vienna; and on his return constituted one of the principal secretaries of state for Scotland, 26 September, 1682, and one of the extraordinary lords of session, 15 July, 1684; he was sworn a privy councillor in England, 11 July, 1684, and appointed one of the principal secretaries of state there, 25 August, following, which office he enjoyed till the Revolution, 1688, when he joined King JAMES II. in France, for which he was outlawed by the court of judicary, 23 July, 1694, and forfeited by act of parliament, 1695. His lordship m. Lady Catherine Brudenell, dau. of Robert, Earl of Cardigan, and by her, who d. at St. Germain's, 11 March, 1743, in her ninety-fifth year, had issue,

JOHN, Lord Clermont.

Charles.

Elizabeth, m. to Edward Drummond, son of James, Earl of Perth, high chancellor of Scotland. She had the style of Duchess of Perth, and d. at Paris, in an advanced age, after 1773.

Mary, m. to Sir John Giffard, Knt.

Catherine, m. to Michael, Comte de Rothe, lieutenant-general in the French service; and d. at Paris, 10 July, 1763, aged seventy-eight.

Arms—Per fess, or and gu., a lion rampant within a double tressure, flowered and counter-flowered with fleurs-de-lis, all counterchanged.

MILDMAY—BARONS FITZ-WALTER, EARL FITZ-WALTER.

Barony, originally by Writ of Summons, dated 23 June, 1295, to the Mildmays; by Writ of Summons, dated 10 February, 1669.

Earldom, by Letters Patent, dated 14 May, 1730.

Lineage.

LADY FRANCES RATCLIFFE, only dau. by his 2nd wife, of Henry, 3rd Lord Fitz-Walter, and 2nd Earl of Sussex (see Ratcliffe, Barons Fitz-Walter), m. Sir Thomas Mildmay, Knt., of Moulsham, co. Essex, eldest son of Sir Thomas Mildmay, Knt. (who d. 21 September, 1566), by Avicia, his wife, dau. of William Gernson, Esq., of London, and grandson of Thomas Mildmay, Esq., who purchased the manor of Moulsham, from King HENRY VIII.: Lady Francis had issue, THOMAS (Sir) created a baronet in 1611, and d. s. p. 18 February, 1625-6.

HENRY, of whom presently.

Sir Thomas d. 21 July, 1608. His 2nd son,

SIR HENRY MILDMAY, Knt., becoming at the decease of his brother representative of the family, and his mother, at the death of her nephew, by the half blood, Robert Ratcliffe, 6th Lord Fitz-Walter, and 5th Earl of Sussex, having become sole heiress of that ancient barony, preferred his claim in her right, by petition to the Long Parliament, in 1640; but the civil war breaking out immediately after, he was unable to accomplish anything in the affair. Sir Henry m. Elizabeth, dau. of John D'Arcy, Esq., of Toleshunt D'Arcy, co. Essex, and dying in 1654, left issue,

ROBERT, who m. Mary, dau. and co-heir of Sir Thomas Edmonde, Knt., and had two sons and a dau., viz.,

1 HENRY, who petitioned for the barony, but d. s. p. before there was any decision.

2 BENJAMIN, of whom presently, as LORD FITZ-WALTER.

3 Mary, m. to Henry Mildmay, Esq., of Graces, and had five daus., viz.,

Mary, m. to Charles Goodwin, Esq., of Rovent, co. Sussex, and d. s. p.

Lucy, m. to Thomas Gardiner, Esq., of Tollesbury, Essex, and had, with other issue, who d. s. p., two daus., Lucy, who m. in 1728, Sir Richard Bacon, Bart., but their issue is extinct; and Jemima, who is stated to have m. John Joseph, surgeon, and to have had an only dau., Jemima, wife of Robert Duke, woollen-draper, of Colchester, who, it is asserted, settled in America.

Elizabeth, m. to Edmund Waterson, Esq., and d. s. p.

Frances, m. to Christopher Fowler, Esq., and d. in 1705, leaving a son, EDMUND FOWLER, of Graces, who m. Elizabeth Pateshall, and d. in 1751, leaving a dau. and heir, FANNY, wife of Sir Brook Bridges, Bart., of Goodnestone, and mother of the late SIR BROOK-WILLIAM BRIDGES, Bart., whose son and heir, Sir Brook-WILLIAM BRIDGES, Bart., of Goodnestone, is one of the co-heirs, if not sole heir, of the Barony of FITZ-WALTER.

Katherine, m. to Col. Thomas Townshend, and had issue, but since extinct.

Henry, d. s. p.

Charles, m. to Martha, dau. and heiress of Sir Crammer Harris, Knt., and left an only dau.,

Mary, m. to Sir Charles Tyrrell, Bart., of Thornton.

Sir Henry Mildmay's grandson,

BENJAMIN MILDMAY, Esq., having inherited the estates of the family, upon the decease of his brother Henry, without issue, pursued the claim to the BARONY OF FITZ-WALTER, already preferred by his grandfather and brother; but he met a strenuous opponent in Robert Cheeke, Esq., son of Henry Cheeke, Esq., by Francis Ratcliffe, dau. of Sir Humphrey Ratcliffe, of Elneston, and sister of Sir Edward Ratcliffe, who s. as 6th Earl of Sussex, and d. s. p. in 1641, when that earldom expired. (See Ratcliffes, Barons Fitz-Walter, issue of Robert, 2nd Lord, and Earl of Sussex.) Mr. Cheeke's claim chiefly rested on the question, whether there could be a possessio fratris in dignity; and after several hearings at the bar of the House of Lords, the parliament was prorogued, and nothing further was done in that session; but on 29 December following, Mr. Mildmay again petitioned the king, and his Majesty was then pleased to order, that the cause should be heard by the privy council 19 January, 1669, on which day the two chief justices and the chief baron, were directed to attend.

"The counsel for the said Robert Cheeke affirmed, that the same was a barony by tenure, and ought to go along with the land;* which the counsel of the petitioner denied, and offered to argue on the same; upon which both parties being ordered to withdraw, the nature of a barony by tenure being discussed, it was found to have been discontinued for many ages, and not in being, and so not fit to be revived, or to admit any pretence of right of succession thereto; and the other points urged by Mr. Cheeke† being overruled, it was ordered by his majesty in council, that the petitioner is admitted, humbly to address himself to his majesty, for his writ, to sit in the House of Peers, as Baron Fitz-Walter, and he was so summoned accordingly, 10 February, 1670."‡ There being, after this, some doubts as to the place and precedence of the Lord Fitz-Walter, it was ultimately settled, that his lordship should be placed the last baron of the reign of King EDWARD I. This Benjamin, 1st Lord Fitz-Walter, of the Mildmay family, m. Catherine, dau. and co-heiress of John, Viscount Fairfax, of the kingdom of Ireland, and had surviving issue, two sons, CHARLES and BENJAMIN, who inherited, successively, the barony. His lordship d. 1 June, 1679, and was s. by the elder,

CHARLES MILDMAY, 2nd Baron Fitz-Walter. His lordship m. Elizabeth, dau. of the Hon. Charles Bertie, of Uffington, youngest son of Montagu, Earl of Lindsey, but d. 1728, s. p., and was s. by his brother,

BENJAMIN MILDMAY, 3rd Baron Fitz-Walter, who was created by letters patent, dated 14 May, 1730, Viscount Harwich, and EARL FITZ-WALTER. In 1735, his lordship was sworn of the privy council, appointed first lord commissioner of trade and plantations, and constituted in 1737, treasurer of the household. He m. Frederica, eldest dau. and co-heir of Meinhardt, Duke of Scombergh, and widow of Robert, Earl of Holderness, by whom he had an only son, Robert-Scombergh, who d. in infancy. His lordship d. 29 February, 1756, when the Viscounty of Harwich, and Earldom of Fitz-Walter became extinct, but the ancient Barony of Fitz-Walter fell into ABEYANCE between the daus. of his aunt, of whom SIR BROOK-WILLIAM BRIDGES, Bart. is now either sole-heir or co-heir.

In 1841, Sir Brook claimed the title and there were six hearings of his case before the Committee for Privileges of the House of Lords. After the summing up of Mr. Loftus Wigram 18 July, 1844 (the 6th hearing of the case), the committee came to the unanimous resolution that, "the barony is now in abeyance between the petitioner, Sir Brook-William Bridges, as grandson and heir of Dame Fanny Bridges, and the descendants (if any) of Jemima Duke," which, being first passed in the affirmative, was directed by the committee to be reported by the chairman to the House. The words inserted ("if any") were part of the resolution, thus intimating considerable doubt whether any descendants remain. The counsel for the petitioner were Mr. Loftus Wigram and Sir Harris Nicolas.

Arms—Arg., three lions rampant, az.

* It does not appear on what grounds Mr. Cheeke's counsel claimed the Barony of Fitz-Walter by tenure, for that barony was originally attached to the possession of the Manor of Little Dunmow, in Essex, granted to Robert Fitz-Walter, in the reign of HENRY I., and at the period when this claim was discussed, it was not the property of either of the claimants.—Nicolas.

† First, half blood in Mildmay; and 2ndly, that the barony or title of Lord Fitz-Walter, was merged in the Earldom of Sussex, and became extinct with that dignity. Upon which it was decided, that the half blood could not be any impediment in the case of a dignity; and that, although a baron in fee simple be created an earl, the barony shall descend to the heir general, whether or not, the earldom continue, or be extinct.

Lineage.

In the time of HENRY III.,

NICHOLAS DE MOELS, possessed in right of Hawyse, his wife, dau. and co-heir of James de Newmarch, the lordships of Cadebury, and Saperton, co. Somerset, part of the feudal barony of the said James. In the same reign, this Nicholas was made sheriff of Hampshire, and governor of the castle of Winchester, and continued in office for four years. He had subsequently the islands of Guernsey, Jersey, Serke, and Aurenay (Alderney), committed to his care, and was again constituted sheriff of Hampshire, after which he was sheriff of Yorkshire, and held that office until the 25th HENRY III. The next year he was deputed with Ralph Fitz-Nicholas, ambassador to France, for the purpose of denouncing war against the king of that realm; and he was soon after appointed seneschal of Gascony; being at the time a person so highly regarded by the king, that James, his son and heir, was by special command, admitted to have his education with Prince Edward; the prince's tutors, Hugh de Giffard and Berard de Savoy, having directions to receive him, with one servant, and to provide him with necessaries. In the 28th of the same reign, Nicholas de Moels obtained a signal victory over the King of Navarre, and returning to England the ensuing year, he was employed in the Welsh wars, and constituted governor of the castles of Caermarthen and Cardigan. He was subsequently appointed constable of Dover Castle, and warden of the Cinque Ports; and the March following, made sheriff of Kent, and governor of the castles of Rochester and Canterbury. This celebrated and gallant person was s. by his son,

ROGER DE MOELS, who served in the Welsh wars, and in the beginning of EDWARD I.'s reign had the honour and castle of Lampadervaur, in Cardiganshire, committed to his custody. He m. Alice, dau. and heir of William de Preux, and dying in 1294, was s. by his son,

JOHN DE MOELS, who, doing his homage in the same year, had livery of his lands. This feudal lord having distinguished himself in the Scottish wars of EDWARD I., was summoned to parliament as a Baron, from 6 February, 1299, to 16 June, 1311. His lordship m. a dau. of the noble family of Grey, and dying in 1311, was s. by his son, NICHOLAS DE MOELS, 2nd baron, summoned to parliament from 19 October, 1311, to 6 October, 1315. This nobleman, like his predecessors, distinguished himself in arms, and was engaged in the Scotch wars. His lordship m. Margaret, dau. of Sir Hugh Courtenay, Knt., and sister of Hugh, Earl of Devon. His lordship d. in 1316, and was s. by his brother,

ROGER DE MOELS, 3rd baron, who, paying 100 marks fine, and doing homage, had livery of his lands the same year, through the king's especial favour, being at the time not of full age. His lordship d. in the 19th EDWARD II. s. p., and was s. by his brother,

JOHN DE MOELS, 4th baron. This nobleman was created a knight of the Bath, 20th EDWARD II., and in the 7th EDWARD III., he was in the expedition then made into Scotland. His lordship m. Joane, one of the daus. of Sir Richard Livel, Knt., of Castle Cary, and had issue,

MURIEL, m. to Sir Thomas Courtenay, Knt. (who d. 36th EDWARD III.), a younger son of the Earl of Devon, and had issue,

HUGH COURTENAY, who d. s. p.

Margaret Courtenay, m. to Sir Thomas Peverel, and had issue,

Katherine Peverel, m. to Sir Walter Hungerford.

Alianore Peverel, d. s. p.

Muriel Courtenay, m. to John Dinham.

Isabel, m. to William de Botreaux, Lord Botreaux, and her great great grand-dau.,

MARGARET BOTREAUX, m. to Sir Robert Hungerford, Knt., and carried the Barony of Botreaux, with the moiety of that of Moels, to Robert, 2nd Lord Hungerford, whose mother, Katherine, Lady Hungerford, dau., and eventually sole heir of Sir Thomas Peverel, and Margaret, dau. and co-heir of Sir Thomas Courtenay, by Muriel de Moels, his wife, above mentioned, was also the co-heir of the other moiety of the Barony of Moels; which representation, viz., of one moiety, and half of the other moiety, is now vested in the present Marquess of Hastings. Baron Hungerford, Molines, and Botreaux, the heir general of the body of the said Robert, Lord Hungerford, and of Margaret, dau. and heiress of Lord Botreaux, his wife. The other half moiety of the Barony of Moels, is vested in the representatives of the Lords Dinham.

His lordship d. in 1337, when the Barony of Moels fell into ABEYANCE, between his daus., as it still continues, as stated above, with their representatives. His lordship's estates passed likewise to his daus., and were divided thus:

MURIEL, Lady Courtenay, had the manor of King's Crewell, with the hundred of Haytore, in the co. of Devon; the manor of Stoke-Moels, in the co. of Oxford, with 100 shillings rent, out of the manor of Langford, also in Devonshire.

ISABEL, Lady Botreaux, had the manor of North-Cadbury, in the co. of Somerset, and Dupleford, Langford, and the hundred of Stanburgh, in the co. of Devon.

Arms—Arg., two bare gu., in chief three torteaux.

MOHUN—BARONS MOHUN.

By Writ of Summons, dated 6 February, 1290.

Lineage.

The first of this family upon record is

SIR WILLIAM DE MOHUN, one of the companions in arms of the CONQUEROR, who is stated to have had no less than 47 stout knights of name and note in his retinue, at the battle of Hastings; and for the good services rendered to his royal master in that celebrated conflict, to have obtained the Castle Dunster, with 55 manors, in the co. of Somerset, besides several other lordships in Wilt, Devonshire, and Warwickshire. Sir William was s. by his son,

WILLIAM DE MOHUN, Lord of Dunster, who, with Agnes, his wife, granted the church of Whichford to the canons of Bridlington, King HENRY I. confirming the grant. This William was s. by his son,

WILLIAM DE MOHUN, who, espousing the fortunes of the Empress MAUD, fortified his castle of Dunster on her behalf, and breaking out into open rebellion against King STEPHEN, laid the country waste around him. He subsequently, in conjunction with DAVID, King of Scotland, Robert, Earl of Gloucester, and the other partisans of MAUD, besieged Henry de Blois (STEPHEN's brother), bishop of Winchester, in the castle at that place; and in consideration of these eminent services, is said to have been created EARL OF DORSET by the Empress. He founded the priory of Bruton, in the co. Somerset, and endowed it largely with lands in England and Normandy. He d. before the year 1165, and was s. by his son,

WILLIAM DE MOHUN, surnamed Meschyn. In the 12th HENRY II., this feudal lord, upon levying the aid for marrying the king's dau., certified his knights' fees, de veteri feoffamento, to be in number forty, and those de novo, four. He confirmed his father's grants to the priory of Bruton, and like him was buried there. He d. before the year 1202, and was s. by his son,

REGINALD DE MOHUN, who, in the 6th of JOHN, m. Alice, one of the sisters and co-heirs of William de Briwere, and by her, with whom he acquired considerable estates in the co. of Cornwall, Devon, and Somerset, had two sons, REGINALD, his heir, and John, ancestor of the Mohuns of Ham-Mohun, co. Dorset. He d. in 1213, and was s. by his son,

REGINALD DE MOHUN, then in minority whose wardship was committed to Henry Fitz-Count, son of the Earl of Cornwall. In the 28th HENRY III., this Reginald was constituted chief justice of all the forests south of Trent; and, in some years afterwards, governor of Saubeye Castle, in Leicestershire. In the 41st of the same reign, he had a military summons to march against the Welsh. He m. 1st, Hawise, sister of Humphrey de Bohun, Earl of Hereford, and had a son, JOHN, his successor. He m. 2ndly, Isabel, dau. of William de Ferrers, Earl of Derby (and co-heir of Sibilla, her mother, sister and co-heir of Anslem Marshal, last Earl of Pembroke, of that family), by whom he had a son,

WILLIAM, who, by the gift of his father, had the manors of Ottery, Stoke-Fleming, Monkton, and Galmeton, with the manor of Mildenhall, in the co. of Wilt, and Greykell, in the co. of Southampton. He m. Beatrix, dau. of Reginald Fitz-Piers, and left two daus., his co-heirs, viz.,

Elinor, m. to John de Carru.

Mary, m. to John de Meryet.

Reginald Mohun d. in 1256, and was s. by his elder son,

JOHN DE MOHUN, who m. Joane, dau. of William de Ferrers, Earl of Derby, and dying 1278, left a dau., Margaret, m. to Sir John Cantilupe, and a son,

JOHN DE MOHUN (called John de Mohun the 2nd). This feudal lord, at the decease of his father, was but ten years of age. He was afterwards distinguished in the wars of Gascony and Scotland, and was summoned to parliament as a Baron, from 6 February, 1299, to 23 October, 1330. In the 27th EDWARD I., he exchanged with the crown, all his lands in Ireland, for the manor of Long Compton, in Warwickshire. His lordship m. Auda, dau. of Sir Robert de Tibetot, and dying in 1330, was s. by his grandson (son of his eldest son, John de Mohun, who predeceased him).

JOHN DE MOHUN, 2nd baron, summoned to parliament from 25 February, 1342, to 4 October, 1373 (the latter part of the time as BARON MOHUN, of Dunster). This nobleman, one of the Founders of the order of the Garter, was one of the martial heroes of the reign of EDWARD III., and was of the retinue of the Black Prince, and subsequently of that of John of Gaunt. His lordship m. Joane, dau. of his guardian, Bartholomew de Burghersh, and dying about 49th EDWARD III., left at his decease, three daus., his co-heirs, viz.,

Philippa, m. 1st, to Sir Walter Fitz-Walter, Knt.; 2ndly, to Sir John Golofre; and 3rdly, to Edward, Duke of York.
Elizabeth, m. to William de Montacute, Earl of Salisbury.
Maud, m. to John, Lord Strange, of Knocking, and had a son, Richard le Strange.

The two elder daus. d. without issue, and the barony passed to Richard, Lord Strange (son of Lord Mohun's youngest dau.), his son and heir, John, Lord Strange, left an only dau. and heir, Johanna, who m. George Stanley, Earl of Derby, when the barony became merged in the Earldom of Derby, until the death of Ferdinand Stanley, Earl of Derby, without male issue, when it fell into abeyance between the earl's three daus. and co-heirs, viz., Anne, wife 1st, of Grey, Lord Chandos, and 2ndly, of Mervyn, Earl of Castlehaven; Frances, wife of John, Earl of Bridgewater, and Elizabeth, wife of Henry, Earl of Huntingdon, and between whose descendants and representatives it continues in ABEYANCE.

MOHUN—BARONS MOHUN OF OKEHAMPTON, CO. DEVON.

By Letters Patent, dated 15 April, 1628.

Lineage.

REGINALD MOHUN, Esq., of Boconnoc, in Cornwall, lineally descended from Reginald de Mohun, youngest son of John, 1st Baron Mohun, of Dunster (a dignity that fell into ABEYANCE in the time of EDWARD III.), was created a baronet by King JAMES I. He m. Philippa, dau. of John Hele, Esq., and was s. by his son,

SIR JOHN MOHUN, 2nd baronet, who was elevated to the peerage 15th April, 1628, in the dignity of BARON MOHUN, of Okehampton, co. Devon. His lordship, during the civil wars, was one of the chief cavalier commanders in Cornwall and the west of England, and did essential service to the royal cause. He m. Cordelia, dau. of Sir John Stanhope, of Shelford, Notts, and widow of Sir Roger Aston, by whom he had issue,

JOHN, his successor.
Warwick, heir to his brother.
Charles, slain at Dartmouth, fighting under the royal banner.
Cordelia, m. to John Harris, Esq., of Hayne, co. Devon.
Theophila, m. to James Campbell, Esq., son of Mr. Alderman Campbell, of London.
Philadelphia.

His lordship d. in 1644, and was s. by his eldest son,

JOHN MOHUN, 2nd baron, who d. unm., and was s. by his brother,

WARWICK MOHUN, 3rd baron. This nobleman m. Catherine, dau. of — Welles, Esq., of Brember, Hants, and dying in 1665, was s. by his son,

CHARLES MOHUN, 4th baron, who m. Lady Philippa Annesley, dau. of Arthur, 1st Earl of Anglesey, and by her (who m. 2ndly, William Coward, Esq., and d. 1714) had issue,

CHARLES, his successor.
Elizabeth, who d. unm. in 1709.

His lordship d. before the year 1682, and was s. by his son,

CHARLES MOHUN, 5th baron. This nobleman was of a vehement and passionate temper, which led him into many excesses in his youth, and subjected him to be twice arraigned for murder, but he was, upon both occasions, honourably acquitted. Having had a dispute with James, Duke of Hamilton, regarding an estate left him by the Earl of Macclesfield, he challenged that nobleman, and a duel ensued in Hyde Park, 15 November, 1712, wherein both the combatants were slain. His lordship m. 1st, Charlotte, dau. of Thomas Mainwaring, Esq., by Lady Charlotte Gerard, sister of Charles, Earl of Macclesfield, and 2ndly, Elizabeth, dau. of Dr. Thomas Laurence, state physician to Queen ANNE, and widow of Col. Edward Griffith, but had no issue, in consequence of which the Barony of Mohun, of Okehampton, at his decease, became EXTINGUISHED.

MOLINES—BARONS MOLINES.

By Writ of Summons, dated 18 February, 1347.

Lineage.

This family, which was of French extraction, assumed its surname from a town so called, in the Bourbonnois; but no member of the house became of note in England before the reign of EDWARD III., when

JOHN DE MOLINES attained high rank and great importance, as well from enjoying the favour of the king, as by his large possessions in several counties, but particularly in Buckinghamshire. In the beginning of King EDWARD's reign, he was one of those who surprised the castle of Nottingham, and seized the person of Mortimer, Earl of March, for which act, he shortly afterwards received a pardon. In the 14th of the same reign he had several grants from the crown, and was summoned to parliament as a Baron, 18th February, 1347. His lordship had been treasurer of the chamber to King EDWARD, and acquired a very large estate by the favour and grants of that monarch. He was engaged in the wars of France, and received the honour of knighthood for his services. He m. 1st, Egidia, heir of John Mauduit, of Somersford, in Wilts, and 2ndly, Margaret, dau. and co-heir of Roger Pogeys, of Stoke Pogeys, co. Buckingham, and was s. at his decease in 1371, by his son,

WILLIAM MOLINES, 2nd baron, who m. Margery, dau. and heir of Edmund Bacoun, and dying in the reign of RICHARD II., was s. by his son,

RICHARD MOLINES, 3rd baron, who m. Eleanor Beaumont, and dying in 1384, was s. by his son,

WILLIAM MOLINES, 4th baron, who, dying 3rd HENRY VI., left an only dau. and heiress, ALLAMORE MOLINES, who m. ROBERT HUNGERFORD, 2nd Lord Hungerford, who had summons to parliament as Lord Molines, in 1446. The barony is now vested in the Marquess of Hastings.

MONK—DUKES OF ALBEMARLE.

By Letters Patent, dated 7 July, 1670.

Lineage.

The family of LE MOYNE or MONK, was of great antiquity in the co. Devon, and in that shire they had, from a remote period, possessed the Manor of Potheridge, which lineally descended to

GEORGE MONK, son of Sir Thomas Monk, Knt., and Elizabeth, his wife, dau. of Sir George Smith. This distinguished person, the celebrated general under Cromwell, was, for his exertions in restoring the monarchy, created by King CHARLES II., 7 July, 1670, Baron Monk, of Potheridge, Baron Beauchamp, of Beauchamp, Baron of Treys, Earl of Turrington, all in the co. Devon, and DUKE OF ALBEMARLE; and shortly after was installed a knight of the Garter. To explain his grace's titles, it is necessary to state that Elizabeth Grey, the wife of his ancestor, Arthur Plantaganet, was sister and heir of John Grey, Viscount L'Isle, and dau. of Edward Grey, by Elizabeth, dau. and heir of John Talbot, eldest son of John, Earl of Shrewsbury, by his 2nd wife, Margaret, eldest dau. and co-heir of Richard Beauchamp, Earl of Warwick and Albemarle, by Elizabeth, his wife, dau. and heiress of Thomas, Lord Berkeley, by Margaret, his wife, dau. and heiress of Gerard Warine, Lord L'Isle, by Alice, dau. and heiress of Henry, Lord Teyes.

The military and naval achievements of Monk occupy an honourable space in the history of the period in which he lived. He crowned his reputation by the course he adopted after the death of Cromwell, in restoring the monarchy, and thus healing the wounds of his distracted country. To the gloomy and jealous mind of Cromwell, General Monk was at times a cause of uneasiness and distrust; and to a letter addressed to the general himself, Oliver once added the following singular postscript: "There be that tell me there is a certain cunning fellow in Scotland, called George Monk, who is said to lie in wait there to introduce Charles Stuart: I pray you use your diligence to apprehend him, and send him up to me." From the time of the Restoration to that of his death, the Duke of Albemarle preserved the confidence and esteem of the restored monarch, and his brother, the Duke of York, the former always calling him his "political father." With the people, Monk always enjoyed the highest degree of popularity, and his death was lamented as a national misfortune. His obsequies were public, and his ashes were deposited in HENRY VII.'s chapel, at Westminster, with the remains of royalty. The Duke m. Anne, dau. of John Clarges, and sister to Sir Thomas Clarges, Bart., by whom he had an only son,

CHRISTOPHER, his successor.

His grace d. in 1670, and was s. by his son,

CHRISTOPHER MONK, 2nd Duke of Albemarle. This nobleman was made a knight of the Garter, in 1671, and sworn of the privy council. He m. Lady Elizabeth Cavendish, dau. and co-heir of Henry, Duke of Newcastle, by whom he had an only son, that d. immediately after his birth. The duke went out governor-general to Jamaica, in 1687, accompanied by Sir Hans Sloane, and d. there in the next year, when all his honours became extinct.

Arms—Gu., a chevron between three lions' heads erased, arg.

NOTE.—The following singular circumstance occurred during the trial of an action of trespass, between William Sherwin, plaintiff, and Sir Walter Clarges, Bart., and others, defendants, at the bar of the King's Bench at Westminster, 15 November, 1700:—

"The plaintiff as heir and representative of Thomas Monk, Esq., elder brother of George, Duke of Albemarle, claimed the manor of Sutton, in the county of York, and other lands, as heir-at-law to the said duke, against the defendant devisee, under the will of Duke Christopher, his only child, who d. in 1669, s. p. Upon this trial it appeared that Anne, the wife of George, Duke of Albemarle, was dau. of John Clarges, a farrier in Savoy, and farrier to Colonel Monk. In 1632, she was married at the church of St. Lawrence Pountney, to Thomas Ratford, son of Thomas Ratford, late a farrier's servant to Prince Charles, and resident in the mews. She had a dau., b. in 1634, who d. in 1638; her husband and she lived at the Three Spanish Gipsies, in the New Exchange, and sold wash-balls, powder, gloves, and such things, and she taught girls plain work. About 1647, she being sempstress to Monk, used to carry him linen. In 1648, her father and mother died; in 1649, she and her husband fell out and parted; but no certificate from any parish register appears reciting his burial. In 1652, she was married in the church of St. George, Southwark, to General George Monk, and in the following year, was delivered of a son, CHRISTOPHER, who was suckled by Honour Mills, who sold apples, herbs, oysters, &c., which son, CHRISTOPHER, s. his father, as stated in the text.

MONSON—VISCOUNT MONSON.

By Letters Patent, dated 23 August, 1628.

Lineage.

SIR WILLIAM MONSON, Knt., 2nd son of Sir Thomas Monson, Bart., of Carlton, co. Lincoln, was raised to the peerage of Ir. land, as Viscount Monson, of Castlemaine, co. Kerry, by letters patent, dated 23 August, 1628; but being subsequently instrumental in the death of CHARLES I., he was degraded, 12 July, 1661, of all his honours, and sentenced, with Sir Henry Mildmay and Mr. Robert Wallop, to be drawn in sledges, with ropes about their necks, from the Tower to Tyburn, and back again, and to remain prisoners in the Tower during their lives. His lordship m. three wives (but left no male issue), 1st, Margaret, dau. of James Stewart, Earl of Murray, and widow of Charles Howard, Earl of Nottingham; 2ndly, Frances, dau. of Thomas Alston, Esq., of Poistead, in Suffolk; and 3rdly, Elizabeth, dau. of Sir George Beresby, Knt., of Thrybergh, in Yorkshire, widow of Sir Francis Foljambe, and of Edward Horner, Esq.; by the last wife (who m. 4thly, Sir Adam Felton, Bart.), he had an only dau., Elizabeth, m. 1st, to Sir Philip Hungate, Bart., of Saxton; and 2ndly, to Lewis Smith, Esq., of Wotton, in Warwickshire.

MONTACUTE—BARONS MONTACUTE, EARLS OF SALISBURY.

Barony, by Writ of Summons, dated 26 September, 1300.

Earldom, by Charter, dated 16 March, 1337.

Lineage.

The ancestor of this celebrated family,

DRAGO, surnamed DE MONTE-ACUTO, MONTACUTE, or MONTAGUE, came into England with Robert, Earl of Moreton, at the Conquest, and appears, by Doomsday Book to have held of him divers manors in Somersetshire, whereof Sceptone, or Shipton-Montacute, was one, and Sutone, otherwise Sutton-Montacute, was another. The 1st baron by writ was

SIMON DE MONTACUTE, one of the most eminent persons of the period in which he lived. In the 10th EDWARD I., he was in the expedition made into Wales, and within a few years after, received considerable grants from the crown. In the 22nd, he was in the wars of France, where he appears to have been engaged for the two or three following years, and then we find him fighting in Scotland. In the 27th he was constituted governor of Corfe Castle, and summoned to parliament as a Baron from 28th EDWARD I. to 9th EDWARD II. In the 4th EDWARD II., his lordship was appointed admiral of the king's fleet, then employed against the Scots; and he obtained, in three years afterwards, license to make a castle of his mansion house, at Perlynton, in Somersetshire. He m. Aufrick, dau. of Fergus, and sister and heir of Orry, King of the Isle of Man, and had issue,

WILLIAM, his successor.

Simon, m. to Hawise, dau. of Almeric, Lord St. Amand.

His lordship d. about the year 1316, and was s. by his elder son,

SIR WILLIAM DE MONTACUTE, 2nd baron, summoned to parliament, from 20 November, 1317, to 25 August, 1318. This nobleman had distinguished himself in the Scottish wars, in the life-time of his father, and was made a knight of the Bath. In the 11th EDWARD II., being then steward of the king's household, his lordship was constituted seneschal of the Duchy of Aquitaine, and had license to make a castle of his house at Kersyngton, in Oxfordshire. He subsequently obtained other extensive grants from the crown. He m. Elizabeth, dau. of Sir Peter de Montfort, of Beaudesert, by whom (who m. 2ndly, Thomas, Lord Furnival), he had surviving issue,

WILLIAM, his successor.

Simon, in holy orders, bishop of Worcester, translated to the see of Ely, in 1336.

Edward (Sir), summoned to parliament as a Baron, temp.

EDWARD III. (see MONTACUTE Baron Montacute).

Katherine, m. to Sir William Carrington, Knt.

Alice, m. to — Auberie.

Mary, m. to Sir — Cogan.

Elizabeth, prioress of Halliwell.

Hawise, m. to Sir — Barent.

Maud, abbess of Berking.

Isabel, a nun at Berking.

His lordship d. in Gascony, 1319, but was buried at St. Frideswide, now Christ Church, Oxford. He was s. by his eldest surviving son,

WILLIAM DE MONTACUTE, 3rd baron, who, the next ensuing year, although in minority, obtained a grant from the king of the wardship of all his own lands, and in the 16th EDWARD II., making proof of his age and doing his homage, had livery thereof. In three years afterwards he was made a knight of the Bath, and had an allowance of robes for that solemnity as a banneret. In the 4th EDWARD III., his lordship was deputed ambassador to the Pope, with Bartholomew de Burghersh, to return thanks to his holiness, for confirming a bull of Pope HONORIUS IV., touching certain favours, by him granted, to the monks at Westminster; moreover, before the end of the year, a parliament being then held at Nottingham, he was the principal person who apprehended Roger de Mortimer, Earl of March, in the night-time, within the Queen's lodgings there, and sent him prisoner to London, where he was soon afterwards executed for high treason. For this service, Lord Montacute had a grant in tail, to himself, and Katherine, his wife, of the castle of Sherburne, co. Dorset, and of several other manors in Hants, Berkshire, Bucks, and Cambridgeshire: part of the possessions of the attainted Earl of March. He was summoned to parliament from 6 June, 1331, to 29 November, 1336. In the 8th EDWARD III. his lordship was constituted governor of the Isles of Guernsey, Jersey, &c., and the next year made constable of the Tower of London.

About this time Lord Montacute acquired great distinction in the Scottish wars, but at the expense of one of his eyes, which he lost in the campaign. In the 10th EDWARD III., he was appointed admiral of the king's fleet, westward, and 16 March, 11th EDWARD III., in consideration of his numerous gallant achievements, he was advanced by charter, in full parliament held at London, to the title and dignity of EARL OF SALISBURY, to hold to him and his heirs, with a grant of £20 out of the profits of that county. Shortly after this he was joined in command of the army in Scotland, with Richard, Earl of Arundel; and pursued his victorious career as well in Scotland as in France, for the two ensuing years, when in storming the town of L'Isle, he had the misfortune to be made prisoner with Robert de Ufford, Earl of Suffolk, and conveyed in fetters, amidst the acclamations of the places through which he passed, to Paris, where the French king would have put him to death, but for the interference of the King of Bohemia. His lordship and his fellow-captive, the Earl of Suffolk, were soon after, however, exchanged. With his liberty, he re-commenced his martial career, and won fresh laurels on the French soil. In the 16th EDWARD III., having conquered the Isle of Man, he was crowned King thereof by his royal master. His lordship m. Catherine, dau. of William, Lord Grandison, and had issue,

WILLIAM, his successor.

JOHN (Sir), a distinguished warrior, and one of the heroes of Cressy, who m. Margaret, dau. and heir of Thomas, Lord Monthermer, and was summoned to parliament as a Baron, from 15 February, 1357, to 6 December, 1389. His lordship had issue,

JOHN, 2nd baron, who s. his uncle, as 3rd Earl of Salisbury.

Thomas, dean of Salisbury, d. 1404.

Robert, of Sutton-Montague, in Somersetshire. The issue of this gentleman, according to Banks, flourished there until William Montague, the last of the family, left three daus. and co-heirs, of which, EMME m. James Dupote, who, in her right, possessed one moiety of Sutton-Montague, whose son, THOMAS, was father of Henry Dupot, Esq., of Leicestershire, and John Dupot, D.D., Master of Jesus College, Cambridge.

Simon (Sir), from whom the extinct Dukes of Montague, and the extinct Dukes of Manchester, and the Earls of Sandwich, deduce their descent.

Eleanor. Sibyl, a nun.

Katherine. Margaret, a nun.

Robert.

Sibyl, m. to Edmund, son of Edmund, Earl of Arundel.

Philippa, m. to Roger Mortimer, Earl of March.

Elizabeth, m. 1st, to Giles, Lord Badlesmere; and 2ndly, to Hugh le Despencer.

Anne, m. to John, son of Roger, Lord Grey.

This great earl d. in 1343, of bruises received in a tilting at Windsor, and was s. by his eldest son,

WILLIAM DE MONTACUTE, 2nd Earl of Salisbury. This nobleman, in 1346, attended King EDWARD III. into France, and was at the siege of Caen, and the battle of Cressy. From this period he was seldom absent from the theatre of war, so that his whole life may be denominated one continued campaign. At the battle of Poitiers he commanded the rear-guard of the English army, and is said to have contended with the Earl of Warwick, in the heat of action, as to which should shed most French blood. His lordship was one of the original knights of the Garter, the foundation of which noble order, tradition attributes to the love which King EDWARD bore to his lordship's countess. The earl m. 1st, Joane, dau. of Edmund Plantagenet, Earl of Kent, from whom he was divorced, on account of the lady's precontract with Sir Thomas Holland (this was the celebrated Fair Maid of Kent, who eventually became the wife of Edward, the Black Prince). His lordship m. 2ndly, Elizabeth, dau. and co-heir of John, Lord Mohun, of Dunster, and had an only son, WILLIAM, who m. Elizabeth, dau. of Richard, Earl of Arundel, and d. v. p., s. p., 6 August, 1382.

The earl d. s. p. in 1397 (his widow was received into the Sisterhood of the Convent of St. Albans, 10 October, 1408), and was s. by his nephew,

SIR JOHN DE MONTACUTE, Baron Montacute and Monthermer, as 3rd Earl of Salisbury. This nobleman was not less distinguished than his martial predecessors. In the 21st RICHARD II. he did his homage, and had livery of the lands which he inherited from his uncle, "and being," says Dugdale, "a great favourite of the king, he was one of those whom that monarch suborned to impeach Thomas, of Woodstock, Duke of Gloucester, as also the Earls of Warwick and Arundel, in the ensuing parliament." The next year his lordship was constituted marshal of England, in the absence of Thomas Holland, Duke of Surrey, then employed in Ireland: and he remained faithful to the fortunes of King RICHARD, when almost everybody else deserted him, upon the invasion of Henry, Duke of Lancaster, who eventually drove that weak monarch from the throne. "It is reported of this earl," says Dugdale, "that though, upon the disposal of King RICHARD II. (to whom he had been most obsequious) he had such fair respect from King HENRY IV., that his life was not brought in question; nevertheless, he confederated with the Earls of Huntingdon and Kent, in designing his destruction; and accordingly came with them to Windsor Castle, under the disguise of Christmas players, with purpose to murder him and his sons, and to restore King RICHARD. But finding that their plot was discovered, they fled by night to Cirencester, co. Gloucester. Whereupon the townsmen, being much affrighted at their coming thither with such numbers, at that unseasonable time, stopping up all the avenues, to prevent their passage out, there grew a sharp fight betwixt them, which held from midnight, until three of the clock next morning; so that being tired out, they yielded themselves, desiring that they might not suffer death till they could speak with the king, which was granted: but that a priest of their party setting fire to the town, to give them an opportunity for escape, so irritated the inhabitants, that (neglecting to quench the fire) they brought them out of the abbey in great fury, and beheaded them about break of the day." His lordship had m. Maud, dau. of Sir Adam Francis, Knt., of London (widow of John Aubrey, son of Andrew Aubrey, citizen of London, and of Sir Alan Buxhull, Knt.), by whom he had issue,

THOMAS, who was restored to the Earldom of Salisbury, and the other honours.

Richard, d. s. p.

Anne, m. 1st, to Sir Richard Hankford, Knt., by whom she had a dau. and heir, m. to James, 7th Earl of Ormonde; 2ndly, to John Fitz-Lewis, by whom she was mother of Elizabeth, m. to Sir John Wingfield; and 3rdly, to John Holland, Duke of Exeter.

Elizabeth, m. to Robert, Lord Willoughby, of Eresby.

Margaret, m. to William, Lord Ferrers, of Groby.

This John, Earl of Salisbury, was one of the most zealous of the sect called Lollards. His death, as stated above, occurred 6 January, 1400, whereupon King HENRY taking compassion upon his widow and children, restored some of the late earl's manors in Devonshire for their support; and to the elder son,

THOMAS DE MONTACUTE, he also granted a large proportion of his father's estates: and in 1409 restored him to the EARLDOM OF SALISBURY, and the other honours. "This nobleman," in the words of Banks, "was concerned in so many military exploits, that to give an account of them all, would be to write the history of the reign of HENRY V. Suffice it then to say, that as he lived, so he died in the service of his country, being mortally wounded when commanding the English army at the siege of Orleans in 1421." His lordship m. 1st, the Lady Eleanor, dau. of Thomas, and sister and co-heir of Edmund, Earl of Kent, and had an only dau.,

ALICE, Countess of Salisbury, who m. Sir Richard Nevill, K.G., 2nd son of Ralph, 1st Earl of Westmoreland (see Nevill, Earls of Salisbury).

The earl m. 2ndly, Alice, dau. of Thomas Chaucer, Esq., of Ewelme, and widow of Sir John Philippe, Knt., but by her (who m. lastly, William, Duke of Suffolk), had no issue. Upon the decease of his lordship, who, with his other honours, was a knight of the Garter, the earldom of Salisbury became EXTINCT, but the baronies of Montacute, created by writ in 1300, of Montacute, created by writ in 1357, and Monthermer, devolved upon his dau. and heiress,

LADY ALICE MONTACUTE, wife of SIR RICHARD NEVILL, K.G., jure uxoris, Earl of Salisbury; their great-grand-dau. and representative Margaret Plantagenet, Countess of Salisbury, m. Sir Richard Pole, K.G., and had a son, HENRY POLE, summoned to parliament in the Barony of MONTACUTE: his co-representatives are HENRY, MARQUESS OF HASTINGS; WILLIAM LOWNDE, Esq., of Chesham, Bucks, and WILLIAM SELBY LOWNDE, Esq., of Whaddon, Bucks, who are all co-heirs of the BARONIES of MONTACUTE and MONTHERMER.

MONTACUTE—BARON MONTACUTE.

By Writ of Summons, dated 25 February, 1342.

Lineage.

SIR EDWARD DE MONTACUTE, youngest brother of William, 1st Earl of Salisbury, in the 4th EDWARD III., had a grant from the crown for his good services, and to support his rank as a knight, of £100 per annum: and was summoned to parliament as a Baron, from 25 February, 1342, to 20 November, 1360. His lordship was an eminent soldier, and served with high reputation in the wars of Scotland and France, having at one time in his train nine knights, fifteen esquires, and twenty archers on horseback, when his banner bore the following arms, viz., "Arg., three lozenges in fesse, on each an eagle displayed with a tangle of three points." He m. Lady Alice Plantagenet, dau. and co-heir of Thomas, of Brotherton, Duke of Norfolk, by whom he had an only child,

His lordship d. in 1361, when the Barony of Montacute devolved upon his dau. Joane, and at her decease it became EXTINCT.

Arms—Arg., three lozenges in fesse, on each an eagle displayed with a tangle of three points.

MONTAGU—BARONS HALIFAX, EARL OF HALIFAX, EARLS OF HALIFAX.

Barony, by Letters Patent, dated 13 December, 1700.

First Earldom, by Letters Patent, dated 19 October, 1714.

Second Earldom, by Letters Patent, dated 14 June, 1715.

Lineage.

The Hon GEORGE MONTAGU, son of Henry, 1st Earl of Manchester, by his 3rd wife, Margaret, dau. of John Crouch, Esq., m. Elizabeth, dau. of Sir Anthony Irby, Knt., and was father of

CHARLES MONTAGU (a younger son), who became one of the most eminent statesmen of the important period of King WILLIAM III. Mr. Montagu was returned to parliament by the city of Durham, and afterwards by the city of Westminster. In 1692 he was appointed one of the commissioners of the Treasury, and in two years afterwards chancellor of the Exchequer, in which office he projected, and caused to be executed, the great recoinage of silver in 1695. In 1698 he adjusted the affairs of the East India Company to universal satisfaction; and was elevated to the peerage, in compliance with the recommendation of the House of Commons, 13 December, 1700, in the dignity of BARON HALIFAX, of Halifax, co. York, with remainder, failing his issue male, to his nephew, GEORGE MONTAGU, son and heir of his elder brother, Edward Montagu. In the reign of Queen ANNE, his lordship was constituted a commissioner for the Union between England and Scotland; and was created, 19 October, 1714, Viscount Sunbury, co. Middlesex, and EARL OF HALIFAX. His lordship was not more distinguished as a politician than as a wit and man of letters. "Addison," says Banks, "has celebrated this nobleman in his account of the greatest English poets. Sir Richard Steele has drawn his character in the dedication of the second volume of the Spectator, and of the fourth of the Tatler; but Pope in the portrait of Buffo, in the Epistle to Arbuthnot, has returned the ridicule which his lordship in conjunction with Prior had heaped on Dryden's Hind and Panther; besides which admirable travestie, Lord Halifax wrote divers other works, most of which have been published together in an octavo volume, with memoirs of his lordship's life (1716); and are noticed by Walpole in his Catalogue of Noble Authors."

The earl m. Anne, Countess Dowager of Manchester, dau. of Sir Christopher Yelverton, Bart., of Easton Mauduit, Notts, but had no issue. His lordship, who was a knight of the Garter, d. in 1715, when the earldom expired but the barony devolved, according to the limitation, upon his nephew,

GEORGE MONTAGU, 2nd Baron Halifax, who was created, 14 June, 1715, Viscount Sunbury and EARL OF HALIFAX. This nobleman was made a knight of the Bath upon the revival of that order in 1725. His lordship m. 1st, Richarda-Posthuma, dau. of Richard Saltenstale, Esq., of Chippen-Warden, co. Northampton, by whom he had an only dau.,

LUCY, m. to Francis, 3rd Lord Guilford.

MONTALT—BARONS MONTALT.

By Writ of Summons, dated 23 June, 1295.

By Writ of Summons, dated 6 February, 1299.

Lineage.

Upon the foundation of the abbey of St. Werberg, in the city of Chester, temp. WILLIAM RUFUS,

HUGH, the son of Norman, being at that time one of the barons to Hugh, Earl of Chester, granted certain lands to the monks of that house, Ralph and Roger, his brothers, being witnesses. To Ralph s. his son and heir,

ROBERT, who assumed the surname of Montalt, from the chief place of his residence, an elevation in the co. of Flint, where he erected a castle. This Robert, being steward to the Earl of Chester, was also one of his barons. After the death of Ranulph de Gernons, Earl of Chester, the lands of that great earldom were, it appears, for some time in the king's hands, for in the 6th HENRY II., this Robert de Montalt was one of those, who accounted in the king's exchequer for the farm of them; and likewise for what was then expended, in building the Castle of Chester. This Robert was s. by his son and heir,

ROBERT DE MONTALT, Lord of Montalt, co. Flint, who was s. by his son,

ROGER DE MONTALT, who was deemed one of the greatest feudal barons in the realm, temp. HENRY III., and accompanied Prince Edward to the Holy Land. This feudal lord was constantly employed against the Welsh, and in the 44th HENRY III., he had command to repair to the borders, with the other Barons-Marchers, and there to reside for the defence of the country. He m. Cecilia, 2nd sister, and one of the co-heirs of Hugh de Albini, Earl of Arundel, and had issue,

JOHN.

Robert.

Leucha, m. to Philip de Orreby, the younger.

He d. in 1260, and was s. by his elder son,

JOHN DE MONTALT, who m. 1st, Elene, widow of Robert de Stockport; and 2ndly, Milisent, dau. of William de Cantilupe, but d. s. p., and was s. by his brother,

ROBERT DE MONTALT, who had two sons, Roger and Robert, and was s. at his decease, in 1278, by the elder,

ROGER DE MONTALT, who was one of the barons in rebellion against HENRY III., but returning to his allegiance, he subsequently defended Cambridge for the king. In the reign of EDWARD I., he was in the wars of Gascony, and was summoned to parliament as a Baron, 23 June, 1295. His lordship m. Julian, dau. of Roger de Clifford, but dying s. p. in 1297, the barony expired while his lands devolved, upon his brother,

ROBERT DE MONTALT. MONTFORT—EARLS OF LEICESTER.

Creation of King JOHN, anno 1206.

Lineage.

The first of this family that settled in England was

SIMON DE MONTFORT, surnamed the Bald, great grandson of Almaric, an illegitimate son of Robert,* King of France. Which Simon having m. Amicia, one of the two sisters and co-heirs of ROBERT DE BELLEMONT, or BEAUMONT, surnamed

* Thus,

ROBERT, King of France.

Almaric, who had the town of Montfort by gift of his royal father, and thence assumed that surname.

Simon de Montfort.

Almaric, Earl of Montfort, father of Simon, above-mentioned.

Fitz-Parnel, 4th and last Earl of Leicester of that family, obtained a grant of the EARLDOM OF LEICESTER from King JOHN, with a confirmation of the Stewardship of England, which he acquired by the possession of the honour of Hinkley, a portion of the immense fortune of his wife. But notwithstanding these marks of royal favour, the earl, within a brief period, revolted from the King of England to the King of France, for which act of treason the Earldom of Leicester was transferred to Ranulph, Earl of Chester, the honours of Hinkley seized upon by the crown, and De Montfort himself banished the realm. Soon after this (1209) we find him, under the title of Earl of Montfort, General of the crusade against the Albigenses, and in nine years subsequently a leader in the besieging army of Lewis, King of France, before the walls of Toulouse, where he was slain by a sling from the battlements. His lordship had two sons by the co-heiress of Beaumont, namely, Almaric and Simon, the younger of whom,

SIMON DE MONTFORT, is said to have first sought an asylum in England from the hostility of Blanche, Queen of France, and to have obtained a restitution of the EARLDOM OF LEICESTER, and stewardship of England, from King HENRY III., through the petition of his brother Almaric, then Earl of Montfort, and constable of France. Certain it is, however, that in 1232 (16th HENRY III.), he bore the title of Earl of Leicester, and had obtained a grant of all his mother's inheritance in England from his brother. In 1236, his lordship officiated as steward at the nuptials of HENRY III., and held the ower in which the king washed. And in two years afterwards he obtained the hand of the king's sister, Eleanor, widow of William Marshal, Earl of Pembroke; the marriage ceremony being performed by Walter, one of the royal chaplains at Westminster, "within a little chapel at the corner of the king's chamber." This marriage was, however, opposed by the princess's other brother, Richard, Earl of Cornwall (afterwards King of the Romans), and the kingdom at large, because the lady had made in her widowhood a vow of chastity, in the presence of Edmund, archbishop of Canterbury, and several of the nobility. And so strongly did public discontent manifest itself, that the earl was obliged to repair in person to Rome for the purpose of obtaining a dispensation, which with considerable difficulty he at length accomplished; and returning to England was most graciously received at court by the king, who appointed him his chief counsellor. Notwithstanding this, however, William de Abindon, a Dominican friar, and many other of the clergy, continued to exclaim against the marriage. The birth of Prince Edward, the king's eldest son, occurring soon after, the earl was chosen one of the sponsors of the royal infant, and as such officiated at the baptismal font. But before the close of the same year, he experienced the caprice of royal favour. The king observing him and his countess amongst the nobility who attended the queen at her purification, called him an excommunicated person, and prohibited his entering the church. "Which sudden unkindness," says Dugdale, "much dismaying him, he went away by water to Winchester House, which (the bishop being dead), the king had lent him. But there he could not be permitted to stay, the king in great wrath causing him to be put out of doors. Whereupon he returned sorrowing and weeping, yet could not appease his anger, the king plainly telling him, that he had abused his sister before marriage; and that, though he afterwards gave her to him for a wife, it was unwillingly, and to avoid scandal. Upbraiding him, that to ratify this unlawful marriage, he went to Rome, and there corrupted that court with large bribes and promises: adding that, having failed in payment of the money, he ought justly to be excommunicated." This storm ultimately drove his lordship from the kingdom, but only for a short period, as we find him returning in 1240, and having then an honourable reception from the king and all his court. Soon after this he made a journey to Jerusalem, having previously disposed of one of his woods to the knights hospitallers and canons of Leicester for somewhat less than a £1000 to defray part of the necessary expenses of the undertaking. Henceforward he appears for a series of years to have enjoyed the high favour of the king, and to have fully merited it by his eminent services. In the 32nd HENRY III., his lordship was appointed commander-in-chief of the forces in Gascony, and in the end of that year he sat in the great convention of parliament held at London; about which time he obtained from the king a grant of the custody of Kenilworth Castle, for Eleanor, his wife, to hold during her life; and returning into Gascony, he forced Guaston de Bearne, who had raised the standard of rebellion, to an honourable truce. The earl came back to England the next year, and was received at court with great honour. Soon after which, in fulfilment of a vow

he had made as penance for his marriage, he began a journey to the Holy Land, and in the 34th of the same reign returned safely, with his brother-in-law, Richard, Earl of Cornwall, and others. For the two following years he was actively and victoriously employed in Gascony, until the king hearkening to complaints against him for cruelty and oppression, which appear to have been unsustainable, removed him from the seneschalship of that country. Upon the subsequent insurrection of the barons against the king, the Earl of Leicester siding with the former, was appointed their general-in-chief, in which character he fought the great battle of Lewes, where the royal army sustained so signal a defeat, the king himself being made prisoner with Prince Edward, his son, his brother, Richard, King of the Romans, and many other personages of eminence, attached to his cause. This victory placing the government in the hands of the earl and his adherents; himself, the bishop of Chichester, the Earl of Gloucester, and a few others of less note, were nominated to discharge the executive functions. One of the earliest acts of the usurpation was to summon a parliament in the king's name, by writs dated 24 December, 49th HENRY III., directed to the bishops and abbots, and to such lay lords as could be relied upon; by which, signifying "the realm to be then in peace and quiet, and the desire of the king to establish the same to the honour of God, and benefit of his people;" they were summoned to meet at London, on the octaves of St. Hilary, there to sit in parliament, "to treat and give their advice." At the same time precepts were issued to the sheriffs, ordering them to return two knights for each county; to the cities and boroughs the like number of citizens and burghesses; and to the barons of the Cinque Ports, a certain number of their discreetest men for the same purpose. This is deemed the first precedent of a parliament, such as ever since has been established, and Sir William Dugdale thus speculates upon the causes of the revolution:—"If I may be so bold as to give my opinion, what reasons these potent rebels then had, thus to alter the former ancient usage, I shall take leave to conjecture, that it was, because they discerning what large retinues the nobility and other great men in those elder times had; as also the great number of the king's tenants in capite, then called barones minores, it might have proved dangerous to themselves to permit such a multitude to come together." The new government did not, however, endure long for a breach taking place between the two chiefs, Leicester and Gloucester, the arms of those powerful persons were directed against each other, and Prince Edward effecting his escape about the same time, the Earl of Gloucester reared the royal standard, and formed a junction with the forces of the prince. With this army, marching towards Kenilworth, they surprised young Simon Montfort, the earl's son, and made prisoners of no less than thirteen of his chief adherents, almost without resistance. Elated with this triumph they proceeded to Evesham, where the Earl of Leicester and his great force lay, expecting the arrival of his son, whose banners the royal army as a stratagem of war alone displayed, and thereby completely deceived this able commander. His lordship undismayed, however, drew out his army in order of battle, and fighting gallantly to the last, fell in the midst of his enemies, when victory declared for the royal cause. It is said, that when the earl discerned the superiority and disposition of the royalist forces he swore "by the arm of St. James (his usual exclamation), they have done discreetly; but this they learned from me: let us therefore commend our souls to God, because our bodies are theirs." Nevertheless, encouraging his men, he told them, "it was for the laws of the land, yea, the cause of God and justice, that they were to fight." The principal persons slain in the memorable engagement were, the Earl himself, Henry de Montfort, his eldest son, Hugh Le Despenser, then justice of England, Ralph Basset, of Drayton, and about one hundred and sixty knights, and many other gentlemen of his party. Amongst the prisoners, were Guy de Montfort, a younger son of the earl; John Fitz-John, Humphrey de Bohun, the younger; John de Vesel, Peter de Montfort, junr., and Nicholas de Segrave. The body of the Earl was removed from the field of battle by some of his friends upon an old ladder covered with a poor torn cloth, and thus conveyed to the abbey of Evesham, where, folded in a sheet, it was committed to the grave. But within a short time, some of the monks alleging that, the earl being an excommunicated person, and attainted of treason, his remains were unworthy christian burial, the body was taken up, and interred in a remote place, known but to few. Thus fell, in 1264, Simon de Montfort, Earl of Leicester; one of the most eminent soldiers and statesmen of the period in which he lived, and, under his attainder, the earldom became extinct. Of his widow, Eleanor, the king's sister, it is stated, that after the fatal battle of Evesham, she fled into France, and took up her abode in the nunnery of the order of preachers, at Montargis, which had been founded by her husband's sister. Of his issue,

HENRY, fell at Evesham, leading the van of the baronial army.

Simon, who for some time gallantly defended the castle of Kenilworth, was eventually made prisoner in the Isle of Ely, by Prince Edward; afterwards effecting his escape he fled into France, and in 1270, being at Viterbuim, in Italy, he joined with his brother, Guy, in the murder of their cousin, Henry, eldest son of Richard, King of the Romans, in the church of St. Silvester, as the prince assisted at mass. Guy, fought in the van of the baronial army at Evesham, and being made prisoner, was confined in Dover Castle, from which escaping, he fled into Tuscany, and there acquiring high reputation as a soldier, he obtained the dau. and heiress of the Earl Rufus for his wife. Meeting with Prince Henry, son of the King of the Romans, Guy, and his brother Simon, slew him in revenge, in the church of St. Silvester, at Viterbuim. For which barbarous act, being first excommunicated by Pope GREGORY X., he was thrown into prison; but released in 1283 by Pope MARTIN II., and placed at the head of an army, in which situation he displayed his characteristic prowess. He subsequently at the decease of his wife's father, returned to Tuscany, and inherited a very considerable fortune. CHARLES I., King of Naples, made him Count DE NOLA. He d. 1288, leaving by Margaret, his wife, dau. of Rodolph, Count de Languil-lara, an only dau., Anastasia de Monfort, Countess de Nola, m. to Raymond des Ursins.

Almaric, who, when conveying his sister from France to be m. to Llewelyn, Prince of Wales, was taken prisoner, with her at sea, and suffered a long imprisonment. He was at last, however, restored to liberty, and his posterity are said to have flourished in England under the name of Wells-burne.

Eleanor, b. about Michaelmas, 1252, at Kenilworth, who m. by proxy, early in 1275, and in person at Worcester, 13 October, 1278, Llewelyn ap Griffith, Prince of North Wales. In the household book of her mother for 1265, Eleanor is styled "Demoiselle," and in a letter to EDWARD I., dated 6 October, 1279, she designates herself as "Al principissa Wallie domina Snowdon." By Llewelyn ap Griffith, who was slain 10 December, 8th EDWARD I., 1282, she had issue two daus., and co-heirs, the younger of whom, the Princess Gwen-lilian, b. 19 June, 1281, a nun of Sempringham, 10th EDWARD II., d. there 7 June, 11th EDWARD III., 1337. The elder dau., the Princess Catherine, heiress of the monarchs of North Wales, was mother, by her husband, Philip ap Ivor, Lord of Cardigan, of the Lady Eleanor Goch, who m. Thomas, representative of the sovereigns of South Wales, ap Llewelyn ap Owen ap Meredith. This prince, who with his brother, Owen ap Llewelyn, lord of the half of the comot of Yscoed Ughirwen, and of one quarter of the comot of Gwynnionydd, was twenty-eight years old and upwards, 2 December, 1323, was probably dead 20 September, 1334, the date of a quo warranto against his brother Owen ap Llewelyn and his own son, Owen ap Thomas, apparently joint co-heirs of the lordship of Yscoed Ughirwen, and of half of the comot of Gwynnionydd. By Thomas ap Llewelyn, the Lady Eleanor Goch had, with an only son, Owen ap Thomas, already named, who d. s. p., an only dau., heiress of her brother, viz., the Lady Eleanor. She m. Griffith Vychan ap Griffith, Lord of Glyndwrwy, representative of the sovereigns of South Wales, father by her of two sons: 1 Owen ap Griffith Vychan, Lord of Glyndwrwy, the renowned "Owen Glyndwr," in whom united the representation of the three dynasties of North Wales, South Wales, and Powys. 2 Tudyr ap Griffith Vychan, Lord of Gwyddelwern in Edernion, at. twenty-three, 3 September, 10th RICHARD II., and killed 11 March, 1405, whose senior co-heir is Edward, 1st Lord Mostyn.

MONTFORT—BARONS MONTFORT.

By Writ of Summons, dated 23 June, 1295.

Lineage.

HUGH DE MONTFORT, commonly called Hugh with a Beard, son of Thurstan de Bastenburgh, accompanied WILLIAM THE CONQUEROR into England, and aided that prince's triumph at Hastings, for which eminent service he obtained divers fair lordships, and at the time of the General Survey was possessor of twenty-eight in Kent, with a large portion of Romney Marsh; sixteen in Essex; fifty-one in Suffolk; and nineteen in Norfolk. This gallant soldier eventually lost his life in a duel, with Walcheline de Ferrers, and was s. by his son,

HUGH DE MONTFORT, who had issue by his 1st wife, two sons, viz.,

Robert, general of the army to King WILLIAM RUFUS, but favouring the title of Robert Curthose, in opposition to HENRY I., he was impeached for his disloyalty, whereupon, being conscious of guilt, he got permission to go to Jerusalem, and left all his possessions to the king; he d. s. p. Hugh, d. in a pilgrimage, also s. p.

Hugh de Montfort had, besides these sons, a dau. by his 2nd wife, who m. Gilbert de Gant, and had issue, HUGH, living 1124, who, on account of his mother being so great an heiress, assumed the name of Montfort; and Ada, m. to Simon, Earl of Huntingdon; which

HUGH DE MONTFORT (otherwise Gant), inherited all the possessions of his grandfather, and was called Hugh the fourth. This Hugh, having m. Adeline, dau. of Robert, Earl of Mellent, joined with Waleran, her brother, and all those who endeavoured to advance William, son of Robert Curthose, against King HENRY I., in 1124, and entering Normandy for that purpose, he was made prisoner, with the said Waleran, and confined for the fourteen years ensuing. The time of his death is not ascertained, but he left issue,

ROBERT.

Thurstan.

Adeline, m. to William de Britolio.

Ada, m. to Richard, son of the Earl of Gloucester.

He was s. by his elder son,

ROBERT DE MONTFORT. This feudal lord having in 1163, charged Henry de Essex, the King's Standard Bearer, with cowardice, in fleeing from his colours, vanquished him in a subsequent trial by battle. He does not appear to have had any issue, for he was s. at his decease by his brother,

THURSTAN DE MONTFORT, who, being enfeoffed of divers fair lordships, by Henry de Newburgh, the 1st Earl of Warwick, erected a stony castle, called Beldesert, at the chief seat of his family in Warwickshire, which it continued for several subsequent ages. To this Thurstan, who d. before 1190, s. his son,

HENRY DE MONTFORT, who in the 2nd RICHARD I., regained the manor of Wellesbourne, co. Warwick, commonly called Wellesbourne-Montfort, whereof he had been dispossessed by King HENRY II. He was s. by

THURSTAN DE MONTFORT, who had great law suits in King JOHN's time, with Eustace de Stutevill, and Nicholas de Stutevill, regarding a portion of the lordship of Cotingham, co. York. He d. in 1216, and was s. by his son,

PETER DE MONTFORT. This feudal lord for several years in the reign of King HENRY III., took an active part in the wars of that monarch, but at length on the breaking out of the barons' insurrection, he became one of the most zealous amongst those turbulent lords, and after the battle of Lewes, was of the nine nominated to rule the kingdom, in which station he enjoyed and exercised more than regal power, but of short duration, for he fell at the subsequent conflict of Evesham, so disastrous to the baronial cause. Peter de Montfort m. Alice, dau. of Henry de Aldithley, a great Staffordshire baron, and had issue,

PETER, his successor.

William, who by gift of his father had the manor of Uppingham, co. Rutland.

Robert, who had lands also in the co. Rutland.

The eldest son,

PETER DE MONTFORT, participated in his father's treasons, and was taken prisoner at the battle of Evesham, but being allowed the benefit of the dictum of Kenilworth, he was restored to his paternal inheritance—and afterwards enjoyed the favour of King EDWARD I., in whose Welsh wars he took a very active part. He d. in 1287, leaving a dau. Elizabeth (who m. 1st, William, son and heir of Simon de Monticute, and 2ndly, Sir Thomas de Furnivall), and a son and heir,

JOHN DE MONTFORT, who in the 22nd EDWARD I., being in the wars of Gascony, was the next year summoned to parliament as a baron. His lordship m. Alice, dau. of William de Plaunch, and had issue,

JOHN,

PETER, } successively barons.

Elizabeth, m. to Sir Baldwin de Freville, Knt.

Maud, m. to Bartholomew de Sudeley.

He d. in 1296, and was s. by his elder son,

JOHN DE MONTFORT, 2nd baron, summoned to parliament 28 July, 1313, in which year he received pardon for his participation in the murder of Piers de Gaveston—and afterwards marching with the English army into Scotland, was killed at the battle of Stryvelin, when, leaving no issue, he was s. by his brother,

PETER DE MONTFORT, 3rd baron, summoned to parliament from 22 January, 1336, to 10 March, 1349. This nobleman, prior to the decease of his brother, was in priest's orders, but upon his inheriting the honours of his family the sacred function was dispensed with. In the 15th EDWARD II, he was joined in commission with William de Beauchamp, and Roger de Alton-bury, in the custody of the city of Worcester, and five years afterwards was constituted governor of Warwick Castle, then vested in the crown, by reason of the minority of the Earl of Warwick. His lordship m. Margaret, dau. of the Lord Furnival, and had a son,

GUY, who m. Margaret, one of the daus. of Thomas de Beauchamp, Earl of Warwick, but d. v. p., s. p.

Peter, Lord Montfort, d. in 1367, when the barony fell into ABEYANCE between his sisters (re/er to children of John, 1st lord), as it still continues amongst their representatives.

Arms—Bendy of ten, or and az.

NOTE.—Peter, last Lord Montfort, had by a concubine, called Lora de Ullenhale, dau. of one Richard Astley, of Ullenhale, co. Warwick, a son,

SIR JOHN MONTFORT, Knt., whose posterity flourished in the male line for several subsequent ages, at Coleshill, co. Warwick, until the attainder of Sir Simon Montfort, Knt., temp. HENRY VII., whose descendants continued at Beacote, co. Stafford.

MONTGOMERY—BARON MONTGOMERY.

By Writ of Summons, dated 25 February, 1342.

Lineage.

In the 20th EDWARD III.,

JOHN DE MONTGOMERY was in the great expedition then made into France, and the next year was made captain of Calais, as also admiral of the king's whole fleet, from the mouth of the Thames, westwards. He had summons to parliament as a Baron, 25 February, 1342, but never afterwards, and the dignity is presumed to have become EXTINCT, at his lordship's decease.

MONTGOMERY—EARL OF MOUNT ALEXANDER.

Viscounty, by Letters Patent, dated 3 May, 1622.
Earldom, by Letters Patent, dated 18 July, 1661.

Lineage.

ADAM MONTGOMERY, 4th Laird of Braidstane (great-grandson of Robert Montgomery, brother of Alexander, 2nd Lord Montgomerie, father of the 1st Earl of Eglinton), m. the eldest dau. of Colquhoun of Lass; and d. about 1550, leaving two sons, namely,

ADAM, his heir.

Robert, ancestor of the Montgomerys of Grey Abbey, co. Down, now represented by Hugh Montgomery, Esq. of that place. (See BURKE's Landed Gentry.)

The elder son,

ADAM MONTGOMERY, Esq., 5th Laird of Braidstane, m. the dau. of John Montgomery, of Haselheads, and had four sons: the 2nd, George, was bishop of Meath, and left an only dau. and heir, Jane, wife of Nicholas St. Lawrence, Earl of Howth. The eldest,

SIR HUGH MONTGOMERY, Knt., 6th Laird of Braidstane, settled in Ireland, and was raised to the peerage of that kingdom, 3 May, 1622, as VISCOUNT MONTGOMERY, of the Great Ards, co. Down. His lordship m. 1st, in 1587, Elizabeth, 2nd dau. of John Shaw, Laird of Greenock, and 2ndly, Sarah, dau. of William, Lord Herries, and widow of John, 1st Earl of Wigtoun; by the latter he had no issue; but by the former he was father of three sons, and two daus., viz.,

HUGH, his heir.

JAMEA, (Sir, Knt.) of Rosemount, will dated 6 June, 1651; proved 16 July, 1661; who left by Katharine, his wife, dau. of Sir William Stewart, Knt., a son William Montgomery, Esq., of Rosemount, father of James Montgomery, Esq., of Rosemount, who m. Elizabeth, dau. of Archibald Edmonstone, of Duntreath, and was father of WILLIAM MONTGOMERY, Esq., of Rosemount, who m. Isabella, 3rd dau. of John Campbell, of Mamore. 2nd son of Archibald, Duke of Argyll, and d. 1743, leaving issue.

MONTHERMER—BARON MONTHERMER, EARL OF GLOUCESTER AND HERTFORD.

Earldom, jure uxoris, by Writ of Summons, dated 6 Feb., 1299.
Barony, by Writ of Summons, dated 4 March, 1309.

Lineage.

RALPH DE MONTHERMER, "a plain Esquire," having m. the Lady JOANE PLANTAGENET (commonly called Joane of Acres), dau. of King EDWARD I., and widow of Gilbert, Earl of Clare, Gloucester, and Hertford, had the title of EARL OF GLOUCESTER AND HERTFORD, in her right, and was summoned to parliament as "Comiti Gloucester et Hertf." from 6 February, 1299, to 3 November, 1306. In the 26th EDWARD I., his lordship was in the expedition then made into Scotland, and behaved so valiantly, that the king rendered to him and his wife, the said Joane, the castle and honour of Tenebrugge with other lands in Kent, Surrey, and Sussex; as also the Isle of Portland, and divers other estates belonging to the said Joane, which had being seized by the crown in consequence of her marriage without license with the said Ralph; and the king became eventually much attached to his son-in-law, to whom he had been reconciled through the intercession of Anthony Beke, the celebrated bishop of Durham. In the 31st, 32nd, and 34th of his father-in-law, the earl was again in Scotland, and in the contest with BRUCE, King EDWARD conferred upon him the whole of Anandale, with the title of Earl of Atholl, the Scottish nobleman who held that dignity, having espoused the fortunes of BRUCE. But it was not long after this that Joane of Acres departed this life (viz., 1st EDWARD II.), and he never, subsequently, obtained the title of Earl of Gloucester and Hertford although he lived for several years; in a grant of considerable landed property made to him and his sons in two years afterwards, he is styled Ralph de Monthermer only. Nor is he otherwise denominated, in the 5th EDWARD II., at which time, for recompence of his service in Scotland the king gave him 300 marks, part of the 600 marks which he was to have paid for the wardship of John ap Adam, a great man of that age. Nor in two years afterwards, when again in the wars of Scotland, he was made prisoner at Bannockburn, but he then found favour from his former familiarity with the King of Scotland, at the court of England, and obtained his freedom without paying ransom. He was, however, summoned to parliament as a Baron from 4 March, 1309, to 30 October, 1321. His lordship m. 2ndly, Isabel, widow of John de Hastings, and sister and co-heir of Aymer de Valence, Earl of Pembroke, by whom he had no issue. But by his 1st wife, the Princess Joane, he had two sons, viz.,

THOMAS, his heir.

EDWARD, who was summoned to parliament as a Baron, 23 April, 1337, 11th EDWARD III., but never afterwards, and nothing further is known of him or his descendants.

Ralph, Lord Monthermer, d. 19th EDWARD II., and was s. by his son,

THOMAS, LORD MONTHERMER, who was constantly employed in the military service of the crown, his name does not therefore occur in the enrolment of the summonses to parliament. He was killed in a sea fight with the French in 1340, leaving by Margaret, his wife, an only dau. and heiress,

MARGARET DE MONTHERMER, who m. Sir John de Montacute, 2nd son of William, 1st Earl of Salisbury, and conveyed the Barony of Monthermer to the family of Montacute. Her eldest son, JOHN, Baron Montacute and Monthermer, s. as 3rd Earl of Salisbury (see MONTACUTE, Earl of Salisbury).

The Barony of Monthermer is now in ABEYANCE between the MARQUESS OF HASTINGS (as representing Katherine, Countess of Huntingdon, elder dau. and co-heir of Henry, Baron Montacute), and WILLIAM LOWNDES, Esq., of Chesham, Bucks, and WILLIAM-SKELBY LOWNDES, Esq., of Whaddon, in the same co., as representing, Winifred, Lady Barrington, the other dau. and co-heir of the said Henry, Baron Montacute.

MONYPENNY—LORD MONYPENNY.

Lineage.

The family of MONYPENNY is of great antiquity in North Britain, and has at various periods produced many eminent persons. Its present representative is David Monypenny of Pitmilny, one of the lords of Session; and from the Pitmilny line also descend the MONYPENNYS of Kent.

SIR WILLIAM MONYPENNY, son of Sir William Monypenny, Knt., by Margaret, his wife, dau. of Philip Arbutnott, of Arbutnott, acquired the lands of Conquersall, in France, and a considerable portion of the Earl of Ormond's forfeited estates in Scotland. This distinguished personage, who was next in remainder to his kin-man, William Monypenny, of Pitmilny, came as ambassador from France to England in 1471, and acting a conspicuous part in the public transactions of his time, was created a peer of Scotland by JAMES II. His son, ALEXANDER MONYPENNY, 2nd Lord Monypenny, exchanged, in 1495, the Barony of Earlsball, in Fifeshire, with Sir Edward Bruce, for his lands called Escariot, in France. His lordship d. s. p. m., and with him the peerage EXPIRED.

Lineage.

It appears from the records of this family, collected in the reign of King CHARLES II., and printed at the charge of Henry, Earl of Peterborough, that

SIR OSBERT LE MORDAUNT, a Norman knight, was possessed of Radwell, in Bedfordshire, by the gift of his brother, who derived it from the CONQUEROR, in recompense of his own and his father's good services. Sir Osbert's grandson,

EUSTACH LE MORDAUNT, m. Alice, eldest dau. and co-heir of Sir William de Alneto, modernly called Dauney, and acquired by her the lordship of Turvey, in Bedfordshire. He was s. by his son,

WILLIAM MORDAUNT, who became Lord of Turvey, Radwell, Athull, and other manors. He was s. by his son,

WILLIAM MORDAUNT. This feudal lord had license (1297) to inclose a park at Turvey. He m. Rose, dau. of Sir Ralph Wake, and was s. by his eldest son,

ROBERT MORDAUNT, who was knight of the shire for the co. Bedford, in the parliament held at Westminster in the 15th EDWARD III. From this gentleman we pass to his descendant,

WILLIAM MORDAUNT, Esq., of Turvey, temp. EDWARD IV., who m. Margaret, dau. of John Peeke, Esq., of Cople, and had, with other issue,

JOHN, his heir.

William, ancestor of the Mordaunts of Warwickshire, now represented by Sir Charles Mordaunt, Bart.

Joan, m. to Giles Strangways, Esq., of Melbury.

Elizabeth, m. to Sir Whiston Browne, Knt.

The elder son,

SIR JOHN MORDAUNT, Knt., of Turvey, co. Bedford, was one of the royal commanders at the battle of Stoke, 16 June, 1484. Being likewise learned in the law, he was constituted king's serjeant in the 11th HENRY VII., justice of Chester in four years after, and subsequently chancellor of the duchy of Lancaster, and was made one of the knights of the sword at the creation of Henry, Prince of Wales, 18 February, 1502-3. Sir John d. in the 21st year of HENRY VII., and was s. by his eldest son,

WILLIAM MORDAUNT, Esq., who d. s. p., when the estates devolved upon his brother,

SIR JOHN MORDAUNT, who was sheriff of Bedford and Bucks in the 1st year of HENRY VIII., and in the 5th of the same reign was one of the commissioners, appointed by act of parliament, for assessing and collecting the poll-tax. He was knighted before, 4 June 1520, when he was one of those appointed to attend the queen at the interview with FRANCIS I. of France, and in May, 1522, he waited upon the king at Canterbury, at his second meeting in England with the Emperor

CHARLES V. In 1530 he was appointed, with others, to inquire into the landed possessions of Cardinal Wolsey, and he was summoned to parliament, as a Baron, from 4 May, 1532, to 5 November, 1558. In the year 1551, a great dearth of provisions being in the nation, his lordship was the first in commission, with other persons of rank, in the county of Bedford, to prevent the enhancing the prices of corn, &c., and to punish offenders therein, as also to supply the said county. He m. Elizabeth, dau. and co-heir of Sir Henry Vere, Knt., of Drayton and Adington, co. Northampton, and had issue,

JOHN, his successor.

William, m. Agnes, dau. and heir of Charles Booth, Esq.

George, of Oakley, co. Bedford, m. Cecilia, dau. and co-heir of John Harding, Esq., of Harding, in Bedfordshire, and was father of Edmund Mordaunt, Esq., of Thundersley, in Essex.

Elizabeth, m. to Silvester Danvers, Esq., of Dauntsey, Wilts. Margaret, m. to Edward Fettiplace, Esq., of Beasels Leigh, co. Berks.

Winifrid, m. to John Chegney, of Chesham-Boys.

Editha, m. to John Elmes, Esq., of Huntingdonshire.

Dorothy, m. to Thomas More, Esq., of Haddon, Oxfordshire.

His lordship d. in 1562, and was s. by his eldest son,

JOHN MORDAUNT, 2nd baron, summoned to parliament from 11 January, 1563, to 8 May, 1572. This nobleman, in the lifetime of his father, was made one of the knights of the Bath at the coronation of Queen ANNE BOLEYN, 1st June, 1553, and was sheriff for Essex and Hertfordshire, in 1540. At the demise of EDWARD VI., he was one of the first in arms on behalf of Queen MARY: whereupon he was sworn of the privy council; and in her Majesty's reign served in four parliaments for Bedfordshire. His lordship m. 1st, Ellen, cousin and heir of Sir Richard Fitz-Lewes, of West-Thorndon, in Essex, by whom he had issue,

LEWIS, his successor.

Elizabeth, m. to George Monnoux, Esq., of Walthamstow.

Anne, m. to Clement Tanfield, Esq., of Eberton.

Margaret, m. to William Acklam, Esq., of Moreby, in Yorkshire.

Ursula, m. to Edward, son of Sir Nicholas Fairfax, of Gilling Castle, co. York.

Lord Mordaunt m. 2ndly, Joan, dau. of Robert Wilford, Esq., of Kent, but had no issue by that lady. He d. in 1572, and was s. by his son,

LEWIS MORDAUNT, 3rd baron, summoned to parliament from 8 February, 1576, to 24 October, 1597. This nobleman received the honour of knighthood from Queen ELIZABETH, in 1567, and was one of the peers who sat in judgment upon Thomas Duke of Norfolk, and upon Queen MARY, of Scotland. His lordship m. Elizabeth, dau. of Sir Arthur Darcy, Knt., 2nd son of Thomas, Lord Darcy, and had issue,

HENRY, his successor.

Mary, m. to Thomas Mansel, Esq., eldest son of Sir Edward Mansel, Knt.

Katherine, m. to John Heveningham, Esq., eldest son of Sir Arthur Heveningham, Knt.

Elizabeth.

He d. 16 June, 1601, and was s. by his son,

HENRY MORDAUNT, 4th baron, summoned to parliament from 27 October, 1601, to 5 November, 1615. This nobleman, under suspicion of being concerned in the gunpowder-plot, was committed to the Tower, and fined by the star-chamber before he obtained his liberty. He m. Margaret, dau. of Henry, Lord Compton, by whom he had issue,

JOHN, his successor.

Henry.

Francis, m. Frances, dau. of Sir Edward Gostwick, Bart.

Elizabeth, m. to Sir Thomas Nevil, K.B.

His lordship d. in 1608, and was s. by his son,

JOHN MORDAUNT, 5th baron, summoned to parliament from 30 January, 1620, to 17 May, 1625. This nobleman, was advanced to the dignity of EARL OF PETERBOROUGH, by letters patent, dated 9 March, 1628. He m. Elizabeth, only dau. and heir of William Howard, Lord Effingham, son and heir of Charles, Earl of Nottingham, by whom he had (with Elizabeth, who m. Thomas, son and heir of Edward, Lord Howard, of Escrick), two sons, viz.,

HENRY, his successor.

JOHN; this gentleman obtained great fame by his zeal in the cause of King CHARLES II., and stood a trial during the usurpation for his exertions in behalf of the exiled monarch, but upon which he was acquitted, by the connivance chiefly, as stated by Lord Clarendon, of the celebrated John Lisle, the presiding judge. The other judges were equally divided as to the guilt or innocence of Mr. Mordaunt, and the pre-dent gave the casting vote in his favour. He subsequently made several daring but fruitless attempts to restore the king, and for all those faithful services was, eventually, elevated to the peerage, 10 July, 1659, as BARON MORDAUNT, of Rygate, co. Surrey, and Viscount MORDAUNT, of Avalon, in Somersetshire. His lordship and Sir John Grenville, were the bearers of the letters which the king, prior to his restoration, addressed to Monk, to parliament, and to the corporation of London. His lordship, after the Restoration, was constituted constable of Windsor Castle, and appointed lord lieutenant, and custos rotulorum of co. Surrey. He m. Elizabeth, dau. and sole heiress of Thomas Carey, 2nd son of Robert, Earl of Monmouth, by whom he had five sons and three daus.,

1 CHARLES, his successor.

2 Harry, M.P., lieutenant-general in the army, and treasurer of the ordnance, to which last office he was appointed in 1699. General Mordaunt m. 1st, Margaret, dau. of Sir Thomas Spencer, of Yarnton, co. Oxford, Bart, by whom he had, with other children,

John (Sir), K.B., a general officer in the army.

Eliza-Lucy, m. to Sir Wilfrid Lawson, Bart., of Isell, in Cumberland.

General Mordaunt m. 2ndly, Penelope, dau. and heir of William Tipping, Esq., by whom he had,

Penelope, m. to Sir Monnoux Cope, Bart, of Hanwell.

3 Lewis, a brigadier-general in the army, who d. 2 February, 1712-13, leaving issue by two wives. One of his daus. Anne-Maria, m. the Right Hon. Stephen Poyntz, of Midgham, co. Berks, and another, Sophia, m. Sir Roger Martin, Bart.

4 Osmond, slain at the battle of the Boyne.

5 George, in holy orders. This gentleman m. thrice, and left by his 2nd wife, Elizabeth, dau. of Sir John D'Oyly, Bart., a dau.,

Anna-Maria (co-heiress), m. to Jonathan Shipley, D.D., bishop of St. Asaph, ancestor by her of the Shipley-Conways, of Bodrhyddan, co. Flint, and of the Shipleys of Twyford House, Hants.

and by his 3rd wife, Elizabeth, dau. of Colonel Collyer, he was father of two daus.,

Mary, m. to Valentine Morris, Esq., of Piercefield, Monmouthshire.

Elizabeth, m. to Sir William Milner, Bart.

1 Charlotte, m. to Benjamin Albin, Esq.

2 Sophia, m. to James Hamilton, Esq., of Bangor, in Ireland.

3 Anne, m. to James Hamilton, Esq., of Tollymore, in Ireland.

His lordship d. 5 June, 1675, and was s. by his eldest son,

CHARLES MORDAUNT, 2nd viscount, who was created EARL OF MONMOUTH, 9 April, 1689, and s. to the EARLDOM OF PETERBOROUGH, at the decease of his uncle, in 1697.

The Earl of Peterborough was general of ordnance, and colonel of a regiment of foot, in the army raised in 1642, by order of parliament, under the command of Robert, Earl of Essex. His lordship d. in the same year, and was s. by his elder son,

HENRY MORDAUNT, 2nd Earl of Peterborough. This nobleman was distinguished during the civil wars by his zeal in the royal cause. He raised a regiment at his own expense, was wounded at the battle of Newbury, and often imprisoned for his loyal exertions. In 1649, he was in the rising with the Earl of Holland to release the king from his confinement; and on their defeat, though Holland was taken and beheaded, Peterborough, with his brother, escaped, but they were voted traitors to the commonwealth and their estates sequestered. His lordship was, after the Restoration, of the privy council to King CHARLES II., and entrusted with several honourable embassies. At the coronation of King JAMES II., he carried the sceptre with the cross, and was elected in the same year a knight of the Garter. After the accession of WILLIAM and MARY, the commons resolved (26 October, 1689,) that the Earl of Peterborough, and the Earl of Salisbury, should be impeached for high treason, for departing from their allegiance, and being reconciled to the church of Rome; but the impeachment was dropped. His lordship m. Penelope, dau. of Barnabas, Earl of Thomond, in Ireland, by whom he had issue,

Elizabeth, d. unm.

MARY, who became sole heiress, m. 1st, Henry, Duke of Norfolk, from whom she was divorced in 1700, and then m. Sir John Germain, Bart., but had issue by neither. Her ladyship inherited the Barony of Mordaunt, of Turvey, at the decease of her father, but the dignity again attached to the Earldom of Peterborough, at her own decease, in 1705. Her ladyship bequeathed her whole estate to her 2nd husband.

The earl d. in 1697, when the Barony of Mordaunt, of Turvey, devolved upon his only surviving dau., as stated above, and the Earldom of Peterborough passed to his nephew (revert to issue of the 1st earl),

CHARLES MORDAUNT, 1st Earl of Monmouth, as 3rd Earl of Peterborough. This nobleman, who had distinguished himself as a military character prior to the Revolution, was, upon the accession of WILLIAM and MARY, sworn of the privy council, and made one of the lords of the bedchamber, and in order to attend at their coronation as an earl, was raised to the Earldom of Monmouth, having, the day before, been constituted first lord commissioner of the Treasury. In 1692, his lordship made the campaign of Flanders, under King WILLIAM; and soon after the accession of Queen ANNE he was declared general and commander-in-chief of the forces sent to Spain; in which command he acquired great military fame, by the capture of Montjoui—by driving the Duke of Anjou, and the French army, consisting of 25,000 men, out of Spain, with a force not exceeding 10,000, and by acquiring possession of Catalonia, of the kingdoms of Valencia, Arragon, Majorca, &c. His lordship was, however, recalled from the scene of those gallant achievements, and his conduct subsequently examined by parliament; when a vote passed the House of Lords, 12 January, 1710-11, that during the time he had the command in Spain "he performed many great and eminent services;" and his lordship received the thanks of the house, through the lord chancellor. In 1710, and 1711, he was employed in embassy to the court of Turin, and other Italian states, on special missions; and in 1713, he was installed knight of the Garter. In the reign of King GEORGE I., his lordship was constituted general of all the marine forces in Great Britain. The earl m. 1st, Carey, dau. of Sir Alexander Fraser, of Dotes, N.B., and had issue,

John, Lord Mordaunt, a military officer, colonel of the grenadier guards, at the celebrated battle of Blenheim, 13 August, 1704, wherein he lost one of his arms. His lordship m. Lady Frances Powlett, dau. of Charles, Duke of Bolton, and dying of the small-pox, 6 April, 1710, left two sons,

CHARLES, who s. his grandfather in the honours of the family.

John, a lieutenant-colonel in the army, M.P., m. 1st, in 1735, Mary, sister of Seroop, Viscount How, and widow of Thomas, Earl of Pembroke. He m. 2ndly, Elizabeth, dau. of Samuel Hamilton, Esq., but d. s. p. in 1767.

Henry, a naval officer of high character, and a M.P., d. unm. (of the small-pox) 27 February, 1709-10.

Henrietta, m. to Alexander Gordon, 2nd Duke of Gordon, from whom lineally descended, ALEXANDER, 4th Duke of Gordon, who, upon the decease of Lady Mary-Anastasia-Grace Mordaunt, dau. of Charles, 4th Earl of Peterborough, in 1819, inherited the Barony of Mordaunt, of Turvey.

His lordship m. 2ndly, in 1735, Anastasia Robinson, the celebrated public singer, of whom Dr. Burney gives an interesting account in his History of Music. The earl d. on his passage to Lisbon, 25 October, in the same year. At the decease of his lordship's cousin, Mary, Baroness Mordaunt, of Turvey (revert to issue of 2nd Earl of Peterborough,) he inherited that ancient dignity of the family. He was s. in all his honours by his grandson,

CHARLES MORDAUNT, 4th Earl of Peterborough, and 2nd Earl of Monmouth. His lordship m. 1st, Mary, dau. of John Cox, Esq., of London, and had issue,

FRANCES, who m. the Rev. Samuel Bulkeley, D.D., of Hatfield, in Hertfordshire, and d. s. p. 1793.

MARY-ANASTASIA-GRACE, who s. eventually to the Barony of Mordaunt, of Turvey.

The earl m. 2ndly, Robiniana, dau. of Colonel Brown, and dying in 1779, was s. by his only surviving son, by that lady,

CHARLES-HENRY MORDAUNT, 5th Earl of Peterborough, and 3rd Earl of Monmouth, b. in 1768, who d. unm. in 1814, when the Earldom of Peterborough, and the Earldom of Monmouth, with the Viscounty of Mordaunt, and Barony of Mordaunt, of Ryegate, became EXTINCT, while the Barony of Mordaunt, of Turvey, devolved upon his lordship's half-sister, Lady MARY-ANASTASIA-GRACE MORDAUNT, as Baroness Mordaunt, and at her ladyship's decease, unm., in 1819, it passed to ALEXANDER GORDON, 4th DUKE OF GORDON, as heir-general of Charles, 3rd Earl of Peterborough. He d. 17 June, 1827, and was s. by his son, GEORGE GORDON, 5th Duke of Gordon, and 13th Lord Mordaunt, who d. s. p. 28 May, 1836, when the Barony of Mordaunt fell into abeyance amongst his sisters or their representatives. Those ladies, the last Duke of Gordon's sisters, were,

i. Charlotte, m. in September, 1789, Charles, 4th Duke of Richmond, and d. 5 May, 1842. Her grandson, Charles Gordon-Lennox, Duke of Richmond, is senior co-heir of the Barony of Mordaunt, of Turvey.

ii. Madeline, m. 1st, to Sir Robert Sinclair, Bart., and 2ndly, to Charles-Fyfe Palmer, Esq., of Luckley Park, Berks, who d. in January, 1843. Lady Madeline d. in June, 1847. Her grandson, Sir Robert-Charles Sinclair, Bart., is co-heir of the Barony of Mordaunt.

iii. Susan, m. to William, Duke of Manchester, and d. 26 August, 1828. Her grandson, William-Drogo, Duke of Manchester, is a co-heir of the Barony of Mordaunt.

iv. Louisa, m. to Charles, 2nd Marquess Cornwallis, and d. 5 December, 1850. The co-heirs of Louisa, Marchioness Cornwallis, co-heirs also of the Barony of Mordaunt, are, 1 the two daus. of Richard Cornwallis, late Lord Braybrooke; 2 Lady Louisa Cornwallis; 3 William-Cornwallis, Lord Elliot; 4 Lady Mary Ross; and 5 Lady Elizabeth Cornwallis.

v. Georgiana, m. to John, 6th Duke of Bedford, and d. 23 February, 1853; her eldest son, Lord Wriothesley Russell, is one of the co-heirs of the Barony of Mordaunt.

MORETON, or (more correctly,) DE BURGO, EARLS OF CORNWALL.

Creation of WILLIAM THE CONQUEROR, in 1068.

Lineage.

HARLOWEN DE BURGO, founder of the abbey of Greteim, in Normandy, m. Ariotta, the mother of the CONQUEROR, and dying before his father, John, Earl of Comyn, left two sons,

ROBERT, Earl of Moreton, in Normandy.
Odo, bishop of Bayeux.

who both accompanied their illustrious brother in his expedition against England, and were aggrandized after his triumph. Odo, being created Earl of Kent, and

ROBERT DE MORETON, Earl of Cornwall, with a grant of 793 manors. In the time of WILLIAM RUFUS, this nobleman joining his brother, the Earl of Kent, raised the standard of rebellion in favour of Robert Curthose, and held the castle of Pevensey for that prince. He delivered it up, however, upon its being invested by the king, and made his peace. His lordship m. Maud, dau. of Roger de Montgomery, Earl of Shrewsbury, and had issue, WILLIAM, his successor, and three daus., whose christian names are unknown; the eldest m. Andrew de Vitrei; the 2nd m. Guy de Val, and the youngest m. the Earl of Thoulouse. The time of the Earl of Cornwall's death has not been ascertained, "but if he lived," says Dugdale, "after King WILLIAM RUFUS so fatally lost his life by the glance of an arrow in New Forest, from the bow of Walter Tirel, then was it unto him, that this strange apparition happened, which I shall here speak of; otherwise, it must be to his son and successor, Earl William, the story whereof is as followeth. In the very hour that the king received the fatal stroke, the Earl of Cornwall being hunting in a wood, at a distance from the place, and left alone by his attendants, was accidentally met by a very great black goat, bearing the king all black and naked, and wounded through the midst of his breast. And adjuring the goat by the Holy Trinity to tell what that was he so carried; he answered, I am carrying you king to judgment, yea, that tyrant, WILLIAM RUFUS, for I am an evil spirit, and the revenger of his malice which he bore to the church of God; and it was I that did cause this his slaughter: the protomartyr of England, St. Alban, commanding me so to do; who complained to God of him for his grievous oppressions in the Isle of Britain, which he first hallowed. All which the earl soon after related to his followers." His lordship was s. by his son,

WILLIAM DE MORETON, 2nd Earl of Cornwall, in England, and Earl of Moreton, in Normandy. This nobleman being from childhood of an arrogant and malevolent disposition, envied the glory of King HENRY I.; and not contented with the great honours he had derived from his father, demanded the Earldom of Kent, which had been borne by his uncle Odo; giving out secretly, that he would not put on his robe, unless the inheritance, which he challenged by descent from his uncle, might be restored to him. In this demand the king refusing to acquiesce, the earl fled to Normandy, and with Robert de Belesme reared the standard of revolt in the Duchy, which caused HENRY to seize upon his possessions in England, to raze his castles to the ground, and to banish him the kingdom. He subsequently led the van at the battle of Tenerchebray, and, after displaying great personal valour, fell into the hands of his opponents, and was sent prisoner to England.

where he was treated with great cruelty, the king causing his eyes to be put out, and detaining him in captivity for life. His honours became, of course, FORFEITED. The period of his decease has not been recorded; nor does Dugdale mention either his wife or issue—but in Archdale's edition of Lodge's Peerage of Ireland (vol. I., in the article regarding the house of Clanricarde), it is stated that the unfortunate earl left two sons, viz.,

ADELM, from whom the noble house of Clanricarde derives.

MORLEY—BARONS MORLEY.

By Writ of Summons, dated 29 December, 1299.

Lineage.

In the 25th EDWARD I., WILLIAM DE MORLEY was in the expeditions made in that and the next year into Scotland, and had summons to parliament as a Baron, from 29 December, 1299, to 3 November, 1306. His lordship was s. by his son,

ROBERT DE MORLEY, 2nd baron, summoned to parliament, from 20 November, 1317, to 15 February, 1357. This nobleman was one of the eminent warriors, of the martial times of King EDWARD III. In the 13th of that monarch's reign, after previously distinguishing himself in the wars of Scotland, he was constituted admiral of the king's whole fleet, from the mouth of the Thames northwards, and the next year achieved the greatest naval victory, up to that period, ever won over the French, near Sluice, in Flanders; subsequently sailing to Normandy, he burnt fourscore ships of the Normans, with three of their sea-port towns, and two villages. The next year (16th EDWARD III.), being still admiral, he was in the great expedition then made into France, and in four years afterwards, his banner waved amongst the victorious upon the plains of Cressy. His lordship continued admiral several years afterwards, and in each successive year reaped fresh laurels. In the 29th EDWARD III., he was made constable of the Tower of London. In the 33rd, he was again in arms on the French soil, and d. there the next year, while in immediate attendance upon the king. His lordship m. Hawyse, dau. and heir of Sir William Mareschall, Knt., and had issue,

WILLIAM (Sir), his successor.

He m. 2ndly, Joane, dau. of Sir Peter de Tyes, and had, with other issue,

ROBERT (Sir), who, in the 41st EDWARD III., attended Prince Edward into Aquitaine; and in the reign of RICHARD II. was in the wars of France. Sir Robert had issue,

SIR ROBERT MORLEY, father of

SIR THOMAS MORLEY, whose dau. and heiress,

MARGARET MORLEY, m. Sir Jeffery Batcliffe, Knt.

His lordship d. 1360, and was s. by his eldest son,

SIR WILLIAM MORLEY, 3rd baron, summoned to parliament from 4 December, 1364, to 3 December, 1378. This nobleman, in the time of his father, was in the wars of France, with Robert de Ufford, Earl of Suffolk; and in the 38th EDWARD III., he had license to travel beyond sea; as also to grant the office of marshal of Ireland (which he had inherited from his mother) to Henry de Ferrera, to hold during good conduct. His lordship m. Cicily, dau. of Thomas, Lord Bardolph, and had an only son, THOMAS, his successor. Lord Morley d. 30 April, 1379, and by his last testament, bequeathed his body to be buried in the church of the Friars-Augustines, at Norwich. Appointing that two of his best horses should be disposed of for mortuaries, viz., his best black horse to those friars, on the day of his funeral; and, his palfrey, called Don, to the rector of the church of Hallingbury. He likewise left large sums for masses for his soul, as all the great personages of that period were in the habit of bequeathing. He was s. by his son,

SIR THOMAS MORLEY, 4th baron, summoned to parliament from 16 July, 1381, to 3 September, 1417. This nobleman in the 4th RICHARD II., arriving at Calais, with divers other English lords, rode with his banner displayed. And in the 15th of the same reign (being marshal of Ireland) was in the expedition then made into France, as he was again in the 3rd HENRY V.; and the next year he was appointed lieutenant and captain-general of all the forces assembled at London from the different ports, in order to proceed to France. His lordship m. twice: by his 2nd wife, Anne, dau. of Edward, Lord Despencer (by Elizabeth de Burghersh, his wife), and widow of Sir Hugh de Hastings, Knt., he had no issue, but by his 1st wife he had a son,

THOMAS, or ROBERT, who d. v. p. 3rd HENRY V., leaving by Isabel, his wife, dau. of John, Lord Molines, a son,

THOMAS, successor to his grandfather.

He d. in 1417, and was s. by his grandson,

THOMAS MORLEY, 5th baron, who was summoned to parliament from 15 July, 1427, to 5 July, 1435, in the 6th HENRY V., being then marshal of Ireland, he was in the expedition made into France, and so likewise, in the 9th of the same reign. His lordship being in the service of King HENRY V., when that gallant prince d. in France, bore one of the banners of saints, which were carried at the monarch's solemn obsequies. His lordship m. Lady Isabel de la Pole,* dau. of Michael, 2nd Earl of Suffolk, and dying in 1435, left issue, two daus., Elizabeth, m. to Sir John Arundel, and Anne, m. to Sir John Hastings, and a son,

MORTIMER — BARONS MORTIMER, OF WIGMORE, EARLS OF MARCH.

Barony, by Writ of Summons, dated 8 June, 1294.
 Earldom, by Charter, dated anno 1328.

Lineage.

The first of this name upon record,

ROGER DE MORTIMER, is deemed by some to have been son of William de Warren, and by others, of Walter de St. Martin, brother of that William. Which Roger was founder of the abbey of St. Victor, in Normandy. "It is reported," says Dugdale, "that in the year 1054 (which was twelve years before the Norman Conquest), when Odo, brother of HENRY, King of France, invaded the territory of Evreux, Duke William sent this Roger, then his general (with Robert, Earl of Ewe, and other stout soldiers), to resist his attempts; who meeting with Odo near to the castle of Mortimer, gave him battle, and obtained a glorious victory. It is further observable of this Roger, that he was by consanguinity allied to the Norman duke (afterwards king, by the name of WILLIAM THE CONQUEROR), his mother being niece to Gunnora, wife of Richard, Duke of Normandy, great grandmother to the CONQUEROR." The presumed son of this Roger,

RALPH DE MORTIMER, accompanying the Duke of Normandy in his expedition against England, was one of his principal commanders at the decisive battle of Hastings; and shortly after, as the most puissant of the victor's captains, was sent into the marches of Wales to encounter Edric, Earl of Shrewsbury, who still resisted the Norman yoke. This nobleman, after much difficulty, and a long siege in his castle of Wigmore, Mortimer subdued, and delivered into the king's hands. When, as a reward for his good service, he obtained a grant of all Edric's estates, and seated himself thenceforward at Wigmore. Independently of these great Welsh territorial possessions, Ralph Mortimer enjoyed by the bounty of his royal master sundry lordships and manors in other parts of the realm, which he held at the time of the general survey. In the beginning of Rufus's reign, Mortimer took part with Curthose, but he subsequently changed sides, and being constituted general of the forces sent to oppose that prince in Normandy, by King HENRY I., he totally routed the enemy, and brought Curthose prisoner to the king. This gallant person m. Milicent, dau. of —, by whom he had issue,

* Lady Isabel, widow of Lord Morley, in her will dated 1464, and proved 1466, mentions her nephew, John, Duke of Suffolk, her sister Dame Katherine, abbess of Berkyng, her son-in-law, John Hastings, and her dau. Anna, his wife, her granddau., Isabel Boswell, &c.

HUGH, his successor.

William, Lord of Chelmersh, and afterwards of Netherby.

Robert, ancestor of the Mortimers, of Richard's Castle (see Mortimer, Baron Mortimer, of Richard's Castle).

Hawise, m. to Stephen, Earl of Albemarle.

He was s. by his son,

HUGH DE MORTIMER, who being a person of a proud and turbulent spirit, opposed strenuously the accession of King HENRY II. upon the demise of STEPHEN, and induced Roger, Earl of Hereford, to fortify his castles of Gloucester and Hereford against the new monarch; himself doing the same with his castles of Clebury, Wigmore, and Brugges (commonly called Bridgenorth). Whereupon Gilbert Foliot, at that time Bishop of Hereford, addressing himself to the Earl of Hereford (his kinsman), by fair persuasions soon brought him to peaceable submission. But Mortimer continuing obstinate, the king was forced to raise an army, and at the point of the sword to bring him to obedience. Between this rude baron, and Jocass de Dynant, at that time Lord of Ludlow, existed a feud, carried to so fierce a pitch, that Dynant could not pass safely out of his castle for fear of being taken by Mortimer's men. But it so happened, that setting his spies to take all advantages of Dynant, he was surprised himself, and carried prisoner to Ludlow, where he was detained until he paid a ransom of 2,000 marks of silver. He was oftentimes engaged against the Welsh, and he erected some strong castles in Wales. He likewise finished the foundation of the abbey of Wigmore, begun by his father, and in his old age became a canon of that house. He m. and had issue,

ROGER, his successor.

Hugh, who m. Felicia de Sancto Sydonio, and had, by gift of his father, the manors of Sudbury and Chelmers.

Ralph.

William.

He d. in 1189, and was s. by his eldest son,

ROGER DE MORTIMER, Lord of Wigmore. This feudal lord, like his predecessors, was in constant strife with the Welsh. At one time he sustained a great defeat in conjunction with Hugh de Say, but in the end he was victorious, and took twelve of their principal leaders in one battle. He also enlarged considerably his territories, and drove thieves and robbers from those parts. Being at one time present at the solemn anniversary of his father, he confirmed all his grants to the canons of Wigmore; adding, of his own gift, a spacious and fruitful pasture, lying adjacent to the abbey, called the Treasure of Mortimer. Upon which occasion his steward remonstrating with him for parting with so valuable a treasure, he replied, "I have laid up my treasure in that field, where thieves cannot steal or dig, or moth corrupt." This Roger m. 1st, Milicent, dau. of — Ferrers, Earl of Derby, and had issue, HUGH, his successor, and two daus.; the elder, m. to Stephen le Gross; the younger, to Walkeline de Beauchamp. He m. 2ndly, Isabel, sister and heir of Hugh de Ferrers, of Oakham, in Rutlandshire, and of Lechelade and Lagebiry in Gloucestershire. All which lands he inherited upon the death of the said Hugh Ferrers; and by the lady he had three sons, Ralph, Robert, and Philip. He d. in 1215, and was s. by his eldest son,

HUGH DE MORTIMER. This feudal lord in the baronial war adhered with unshaken fidelity to King JOHN. In the 16th of that monarch's reign he had a military summons to attend the king at Cirencester, with the other Barons Marchers. He m. Annora, dau. of William de Braose, and had 100 shillings in land with her. But having been severely wounded in a tournament, departed this life in November, 1227, leaving no issue, when he was s. by his half brother,

RALPH DE MORTIMER, who, in the 12th HENRY III., paying £100 for his relief, had livery of all his lands, lying in the cos. of Gloucester, Southampton, Berks, Salop, and Hereford. This nobleman being of a martial disposition, erected several strong castles, by which he was enabled to extend his possessions against the Welsh; so that Prince Lewelin, seeing that he could not successfully cope with him, gave him his dau. Gladuse Duy, widow of Reginald de Braose, in marriage, and by this lady he had issue, ROGER, his successor; Peter John, a grey friar at Shrewsbury; Hugh, of Chelmersh, and a dau. Isolda, m. 1st, to Walter Balem, and 2ndly, to Hugh, Lord Audley. He d. in 1246, and was s. by his eldest son,

ROGER DE MORTIMER, who in the 31st HENRY III., paying 2000 marks to the king, had livery of all his lands, excepting those whereof Gladuse, his mother then surviving was endowed. In six years afterwards he attended the king in his expedition into Gascony, and in a few years subsequently, when Lewelin, Prince of Wales, began again to make incursions upon the marches, received command to assist Humphrey de Bohun, Earl of Hereford, in the defence of the country lying between Montgomery, and the lands of the Earl of Gloucester. In the 42nd of the same reign he had another military summons to march with the king against the Welsh; and being in that service, had a special discharge of his scutage for those twenty-six knights' fees, and a sixth part which he held in right of Maud, his wife, one of the daus. and co-heirs of William de Braose, of Brecknock. In two years afterwards he was made captain-general of all the king's forces in Wales, all the barons marchers receiving command to be attendant on him with their whole strength; and he was the same year constituted governor of the castle of Hereford. But notwithstanding this extensive power, and those great resources, he was eventually worsted by Lewelin, and constrained to sue for permission to depart, which the Welsh prince, owing to his consanguinity, conceded. After this he took an active part in the contest between HENRY III. and the insurrectionary barons in favour of the former. He was at the battle of Lewes, whence he fled into Wales, and afterwards successfully planned the escape of Prince Edward. The exploit is thus detailed by Dugdale: "Seeing therefore his sovereign in this great distress, and nothing but ruine and misery attending himself, and all other the king's loyal subjects, he took no rest till he had contrived some way for their deliverance; and to that end sent a swift horse to the prince, then prisoner with the king in the castle of Hereford, with intimation that he should obtain leave to ride out for recreation, into a place called Widemerah; and that upon sight of a person mounted on a white horse, at the foot of Tullington Hill, and waving his bonnet (which was the Lord of Croft, as it was said), he should haste towards him with all possible speed. Which being accordingly done (though all the country thereabouts were thither called to prevent his escape), setting spurs to that horse he overwent them all. Moreover that being come to the park of Tullington, this Roger met him with five hundred armed men; and seeing many to pursue, chased them back to the gates of Hereford, making great slaughter amongst them." Having thus accomplished his prince's freedom, Mortimer, directing all his energies to the embodying a sufficient force to meet the enemy, soon placed Prince Edward in a situation to fight and win the great battle of Evesham (4 August, 1265), by which the king was restored to his freedom and his crown. In this celebrated conflict Mortimer commanded the third division of the royal army, and for his faithful services obtained, in the October following, a grant of the whole earldom and honour of Oxford, and all other the lands of Robert de Vere, Earl of Oxford, at that time and by that treason forfeited. The Dictum of Kenilworth followed soon after the victory of Evesham, by which the defeated barons were suffered to regain their lands upon the payment of a stipulated fine; but this arrangement is said to have caused great irritation amongst the barons marchers, (Mortimer with the rest), who had acquired grants of those estates. He was, however, subsequently entrusted, by the crown, with the castle of Hereford, which he had orders to fortify, and was appointed sheriff of Herefordshire. After the accession of EDWARD I. he continued to enjoy the sunshine of royal favour, and had other valuable grants from the crown. He m., as already stated, Maud, dau. and co-heir of William de Braose, of Brecknock, and had, with other issue, three sons, EDMUND, William, and Geoffrey; upon whom, having procured the honour of knighthood to be conferred by King EDWARD I., he caused a tournament to be held, at his own cost, at Kenilworth, where he sumptuously entertained an hundred knights and as many ladies, for three days, the like whereof was never before known in England; and there began the round table, so called from the place wherein they practised those feats, which was encompassed by a strong wall, in a circular form. Upon the 4th day the golden lion, in token of triumph, having been yielded to him, he carried it (with all that company) to Warwick. The fame whereof being spread into foreign countries occasioned the Queen of Navarre to send him certain wooden bottles, bound with golden bars and wax, under the pretence of wine, but in truth filled with gold, which for many ages after were preserved in the Abbey of Wigmore. Whereupon for the love of that queen, he had added a carbuncle to his arms. By his wife he had several sons, whereof

Edmund (Sir), was his successor.

Roger, was Lord of Chirke, which lordship his grandson sold to Richard Fitz-Alan, Earl of Arundel. It subsequently passed to the family of MIDDLETON (see Mortimer of Chirke).

William (Sir), an eminent soldier, who m. Hawyse, heir of Robert de Musegrasse, but d. s. p.

This celebrated feudal lord d. in 1282, and was s. by his eldest surviving son,

SIR EDMUND MORTIMER, Lord of Wigmore, who m. Margaret, dau. of Sir William de Fiennes. In the 10th EDWARD I., he s. his father, and the next year doing his homage, had livery of his lands. He was afterwards constantly employed in the Welsh wars, and was summoned to parliament as a baron, from 8 June, 1294, and from 23 June, 1295, to 2 June, 1302. His lordship was mortally wounded in 1303 at the battle of Buelt, against the Welsh, and dying almost immediately, at Wigmore Castle, was buried in the abbey there. He left issue,

ROGER, his successor.

John, accidentally slain in a tournament at Worcester, 12th EDWARD II., by John de Leyburne, being not more than eighteen years of age.

Hugh, a priest, rector of the church at Old Radnor.

Walter, a priest, rector of Kingston.

Edmund, a priest, rector of Hodnet, and treasurer of the cathedral at York.

Maud, m. to Theobald de Verdon.

Joan,

Elizabeth, } nuns.

His lordship was s. by his eldest son,

ROGER MORTIMER, 2nd baron, summoned to parliament from 22 February, 1306, to 3 December, 1328 (from the accession of EDWARD II., with the addition of "De Wigmore"). This nobleman, so notorious in our histories as the paramour of ISABEL, queen consort of the unfortunate EDWARD II., was in his sixteenth year at the time of his father's decease, and was placed by the king (EDWARD I.) in ward with PIERRE GAVESTON, so that to redeem himself, and for permission to marry whom he pleased, he was obliged to pay Gaveston 2,500 marks, and thereupon m. Joane, dau. of Peter de Genevill, son of Geffrey de Genevill, Lord of Trim, in Ireland. In 34th EDWARD I. he received the honour of knighthood, and the same year attended the king into Scotland; where we find him again in the 3rd EDWARD II., and the same year he was constituted governor of the castle of Buelt, in Brecknockshire. In the 7th, 8th and 10th years he was likewise in Scotland, and was then appointed lord-lieutenant of Ireland. During the remainder of the unhappy EDWARD's reign he attached himself to the interests of the queen, and at length fled with her and Prince Edward into France. Returning, however, and his party triumphing, he was advanced to the dignity of EARL OF MARCH soon after the accession of King EDWARD III., and he held a round table the same year at Bedford. But hereupon becoming proud beyond measure (so that his own son, Geffrey, called him the King of Folly), he kept a round table of knights in Wales, in imitation of King ARTHUR. "Other particulars," says Dugdale, "of his haughtiness and insolence were these, viz., that with Queen ISABEL, he caused a parliament to be held at Northampton, where an unworthy agreement was made with the Scots, and Ragman's Roll of Homage of Scotland was traitorously delivered as also the black cross, which King EDWARD I. brought into England, out of the abbey of Scone, and then accounted a precious relique. That (with the queen) he caused the young king to ride twenty-four miles in one night, towards Bedford, to destroy the Earl of Lancaster and his adherents, saying that they imagined the king's death. That he followed Queen ISABEL to Nottingham, and lodged in one house with her. That he commanded the treasure of the realm, and assumed the authority, which by common consent in parliament was conferred upon Henry, Earl of Lancaster, at the king's coronation." His career was not however of long continuance, for, the king becoming sensible of his folly and vices, had him suddenly seized in the castle of Nottingham, and conveyed prisoner to London, where, been impeached before parliament, he was convicted under various charges, the first of which was privy to the murder of King EDWARD II. in Berkeley Castle; and receiving sentence of death was hanged in 1330, at the common gallows, called Elmes, near Smithfield, where his body was permitted to hang two days and two nights naked, before it was interred in the Grey Friars; whence in some years afterwards it was removed to Wigmore. The Earl of March left issue four sons and seven daus., viz.,

EDMUND (Sir), of whom presently

Roger (Sir), who m., 1321, Lady Joane Butler.

Geffrey (Sir), Lord of Towyth.

John, slain in a tournament at Shrewsbury.

Katherine, m. to Thomas de Beauchamp, Earl of Warwick.

Joane, m. to James, Lord Audley.

Agnes, m. to Laurence, Earl of Pembroke.

Margaret, m. 1st, to Robert, 6th Earl of Oxford; and 2ndly, to Thomas (son and heir of Maurice), Lord Berkeley.

Maud, m. to John de Cheriton, son and heir of John, Lord Powis.

Blanch, m. to Peter de Grandison.

Beatrix, m. 1st, to Edward, son and heir of Thomas of Brotherton, Earl Marshal of England, and 2ndly, to Sir Thomas de Braose.

Upon the execution and attainder of the earl all his honours became forfeited. But his eldest son,

SIR EDMUND MORTIMER, although he did not succeed to the earldom, was summoned to parliament, as LORD MORTIMER, 20 November, 1331. His lordship m. Elizabeth, one of the daus., and at length co-heirs of Bartholomew (commonly called the Rich), Lord Badlesmere, of Lodes Castle, in Kent, by whom (who m., after his decease, William de Bohun, Earl of Northampton) he had an only surviving son, his successor in 1331,

ROGER MORTIMER, b. 1328, summoned to parliament as BARON MORTIMER, and BARON MORTIMER, of Wigmore, from 20 November, 1348, to 15 March, 1354. This nobleman at the time of his father's decease, was only three years of age, and during his minority his castles in the marches of Wales were committed to the custody of William, Earl of Northampton, who had m. his mother. In the 20th EDWARD III. he accompanied the king into France, and then received the honour of knighthood. In the 26th he was in a similar expedition, and in two years afterwards, obtaining a reversal of the attainder of his grandfather, he was restored to the EARLDOM OF MARCH, and to his forfeited lands. His lordship the next year was constable of Dover Castle, and warden of the Cinque Ports, and for some years afterwards he was in the wars of France. He m. Philippa, dau. of William de Montacute, 1st Earl of Salisbury, and had issue,

Roger, who d. v. p.

Edmund, his successor.

Margery, m. to John, Lord Audley.

His lordship d. at Romera, in Burgundy, in 1359, being then commander of the English forces there, and a knight of the Garter. He was s. by his son,

EDMUND MORTIMER, 3rd Earl of March, b. 1352. This nobleman at the time of his father's death, was in minority, yet by reason of his singular knowledge and parts, he was employed at eighteen years of age, to treat with the commissioners of the King of France, touching a peace betwixt both realms. In the 1st RICHARD II., he was sworn to the privy council, and in two years afterwards, constituted lord lieutenant of Ireland, in which government he d. in 1381. His lordship m. the Lady PHILIPPA PLANTAGENET, dau. and heir of Lionel, Duke of Clarence (by Elizabeth, his wife, dau. and heir of William, son and heir of John de Burgh, Earl of Ulster), by whom he had issue,

ROGER, his successor.

Edmund (Sir), m. the dau. of Owen Glendour, and his issue is said to have settled in Scotland.

John (Sir), who, being arraigned in parliament, temp. HENRY VI., for treasonable speeches, was condemned and executed.

Elizabeth, m. 1st, to Henry Percy, the celebrated HOTSPUR; and 2ndly, to Thomas, Lord Camoys, K.G.

Philippa, m. 1st, to John, Earl of Pembroke; 2ndly, to Richard, Earl of Arundel; and 3rdly, to John Poyning, Lord St. John.

His lordship d. in 1381, and was s. by his eldest son,

ROGER MORTIMER, 4th Earl of March, who being but seven years old, at the decease of his father, was committed in ward, by the king, to Richard, Earl of Arundel; and when he came of age, found, by the care of those who had the management of his estate, all his castles and houses in good repair, and amply stored with rich furniture, while his lands were completely stocked with cattle, and in his treasury, no less than 40,000 marks. This Roger being a hopeful youth, and every way accomplished, was, soon after his father's death, made lieutenant of Ireland; and in parliament, held 9th RICHARD II., was declared, by reason of his descent from Lionel, Duke of Clarence, heir presumptive to the crown. His lordship m. Alianore, dau. of Thomas Holland, Earl of Kent, sister of Thomas, Duke of Surrey, and sister and co-heir of Edmund, Earl of Kent, by whom (who m. 2ndly, Edward, Lord Powis; and 3rdly, John, Lord Dudley), he had issue,

EDMUND, his successor.

Roger, d. s. p.

Anne, m. to Richard Plantagenet, Earl of Cambridge, younger son of Edmund, Duke of York (5th son of King EDWARD III.), and conveyed the right to the crown to the HOUSE OF YORK.

Allanore, m. to Edward, son of Edward Courtenay, Earl of Devon, but d. s. p.

His lordship was slain in battle, in Ireland, in 1398, and was s. by his son.

EDMUND MORTIMER, 5th Earl of March. This nobleman being but six years of age, at his father's death, was committed by King HENRY IV., to Henry, Prince of Wales, his son; out of whose custody he was shortly after stolen away by the Lady de Spencer; but being discovered in Chittham Woods, they kept him afterwards, under stricter guard, for he was the rightful heir to the crown of England, by his descent from Lionel, Duke of Clarence. This nobleman was frequently engaged in the wars of France, temp. HENRY V., and in the 1st HENRY VI. he was constituted lord lieutenant of Ireland. His lordship m. Anne, dau. of Edmund, Earl of Stafford, but d. s. p. in 1424, when the Earldom of March became extinct, but the Baronies of Mortimer, created by the writs of EDWARD I. and EDWARD III. devolved upon his lordship's nephew, RICHARD PLANTAGENET, Duke of York, son of his sister Anne, Countess of Cambridge; and upon the accession of the son and heir of the said Duke of York to the throne, as EDWARD IV., these baronies, with his other dignities, became merged in the crown.

Thus terminated the male line of the illustrious family of Mortimer, Earls of March; and their great estates, with the right to the throne, passed to RICHARD, DUKE OF YORK, son of the last earl's sister, the LADY ANNE MORTIMER, by her husband, Richard Plantagenet, Earl of Cambridge.

MORTIMER—BARON MORTIMER, OF RICHARD'S CASTLE.

By Writ of Summons, dated 26 January, 1297.

Lineage.

The founder of this branch of the MORTIMERS in England, was,

ROBERT DE MORTIMER (the presumed son or brother of the 1st Hugh de Mortimer, of Wigmore, ancestor of the Earls of March), who m. Margery, only dau. and heiress of Hugh de Ferrers, and grand-dau. of Hugh de Say,* Lord of Richard's Castle, co. Hereford, by which alliance he acquired that, and other considerable manors, and in the 12th HENRY II. he certified his knights' fees of this honour to be in number twenty-three. In the 17th JOHN he had a grant from the king of all those lands in Berwic, in Sussex, which had belonged to Mabel de Say, mother of Margery, his wife, and then in the possession of Robert Marmion, the younger. He d. about the year 1219, and was s. by his son,

HUGH DE MORTIMER, who, in the 43rd HENRY III., upon the death of William de Stutevill, 2nd husband of his mother, had livery of all those lands of her inheritance, upon the payment of £100 for his relief, which he the said William held as tenant by the courtesy of England during his life. In the next year, Hugh Mortimer, being one of the Barons Marchers, had command to repair personally to his house, at Richard's Castle, and there to attend the directions of Roger, Lord Mortimer, of Wigmore, whom the king had then constituted captain-general of all his forces in those parts, to oppose the hostilities of Llewelyn, Prince of Wales. In the contest between HENRY III. and the barons, this feudal lord siding with the former, was obliged to surrender Richard's Castle, after the defeat of Lewes, but he regained possession of that and all his other lands, by the triumph of Evesham. In the 1st EDWARD I., he executed

* HUGH DE SAY was feudal lord of Richard's Castle, co. Hereford, one of the possessions of his ancestor, RICHARD (surnamed Scrupe), in EDWARD THE CONFESSOR's days, whence it derives its denomination. In the 22nd HENRY II., this Hugh paid 20 marks to the king for trespassing in the royal forests, and in the 31st of the same reign, 200 marks for livery of his lands. He m. ROBERT DE MORTIMER, who m. Joice, dau. and heir of William La Zouch, 2nd son of Roger, 2nd Baron Zouch, of Ashby, and had issue,

HUGH, his successor.

William, who inheriting from the Zouches the lordship of Ashby de la Zouch, assumed the surname of ZOUCHE (see ZOUCHE, of Mortimer).

This feudal lord d. in 1287, and was s. by his elder son,

HUGH DE MORTIMER, who was summoned to parliament as a Baron, 26 January, 1229, and from that time to 10 April, 1299, in which latter year he was in the wars of Scotland. His lordship d. in 1304, leaving by Maud, his wife, two daus., his co-heirs, viz.,

1. JOANE MORTIMER, m. 1st, to Thomas de Bikenore, by whom she had no issue, and 2ndly, to Sir Richard Talbot (a younger son of Richard, Lord Talbot, of Eccleswall, in Herefordshire), who thus founded the House of TALBOT, of Richard's Castle. By this, her 2nd husband, Joane Mortimer had three sons, JOHN (Sir), Thomas, and Richard, and was s. by the eldest,

SIR JOHN TALBOT, of Richard's Castle, who m. Joane, dau. of Roger, Lord Grey, of Ruthyn, and was s. by his elder son,

JOHN TALBOT, of Richard's Castle, who left at his decease, in 1375, two sons, Richard and John, who both d. unm., the former in 1382, and the latter 1398, and three daus., his eventual heirs, viz.,

MORTIMER—BARON MORTIMER OF CHIRKE.

By Writ of Summons, dated 26 August, 1307.

Lineage.

ROGER MORTIMER, 2nd son of Roger Mortimer, 5th feudal Lord of Wigmore, by Maud, dau. of William de Braose, of Brecknock, settled himself at Chirke, part of the territories of Griffith ap Madoc, and was summoned to parliament from 6 February, 1299, to 3 November, 1306, as "Rogers de Mortuomari," and as BARON MORTIMER, of Chirke, from 26 August, 1307, to 15 May, 1321. The manner in which his lordship acquired Chirke, is thus detailed by Powel, the Welsh historian:—"Griffith ap Madoc," saith he, "took part with King HENRY III. and King EDWARD I., against the Prince of North Wales, and died, leaving his children within age; shortly after which followed the destruction of two of them; for King EDWARD gave the wardship of Madoc (the elder of them), who had for his part the lordship of Bromfield, &c., as also the castle of Dinas-Bran, to John, Earl of Warren; and of Llewelyn, the younger, to whose part the lordships of Chirke, &c., fell, to Roger Mortimer, a younger son of Roger Mortimer, Lord of Wigmore; which guardians forgetting the services done by Griffith ap Madoc, their father, so guarded these, their wards, that they never returned to their possessions, and shortly after obtained these lands to themselves by charter."* Being thus

* Griffith and Llewelyn were the sons of MADOC VYCHAN, Lord of Bromfield, in Powys, living 22 December, 1270, and 3 December, 6th EDWARD I., when he was under age, son of Griffith ap Madoc, Lord of Bromfield, great-grandson and representative of Madoc ap Meredith, last Prince of Powys-Fadoc (refer to Cheriton of Powys). By Margaret, his wife, who was living 4 January, 9th EDWARD I., and 3 May, 12th EDWARD I., Madoc Vychan was father of the two children referred to; 1 GRIFFITH AP MADOC VYCHAN; 2 Llewelyn Vychan ap Madoc Vychan, whose territory EDWARD I., by charter dated at Salop, seated here, he built the castle of Chirke; and during the reign of EDWARD I., was constantly employed in the wars of France, Scotland, and Wales, of which latter he was constituted the king's lieutenant, having all the castles in the principality committed to his custody; and he was subsequently made justice of all Wales. In the time of EDWARD II., his martial spirit continued, and we find him ever in the field, either in Scotland or in Wales; he ended his career, however, in the Tower; for being one of the opponents of the Spencers, and amongst those lords who condemned them to exile, so soon as the king recovered his authority, his lordship and his nephew, Lord Mortimer of Wigmore, submitting themselves, were committed to the Tower of London, in which confinement this nobleman is said to have died, anno 1336. His lordship m. Lucia, dau. of Sir Robert de Wafre, Knt., and dying 1336, was s. by his son,

ROGER MORTIMER, of Chirke, never summoned to parliament, who m. Joane Turberville, and was s. by his son,

JOHN MORTIMER, who was never summoned to parliament, nor were any of his descendants. This personage sold his lordship of Chirke to Richard Fitz-Alan, Earl of Arundel.

Lineage.

The MOWBRAYS, DUKES OF NORFOLK, were from an ancient period a great baronial family, and made a succession of fortunate alliances. The royal match of John, Lord Mowbray, with Elizabeth Segrave, whose mother was Margaret, Countess of Norfolk, dau. and heir of Thomas, Earl of Norfolk, son of King EDWARD I., may be considered the first step from baronial rank. King RICHARD II., constituted Thomas, son of the great alliance, Earl Marshal in 1386, and created him Duke of Norfolk in 1396, when his grandmother, Margaret, was also advanced to be Duchess of Norfolk. The duke, preparing in 1398 to fight a duel with Henry, Duke of Hereford, afterwards King HENRY IV., was banished, and d. in exile next year. The family was restored and continued for four generations down to Anne, the infant dau. and heiress of John, 4th duke, whom King EDWARD IV. m. as a child, to his 2nd son, Richard, Duke of York, then a young boy, and he made a settlement of the title and estate upon him and his heirs. She d. immediately afterwards, in 1478, but the Duke of York continued in possession till he was murdered with his brother, King EDWARD V., by their uncle, RICHARD, 20 June, 1483. All EDWARD's plans for seizing the Mowbray property being thus terminated, and RICHARD III., wishing to secure vigorous allies, the succession to the estates was allowed to open to the Berkeleys and Howards, the heirs of the d. of the duke, who d. in exile in 1400, eighty-three years before, and King RICHARD, on the 3rd day of his reign, 28 June, 1483, created William, Viscount Berkeley, Earl of Nottingham, and John, Lord Howard (who had been first raised to be a baron by his brother EDWARD), at once Duke of Norfolk and Marshal of England.

The family was founded by

NIGIL DE ALBINI, brother of William de Albin, from whom the ancient Earls of Arundel descended. The Albinis, who were maternally of the house of Mowbray, came into England with the CONQUEROR, and obtained large possessions after the victory of Hastings. Nigil's grants lay in the co. of Bucks, Bedford, Warwick, and Leicester, and comprised several extensive lordships. In the reign of RUFUS, he was bow-bearer to the king: and being girt with the sword of knighthood by King HENRY I., had the manor of Egmanton, with divers parks in the forest of Shirwood, of that monarch's gift; which lordship he transferred however, to his particular friend, Robert Davil. But when King HENRY had further experience of his great valour and military skill, he augmented his royal bounty, and conferred upon him the vassalries of Camville and Wyville; which gracious mark of favour so attached Albin to the interests of his sovereign, that he espoused with the most devoted zeal the cause of HENRY, against his brother, Robert Curthose, and taking a conspicuous part at the battle of Tenerchebray, he there slew the horse of Curthose, and brought the prince himself to the king; for which eminent service, HENRY conferred upon him the lands of Robert, Baron of Frontebœuf, namely Stuteville, in England, which Frontebœuf had fortified in behalf of Curthose. After which, King HENRY besieging a castle in Normandy, this gallant Sir Nigil first entered the breach, sword in hand, and delivered up the fortress to the king, which achievement was remunerated by a royal grant of the forfeited lands of his maternal uncle, Robert de Mowbray, Earl of Northumberland, both in Normandy and England; as also his castles, with the castle of Bayeux and its appurtenances; so that he had no less than 120 knights' fees in Normandy, and as many in England; thus becoming one of the most powerful persons of the period in which he lived. Sir Nigil de Albin m. 1st, Maud, dau. of Richard de Aquila, by permission of Pope PASCHALL; her husband Robert de Mowbray, Earl of Northumberland, before-mentioned, being then alive, and in prison for rebellion against WILLIAM RUFUS; from this lady he was, however, divorced, on account of consanguinity, and by her he had no issue. He m. 2ndly, in 1118, Gundred, dau. of Gerald de Gorney, by the special advice of King HENRY I., and had two sons, ROGER, his successor, who, possessing the lands of Mowbray, assumed, by command of King HENRY, the surname of MOWBRAY.

Henry, who had the lordship and barony of Cambo, and was ancestor of the Albinis, feudal lords of that place.

This great feudal baron d. at an advanced age, and was buried with his ancestor, in the abbey of Bec, in Normandy. He was s. by his elder son,

ROGER DE MOWBRAY, who, although not yet of age, was one of the chief commanders, at the memorable battle fought, anno 1138, with the Scots, near Northallerton, known in history as the battle of the Standard; and adhering to King STEPHEN, in his contest with the empress, he was taken prisoner with that monarch at the battle of Lincoln. In 1143, he accompanied LEWIS, King of France, to the Holy Land, and there acquired great renown by vanquishing a stout and hardy Pagan in single combat. He was afterwards involved in the rebellion of Prince Henry, against King HENRY II., and lost some of his castles. His grants to the church were munificent in the extreme; and his piety was so fervent, that he again assumed the cross, and made a second journey to the Holy Land, where he was made prisoner, but redeemed by the knights Templars; he d. however, soon after in the East, and was buried at Sures. Some authorities say that he returned to England, and living fifteen years longer, was buried in the abbey of Riland. He m. Alice de Gant, and was s. by his elder son,

NIGIL DE MOWBRAY, who attended amongst the barons, in the 1st RICHARD I., at the solemn coronation of that monarch; and in the 3rd of the same reign, assuming the cross, set out for Palestine, but d. upon his journey. He m. Mabel, dau. of the Earl of Clare, and had issue, WILLIAM, Robert, Philip, 14 of Barnbougle in Scotland, and Roger ancestor of Mowbray, of Kirklington. Nigil de Mowbray d. 1191, and was s. by his eldest son,

WILLIAM DE MOWBRAY, who in the 6th RICHARD I., paying £100 for his relief, had livery of his lands. This feudal lord, upon the accession of King JOHN, was tardy in pledging his allegiance, and at length only swore fealty upon condition that

2 June, in the 10th year of his reign, 1282, granted to Roger Mortimer, the younger. The elder son,

GRIFFITH AP MADOC VYCHAN, was living 11 January, 6th EDWARD I., 1278, and 7 October, 10th EDWARD I., at which latter date the English monarch, by charter, dated at Rhuddlan, granted to John de Warren, Earl of Surrey, "Castrium Dinas Bran qd. fuit in manu pria. in pncipio. pntes. guerre nre. Wall et totam terram de Bromfield que Griffinus et Lewellinus filii Madoci Vaghan p. se vl. p. tutores seu custodes suos in pncipio. guerre illius tenerit (except the castle of Hope); also terram de Yal que fuent Griffinus Vaghan filii Griffinus de Bromfield, inimici nre." A charter dated at Rhuddlan, 12 February, 11th EDWARD I., sets forth "scilicet quod ad requisitem. . . . Johannis de Warren, Comitum Surr. concessa. Griffinus Vaghan filio Madoci qd. teneat terram de Glyndordo de nob. voluntatem suam."

the king should render to every man his right. At the breaking out of the baronial war, it was no marvel then, that he should be found one of the most forward of the discontented lords, and so distinguished, that he was chosen with his brother, Roger, amongst the twenty-five celebrated barons appointed to enforce the observance of Magna Charter. In the reign of HENRY III., adhering to the same cause, he was at the battle of Lincoln, and taken prisoner there, when his lands were seized, and bestowed upon William Marshal, the younger, but he was subsequently allowed to redeem them. After which he appears to have attached himself to the king, and was with the royal army at the siege of Bitham Castle, in Lincolnshire. He m. Agnes, dau. of the Earl of Arundel, and dying in 1222, was s. by his elder son,

NICEL DE MOWBRAY, who, in the 8th HENRY III., paying £500 for his relief, had livery of his lands. He m. Maud, dau. and heiress of Roger de Camvil, but dying s. p. in 1228, was s. by his brother,

ROGER DE MOWBRAY, then in minority. This feudal lord had several military summonses to attend King HENRY III. into Scotland and Wales. He m. Maud, dau. of William de Beauchamp, of Bedford, and dying in 1266, was s. by his eldest son,

ROGER DE MOWBRAY, who, in the 6th EDWARD II., upon making proof of his age, had livery of his lands. He was engaged in the wars of Wales and Gascony, and was summoned to parliament as a Baron, from 23 June, 1295, to 26 August, 1296. His lordship m. Rose, great grand-dau. of Richard de Clare, Earl of Hertford, and dying in 1298, left two sons, JOHN, his heir, and Alexander, who went to Scotland. The son and heir,

JOHN DE MOWBRAY, 2nd baron, summoned to parliament from 26 August, 1307, to 5 August, 1320. This nobleman during his minority, was actively engaged in the Scottish wars of King EDWARD I., and had livery of all his lands before he attained minority, in consideration of those services. In the 6th EDWARD II., being then sheriff of Yorkshire, and governor of the city of York, he had command from the king to seize upon Henry de Percy, then a great baron in the north, in consequence of that nobleman suffering Piers de Gaveston, Earl of Cornwall, to escape from Scarborough Castle, in which he had undertaken to keep him in safety. The next year Lord Mowbray was in another expedition into Scotland, and he was then constituted one of the wardens of the marches towards that kingdom. In the 11th of the same reign he was made governor of Malton and Scarborough Castles, in Yorkshire, and the following year he was once more in Scotland, invested with authority to receive into protection all who should submit to King EDWARD. But afterwards taking part in the insurrection of Thomas, Earl of Lancaster, he was made prisoner with that nobleman and others at the battle of Boroughbridge, and immediately hanged at York, anno 1321, when his lands were seized by the crown, and Aliya, his widow, with her son, imprisoned in the Tower of London. This lady, who was dau. and co-heir of William de Braose, Lord Braose, of Gower, was compelled, in order to obtain some alleviation of her unhappy situation, to confer several manors of her own inheritance upon Hugh le Despencer, Earl of Winchester. In the next reign, however, she obtained from the crown a confirmation of Gowerland, in Wales, to herself and the heirs of her body by her deceased husband, with remainder to Humphrey de Bohun, Earl of Hereford and Essex, and his heirs. Lady Mowbray m. 2ndly, Sir R. de Peshale, Knt., and d. in the 5th EDWARD III. Her ladyship's son,

JOHN DE MOWBRAY, 3rd baron, was summoned to parliament from 10 December, 1327, to 20 November, 1360. This nobleman found much favour from King EDWARD III., who, in consideration of the eminent services of his progenitors, accepted of his homage, and gave him livery of his lands before he came of full age. He was subsequently the constant companion in arms of his martial sovereign, attending him in his glorious campaign in France, where he assisted at the siege of Nantes, and the raising that of Aguilion. He was likewise at the celebrated battle of Durham (20th EDWARD III.), and at one time was governor of Berwick-upon-Tweed. His lordship m. the Lady Joane Plantagenet, dau. of Henry, Earl of Lancaster, by whom he had issue, JOHN, his successor. Lord Mowbray, who was styled in the charters, Lord of the Isle of Axholme, and of the honour of Gower and Brouwer, d. in 1361, and was s. by his son,

JOHN DE MOWBRAY, 4th baron, summoned to parliament from 14 August, 1362, to 20 January, 1368, as "John de Mowbray of Axholme." This nobleman in the lifetime of his father was in the wars of France; and he eventually fell, anno 1368, in a conflict with the Turks, near Constantinople, having assumed the cross, and embarked in the holy war. His lordship m. Elizabeth, dau. and heiress of John, Lord Segrave, by Margaret, Duchess of Norfolk (dau. and eventually sole heiress, of Thomas Plantagenet, of Brotherton, Earl of Norfolk — see that dignity), whereby he acquired a great inheritance in lands, and the most splendid alliance in the kingdom. By this lady he had two sons, JOHN and THOMAS, and several daus., of whom one m. Roger, Lord De la Warr; and another m. John, Lord Welles; and a 3rd, Anne, was abbess of Barking. His lordship was s. by his elder son,

JOHN DE MOWBRAY, 5th baron, who was created EARL OF NOTTINGHAM, upon the day of the coronation of King RICHARD II., anno 1377, with a special clause in the charter of creation, that all his lands and tenements whereof he was then possessed, should be held sub honore comitatus, and as parcel of this earldom. His lordship d. two years afterwards, still under age, and unmarried, when the Earldom of Nottingham expired, but the Barony of Mowbray and his great possessions devolved upon his brother,

THOMAS DE MOWBRAY, as 6th baron, then seventeen years of age, who was created EARL OF NOTTINGHAM, as his brother had been, by charter, dated 12 February, 1383, and three years afterwards was constituted EARL MARSHAL, by reason of his descent from Thomas, of Brotherton; his lordship being the first who had the title of earl attached to the office. In the 10th RICHARD II. his lordship participated in the naval victory achieved by Richard, Earl of Arundel, over the French and Spaniards, and the subsequent conquest of the castle of Brest. In the 16th of the same reign he was made governor of Calais, and in four years afterwards obtained the king's charter of confirmation of the office of earl marshal of England to the heirs male of his body, and that they, by reason of the said office, should bear a golden truncheon, enamelled with black at each end, having at the upper end the king's arms, and at the lower, their own arms engraven thereon. Moreover, he stood in such favour, that the king, acknowledging his just and hereditary title to bear for his crest a golden leopard, with a white label, which of right belonged to the king's eldest son, did, by letters patent, grant to him and his heirs, authority to bear the golden leopard for his crest, with a coronet of silver about his neck, instead of the label; and the same year appointed him justice of Chester and Flintshire for life. In the 18th RICHARD he attended the king into Ireland, but afterwards siding with the parasites, who controlled that weak and unfortunate prince, he not only aided in the destruction of his father-in-law, Richard, Earl of Arundel—being one of the chief persons that guarded the unhappy nobleman to the place of execution—but he is also accused of being an accomplice in the murder of Thomas, of Woodstock, Duke of Gloucester, the king's uncle. Certain it is that he was at this period in high estimation with the prevailing party, and obtained a grant of all the lands of the unfortunate Lord Arundel, with those of Thomas Beauchamp, Earl of Warwick, which had also vested in the crown, by forfeiture. These grants bore date 28 September, 1396, and the next day he was created DUKE OF NORFOLK (his grand-mother, Margaret, Duchess of Norfolk, being still alive). Prosperous, however, as this nobleman's career had hitherto been, it was doomed eventually, to a disgraceful termination. Henry, Duke of Hereford (afterwards HENRY IV.), having accused his Grace of Norfolk, of speaking disrespectfully of the king, a challenge ensued, and a day was named for the combat, when the lists were accordingly set up, at Gosford Green, Coventry, and the king and court were present; but just as the combatants were about to engage, and the charge had been sounded, RICHARD interfered, and by the advice of his council, prohibited the conflict, banishing the Duke of Hereford for ten years, and the Duke of Norfolk for life—who, thereupon going abroad, d. at Venice, of the pestilence, but according to Sandford, of grief, in 1400. The duke, who, along with his other great honours, was a knight of the Garter, m. 1st, Elizabeth, dau. of John, Lord Strange, of Blackmere, but had no issue; he m. 2ndly, Lady Elizabeth Fitz-Alan, dau. of Richard, Earl of Arundel, sister and co-heir of Thomas, Earl of Arundel, and widow of William de Montacute, by whom he had issue,

I. THOMAS, who simply bore the title of Earl Marshal.

II. JOHN, of whom hereafter, as restored Duke of Norfolk.

I. ISABEL, m. 1st, Henry, son and heir of William, 5th Lord Ferrers of Groby, and had an only child, Elizabeth, heiress of Groby, b. 1419. Isabel, m. 2ndly, James, 5th Lord BEAUMONT, and had a son William, whom EDWARD IV. made a viscount in 1481, RICHARD III. advanced to the Earldom of Nottingham, and HENRY VII. promoted to be Earl Marshal and Marquess of Berkeley.

II. MARGARET, m. Sir Robert Howard, Knt. This lady became eventually co-heiress of the Mowbrays, and her son,

Sir John Howard, Knt., was created DUKE OF NORFOLK, and Earl Marshal, and became ancestor of the illustrious house of Howard, Dukes of Norfolk.

III. ELIZABETH, m. 1st, Nicholas, Lord Audley, who d. 1391;

2ndly, John, Lord Beaumont, who d. 1396; and 3rdly, Michael, 3rd Earl of Suffolk, who d. 1415. The issue of Elizabeth became extinct.

The elder son,

THOMAS DE MOWBRAY, 7th Baron Mowbray, was but fourteen years of age, at the decease of his father, and never had the title of Duke of Norfolk, but was simply styled EARL MARSHAL. He was beheaded at York, in 1405, for participating in the conspiracy of Richard Scrope, archbishop of York, against HENRY IV. His lordship m. Constance, dau. of John Holland, Duke of Exeter, but having no issue, was s. by his brother,

JOHN DE MOWBRAY, 8th Baron Mowbray, who was restored, 3rd HENRY VI., in the parliament then held at Westminster, to the dignity of Duke of Norfolk, having previously used only the titles of Earl of Nottingham, and Earl Marshal. This nobleman was engaged in the French wars of King HENRY V., and was only prevented by indisposition, from sharing the glories of Agincourt. His grace, who was a knight of the Garter, m. the Lady Katherine Nevil, dau. of Ralph, Earl of Westmoreland (who subsequently m. Thomas Strangways, Esq., and after his decease, John, Viscount Beaumont, and lastly, Sir John Widdie, Knt.), and dying in 1432, was s. by his son,

JOHN DE MOWBRAY, 3rd Duke of Norfolk. This nobleman attained majority in the 14th HENRY VI., and in three years afterwards was sent ambassador into Picardy, to treat of peace, with the King of France. In the 23rd of the same reign, upon obtaining a confirmation of the Dukedom of Norfolk, he had a place assigned him in parliament, and elsewhere, next to the Duke of Exeter. His grace m. Eleanor, dau. of William, Lord Bouchier, and dying in 1461, was s. by his son,

JOHN DE MOWBRAY, Earl of Warren and Surrey (so created 29 March, 1451), as 4th Duke of Norfolk, and Earl Marshal. This nobleman, in the 14th EDWARD IV., was retained to serve the king in his wars in France, for one year, and he was made a knight of the Garter. His grace m. the Lady Elizabeth Talbot, dau. of John, Earl of Shrewsbury, by whom he had an only dau.,

Lady Anne Mowbray, contracted to Richard, son of King EDWARD IV., but d. before consummation of marriage.

The duke d. in 1475, when all his honours, except the Baronies of Mowbray and Segrave, EXPIRED; but those, on the decease of Lady Anne Mowbray above-mentioned, fell into ABEYANCE, amongst the descendants of the Ladies Isabel Berkeley and Margaret Howard (refer to issue of Thomas, 1st Duke of Norfolk), and so continued until the suspension of the Barony of Mowbray was terminated by the summoning of Henry Howard, son, and heir apparent of Thomas, Earl of Arundel, Norfolk, and Surrey, to parliament, 13 April, 1639, as BARON MOWBRAY. The eldest son of that nobleman was restored to the Dukedom of Norfolk, and the barony merged in that dignity, until the death of Edward, 11th duke, in 1777, when, with several other baronies, it again fell into ABEYANCE, between the two daus. and co-heirs of Philip Howard, Esq., younger brother of the said duke, namely,

Winifred, m. to Charles-Philip, 15th Lord Stourton,
Anne, m. to Robert-Edward, 9th Lord Petre,

And it still so remains with their representatives, the Lords Stourton and Petre. The Barony of Segrave, never having been called out of ABEYANCE, continues yet in a state of suspension, between the descendants of the Lady Margaret Howard (the Lords Stourton and Petre, as heirs-general,) and the representative of the Lady Isabel Berkeley.

MULTON—BARONS MULTON, OF EGREMONT.

By Writ of Summons, dated 26 February 1297.

Lineage.

In the time of King HENRY I.,

THOMAS DE MULTON, so called from his residence at Multon, in Lincolnshire, bestowed at the funeral of his father, in the Chapter House, at Spalding (his mother, brothers, sisters, and friends, being present), the church of Weston, upon the monks of that abbey. After this Thomas, came

LAMBERT DE MULTON, who, in the 11th HENRY II., residing then in Lincolnshire, was amerced 100 marks. In the 9th and 10th of King JOHN, flourished another

THOMAS DE MULTON, who at that period was sheriff of the co. Lincoln, and in the 15th of the same reign, attended the king in his expedition then made into Poitou. This Thomas gave 1,000 marks to the crown for the wardship of the dau. and heirs of Richard de Luci, of Egremont, co. Cumberland, and bestowed those ladies afterwards in marriage upon his two sons, Lambert and Alan. In the 17th JOHN, being in arms with the rebellious barons, and taken at Rochester Castle, he was committed to the custody of Peter de Mauley, to be safely secured, who conveyed him prisoner to the castle of Corff, but in the 1st HENRY III., making his peace, he had restitution of his liberty and his lands. The next year having m. Ada, dau. and co-heir of Hugh de Morvill, widow of Richard de Luci, of Egremont, without the king's license, command was sent to the archbishop of York, to make seizure of all his lands in Cumberland, and to retain them in his hands until further orders. Multon giving security, however, to answer the same, whensoever the king should require him so to do, he had livery of all those lands which had been seized for that transgression, with the castle of Egremont. In three years afterwards he paid £100 fine to the king, and one palfrey for the office of forester of Cumberland, it being the inheritance of Ada, his wife. In the 17th HENRY III., he was sheriff of Cumberland, and remained in office for several succeeding years. Moreover, he was one of the justices of the king's Court of Common Pleas from the 8th HENRY III., and a justice itinerant for divers years, from the 9th of the same reign. He m. twice, by his 1st wife he had issue,

LAMBERT, m. Annabel, dau. and co-heir of Richard de Luci.
Alan, m. Alice, dau. and co-heir of Richard de Luci, and had a son.

THOMAS DE MULTON, who assumed the surname of LUCIE (see LUCY, of Egremont).

Thomas de Multon m. 2ndly, Ada, dau. and co-heir of Hugh de Morville, and had, by that lady,

THOMAS (see MULTONS, of Gillesland).
Julian, m. to Robert le Vavasour.

This celebrated feudal lord, who was a liberal benefactor to the church, is thus characterized by Matthew Paris: "In his youth he was a stout soldier, afterwards very wealthy, and learned in the laws; but overmuch coveting to enlarge his possessions, which lay contiguous to those of the monks of Crowland, he did them great wrong in many respects." He d. in 1240, and was s. by his eldest son,

LAMBERT DE MULTON, who, as stated above, m. Annabel, the elder dau. and co-heir of Richard de Luci, of Egremont, and in 1246, obtained by large gifts from the Pope, an extraordinary privilege; namely, that no one should have the power to excommunicate him, but by a special mandate from his holiness. But he, who had this liberty, saith Matthew Paris, riding with rich trappings very proudly, from a trial at law, no sooner alighted from his horse, but (meriting God's judgment) was suddenly smitten with a grievous disease, of which falling to the ground, he died before his spurs could be taken off, being then at his house at Multon, in Lincolnshire. By his 1st wife, he had a son, THOMAS, his successor. He m. 2ndly, Ida, widow of Geoffrey de Oilli, but had no issue. His death occurred in 1247, when he was s. by his son,

THOMAS DE MOULTON, designated of Egremont, who was in arms against the king, in 49th HENRY III., with the rebellious barons of that period. In the 22nd EDWARD I., he had a grant of free warren in all his demesne lands, at Egremont, and dying in 1294, was s. by his son,

THOMAS DE MULTON, who was summoned to parliament as BARON MULTON, of Egremont, from 26 January, 1297, to 15 May, 1320. During which interval, he was almost constantly engaged in the Scottish wars. His lordship d. in 1322, and was s. by his son,

JOHN DE MULTON, 2nd baron, summoned to parliament from 27 January, 1332, to 24 July, 1334. This nobleman m. Annabel, dau. and heiress of Laurence de Holbeche, but dying s. p., in 1334, his estates, including the manors of Thurstaneston, in Suffolk, and Egremont and Cockermonth, in Cumberland, were divided amongst his three sisters, thus, viz.,

JOANE, wife of Robert, Baron Fitz-Walter, had for her share the Castle of Egremont, with the third part of that manor and the third part of other manors.

ELIZABETH, wife of Walter de Bernichan, had certain lands at Gosford, parcel of the manor of Egremont, and a proportion of other manors. This Elizabeth was 1st m. to Robert, son and heir of John, 1st Lord Harrington.

MARGARET, wife of Thomas de Luci, had certain lands in Cumberland, parcel of the manor of Egremont, besides a proportion of other estates.

while the Barony of Multon, of Egremont, fell into abeyance amongst those ladies, as it still continues with their descendants and representatives.

MULTON—BARON MULTON, OF GILLES- LAND.

By Writ of Summons, dated 26 August, 1307.

Lineage.

THOMAS DE MULTON, Lord of Multon, in Lincolnshire, who d. 1240 (see MULTON of Egremont), m. for his 2nd wife, Ada, dau. and co-heir of Hugh de Moreville, and had, with a dau., Julian, who m. Robert de Vavasour, a son,

THOMAS DE MULTON, who inherited the office of forester of Cumberland from his mother, and in the 36th HENRY III., paid a fine of 400 marks to the crown, for trespassing in the forests there, and for the future enjoyment of all the privileges which his ancestors had possessed with the forestership. In the 42nd of the same reign, he had a military summons to march with the other northern barons into Scotland, for the purpose of rescuing the Scottish monarch, King HENRY's son-in-law, from the restraints imposed upon him by his own subjects: and again in the 55th, to take up arms against the Welsh. This feudal baron m. MAUD, only dau. and heiress of HUBERT DE VAUX,^{*} Lord of Gillesland, and with her acquired that lordship. He d. in 1270, and was s. by his son,

THOMAS DE MULTON, who doing his homage, had livery of his lands, and the ensuing year, upon the death of Helewise de Levinton, widow of Eustace de Balliol, was found to be her heir as to a moiety of the Barony of Burgh upon the Sands (he already enjoyed the other moiety by inheritance), and divers other considerable manors. He d. in 1293 (his mother, the heiress of Gillesland, being still alive), and was s. by his son,

THOMAS DE MULTON, who doing his homage the same year, had livery of his lands, but d. in two years afterwards, being then seized of the manor of Donham, in Norfolk; of Burgh-upon-Sands; of Kirk-Oswald; and of the Barony of Gillesland, with divers other estates, all in the co. Cumberland. He was s. at his decease in 1295 (his widow, Isabel, m. Sir John de Caster) by his son,

THOMAS DE MULTON. This feudal lord having been engaged in the Scottish wars, in the 31st and 34th EDWARD I., was summoned to parliament as BARON MULTON, of Gillesland, upon the accession of EDWARD II. from 26 August, 1307, to 26 November, 1313. After which we find his lordship again upon the theatre of war, in Scotland, in the 3rd and 4th years of the new monarch: and he subsequently obtained some immunities from the crown, in the shape of grants for fairs and markets upon his different manors. He d. in 1313, leaving by Margaret, his wife, an only dau. and heiress,

MARGARET DE MULTON, who m. Ranulph de Dacre, Lord Dacre, of the North, and conveyed her great estates with the Barony of Multon, to the DACRE family (see DACRE, of Gillesland).

Arms—Az., three bars, gules.

* RANULPH DE MESCHINES, in the time of the CONQUEROR, gr. nted the Barony of Gillesland¹ to a Norman called

HUBERT, who was ever afterwards denominated either HUBERT VAUX, or "HUBERT DE VALLIBUS." He was s. by his son and heir,

ROBERT DE VAUX, who m. Ada, dau. and heir of William Engaine, and widow of Simon de Moreville, and was s. by his elder son,

ROBERT DE VAUX. This baron outliving his only son, was s. at his decease, by his brother,

RANULPH DE VAUX, who was father of

ROBERT DE VAUX, one of the barons who took up arms against King JOHN. He was s. by his son,

HUBERT DE VAUX, who left at his decease, an only dau. and heir,

MAUD DE VAUX, who m., as in the text, THOMAS DE MULTON, and conveyed to him the BARONY OF GILLESLAND.

MUNCHENSI—BARON MUNCHENSI.

By Writ of Summons, dated 24 December, 1264.

Lineage.

It was not long after the Norman Conquest, that

HUBERT DE MUNCHENSI, made grants of lands to the monks of Eye and Thetford, in the cos. of Suffolk and Norfolk. "It is said that this Hubert," observes Dugdale, "had issue, WARINE DE MUNCHENSI, and he another Hubert, which is likely enough to be true; for in the 33rd HENRY II., it appears that Hubert de Munchensi was in ward to the bishop of Ely, with his land at Stratford, part of the honour of Henry de Essex. At the same time also Agnes de Munchensi (widow of Warine, as I guess) dau. of Payne Fitz-John, then sixty years of age, had three sons, viz., Ralph and William, both knights, and Hubert, a clerk; as also two daus., the one m. to Stephen de Glanville, and the other to William Painell, her lands at Holkham, in Norfolk, being then valued at 411 per annum." His son and heir,

WARINE DE MUNCHENSI, was father of

HUGH DE MUNCHENSI, living in 1186. The next member of the family upon record is

WILLIAM DE MUNCHENSI, who d. about the 6th JOHN, and was s. by his son,

WILLIAM DE MUNCHENSI, who was s. at his death s. p. in about seven years afterwards, by his uncle,

WARINE DE MUNCHENSI, a person of military reputation, temp. HENRY III. He m. Joan, dau. and heir of William Marshall, Earl of Pembroke, and had issue,

WILLIAM, his successor.

Joan, m. to William Valence, the King's half brother,

Warine d. 1255, and was s. by his son,

WILLIAM DE MUNCHENSI. This feudal lord was one of the leading persons who took up arms against HENRY III., and one of the chief commanders at the battle of Lewes. After this victory he was summoned to parliament 24 December, 1264, by the baronial government, acting in the name of the king. His lordship was subsequently made prisoner at Kenilworth, and his lands being seized, were transferred to his brother-in-law, William Valence. They were soon, however, restored upon his making the necessary submission. He was eventually slain anno 1289, in battle, by the Welsh. He left a dau. and heiress, DYONISIA MUNCHENSI, who m. Hugh de Vera, younger son of Robert, Earl of Oxford.

This dignity can hardly be deemed, however, an inheritable barony. A younger brother of Warine de Munchensi, William de Munchensi, m. Beatrix, dau. and co-heir of William de Beauchamp, Baron of Bedford, and d. in 1286, leaving William, his son and heir, who d. in 1302, leaving male issue, but none of this branch were ever summoned to parliament.

Arms—Or, three escutcheons, barry of six, vair and gu.

MURRAY—EARLS OF ANNANDALE.

By Letters Patent, dated 13 March, 1624-5.

Lineage.

SIR JOHN MURRAY, Knt., youngest son of Sir Charles Murray of Cockpool, by Margaret, his wife, eldest dau. of Hugh, 5th Lord Somerville, rising high in favour with JAMES VI., was appointed master of the horse, and upon his Majesty's accession to the throne of England, accompanied his royal master to London as one of the gentlemen of the privy chamber, and was created VISCOUNT ANNAND, and LORD MURRAY, of Lochmaben. On 13 March, 1624-5, he obtained the EARLDOM OF ANNANDALE. His lordship, who s. his brother, Sir Richard Murray, Bart., in the old family estate of Cockpool, m. Elizabeth, dau. of Sir John Schaw, Knt.; and dying, September, 1640, was s. by his son,

JAMES MURRAY, 2nd Earl of Annandale, who inherited the VISCOUNTY OF STORMONT, under the limitation in the patent, at the decease of Mungo, the 2nd viscount. His lordship joined Montrose after the battle of Kilsyth, and upon that heroic chieftain's defeat, retired to England, where he d. 23 December, 1658. He m. Lady Elizabeth Carnegie, eldest dau. of James, 2nd Earl of Southesk, but by her (who m. 2ndly, in 1659, David, 4th Viscount Stormont) had no issue. At Lord Annandale's decease, the titles of Annandale, Annand, and Murray of Lochmaben, became EXTINCT, and those of Stormont and Socon devolved on David, 2nd Lord Balvaird.

Arms—Az., a crescent, between three stars, all within a double treasure, flory, counterflory with fleurs-de-lis, arg.; and a dexter canton of the 2nd, charged with a thistle, vert, crowned, or, as an augmentation.

MURRAY—EARL OF TULLIBARDINE.

Lineage.

JOHN MURRAY, eldest son of John, 1st Marquess of Athole, was appointed in 1695, one of the principal secretaries of state for Scotland, and in the following year (27 July) created EARL OF TULLIBARDINE, VISCOUNT OF GLENALMOND, and LORD MURRAY, for life. In 1703, he s. his father as 2nd Marquess of Athole, and was raised to a dukedom shortly after. His grace d. 14 November, 1724, when the dignities which had been conferred on him for life, of course became EXTINCT, but his hereditary honours devolved on his son, JAMES, 2nd Duke of Athole.

MURRAY—VISCOUNTESS BAYNING, OF FOXLEY, CO. WILTS.

By Letters Patent, dated 17 March, 1674.

Lineage.

The HON. ANNE BAYNING, 2nd dau. of Sir Paul Bayning, Bart., 1st VISCOUNT BAYNING, of Sudbury, co. Suffolk, and sister of Paul, 2nd Viscount Bayning, was created for life, after the decease of the latter lord, without male issue, and the extinction of the honours of her family, VISCOUNTESS BAYNING, OF FOXLEY, CO. WILTS, 17 March, 1674. She had previously m. Henry Murray, Esq., one of the grooms of bedchamber to King CHARLES I. Her ladyship d. in 1698, when the dignity of course EXPIRED. Mr. Murray's eldest dau. and co-heiress, by Lady Bayning,

The HON. ELIZABETH MURRAY, m. General Randolph Egerton, and had a dau.,

ANNE EGERTON (sole heiress of her father), who m. Lord William Paulet, 2nd son of Charles, 1st Duke of Bolton, by whom she had an only dau.,

HENRIETTA PAULET (heiress of her father), who m. the HON. WILLIAM TOWNSEND, 3rd son of Charles, 2nd Viscount Townshend, K.G., and left a son,

CHARLES TOWNSEND, who was created BARON BAYNING, OF FOXLEY, 27 October, 1797, and was father of the late and present LORDS BAYNING (see BURKE'S EXTANT PEERAGE).

MUSGRAVE—BARON MUSGRAVE.

By Writ of Summons, dated 25 November, 1350.

Lineage.

The MUSGRAVES are said to have come originally from Germany, and to have been MUSGRAVES, or Lords Marchers there. Banks tells the following story of their good fortune in obtaining an alliance with the imperial family:—"The emperor had two great generals, who made court to his daughter at the same time; and as he had experienced singular services from both, did not care to prefer one before the other. But to decide the matter, ordered the two heroes to run at the ring for her (an exercise then in use): it so happened that this Musgrave (one of the contending generals) had the fortune to pierce the ring with the point of his spear; by which action he gained her for a reward of his gallantry and dexterity, and had 'six annulets, or,' given him for his coat of arms; and for his crest, two arms in armour, holding an annulet. From this marriage issued that MUSGRAVE, who being a man of an enterprising genius, accompanied WILLIAM THE CONQUEROR into England, and was the founder of the Musgraves in this country."

SIR THOMAS MUSGRAVE, one of the commanders in the van of the English army that gave battle to, and totally defeated DAVID, King of Scotland, at Durham, 20th EDWARD III., was summoned to parliament as a Baron from 25 November, 1350, to 4 October, 1373. His lordship appears to have been generally employed upon the borders in resisting the incursion of the Scotch. He was made (21st EDWARD III.) governor of Berwick-upon-Tweed; and sole justiciar through all the lands in Scotland, whereof the king had then possession. He was afterwards sheriff of Yorkshire and governor of the castle of York. His lordship m. Isabel, widow of Robert, son of Robert, Lord Clifford, and dau. of Thomas, Lord Berkeley; but the barony did not continue in his descendants, nor have any of those been deemed barons of the realm. Descended from his lordship are the three existing houses of Musgrave, Baronets, viz.,

The MUSGRAVES of Eden Hall, in Cumberland, created Baronets 29 June, 1611.

The MUSGRAVES of Hayton, created baronets in 1919.

The MUSGRAVES of Tourin, co. Waterford, created baronets of Ireland, in 1782.

Arms—Gu., six annulets, or.

NANSLADRON—BARON NANSLADRON.

By Writ of Summons, dated 29 December, 1299.

Lineage.

In the 29th EDWARD I.,

SERLO DE NANSLADRON, or LANSLADRON, was in the expedition then made into Scotland, and had summons to parliament as a Baron, from the 28th to the 34th of the same reign, but never afterwards, and of his lordship nothing further is known.

Arms—Sa., three chevrons, arg.

NASSAU—EARLS OF ROCHFORD.

By Letters Patent, dated 10 May, 1695.

Lineage.

FREDERICK DE NASSAU, natural son of Henry-Frederick de Nassau, Prince of Orange (grandfather of King WILLIAM III.), by the dau. of the Bourgue Mestre d'Emmeric, was endowed by his father with the lordship of Zuytlestein, and thereupon assumed that surname. He subsequently commanded the infantry in the service of the States-General, when his country was invaded by the French, in 1672. In that gloomy conjuncture, when the Prince of Orange was elected Stadtholder, his highness's first action was an attack on Naerden; in furtherance of which, he detached General Zuytlestein to take up a position between Utrecht and the object of the prince's operations; whereupon the Duke of Luxembourg marched to relieve the besieged, and fell, with between 8,000 and 9,000 men, on General Zuytlestein, who bravely met the assault, and repulsed his assailant. The town was afterwards bombarded, and reduced to such extremity, as to be compelled to offer terms of capitulation: in which interval the Duke of Luxembourg, having been reinforced, marched through swamps guided by peasants to Voordam, and re-attacked General Zuytlestein, who, after a gallant resistance, fell, sword in hand, 12 October, 1672. The son of this brave soldier (br. Mary, his wife, dau. of Sir William Killigrew, Bart., Chamberlain to Queen Catharine, consort of CHARLES II.),

WILLIAM-HENRY DE ZUYLSTEIN, confidential friend of WILLIAM III., accompanied that prince to England, and was elevated to the peerage 10 May, 1695, as Baron of Enfield, Viscount Tunbridge, and EARL OF ROCHFORD. His lordship m. Jane, dau. and heiress of Sir Henry Wroth, of Durans, co. Middlesex, by whom he had four sons and five daus. He d. at Zuytlestein, in 1703, and was s. by his eldest son,

WILLIAM-HENRY DE NASSAU, 2nd earl. This nobleman was a military officer of considerable renown, and participating in the triumphs of the Duke of Marlborough, was the bearer of the despatches announcing the glorious victory of Blenheim, 2 August, 1704. His lordship fell at the battle of Almanza, in Spain, 27 July, 1710; and, as he d. unm., the honours devolved upon his brother,

FREDERICK NASSAU, 3rd earl, then one of the nobles of the province of Utrecht. His lordship m. Beesey, dau. and heiress of Richard Savage, Earl of Rivers, by whom (who m. 2ndly, the Rev. Mr. Carter), he left two sons,

I. WILLIAM-HENRY, his successor.

II. Richard-Savage, one of the clerks of the Board of Green Cloth, and M.P.; b. in 1723; m. in December, 1751, Elizabeth, dau. and heiress of Edward Spencer, Esq., of Rendlesham, Sussex, and Dowager of James, Duke of Hamilton and Brandon, by whom (who d. 9 March, 1771,) he left at his decease, May, 1780,

1 WILLIAM-HENRY, last earl.

2 George-Richard-Savage, b. 5 September, 1756; d. s. p.

1 Lucy, d. unm.

His lordship d. 14 June, 1738, and was s. by his elder son,

WILLIAM-HENRY NASSAU, 4th earl, who was installed a knight of the Garter, in 1778, having previously resided as ambassador at the courts of Madrid and Versailles, and filled the offices of groom of the stole, first lord of the bedchamber, and secretary of state. His lordship m. Lucy, dau. of Edward Young, Esq., of Durnford, co. Wilts, by whom (who d. 9 January, 1773,) he had no issue. He d. 20 September, 1781, and was s. by his nephew,

WILLIAM-HENRY NASSAU, 5th earl, b. 28 July, 1764, at whose decease, nam., 3 September, 1830, all his honours became EXTINCT.

Arms—Quarterly: 1st, az., semée of billets, or, a lion rampant, or the 2nd, for NASSAU; 2nd, or, a lion rampant, gu., ducally crowned, az., for DIETZ; 3rd, gu., a fesse, arg., for VIANDEN; 4th, gu., two lions passant guardant, in pale, or, for CATENELLOEN; over all, in an escutcheon gu., three rules, arg., in chief, a label of three points of the last, for ZUTLESTEIN.

NASSAU, OR DE AUVERQUERQUE—EARL OF GRANTHAM.

By Letters Patent, dated 24 December, 1698.

Lineage.

HENRY DE NASSAU, Lord of Auverquerque, or d'Ouwerkerck, general of Dutch infantry, and governor of Hortogenboesh, d. 28 February, 1668, leaving by his wife, Elizabeth, dau. of Count de Horn, the following issue,

Maurice, Earl of Nassau, being so created by the Emperor LEOPOLD, Lord of La Leek, in Holland, and governor of Stuike, d. in 1683.

William Adrian, Lord of Odyke, Zeist, &c., was created likewise a count of the empire, and was premier nobleman of Zealand.

HENRY, of whom presently.

Emilia, m. to the celebrated Thomas Butler, Earl of Ossory, son and heir of James, Duke of Ormond.

Isabella, m. to Henry Bennett, Earl of Arlington.

Mauritia, m. to Colin Lindsey, Earl of Balcarres.

Charlotte, lady of the bedchamber, d. unm. in 1702.

Anne-Elizabeth, m. to Heer van Baron Ruytenburgh, and was mother of Anne-Elizabeth, who m. George, 2nd Earl of Cholmondeley.

The youngest son,

HENRY DE NASSAU, Lord of Auverquerque, came into England with the Prince of Orange, in 1670, and being with his highness when he visited the University of Oxford, had the degree of Doctor of Civil Law conferred upon him. He was subsequently the companion in arms of the prince, and at the battle of St. Dennis, before Mons, in 1678, had the good fortune to save his life, by striking to the ground an officer in the act of charging his highness; for which gallant achievement, the States-general presented him with a sword, whereof the hilt was of massy gold, a pair of pistols richly inlaid with gold, and a pair of gold horse buckles. Being captain of the guard to the Prince of Orange, he attended him in that station into England, anno 1688; and upon the accession of WILLIAM and MARY to the throne, he was naturalised by act of parliament, and appointed master of the horse. His lordship was at the battle of the Boyne, and subsequently attended his royal master in all his campaigns against the French. "The gallant manner (we quote Macaulay) in which Auverquerque brought off the remains of Mackay's division (at Steinkirk) was long remembered and talked of with grateful admiration by the British camp fires." On his death-bed, King WILLIAM "strained his feeble voice to thank Auverquerque for the affectionate and loyal services of thirty years." At the monarch's decease, Auverquerque returned to Holland, and was appointed by the States, velt-marshal of the army. In the campaign of 1708, his lordship lost his life in the field, as he had always desired. He d. in the camp at Rouelaer, in the sixty-seventh year of his age, after a procrastinated indisposition, 17 October, 1708, and was interred with great pomp at Auverquerque. His lordship m. Isabella van Aersen, dau. of Cornelius, Lord of Sommeldyck and Plaata, by whom he had issue,

Louis, d. 2 August, 1697, aged eighteen.

HENRY, of whom presently.

Cornelius, Count de Nassau, Lord of Wendenburg, lieut.-gen. in the service of the States-general, gained the battle of Wynendahl, and was killed at the battle of Denain, anno 1712.

Maurice, Count de Nassau, lieut.-gen. in the service of the States-general, and governor of Stuike.

Francis, Count de Nassau, colonel of dragoons, killed at the battle of Almenare, 27 July, 1710, in Spain.

Isabella, m. in 1691, to Charles, Lord Lansdown, heir-apparent to John Granville, 1st Earl of Bath, by whom he had an only son, William-Henry, 3rd Earl of Bath.

Frances, m. to Nanfant Coote, Earl of Bellamont, in the peerage of Ireland.

HENRY D'AUVERQUERQUE, the eldest surviving son, had been elevated to the peerage in the lifetime of his father, 24 December, 1698, by the titles of Baron Alford, Viscount Boston, and EARL OF GRANTHAM, with remainder, failing his male issue, to his younger brothers, Cornelius, Maurice and Francis d'Auverquerque, and the male issue of their bodies. His lordship m. Lady Henrietta Butler, sister of James, Duke of Ormonde, and dau. of the celebrated Thomas, Earl of Ossory, by whom he had issue, Henry, Viscount Boston, d. 19 June, 1718. unm.

Thomas, Viscount Boston, d. 27 April, 1730, unm.

Frances, m. in 1737, Captain Elliot.

Emilia-Maria, d. at ten years of age.

Henrietta, m. 27 June, 1732, to William, 2nd Earl Cowper, ancestor, by her, of the present Earl Cowper.

His lordship d. in 1764, when all his honours EXPIRED.

Arms—Quarterly: 1st, az., semée of billets, and a lion rampant, or; 2nd, or, a lion rampant guardant, gu., crowned with a ducal coronet, az.; 3rd, gu., a fesse arg.; 4th, gu., two lions passant guardant in pale, or, over all in an escutcheon, arg., a lion rampant, az.

NEREFORD—BARON NEREFORD.

By Writ of Summons, dated 26 January, 1297.

Lineage.

In the year 1206, ROBERT DE NEREFORD, and his wife, Alice, dau. of John Pouchard, founded the abbey of Pree, co. Norfolk, as also an hospital there, for thirteen poor people. This Robert was governor of Dover Castle, in the 1st HENRY III., under Hubert de Burgh, Justiciary of England. He was s. by

WILLIAM DE NEREFORD, who had been in arms with the barons against King JOHN, and had his lands seized, but returning to his allegiance in the beginning of the next reign, they were restored to him. He m. Petronill, one of the daus. and co-heirs of John de Vaux, without license, for which offence he paid a fine of £230 to the crown. In the division of the lands of de Vaux, with William de Ros, who had m. the other co-heir, this William de Nereford had the manors of Sherston and Sholesham, in the co. of Norfolk, with other lands in the same shire, and in the cos. Suffolk and Cambridge. In the 22nd EDWARD I., he received command, with divers other great men, to attend the king, with his best advice, upon the great affairs of the realm, and was summoned to parliament as a Baron in the 22nd and the 25th of the same reign, but never afterwards. His lordship was s. by his son,

JOHN DE NEREFORD, who does not appear to have been summoned to parliament as a Baron. He d. s. p., and was s. by his brother,

THOMAS DE NEREFORD, who was father of

SIR JOHN DE NEREFORD, Knt., who was slain in the wars in France, in the 38th EDWARD III., leaving an only dau., and heiress,

MARGERY DE NEREFORD, then but five years old, who afterwards vowed chastity.

Arms—Gu., a lion rampant, ermine.

Arms—Arg., a cross, gu., fretty, or.

NEVILL—BARONS NEVILL, OF RABY, EARLS OF WESTMORELAND.

Barony, by Writ of Summons, dated 8 June, 1294.
Earldom, by Charter, dated 29 September, 1397.

Lineage.

This noble, ancient, and illustrious family, which "was to mediæval England what the Douglas was to Scotland," was founded in England, by

GILBERT DE NEVIL, a Norman, one of the companions in arms of the CONQUEROR, and called by some of our genealogists his admiral; although there is no mention of him, or of any person of the name, in the General Survey. The grandson, it is presumed, of this Gilbert,

GEOFFREY DE NEVILL (son and heir of Geoffrey de Neville), m. Emma, dau. and heir of Bertram de Bulmer, Lord of Brancepeth, a great baron of the north, and d. 1194, having issue,

HENRY, who d. s. p. in 1227.

Isabel.

By the heiress of Bulmer, Geoffrey de Nevill acquired extensive estates, which, after the death of his son, as stated above, without issue, devolved upon his dau.,

ISABEL DE NEVILL. This great heiress m. ROBERT FITZ-MALDRED, the Saxon, Lord of Raby, in the bishopric of Durham, and had a son, GEOFFREY, who, adopting his maternal surname, and inheriting the estates, became

GEOFFREY DE NEVILL, of Raby, and left (by Margaret, his wife,) two sons, viz.,

ROBERT, his successor.

Geoffrey, who, in the 54th HENRY III., was constituted governor of Scarborough Castle, and a justice itinerant. He m. Margaret, dau. and heir of Sir John Longvillers, of Hornby Castle, in Lancashire, and d. in the 13th EDWARD I., being then seized of the manor of Appleby, and other lands in Lincolnshire; the castle and manor of Hornby, co. Lancaster; and Hoton-Longvillers, and other manors in Yorkshire; the entire of which he acquired by his wife. He was ancestor of the NEVILLS of Hornby.

The elder son,

ROBERT NEVILL, had livery in the 30th HENRY III., upon doing his fealty, of all the lands which he inherited from his grandfather, Robert Fitz-Maldred. In the 42nd of the same reign, he had a military summons to march to the relief of the King of Scotland, and he was then constituted governor of the Castles of Norham and Werke. In the next year, he was entrusted with Bamborough Castle: and two years afterwards, made warden of all the king's forests beyond Trent; which was followed by the appointment of justice-itinerant, for the pleas of those forests. In the 47th, he was one of the barons who undertook for the king's observance of the ordinances of Oxford; and in the same turbulent period, was made captain-general of all the king's forces beyond Trent, as also sheriff of Yorkshire, and governor of the castle of York; but notwithstanding these great trusts, he subsequently joined the baronial banner, yet was fortunate enough, after the discomfiture of his party, not only to obtain his pardon, but to be constituted governor of Pickering Castle, in Yorkshire. He m. Ida, relict or dau. of Robert Bertram, and had a son,

ROBERT, who m. (54th HENRY III.,) Mary, elder dau. and co-heir of Ralph Fitz-Randolph, Lord of Middleham, by which alliance he acquired that manor, with the manor of Houton, co. Norfolk, and Snape, co. York. He d. v. p., leaving a son,

RANULPH, who s. his grandfather.

Robert de Nevill d. in 1282, and was s. by his grandson,

RANULPH, or RALPH DE NEVILL, who, being in minority, at the time of his grandfather's decease, obtained liberty of the king, that his friends might plough and manage his lands; and in the 13th EDWARD I., had livery of certain manors, part of his inheritance; soon after this, he had a warm contest with the prior of Durham, about the presentation of a stag, upon St. Cuthbert's Day, in September; "which, in truth" (says Dugdale), "was rather a rent than an obligation, in regard he held Raby, with the eight adjoining townships, by the yearly rent of £4 and a stag. For, contrary to the custom of his ancestors, he not only required that the prior of Durham, at the offering of that stag, ought to feast him, and all the company he should bring, but that the prior's own menial servants should, for that time, be set aside, and his peculiar servants and officers be put in their stead. Whereupon, amongst other of his guests, he invited John de Baliol, of Barnard Castle, who refused to go with him, alleging that he never knew the Nevills to have such a privilege there; Sir William de Brompton, the bishop's chief justice, likewise acknowledging that he himself was the first that began that extravagant practice; for being a young man, and delighting in hunting, he came with the Lord Nevill at the offering of the stag, and said to his companions, 'Come, let us go into the abbey and wind our horns,' and so they did. The prior father adding, that before the time of this Ranulph, none of his predecessors ever made any such claim; but when they brought the stag into the hall, they had only a breakfast, nor did the lord himself ever stay dinner, except he were invited." This Ranulph was summoned to parliament as a Baron, 8 June, 1294, and from that period, to 18 February, 1331. His lordship was in the wars of France, temp. EDWARD I., and in those of Scotland in the next reign. It is said, however, that he little minded secular business, but devoted the principal part of his time to conversation with the canons of Merton and Coverham, upon whom he bestowed some considerable grants. He m. 1st, Euphemia, dau. of Robert and sister of John de Clavinger, and had two sons,

ROBERT, of Middleham, called from his love and show of finery, the Peacock of the North, who d. a. p. in his father's life-time.

RALPH, his successor.

Margaret, m. William, Lord Ros, of Hamlake.

Anastasia, m. to Walter de Fauconbridge.

His lordship m. 2ndly, Margery, dau. of John, son of Marmaduke de Thweng, but had no issue. He d. in 1331, was buried on the south side of the altar at Coverham, and was s. by his only surviving son, RALPH DE NEVILL, 2nd baron, summoned to parliament, from 20 November, 1331, to 20 January, 1336. This nobleman, in the time of his father was retained by indenture to serve the Lord Henry de Percy for life, in peace and war, against all men except the king, with twenty men-at-arms, whereof five to be knights receiving £100 sterling per annum. The dispute with the prior of Durham, regarding the presentation of the stag was revived, and finally set at rest, in the abandonment of his claim, by this Lord Nevill. The matter is thus detailed by Dugdale: "In this year likewise, doing his fealty to William, prior of Durham, upon Lammas day, for the manor of RAST, he told him, 'that he would offer the stag as his ancestors had done; saving that, whereas his father required that the prior's servants should be set aside at that time, and his own serve in their stead, he would be content that his should attend together with those of the prior's; and whereas, his father insisted, that his servants should only be admitted at dinner; he stood upon it that his should be there entertained the whole day and likewise the morrow at breakfast.' Whereupon the prior made answer, 'that none of his ancestors were ever so admitted, and that he would rather quit the stag, than suffer any new custom to the prejudice of their church.' But, to this Ralph replied 'that he would perform the whole service, or none, and put the trial of his right upon the country.' The prior, therefore, knowing him to be so powerful, and that the country could not displease him, declined the offer; howbeit, at length, to gain his favour, in regard he had no small interest at court, and might do him a kindness or a displeasure, was content for that one time he should perform it as he pleased, so that it might not be drawn into example afterwards: and to the purpose proposed, that indentures should be made betwixt them. Whereupon the Lord Nevill brought but few with him, and those more for the honour of the prior, than a burthen; and so shortly after dinner took his leave, but left one of his servants to lodge there all night, and to take his breakfast there on the next day; 'protesting, that being both a son and tenant to the church, he would not be burthensome to it, in respect it would be no advantage to himself, but might much damne him, if he should bring with him as great a train as he would, saying, 'what doth a breakfast signify to me? nothing. And likewise, that if the prior would shew that he had no right to what he so claimed, he would freely recede therefrom; and if he had a right, he would accept of a composition for it, rather than be burthensome to the convent; but if they should put him to get his right by law, then he would not abate anything thereof.' Whereupon inquiry being made amongst the eldest monks of the house, they affirmed, that being of eight years standing when his father was before repulsed, they had often seen the stag offered, and that he never staid dinner, but when the prior invited him; and some ancient men of the country testified as much: as also, that so soon as the stag was brought they carried him to the kitchen, and those who brought him were taken into the hall to breakfast, as they that bring their rents used to be.

"Moreover, when it happened any of the Lords Nevill to be desired to stay dinner with the prior, his cook was admitted into the kitchen to prepare a dish for him; so likewise, another servant in the cellar, to choose his drink, and in like manner, some other at the gate, who knew his servants and followers, merely to let them in, and keep out others, who, under pretence of being servants might then intrude. But this was only done by the prior, as out of courtesy and respect, and not at all out of right."

In the 7th EDWARD III., Lord Nevill was one of the commissioners sent into Scotland, there to see that the covenants between EDWARD DE BALIOL, King of Scots, and his royal master, were ratified by the parliament of that kingdom; and the next year he was joined with Henry de Percy, in the wardenship of the marches of Northumberland, Cumberland, and Westmoreland. He had, subsequently other high and confidential employments, and was constantly engaged in the wars of Scotland and France. His lordship m. Alice, dau. of Sir Hugh de Audley, and by her (who m. 2ndly, Ralph, Lord Greystock, and d. 1374,) had issue,

JOHN (Sir), his successor.

William (Sir), a distinguished soldier, gentleman of the bed-chamber to RICHARD II.

Thomas, m. Margaret, dau. of William Babington, and had a dau. and heir,

Jane, m. 1st, to Thomas Thurland; and 2ndly, to Sir Gervase Clifton, Knt.

Robert (Sir), of Eldon, eminent in arms, from whom derive their descent the NEVILES, of Grove, N. Hs., Baronets, the NEVILES, of Wellingore, co. Lincoln, the NEVILES, of Thorney, Notts., the NEVILES, of Badsworth, and Skebrook Park, co. York, &c.

Alexander, archbishop of York, and lord high chancellor, d. in 1391.

Ralph (Sir), of Candall.

Euphemia, m. 1st, Reginald de Lucy; 2ndly, Lord Clifford.

Catherine, m. to Lord Dacre, of Gillesland.

Margaret, m. 1st, to William, 4th Lord Ros, of Hamlake, and 2ndly, to Henry Percy, Earl of Northumberland.

Isabel, m. to Hugh Fitzlugh.

Eleanor, m. to Geoffrey Le Scrope.

He d. in 1367, and was buried in the church of Durham, on the south side thereof, being the first layman that had sepulture there, which favour he obtained from the prior and convent, for a vestment of red velvet, richly embroidered with gold silk, great pearls, and images of saints, standing in tabernacles, by him given to St. Cuthbert. His body being brought in a chariot drawn by seven horses to the boundary of the churchyard, and thence conveyed upon the shoulders of knights into the middle of the church, where the abbot of St. Mary's in York (by reason of the bishop's absence and impotency of the dean), performed the office of the dead, and celebrated the morrow mass, at which were offered eight horses, viz., four for the war, with four men armed, and all their harness and habiliments: and four others for peace; as also three cloths of gold, of blue colour, interwoven with flowers. Four of those horses were redeemed, after the funeral, by Sir JOHN, his son and heir, for 100 marks. His lordship was s. by his eldest son,

SIR JOHN DE NEVILL, 3rd baron, summoned to parliament as LORD NEVILL, of Raby, from 24 February, 1368, to 28 July, 1388. This nobleman was carried by his father to witness the battle of Durham, being then scarcely five years old; and received the honour of knighthood some years afterwards when in arms before the barriers of Paris. In the 44th of the same reign he was again in the wars with France, and then constituted admiral of the king's fleet from the mouth of the Thames northwards. During the remainder of King EDWARD's reign he was constantly in active service either in France or Scotland. In the 2nd RICHARD II. he was constituted Lieutenant of Aquitaine, and he was likewise seneschal of Bordeaux. It is reported of this nobleman that he was some time employed against the Turks; and that being Lieutenant of Aquitaine, he reduced that province to tranquillity, and that in his service in those parts, he won, and had rendered to him, 83 walled towns, castles, and forts. His lordship was a knight of the Garter. He m. 1st, Maud, dau. of Henry, Lord Percy, by whom he had issue,

RALPH, his successor.

Thomas, who m. Joane, only dau. and heiress of William de Furnival, Lord Furnival, and was summoned to parliament in her right, as LORD FURNIVAL (see FURNIVAL, Lords Furnival).

Maud, m. to William, Lord Scrope.

Alice, m. to William, Lord Deincourt.

Eleanor, m. to Ralph, Lord Lumley.

His lordship m. 2ndly, Elizabeth, dau. and heir of William, Lord Latimer, K.G., and had by her (who m. 2ndly, Sir Robert de Willoughby), issue,

JOHN, who, in right of his mother, was summoned to parliament as LORD LATIMER (see LATIMER, BARONS LATIMER, of Da. b. r.).

Elizabeth, m. to Sir Thomas Willoughby, Knt.

Margaret.

He d. at Newcastle, 17 October, 1388, was buried in the south side of the nave of Durham Cathedral, and was s. by his eldest son,

RALPH DE NEVILL, 4th baron, summoned to parliament from 6 December, 1388, to 30 November, 1396. This nobleman took a leading part in the political drama of his day, and sustained it with more than ordinary ability. In the life-time of his father (9th RICHARD II.), he was joined with Thomas Clifford, son of Lord Clifford, in the governorship of the city and castle of Carlisle, and was appointed a commissionership for the guardianship of the West Marches. In three years after this he succeeded to the title, and in two years subsequently he was one of the commissioners appointed to treat with the Kings of France and Scotland, touching a truce made by them with the King of England. In the 21st RICHARD II. he was made constable of the Tower of London, and shortly afterwards advanced

In full parliament to the dignity of EARL OF WESTMORELAND. His lordship was of the privy council to King RICHARD, and had much favour from that monarch, yet he was one of the most active in raising HENRY, of Lancaster, to the throne, as HENRY IV., and was rewarded by the new king in the first year of his reign, with a grant of the county and honour of Richmond for his life, and with the great office of Earl Marshal of England. Soon after this he stoutly resisted the Earl of Northumberland in his rebellion, and forced the PERCIES, who had advanced as far as Durham, to fall back upon Prudhoe, when the battle of Shrewsbury ensued, in which the gallant Hotspur sustained so signal a defeat, and closed his impetuous career. The earl was afterwards governor of the town and castle of Carlisle, warden of the West Marches towards Scotland, and governor of Roxborough. He was also a knight of the Garter. His lordship m. 1st, Lady Margaret Stafford, dau. of Hugh, Earl Stafford, K.G., for which marriage a dispensation was obtained from Pope URBAN V., the earl and his bride being within the third and fourth degrees of consanguinity: by this lady he had issue,

JOHN, Lord Nevill, who, in the 12th HENRY IV., was made governor of Roxburgh Castle for ten years, and the next year constituted warden of the West Marches towards Scotland. His lordship m. Lady Elizabeth Holland, dau. of Thomas, Earl of Kent, and sister and co-heir of Edmund, Earl of Kent, by whom (dying in 1423, his father still living) he left issue,

RALPH, who s. as 2nd Earl of Westmoreland.

John, slain at Towton, in 1461, m. Lady Anne Holland, dau. of John, Duke of Exeter, and widow of his nephew, John, Lord Nevill, and left a son,

RALPH, who s. as 3rd Earl of Westmoreland.

Thomas.

Ralph, who m. Margery, dau. and co-heir of Lord Ferrers, of Wemme, and left a son,

John of Overley who m. Elizabeth, dau. and heir of Robert Newmarch, and left an only dau. and heir, Joane, wife of Sir William Gascoigne.

Maud, m. to Peter, Lord Mauley.

Philippa, m. to Thomas, Lord Dacre.

Alice, m. 1st, to Sir Thomas Grey, Knt., of Heton, and 2ndly, to Sir Gilbert Lancaster, Knt.

Margaret, m. to Richard, Lord Scrope of Bolton.

Anne, m. to Sir Gilbert Umfravill.

Margery, abbess of Barking.

Elizabeth, a nun.

The earl m. 2ndly, Joane de Beaufort, dau. of John of Gaunt, by Katherine Swynford, and widow of Robert, Lord Ferrers, of Wem, by whom he had issue, RICHARD, who m. Lady Alice de Montacute, only dau. and heiress of Thomas, Earl of Salisbury, and was created EARL OF SALISBURY himself (see NEVILL, EARL OF SALISBURY).

William (see NEVILL, LORD FAUCONBERG AND EARL OF KENT).

George (see NEVILL, LORD LATIMER).

Edward (Sir), K.G., who m. Lady Elizabeth Beauchamp, only dau. and heiress of Richard Beauchamp, Lord Bergavenny, and Earl of Worcester, and was summoned to parliament, jure uxoris as Baron Bergavenny; a dignity enjoyed by his lordship's lineal descendant, the present EARL OF ABERGAVENNY.

Robert, a churchman, bishop of Durham.

Anne, m. 1st, to Humphrey, Duke of Buckingham, and 2ndly, to Walter Blount, Lord Mountjoy.

Jane, a nun.

Cicely, m. to Richard Plantagenet, Duke of York.

This great earl d. in 1425, and was s. by his grandson,

RALPH NEVILL, 5th Baron Nevill, of Raby, and 2nd Earl of Westmoreland. This nobleman, after the death of Elizabeth, his mother, had £40 per annum, allowed him by the king for his maintenance, being then in minority. His lordship m. 1st, Elizabeth, dau. of Henry, Lord Percy (Hotspur), and widow of John, Lord Clifford, by whom he had issue,

JOHN, Lord Nevill, who m. Lady Anne Holland, dau. of John, Duke of Exeter, and d. in the life-time of his father s. p.

His widow re-m. her late husband's uncle, Sir John Nevill; and 3rdly, James, Earl of Douglas, K.G.

The earl m. 2ndly, Margaret, dau. of Sir Reginald Cobham, Knt., but had no issue. His lordship d. in 1486, and was s. by his nephew,

RALPH NEVILL, 6th Baron Nevill, of Raby, and 3rd Earl of Westmoreland. This nobleman m. Margaret, dau. of Roger Booth, of Sawley, by Catherine, his wife, dau. of Ralph Hatton, of Mollington, and had an only son,

RALPH, Lord Nevill, who m. Editha, or Elizabeth, dau. of Sir William Sandys, and dying in the life-time of his father, left a son and dau., viz.,

RALPH, who s. as 4th earl.

Anne, m. to Sir William Conyers, Knt., of Hornby.

The earl is said to have died of grief for the loss of his son at Hornby Castle, in 1523, and was s. by his grandson,

RALPH NEVILL, 7th Baron Nevill, of Raby, and 4th Earl of Westmoreland. This nobleman was made a knight of the Garter by King HENRY VIII., and was one of those who signed the celebrated letter to Pope CLEMENT regarding the divorce of Queen Katherine. His lordship m. Lady Catherine Stafford, dau. of Edward, Duke of Buckingham, and had issue, Adeline, d. unm.

His lordship m. 2ndly, Jane, dau. of Sir Richard Cholmondeley, Knt., and widow of Sir Henry Gascoigne, Knt., by whom he had two daus., Margaret and Elizabeth. The earl, who was a knight of the Garter, d. in 1563, and was s. by his son,

CHARLES NEVILL, 9th Baron Nevill, of Raby, and 6th Earl of Westmoreland. This nobleman, joining in the insurrection of Henry Percy, Earl of Northumberland, in the 13th ELIZABETH, was attainted, and preserved his life only by first flying into Scotland, "where he found concealment and protection for a long time at Fernyhurst Castle, in Roxburghshire. Eventually he succeeded in effecting his escape to Flanders, but his vast inheritance was confiscated, and he suffered the extremity of poverty. Brancepeth, the stronghold of the Nevills in war, and Raby, their festive hall in peace, had passed into stranger hands, and nothing remained for the exiled lord. He was living in the Low Countries in 1572, on a miserable pittance allowed him by the bounty of the King of Spain." His lordship m. Jane, dau. of Henry Howard, Earl of Surrey, and sister of Thomas, Duke of Norfolk, by whom he had issue,

NOTE.—In the reign of JAMES I., the Earldom of Westmoreland was claimed by Edward Nevill, and the case appears thus:—

In the time of RICHARD II., Ralph, Lord Nevill, of Raby, was created Earl of Westmoreland, to him and the heirs male of his body; and had issue by his 1st wife a son, Ralph, whose issue male, during several successions, enjoyed the title, and to him Charles, last Earl of Westmoreland, was heir male. That Ralph, the 1st earl, by his 2nd wife, had issue, George Neville, Lord Latimer, of whom the then claimant, Edward Neville, was the lineal descendant, and heir male. And that Charles, then late Earl of Westmoreland, was attainted for high treason. It was, however, adjudged that Edward Neville should not succeed to the earldom, though heir male of the first degree. The authority for which decision was grounded on the statute of 26th HENRY VIII., cap. 13, whereby, in cases of high treason, it is enacted, that the offender shall forfeit all such lands, tenements, and hereditaments, wherein he shall have any estate of inheritance.—BANKS

NEVILL—EARLS OF SALISBURY, EARL OF WARWICK, BARON MONTACUTE, BARON MONTHERMER.

Earldom of Salisbury, by Letters Patent, dated 4 May, 1442.

Earldom of Warwick, by Letters Patent, dated 4 May, 1442.

Barony of Montacute, by Writ of Summons, dated 8 June, 1294.

Barony of Monthermer, by Writ of Summons, dated 4 March, 1309.

Lineage.

RICHARD NEVILL, K.G., eldest son of Ralph Nevill, 1st Earl of Westmoreland, by his 2nd wife, Joane de Beaufort, dau. of John of Gaunt, and widow of Robert, Lord Ferrers, of Wem, m. the Lady Alice Montacute, dau. and heir of Thomas, 4th Earl of Salisbury (see Montacute, Earl of Salisbury), and had that earldom revived in his person, by letters patent, dated 4 May, 1442, with remainder to the said Alice, and with £20 annual rent out of the issues of the co. of Wilts. Her ladyship inherited the old Baronies of MONTACUTE and MONTHERMER, which had been so long in her family. This nobleman obtained from King HENRY VI. numerous substantial grants, and some of the highest and most important trusts, amongst others he was appointed warden of the marches towards Scotland, and governor of Carlisle, and had large territorial gifts from the crown, with a grant of £9,083 6s. 8d. per annum, out of the customs for thirty years, yet he was one of the earliest to espouse the cause of the house of York, and one of the most determined in maintaining it. His lordship fought and won, in conjunction with the Duke of York, the first pitched battle, that of St. Albans, between the contending Roses; and he followed up his success by defeating the Lord Audley at Blore Heath in 1458, and again in 1460, at Northampton, when he was constituted by the Yorkists Lord Great Chamberlain of England. The fortune of war changing, however, in the very next encounter, the battle of Wakefield, the Duke of York fell, the Yorkists were routed, Salisbury's son, Sir Thomas Nevill, slain, and the earl himself made prisoner, when his head was immediately cut off, and fixed upon a pole over one of the gates of the city of York. His lordship had issue by the heiress of the Montacutes (who d. 1463), RICHARD, Earl of Warwick, his successor.

Thomas (Sir), m. Maud, widow of Lord Willoughby, and was slain at Wakefield, d.s.p.

John (Sir), created MARQUESS OF MONTAGU (see that dignity).

George, in holy orders, became Archbishop of York, and Chancellor of England.

Robert, } d. young.

Joane, m. to William Fitz-Alan, Earl of Arundel.

Cicely, m. 1st, to Henry Beauchamp, Duke of Warwick, and 2ndly, to John Tiptoft, Earl of Worcester.

Alice, m. to Henry, Lord Fitz-Hugh.

Eleanor, m. to Thomas Stanley, 1st Earl of Warwick.

Katherine, m. to William, Lord Bonville.

Margaret, m. 1st, to John de Vere, Earl of Oxford; and 2ndly, to William, Lord Hastings.

The decapitation of the earl (who was a knight of the Garter) occurred in December, 1460, when his eldest son,

RICHARD NEVILL, K.G., the stout Earl of Warwick, became 2nd Earl of Salisbury, and he inherited from his mother the Baronies of Montacute and Monthermer. His lordship m. Lady Anne Beauchamp, dau. of Richard, 5th Earl of Warwick, and heiress of the Beauchamps, on the decease, in 1449, of her young niece, Anne, Countess of Warwick, dau. and heiress of Henry, Duke of Warwick, and had a confirmation of the EARLDOM OF WARWICK, with all its pre-eminences to himself and his wife, the said Lady Anne Beauchamp, by letters patent, dated 23 July, in the same year. This nobleman so well known in English history as the king maker, "the greatest and last of the old Norman chivalry—kinglier in pride, in state, in possessions, and in renown than the King himself," espoused the fortunes of the house of York at the very commencement of the contest between the Roses, and was made captain-general of Calais after the first battle of St. Albans. He subsequently commanded the van of the Yorkists at Northampton, where Margaret of Anjou sustained so signal a defeat. He shared, however, in the reverses of his party in the ensuing battles of Wakefield and St. Albans, but out-generalled the heroic Margaret, in reaching London, with the young Earl of March, son of the Duke of York, before her victorious army. Here he caused his protégé to be proclaimed as EDWARD IV., and following the Queen and Lancastrians into the north, fixed the sceptre in the hand of the new monarch by the great victory of Towton Field. After which he was constituted general warden of the east marches towards Scotland, constable of Dover Castle, lord great chamberlain of England for life, and lord high steward. He likewise obtained immense grants from the crown, so that his revenues are said to have amounted, independently of his own heritable estates, to the annual income of four score thousand crowns! It is not possible, however, in a work of this description, to enter into anything like a detail of the deeds of this, probably most potent, noble in the whole range of English story. We must, therefore, be content in briefly stating, that his lordship, becoming in a few years discontented with the order of things which he had thus established, projected the restoration of the Lancastrian monarch, HENRY VI., and having embodied an army under the sanction of his former foe, Margaret of Anjou, landed in the west of England from Normandy, proclaimed King HENRY VI., forced King EDWARD to fly the kingdom, marched upon London, and releasing the restored monarch from his captivity in the Tower, re-established him upon the throne; when he was himself constituted lord high admiral of England. This revolution was, however, but of brief endurance, for within one short year King EDWARD reappeared upon the scene of action, and soon found himself at the head of a sufficient force to contend for, and to recover his diadem. The battle was fought on Easter-day, 1471, at Barnet Field, when, notwithstanding the personal valour and great martial prowess of the Earl of Warwick and his brother, the Marquess of Montagu, victory declared for the Yorkists, but his lordship survived not the defeat—he fell in the brunt of the conflict, with a numerous train of eminent associates. The earl's remains, with those of his brother, the Marquess of Montagu, were conveyed to London, and there exposed to public view in the cathedral of St. Paul, whence they were transferred to Bitham, in Berkshire, and interred in the tomb of the Montacutes. Comines reports, that the earl was so popular at Calais, of which he was governor, that everybody wore his badge, no man esteeming himself gallant whose head was not adorned with his rappel staff; nor no door frequented that had not his white cross painted thereon. Moreover, he saith, that this earl never used to fight on foot; but his manner was, when he had led his men to the charge, then to take horse. And if the victory fell on his side, to fight among his soldiers, otherwise to depart in time. But in this last battle he was constrained by his brother, the Marquess of Montagu, to alight and to send away his horse. Of his extraordinary hospitality, it is recorded that, at his house in London, six oxen were usually eaten at breakfast, and every tavern full of his meat; "for, who that had any acquaintance in his family, should have as much sodden and roast as he might carry upon a long dagger." As admiral to King HENRY VI., his lordship was styled Great Captain of the Sea, and through the favour of the same monarch, he had a grant of precedency above all the earls of England, and to augment his grandeur, had a peculiar office at arms, for his services in martial employments, called Warwick Herald. After his lordship's death, his countess (such the mutability of human affairs), the great heiress of the Beauchamps, endured the deepest distress, being constrained to take sanctuary in the abbey of Beaulieu, in Hampshire, where she continued a long time in a very mean condition; thence removing privately into the north, she there too abode in most humble circumstances, all her vast inheritance being, by authority of parliament, taken from her and settled upon ISABEL and ANNE, her two daus. and heirs, as if she herself had been naturally dead. But upon the death of these ladies, without surviving issue, her inheritance was restored, 3rd HENRY VII., with power to alienate the same or any part thereof. This appears, however, to have been merely granted, in order that she might transfer it to the king; for soon after, by special deed, and a fine thereupon, she passed the Warwick estates, of no less than 114 lordships, together with the isles of Jersey, &c., to King HENRY VII., and his issue male, with remainder to herself and her heirs for ever. When she died is not exactly known, but she was living in the 5th HENRY VII. By this lady the Earl of Warwick left two daus.,

1. ISABEL, b. 5 September, 1451, m. to George Plantagenet, Duke of Clarence, K.G., brother of King EDWARD IV., and d. 1476, having had issue.

1. EDWARD, EARL OF WARWICK and SALISBURY, beheaded 1499.

Barony, by Writ of Summons, dated 30 July, 1460.

Earldom, by Letters Patent, dated 27 May, 1467.

Marquessate, by Letters Patent, dated 25 May, 1470.

Lineage.

SIR JOHN NEVILL, 3rd son of Richard Nevill, Earl of Salisbury, by the Lady Alice Montacute, dau. and heir of Thomas Montacute, Earl of Salisbury, was summoned to parliament as BARON NEVILL, of Montagus by King HENRY VI., in 1460, and afterwards espousing, with his father and elder brother,

Richard, the celebrated Earl of Warwick, the interests of the house of York, he had similar summons upon the accession of King EDWARD IV., which latter monarch constituted him general warden of the east marches towards Scotland, and the ensuing year (27 May, 1467), advanced him to the dignity of EARL OF NORTHUMBERLAND (in consequence of the flight of Henry Percy, Earl of Northumberland, into Scotland, with HENRY VI.) His lordship in this year defeated the Lancastrians under the Duke of Somerset, at Hexham; and he was subsequently rewarded with extensive grants from the forfeited lands in the co. of Norfolk, Leicester, Nottingham, Suffolk, and York. In the 10th EDWARD IV., the earl was induced to resign the peerage of Northumberland, in order that the Percy might be restored; and in lieu thereof, he was created MARQUESS OF MONTAGU. Soon after this, however, his lordship joined his brother, the Earl of Warwick, in the restoration of King HENRY VI., and eventually shared the fate of that eminent nobleman, at the battle of Barnet, 14 April, 1471; in that conflict both brothers fell, and both were afterwards attainted. The marquess m. Isabel, dau. and heir of Sir Edmund Ingoldsthorp, Knt., and by her (who m. 2ndly, Sir William Norris), had issue,

GEORGE, who was created DUKE OF BEDFORD, 5 January, 1469, by King EDWARD IV., with the intention of bestowing upon him, in marriage, his eldest dau., the Lady Elizabeth Plantagenet. After the attainder of his father, and the consequent confiscation of his heritable estates, having no means of sustaining the ducal dignity, his grace was degraded from all his dignities and honours by parliament, in 1477. He d. in 1483, s. p., and was interred at Sheriff Hutton.

John, d. and was buried at Salston, in Cambridgeshire.

SIR ANTHONY BROWNE, Knt., was created Viscount Montagu.

Isabel, m. to Sir William Huddleston, Knt., of Salston, co. Cambridge.

Under the attainder of this nobleman, the Barony of Nevill, of Montagu, and the Marquessate of Montagu, became FORFEITED.

NEVILL, AND FAUCONBERG—BARONS FAUCONBERG, EARL OF KENT.

Barony, by Writ of Summons, dated 23 July, 1296.

Earldom, by Letters Patent, dated 1462.

Lineage.

Of this ancient family, the first upon record is

PETER DE FALKEBERG, son of Agnes de Arches, foundress of the house of nuns, Nunkelling, in Holderness, co. York. This Peter had three sons,

William.

Walter, m. Agnes, one of the three daus. and co-heirs of Simon Fitz-Simon, by Isabel, his wife, dau. and heir of Thomas de Cokeney, founder of Welbeck Abbey, in Nottinghamshire.

Stephen, m. Petronill, another of the daus. and co-heirs of Simon Fitz-Simon.

To Walter de Falkeberge (the 2nd son), succeeded

PETER DE FAUCONBERG, who was s. by his son,

WALTER DE FAUCONBERG, of Ryse, in Holderness, who, in the 8th HENRY III., was constituted governor of Plympton Castle, co. Devon. He m. Agnes, one of the sisters and co-heirs of Peter de Bruss of Skelton Castle, and by her he acquired that castle, with other extensive lands, in all of which he obtained charter for free warren, in the 8th Ed-

WARD I. In the 22nd of the same reign, he had summons* to attend the king, amongst divers other persons of note, to advise concerning the important affairs of the realm, and soon after had a military summons to be at Portsmouth, in order to sail with the king into France. He was summoned to parliament as a Baron from 23 June, 1295, to 24 July, 1301, and d. in 1303: his eldest son,

WALTER DE FAUCONBERG, 2nd baron, does not appear from the existing enrolments to have been ever summoned to parliament. His lordship m. Isabel, dau. of Robert, 1st Lord Ros, of Hamlake, by whom he had a numerous family. He was s. by his eldest surviving son,

SIR WALTER DE FAUCONBERG, 3rd baron, summoned to parliament from 12 November, 1303, to 25 August, 1318. This nobleman distinguished himself in the Scottish wars. His lordship m. Anastasia, dau. of Ralph de Nevil, and dying in 1318, was s. by his son,

JOHN DE FAUCONBERG, 4th baron, summoned to parliament from 22 January, 1336, to 10 March, 1349. This nobleman was in the wars of Scotland, 7th EDWARD III., and he was afterwards in the expedition made into Flanders. In the 15th of the same reign, he was constituted sheriff of Yorkshire, and governor of the castle of York; and the next year he was made governor of Berwick-upon-Tweed. His lordship d. in 1349, and was s. by his son,

SIR WALTER DE FAUCONBERG, 5th baron, summoned to parliament, from 25 November, 1359, to 14 August, 1362. This nobleman being a banneret, had an assignation, in the 24th EDWARD III., of £239 9d., to be paid out of the exchequer, for wages due to him, for his services and expenses in the wars beyond sea. In two years afterwards, upon an apprehended invasion by the French, his lordship was appointed, with the Lord Mowbray, and other eminent persons, to guard the sea coast of Yorkshire; and he was subsequently again in the wars of France. He m. 1st, Maud, dau. of John, Lord Pateshull, and sister and co heir of William de Pateshull, and had issue,

i. THOMAS, his heir.

ii. Roger.

iii. Walter.

iv. Roger (Sir), of Holme, in Spaldingmore, who m. Margaret Darcy, heir of Flixburgh, dau. of Robert, son of Sir John Darcy, who was son of Richard Darcy, Lord of Flixburgh, and by her had a son,

Sir Walter Fauconberg, of Whittor, co. Lincoln, who by Maud, his wife, had issue,

1. Roger, d. s. p.

1. Margaret, m. to Sir John Constable, of Holme.

2. Isabel, m. to Sir Edmund Perchay, of Ryton.

3. Constance, d. unm.

His lordship m. 2ndly, Isabel, sister of John Bigot. He d. in 1362, and was s. by his son,

SIR THOMAS DE FAUCONBERG, 6th baron, who does not appear to have been summoned to parliament. This nobleman was with William de Windsor, in the expedition made into Ireland, in the 43rd EDWARD III., and in the 50th of the same reign he was in the wars of France. He m. Joane, sister of Thomas Bromfielde. He d. about the year 1376, leaving an only dau. and heiress,

JOAN DE FAUCONBERG, who married

SIR WILLIAM NEVILL, Knt. (youngest son of Ralph, 1st Earl of Westmoreland, by his 2nd wife, Joane de Beaufort, dau. of John of Gaunt); he was summoned to parliament, jure uxoris, as LORD FAUCONBERG, from 3 August, 1429, to 23 May, 1461. His lordship, who was a military person of great valour, distinguished himself at the siege of Orleans, in the 9th HENRY VI., and subsequently took a leading part in the wars of France. He was governor of the castle of Roxborough, in the same reign; but being sent ambassador into Normandy to treat of peace, he was perfidiously seized upon by the French, and detained for some time a prisoner in France. In consideration of which captivity, he had an assignation, in the 30th HENRY VI., of £4,180, then in arrear, due to him for his pay, whilst he was governor of Roxborough, to be received out of the customs of the ports of Bristol, Kingston-upon-Hull, and Ipswich. After this he was again constituted, in conjunction with Sir Ralph Grey, governor of Roxborough Castle for twelve years, and they were to receive jointly, in times of truce, £1000 per annum, and in time of war, double that income. In the 35th of the same reign, he was again in the wars of France, in the retinue of his nephew, Richard, Earl of Warwick, then governor of Calais, and lieutenant of the marches there. His lordship espousing the cause of EDWARD

IV., and fighting valiantly for that prince, at the battle of Towton, was rewarded, after the accession of the new monarch, by being raised to the dignity of EARL OF KENT, constituted lord admiral of England, and made a knight of the Garter. But those honours his lordship enjoyed a few months only, as he d. some time in the same year, 1463, leaving three daus., his co-heirs, viz.,

Joane, m. to Sir Edward Bechom, Knt., called by Drummoull (History of Noble British Families) Sir Edward Bethune. She d. s. p.

Elizabeth, m. to Sir Richard Strangeways, Knt., and their grand-daus. and co-heirs were, Maria, m. Robert Ros, of Inghamthorpe, and Joan, m. 1st, John Bygod, and 2ndly, Sir W. Mauleverer.

Alice, m. Sir John Conyers, K.G., and her eldest son,

SIR WILLIAM CONYERS was summoned to parliament by King HENRY VIII., as LORD CONYERS. His lordship m. Lady Anne Neville, dau. of Ralph, Earl of Westmoreland, and dying in 1524, left issue,

CHRISTOPHER, his successor.

Katherine, m. to Sir Francis Bigod, of Settrington.

Margaret, m. to Richard, son of Sir Roger Cholmeley, of Rockley, Knt.

His lordship was s. by his son,

SIR CHRISTOPHER CONYERS, 2nd baron, who m. Anne, dau. of William, Lord Dacre, of Gillesland, and had issue,

JOHN, his successor.

Leonard.

Elizabeth, m. to George Playce, Esq., of Hainaby.

Jane, m. to Sir Marmaduke Constable, Knt.

His lordship was s. by his elder son,

JOHN CONYERS, 3rd baron. This nobleman m. Maud, dau. of Henry Clifford, 1st Earl of Cumberland, and d. in 1557, leaving three daus., his heirs, viz.,

Anne, m. to Anthony Kempe, Esq., of Slindon.

Elizabeth, m. to Thomas D'Arcy (see D'Arcy, Barons Conyers).

Catherine, m. to John, son and heir of John Atherton, Esq., of Atherton, in Lancashire.

Of these daus., the descendants of Elizabeth, Lady D'Arcy alone remain, and one of those, Sackville-George Lane-Fox, s. to the BARONY OF CONYERS, on the death, in 1859, of his maternal uncle, the late Duke of Leeds, in whom that barony had vested (see BURKE'S Extant Peerage).

Upon the decease of the Earl of Kent, the Earldom of Kent became EXTINCT, while the Barony of Fauconberg fell into ABEYANCE between his three daus., as it still continues with their representatives.

Arms—Gu., a saltier, arg., a mullet, sa., for difference.

NOTE.—By an old Inquisition, it was found that Henry de Fauconberge held the manor of Cokeney, in Nottinghamshire, by serjeanty, for shoeing the king's horses when the Sovereign went to Mansfield, a place which our kings were wont frequently to retire to, for the purpose of enjoying the chase.

NEVILL—BARON LATIMER.

(See LATIMER, BARONS LATIMER, of Danby.)

NEVILL—BARONS LATIMER.

By Writ of Summons, dated 25 February, 1432.

Lineage.

Upon the decease, without issue, of John Nevill, Lord Latimer, of Danby, several of his lordship's estates passed to his elder brother of the half-blood,

RALPH NEVILL, 1st Earl of Westmoreland, who settled those lands by feoffment on Sir George Nevill, one of his sons by his 2nd wife, Joane, dau. of John of Gaunt, which

SIR GEORGE NEVILL was, thereupon, the next ensuing year, 25 February, 1432, summoned to parliament as BARON LATIMER, and from that date until 7 September, 1469. In the 13th HENRY VI. this nobleman was one of the chief commanders of the king's forces then raised in the north, for the defence of those parts against the Scots. And the same year his lordship came to an agreement with Maud, Countess of Cambridge, (widow of his half-uncle, John, Lord Latimer, of Danby), to this effect, viz.:—That if they should, by advice of their counsel, grant unto Sir John Willoughby, Knt. (for the purpose of avoiding litigation), any of those lands which formerly belonged to the said John, Lord Latimer, that she should give of the said grants, two parts, and he Lord Latimer, one. And in case of any suit commenced by Sir John Willoughby against them (by reason of his being the next heir of blood of the said John, Lord Latimer, of Danby), for any of those lands, she to pay two-third parts, and he the other part of the costs incurred thereby. Lord Latimer m. Lady Elizabeth Beauchamp, 3rd dau. by his 1st wife of Richard, Earl of Warwick, by whom he had issue,

- I. HENRY (Sir), who m. Joanna, dau. of John Bouchier, Lord Berners, and falling at the battle of Edgecot, near Banbury, in the 9th EDWARD IV., his father still living, left two sons and a dau., viz.,
 - 1 RICHARD (Sir), successor to his grandfather.
 - 2 Thomas of Mathon, co. Worcester, and Shenstone, co. Stafford.
 - 1 Joane, m. to Sir James Ratelyffe.
- II. Thomas, of Shenstone, co. Stafford.
 1. Jane, m. to Oliver Dudley.
 - II. Catherine.

Lord Latimer, it appears, in the latter years of his life became an idiot, and King EDWARD IV., in consequence, committed all his lands and lordships to the care of his nephew, Richard Nevill, Earl of Warwick. He d. 30 December, 1469, and was s. by his grandson,

SIR RICHARD NEVILL, 2nd baron, summoned to parliament from 12 August, 1492, to 3 November, 1529. This nobleman was one of the commanders (1st HENRY VII.) of the king's army at the battle of Stoke, wherein John de la Pole, Earl of Lincoln, and his adherents, sustained so signal a defeat. In the 6th HENRY VII. he had special livery of all the lands which descended to him, by the death of his grandfather; and the next year he was again a commander in the English army, under the Earl of Surrey, which marched to the relief of Norham Castle, then invested by the Scots; but the besiegers raised the siege and fled at the approach of the English forces. In the 5th HENRY VIII., Lord Latimer acquired high reputation at the battle of Flodden Field, where the Scottish army was totally routed, and King JAMES IV. of Scotland, slain. In the 28th of the same reign he was one of the peers who subscribed the letter to Pope CLEMENT VII., touching the king's divorce from Queen Katherine. His lordship m. Anne, dau. of Sir Humphrey Stafford, of Grafton, and had issue,

JOHN, his successor.
William, of Penwyn, m. Elizabeth, dau. of Sir Giles Greville, Knt., and his issue became extinct in 1631.
Thomas, of Pigott's Hardley, co. Essex, m. Mary, dau. and co-heir of Sir Thomas Teye, and had a son,
Thomas.

Marmaduke, of Marks Tere, m. Elizabeth, dau. and co-heir of Sir Thomas Teye, and had issue,

Christopher, who d. young.
Alianora, who m. Thomas Teye, Esq., of Laver-de-la-Hay.

George.
Margaret, m. to Edward, son and heir of Robert, Lord Broke.
Dorothy, m. to Sir John Dawney, Knt.
Elizabeth, m. to Sir Christopher Danby.
Catherine.
Susanna, m. to Richard Norton, Esq., high sheriff of Yorkshire 13th ELIZABETH. From a younger son of this marriage, Edmund Norton, the Lords Grantley are said to derive.
Joane.

Lord Latimer* d. in 1530, and was s. by his eldest son,

SIR JOHN NEVILL, 3rd baron, summoned to parliament from 5 January, 1534, to 16 January, 1542. This nobleman, upon the insurrection in Yorkshire, temp. HENRY VIII., called the Pilgrimage of Grace, was one of those deputed by the rebels (the others were the Lords Scrope, Lumley, and Darcy,) to treat with the Duke of Norfolk, then advancing at the head of an army against them. His lordship m. 1st, Lady Dorothy de Vere, dau. and co-heir of John, Earl of Oxford, and had issue,

JOHN, his successor.
Margaret.

He m. 2ndly, Catherine, dau. of Sir Thomas Parr, of Kendall, Knt., by whom (who became, after his decease, the last wife of King HENRY VIII.) he had no issue. His lordship d. in 1542, and was s. by his son,

SIR JOHN NEVILL, 4th baron, summoned to parliament from 14 June, 1543, to 6 January, 1581. His lordship m. Lucy, dau. of Henry, Earl of Worcester, and had issue,

1. Katherine, m. to Henry Percy, 8th Earl of Northumberland, and their descendant and heir-general is the DUKE OF ARTHOL, senior co-heir of the Barony of Latimer.

II. Dorothy, m. to Thomas Cecil, 1st Earl of Exeter, and had issue,

WILLIAM, 2nd Earl of Exeter, who d. 1640, and left three daus., viz.,

Elizabeth, m. to Thomas, Earl of Berkshire. Their heir-general is WINCHCOMBE-HENRY-HOWARD HARTLEY, Esq., of Bucklebury, Berks, one of the co-heirs of the Barony of Latimer.

Diana, m. 1st, to Thomas, Earl of Elgin, and 2ndly, to the Earl of Aylesbury, and d. s. p.

Anne, m. to Henry Grey, Earl of Stamford, and their co-representatives, co-heirs of the Barony of Latimer, are, SIR RAINALD KNIGHTLEY, Bart., of Fawley, co. Northampton; and TROT, widow of Rev. Richard Jenkins, D.D., dean of Wells.

III. Lucy, m. to Sir William Cornwallis, Knt. of Brome, and had two sons, who both d. s. p., with four daus., viz.,

1 Frances, m. to Sir Edmund Withpool, and their representative Sir ROBERT BURDETT, Bart., of Foremark is one of the co-heirs of the Barony of Latimer.

2 Elizabeth, m. 1st, Sir William Scudly; and 2ndly, Richard, Viscount Lumley, and d. s. p. 1851.

3 Cornelia, m. Sir Richard Fernor, of Somerton, and their co-representatives (co-heirs of the Barony of Latimer) are Sir CHARLES-ROBERT TEMPEST, Bart., CHARLES STANDISH, Esq., of Standish, co. Lancaster, and JOHN WRIGHT, Esq., of Kelvedon, co. Essex.

4 Anne, m. to Archibald, Earl of Argyll, and d. 1634; their heir-general is John-Rogerson, LORD ROLLO, one of the co-heirs of the Barony of Latimer.

IV. Elizabeth, m. to Sir John Danvers, Knt., of Dantsey, and had issue,

1 SIR CHARLES DANVERS, Knt., d. s. p. 1602.

2 Sir Henry Danvers, Knt., created EARL OF DANBY. His lordship, who was a knight of the Garter, d. in 1643, unm., when his honours became extinct.

3 Sir John Danvers, of Chelsea, one of the judges of King CHARLES I., d. in 1655. His co-representatives (co-heirs to the Barony of Latimer) are GEORGE-WILLIAM VILLIERS, Esq., and MONTAGU, EARL OF ASHINGTON.

4 Elizabeth Danvers, m. Thomas Wainsley, Esq., of Dunkenhagh, co. Lancaster, and left a dau.,

Anne, who m. 1st, William Middleton, Esq., of Stokeld, co. York, and 2ndly, Sir Edward Osborne, Bart., whose son, Sir Thomas Osborne, was created Viscount Latimer, Earl of Danby, and afterwards Marquess of Carmarthen, and DUKE OF LEEDS.

Lord Latimer d. in 1577, when the Barony of Latimer fell into ABEYANCE between his lordship's four daus. and co-heirs, as it still continues with their descendants and representatives.

NEVILL—BARONS NEVILL OF ESSEX.

By Writ of Summons, dated 22 January, 1336.

Lineage.

In the 8th HENRY III.,

HUGH DE NEVILL was constituted principal warden of the king's forests throughout England, and chief justice of the same. This Hugh m. Joane, dau. and co-heir of Warine Fitz-Gerald, by Alice, his wife, dau. and heir of William de Courcy, and paid 100 marks for livery of the moiety of the manor of Stoke-Courcy, with the castle there, and moiety of the knight's fees thereunto belonging, which he had of her inheritance.

* Memorable, also, is this Richard, Lord Latimer, for the dispute he had with Robert, Lord Broke, touching the Barony of Latimer; to which, as next heir in blood to John, Lord Latimer, of Danby, who d. s. p., the 9th HENRY VI., he claimed a right. But to end the contention, the Lord Broke was informed by an herald, that Sir George Nevill, grandfather to Richard, was created Lord Latimer by a new title, which therefore lineally descended to Richard, by Henry, son and heir of the said George; and that the Lord Broke had made a wrong claim: who should have claimed his style from William Latimer, first created Lord Latimer, of Danby (the head manor of his barony), temp. EDWARD I., on this, the Lord Broke, perceiving his error, and having a title of his own, was contented to conclude a match between their children, and Richard suffered a recovery on certain manors and lordships demanded by the Lord Broke; with which adjustment both parties were well satisfied.—DANES.

He founded the priory of Stoke-Courcy, co. Devon, and was s. by his son,

JOHN DE NEVILL, who, like his father, was chief warden of the forests. In the 26th HENRY III. this John had a military summons to attend the king into France; but in two years afterwards, being convicted of trespassing in the royal forests, he was fined 2000 marks and dismissed from the wardenship with disgrace; which so affected him, that he d. in the same year of a broken heart, at his manor house of Walperfield. He was s. by his son,

HUGH DE NEVILL, a minor at the time of his father's decease, then removed to Windsor Castle, there to be educated with other of the king's wards. For the custody of this Hugh, and benefit of his marriage, John de Courtenay paid to the crown, 31st HENRY III., 2500 marks. From this Hugh, Dugdale surmises, descended

HUGH DE NEVILL, who was father of

JOHN DE NEVILL, who in the 9th EDWARD III., upon doing his homage, had livery of his lands, and was summoned to parliament as JOHANNES DE NEVILL, of Essex, from 22 January, 1336, to 10 March, 1349. His lordship was in the wars of France and Flanders. He d. in 1358, seized of two parts of the manors of Great and Little Wakering, in Essex, for life only, the remainder to William de Bohun, Earl of Northampton; and also jointly with Alice, his wife, the manors of Wether's-field, Parva, Halyngbury, Chighenhale-Zoin, Chighenhale-Tany, and Peltingdon; the reversion of all which belonged to the said William, Earl of Northampton.

Upon the decease of Lord Nevill without issue, the Barony of Nevill, of Essex, became EXTINCT.

NOTE—The connection, if any, between this family of Nevilles, and the Nevilles of Raby, does not appear.

NEVILL—BARON NEVILL.

By Writ of Summons, dated 25 February, 1342.

Lineage.

ROBERT DE NEVILL was summoned to parliament, as a Baron, 25 February, 1342, but never afterwards, nor is there anything further known of himself or his family. It is presumed that the barony became, at his decease, EXTINCT.

NEWBURGH—EARLS OF WARWICK.

Creation of WILLIAM THE CONQUEROR.

Lineage.

The first who bore the title of Earl of Warwick, after the Norman Conquest, was

HENRY DE NEWBURGH (so called from the castle of that name in Normandy), a younger son of Roger de Bellomont, Earl of Meillant. When this eminent person obtained the earldom is not exactly ascertained, but Sir William Dugdale presumes the period to be towards the close of the CONQUEROR's reign, "for then," saith he, "King WILLIAM, having begirt Warwick with a mighty ditch, for the precinct of its walls, and erected the gates at his own charge, did promote this Henry to the earldom, and annexed thereto the royalty of the borough, which at that time belonged to the crown." But, though Henry de Newburgh was made Earl of Warwick by the first Norman sovereign, he was not invested with all the lands attached to the earldom until the ensuing reign, as we find WILLIAM RUFUS, soon after his accession to the throne, confer ing upon him the whole inheritance of Turchil de Warwick, a Saxon, who, at the coming of Duke William, had the reputation of earl; and thenceforth the "bear and ragged staff," the device of Turchil's family, derived from the chivalrous Guy, Earl of Warwick, was assumed by the first of the Newburgh dynasty; and it has been continued ever since as a badge of the successive Earls of Warwick. The name of this Henry, Earl of Warwick, appears as a witness to the charter of King HENRY I., whereby that prince confirmed the laws of EDWARD THE CONFESSION, and granted many other immunities to the clergy and laity. His lordship m. Margaret, dau. of Geoffrey, Count de Moreton, and sister of Rotrode, Earl of Perch, and had issue, two daus., whose names are not mentioned, and five sons, viz.,

ROGER, his successor.

Rotrode, bishop of Eures.

Robert, seneschal and justice of Normandy. This Robert was a great benefactor to the abbey of Bec, in which he was afterwards shorn a monk, and d. in 1123.

This Earl Henry commenced imparking Wedgenock, near his castle of Warwick, following the example of his sovereign, King HENRY, who made the first park that had ever been in England, at Woodstock. His lordship, who was as memorable for pious foundations as distinguished for military achievements, d. in 1123, and was s. by his eldest son,

ROGER DE NEWBURGH, 2nd Earl of Warwick. This nobleman in the contest between the Empress MAUD and King STEPHEN, espoused the cause of the former, but his lordship is much more known by his munificent grants to the church than his martial deeds. He m. Gundred, dau. of William, Earl of Warren, and had issue, Agnes, m. to Geoffrey de Clinton, the king's chamberlain, son of Geoffrey, founder of Kenilworth Castle.

The earl d. 12 June, 1163, and was s. by his eldest son,

WILLIAM DE NEWBURGH, 3rd Earl of Warwick, who in the 12th HENRY II., upon the assessment of aid for marrying the king's dau., certified the number of his knights' fees to be one hundred and five, and one-half, an enormous fortune at that period. His lordship m. 1st, Maud, elder dau. and co-heir of William, Lord Percy, and 2ndly, Margaret D'Elvill, but had no issue. This nobleman was distinguished by the splendour of his style of living, and was, like his father, a liberal benefactor to the church. He d. in the Holy Land, 16 November, 1184, and was s. by his brother,

WALERAN DE NEWBURGH, 4th Earl of Warwick. This nobleman, Dugdale says, "had much ado a great part of his time touching his inheritance; there starting up one who feigned himself to be his brother, Earl William, deceased in the Holy Land, which occasioned him no little trouble and vexation; so that it is thought by some, that the grant which he made to Hubert, archbishop of Canterbury, then chancellor of England, of the advowson of all the prebendaries belonging to the collegiate church, in Warwick, to hold during his life, was to purchase his favour in that weighty business." His lordship m. 1st, Margery, dau. of Humphrey de Bohun, Earl of Hereford, by whom he had issue,

HENRY, his successor.

Waleran, who had the manors of Gretham and Cotismore, co. Rutland, d. s. p.

Gundred, who took the veil at Pinley.

He m. 2ndly, Alice, dau. of John de Harcourt, and widow of John de Limesi, by whom he had an only dau.,

ALICE, m. to William Mauduit, feudal Baron of Hanslope, (great grandson of William Mauduit, chamberlain to King HENRY I., by Maud, dau. and heiress of Michael de Hanslope), and had issue,

William Mauduit, Baron of Hanslope, who eventually s. to the Earldom of Warwick.

Isabel, m. to William Beauchamp, Baron of Elmley, from whom the Beauchamps, Earls of Warwick, descended.

The earl d. in 1205, and was s. by his elder son,

HENRY DE NEWBURGH, 5th Earl of Warwick, a minor at his father's decease, committed to the guardianship of Thomas Basset, of Hedendon, who accordingly had livery of his lands, with the castle of Warwick. His lordship attained majority in the 15th King JOHN, and, although that monarch had, during his minority, taken away his inheritance of Gower, in Wales, and bestowed it upon William de Braose, his lordship, nevertheless, adhered to the royal cause in all the subsequent conflicts between the crown and the barons, in the reigns of King JOHN and his son HENRY III. His lordship m. 1st, Margery, elder dau. and co-heir of Henry D'Oyly, of Hocknorton, co. Oxford, by whom he had issue,

THOMAS, his successor.

Margery, m. 1st, to John Marechal, and 2ndly, to John de Plesetis, both of whom, in her right, assumed the Earldom of Warwick.

The earl m. 2ndly, Philippa, one of the three daus. and heirs of his guardian, Thomas Basset, of Hedendon, but had no issue. This countess, outliving his lordship, paid 100 marks to King HENRY III., that she might not be compelled to marry again, but that she might select her own husband, provided he were a loyal subject. She afterwards m. Richard Siward, a turbulent person, but of a martial disposition from his youth, who took an active part with the barons. From this boisterous soldier her ladyship was, however, eventually divorced. Henry, 5th Earl of Warwick, was s. at his decease in 1229, by his son,

THOMAS DE NEWBURGH, 6th Earl of Warwick. This nobleman m. Elm, dau. of William Longespee, Earl of Salisbury, but dying s. p., 1242 the earldom and great inheritance devolved upon his sister,

The Lady MARGERY DE NEWBURGH, then wife of

JOHN MARESCAL, who assumed the title of Earl of Warwick, but as he d. the following year, 1243, s. p., the countess m., by especial appointment of the king,

JOHN DE PLESSETIS, an eminent Norman, who came to England in the beginning of the reign of HENRY III., and achieved a high reputation in the Welsh wars. In the 28th of the same reign this John was made constable of the Tower of London, but not by the title of Earl of Warwick, nor does it appear that he acquired that designation for some time after his union with the heiress of Warwick. He eventually assumed it, however, under a clause in a fine levied in the 31st HENRY III., whereby William Mauduit, and Alice, his wife, did, as much as in them lay, confer the earldom upon him for life, so that, if he outlived the countess, his wife, he should not be forced to lay it aside. In the August ensuing the King, granting to him license to fell oaks in the forest of Dene, styles him EARL OF WARWICK, and thenceforward he bore the dignity. His lordship appears to have been one of the first favourites of King HENRY III., and to have enjoyed every honour and privilege that monarch could confer. At the commencement of the troubles between Henry and the barons the earl was appointed sheriff of the co. of Warwick and Leicester, but he lived not to witness the issue of those conflicts, for, falling sick in the beginning of the month of February, 1263, he d. before its expiration. His lordship left issue by his 1st wife (see Plessett's Baron Plessett), but none by the Countess of Warwick. Lady Warwick survived her husband but a short time, when the Earldom of Warwick, and the great inheritance of the Newburghs, reverted to the son of her aunt, Lady Alice Mauduit (refer to issue of Waleran, 4th earl), her cousin,

WILLIAM MAUDUIT, who inherited the feudal Barony of Manslape at the decease of his father in the year 1256, and upon succeeding the Countess of Warwick, assumed the title of Earl of Warwick, in which dignity he had summons to attend the king at Worcester, to march against the Welsh (47th HENRY III.). During the civil war between King HENRY and the barons, his lordship was surprised by a division of the baronial army, under John Giffard, governor of Kenilworth, at his castle of Warwick, and being taken prisoner with his countess, Alice, dau. of Gilbert de Segrave, was detained at Kenilworth until freed by paying a ransom of 1,900 marks. The earl d. 1267, s. p. when his sister, Isabel, wife of William Beauchamp, of Elmley, called the Blind Baron, became his lordship's heir (see Beauchamp, Earls of Warwick), and thus terminated the Earls of the houses of Newburgh, Plessett, and Mauduit

NEWMARCH—BARON NEWMARCH.

By Writ of Summons, dated 24 December, 1264.

Lineage.

Amongst the companions of the CONQUEROR was

BERNARD DE NEWMARCH, who won the province of Brecknock, in Wales, and settled there. In this place he founded a priory of Benedictine monks, and, endowing it with extensive lands and revenues, gave it to the abbey of Battell, which his victorious master had founded in commemoration of the conquest. This Bernard m. Nesta, or Agnes, dau. of Griffyn, son of Llewelyn, Prince of Wales, and had a son, MABEL, who, by the infamous conduct of his mother, was deprived of his inheritance. She was a woman of licentious habits, and her son having enraged her by offending one of her paramours, she swore before the king that he was not the offspring of her husband, but had been begotten in adultery. Upon which, Mabel, being excluded, the estates devolved to his sister, Sibyl, and in her right to her husband, Miles, Earl of Hereford, whose only surviving child and heiress, BERTHA, inherited eventually the co. Brecknock, and m. Philip de Braose.

The next person of this name mentioned, but unascertained how allied, if at all to the last, is

ADAM DE NEWMARCH; and after him comes

WILLIAM DE NEWMARCH, who, in the 10th RICHARD I., paid £100 for his relief, and £100 for livery of his father's lands. But of him nothing further is stated, than that he became a leper, and that Godfrey de St Martin had custody of his lands in Hampshire. From this William we pass to

HENRY DE NEWMARCH, who, upon the assessment of the aid for marrying the king's dau., 12th HENRY II., certified his knights' fees to be sixteen, an half, two thirds, and two fifth parts, for which he paid £11 14s. 2d. To this feudal lord, who d. s. p., s. his brother and heir,

JAMES DE NEWMARCH, who d. about the year 1232, leaving two daus., his co-heirs, viz.,

ISABEL DE NEWMARCH, m. to Ralph Russel, who, in the 8th HENRY III., had livery of her lands, in the cos. Somerset, Wilts and Gloucester.

HAWYSE DE NEWMARCH, m. 1st, to John de Botreaux, who, in the 2nd HENRY III., had livery of her proportion of her father's property. She m. 2ndly, Nicholas de Moela.

Thus terminated this branch of the family: but there was another, of which was

ADAM DE NEWMARCH, who, joining the baronial standard, temp. HENRY III., was summoned to parliament as a Baron, after the battle of Lewes, by the lords who then usurped the government, but he was subsequently made prisoner, and compounded for his estates under the Dictum de Kenilworth. He m. a dau. of Roger de Mowbray, and had a son and successor,

HENRY DE NEWMARCH, who does not appear to have been summoned to parliament. In the 11th EDWARD II., he had free warren granted him, in certain demesne lands, in the co. York; and left a son ROGER, but nothing further is recorded of the family.

Lineage.

The NEWPORTS were of great antiquity in the co. Salop, and descended from

JOHN DE NEWPORT, a person of some note, in the time of EDWARD I. From him, after several generations, sprang

THOMAS NEWPORT, Esq., who marrying Anne, dau. and co-heir of John Ercall, Esq., of High Ercall, in Shropshire, settled there, and made it the designation of his family. From this marriage lineally descended,

SIR RICHARD NEWPORT, Knt., of High Ercall, who, for his eminent services to King CHARLES I., was elevated to the peerage by that monarch, 14 October, 1642, as BARON NEWPORT, of High Ercall. His lordship m. Rachel, dau. of John Leveson, Esq., of Haling, and sister and co-heir of Sir Richard Leveson, of Trentham, K.B., co. Stafford, and had issue,

I. FRANCIS, his successor.

II. Andrew, a commissioner of the customs, d. unm.

III. Beatrix, m. to Sir Henry Bromley, Knt., of Shrawarden Castle, Salop.

IV. Christian, d. unm.

V. Mary, m. 1st, to John Steventon, Esq., of Dothill, in Shropshire, and 2ndly, to Francis Forester, Esq., of Watling-street, in the same co.

VI. Margaret, m. to Richard Fowler, Esq., of Harnage Green, co. Salop.

VII. Anne, m. to Edward Corbett, Esq., of Longnor, co. Salop.

VIII. Elizabeth, m. to Henry Powle, Esq., of Williamsthorpe, co. Gloucester.

Lord Newport having suffered much during the civil wars, and being aged and infirm, retired into France and d. there, 8 February, 1650, when he was s. by his eldest son,

FRANCIS NEWPORT, 2nd Baron Newport. This nobleman, in the time of his father, fought valiantly under the royal banner until 1644, when he was taken prisoner by the parliamentarians. Upon the Restoration, he was constituted by King CHARLES II., first, comptroller, and afterwards, treasurer of the household, and was advanced to the dignity of VISCOUNT NEWPORT, of Bradford, by letters patent, dated 11 March, 1675. His lordship m. Lady Diana Russell, dau. of Francis, Earl of Bedford, and had issue,

RICHARD, his successor.

THOMAS, elevated to the peerage, 25 June, 1716, as BARON TORRINGTON, in the co. Devon, but d. s. p. in 1718, when the barony became EXTINCT.

FRANCIS, d. unm.

Elizabeth, m. 1st, to Sir Henry Littleton, of Frankley, Bart., and 2ndly, to Edward Harrey, Esq., of Combe, co. Surrey.

Catherine, m. to Henry, Lord Herbert, of Cherbury.

Diana, m. 1st, to Thomas, son of Sir Robert Howard, Knt., of Ashstead, co. Surrey, and 2ndly, to William Fielding, brother of Basil, Earl of Denbigh.

Anne, d. unm.

His lordship, after the Revolution, was created EARL OF BRADFORD, by letters patent, dated 11 May, 1694. He d. in 1706, and was s. by his eldest son,

RICHARD NEWPORT, 2nd earl. This nobleman m. Mary, dau. of Sir Thomas Wilbraham, Bart., of Woodhey, co. Chester, and had issue,

HENRY,
RICHARD,
THOMAS, } successively Earls of Bradford.

William, d. s. p.

Mary, d. unm.

Elizabeth, m. to James Cocks, Esq., and d. s. p.

Anne, m. to Sir Orlando Bridgeman, Bart., and her eldest son,

SIR HENRY BRIDGEMAN, was created in 1794, BARON BRADFORD. His lordship d. in 1803, and was s. by his son,

ORLANDO BRIDGEMAN, 2nd baron, who was created VISCOUNT NEWPORT, and EARL OF BRADFORD, 30 November, 1815: he d. in 1825, and was s. by his son, GEORGE-AUGUSTUS-FREDERICK-HENRY, 2nd EARL OF BRADFORD, of the 2nd creation.

Diana, m. to Algernon Coote, Earl of Mountrath, in Ireland, by whom she had an only son, Charles-Henry, Earl of Mountrath, who d. s. p. in 1802.

His lordship, who was lord-lieutenant and custos-rotulorum of the co. Salop, d. in 1723, and was s. by his eldest son,

HENRY NEWPORT, 3rd earl, who d. without legitimate issue, in 1734, and was s. by his next brother,

RICHARD NEWPORT, 4th earl, at whose decease, unm., the honours devolved upon his brother,

THOMAS NEWPORT, 5th earl. This nobleman d. a lunatic, in 1762, when, as he had no issue, the Barony of Newport, of High Ercall, the Viscounty of Newport, and the Earldom of Bradford became EXTINCT.

Lineage.

It is evident, say modern genealogists, from the foundation of the priory of Raunton, in Staffordshire, that NOEL, the ancestor of this family, came into England with the CONQUEROR in 1066, and for his services obtained the manors of Ellenhall, Wiverstone, Podmore, Milnese, and other lands, by grants from the new monarch. His eldest son,

ROBERT, was Lord of Ellenhall, &c., and in the reign of HENRY I. had a grant of the greatest part of Granborough, co. Warwick, from Lawrence, the prior of Coventry, and the monks of that house. In the reign of HENRY II., he founded the priory of Raunton, or Ronton, near Ellenhall, his chief seat, for Canons Regular of St. Augustine. This Robert had two sons,

Thomas, who was Sheriff of Staffordshire for seven years, in the reign of HENRY II., and for one year upon the accession of RICHARD I., left, at his decease, two sons, Alice, m. to William Harcourt, of Stanton Harcourt, and had Ellenhall and other estates as her moiety of her father's property.

Joan, m. to William de Dunstan, and had for her share, Ronton, &c.

PHILIP.

The 2nd son,

PHILIP NOEL, had Hllcote, in Staffordshire, from his father, and was s. by his son,

ROBERT NOEL, Lord of Hllcote, who m. Joan, dau. of Sir John Acton, Knt., and from this Robert we pass to his lineal descendant,

JAMES NOEL, Esq., of Hllcote, who, in the 5th HENRY VIII., was nominated, by act of parliament, one of the justices of the peace for assessing and collecting the poll tax, &c. He m. a dau. of Richard Pole, of Langley, co. Derby, by whom he had seven sons, of which ROBERT, the eldest, continued the line at Hllcote, while another branch was founded by the 3rd son,

ANDREW NOEL, Esq., who, at the dissolution of the monasteries, had a grant of the manor and site of the late preceptory of Dalby-upon-Wold, in Leicestershire, which had belonged to the knights of St. John of Jerusalem, and of the manor of Purybarre, in Staffordshire. In the 28th HENRY VIII., he was sheriff of the co. Rutland, as he was afterwards, both in the reign of EDWARD VI. and in that of MARY. In 1548 he purchased the seat and manor of Brook, in Rutlandshire, and was elected for that co. in the first parliament of Queen MARY. He m. 1st, Elizabeth, dau. and heir of John Hopton, Esq., of Hopton, in Shropshire, and widow of Sir John Perient, by whom he had ANDREW, his heir, and several other children. He m. 2ndly, Dorothy, dau. of Richard Conyers, Esq., of Wakerley, co. Northampton, and widow of Roger Flower, Esq., by whom he had one son,

JOHN, father of

WILLIAM NOEL, Esq., of Kirby Mallory, high sheriff of Leicestershire, in the 2nd JAMES I., whose son and successor,

VERE NOEL, Esq., of Kirby Mallory, was created a baronet in 1660, and was ancestor of

SIR EDWARD NOEL, who s. to the Barony of Wentworth in 1762, and was created VISCOUNT WESTWORTH.

Mr. Noel was s. at his decease by the eldest son of his 1st marriage,

SIR ANDREW NOEL, Knt., of Dalby, co. Leicester, who was a person of great note in the time of ELIZABETH, living in such magnificence as to vie with noblemen of the largest fortunes. Fuller, in his Worthies of England, observes, that this Andrew, "for person, parentage, grace, gesture, valour, and many other excellent parts (amongst which skill in music), was of the first rank in the court." He was knighted by Queen ELIZABETH, and became a favourite, but the expenses in which he was involved obliged him to sell his seat and manor at Dalby. Her majesty is said to have made the following distich upon his name—

"The word of denial, and letter of fifty,
Is that gentleman's name, who will never be thrifty."

He was thrice sheriff of the co. Rutland, and member for that shire in several parliaments during the reign of Queen ELIZABETH. Sir Andrew m. Mabel, 6th dau. of Sir James Harrington, Knt., and sister and heir of John, Lord Harrington, of Exton, by whom he had issue, Theodosia, m. to Sir Edward Cecil, afterwards Lord Wimbledon.

Elizabeth, m. to George, Earl of Castlehaven, in Ireland.

He d. at his seat, Brook, in Rutlandshire, 9 October, 1607, and was s. by his eldest son,

SIR EDWARD NOEL, Knt., who was created a baronet 29 June, 1611, and elevated to the peerage, by letters patent, dated 23 March, 1616-17, as BARON NOEL, of Ridlington, co. Rutland. His lordship m. in 1608, Julian, eldest dau. and co-heir of Sir Baptist Hicks, Bart., which Sir Baptist was created Baron Hicks, of Hllmington, co. Warwick, and VISCOUNT CAMPDEN, in Gloucestershire, 5 May, 1628, with remainder to his son-in-law, Lord Noel; and upon his decease, 18 October, in the following year, these dignities were inherited by his lordship. He had issue,

BAPTIST, his successor.

Henry, m. Mary, dau. of Hugh Perry, Esq., of London, but d. s. p.

Anne.

Penelope, m. to John, Viscount Chaworth.

Eleanor.

Mary, m. to Sir Erasmus de la Fountain, of Kirby Bellars, co. Leicester.

On the breaking out of the civil war, Lord Noel raised forces for the royal cause, and departed this life in his garrison at Oxford, 10 March, 1643, when he was s. by his elder son,

BAPTIST NOEL, 2nd Baron Noel, and 3rd Viscount Campden. This nobleman was as faithful a cavalier as his father, and raised a troop of horse and company of foot for the service of the king. For his estates he was obliged to pay to the sequestrators £9,000 composition, and an annuity of £150 settled on the Teachers of the period; and moreover, he sustained the loss of his princely seat at Campden, which had been burnt down by the royal army to prevent its becoming a garrison to the parliamentarians. His lordship lived to witness the restoration of the monarchy, and was made lord-lieutenant of the co. Rutland. He m. 1st, Lady Anne Fielding, dau. of William, Earl of Denbigh, by whom he had no surviving issue. He m. 2ndly, Anne, widow of Edward, Earl of Bath, and dau. of Sir Robert Lovet, Knt., but had only one still-born child. His lordship m. 3rdly, Hester, dau. and co-heir of Thomas, Lord Wotton, by whom he had issue,

EDWARD, his successor.

NORREYS—VISCOUNT THAME, EARL OF BERKSHIRE.

By Letters Patent, dated 29 January, 1620.

Lineage.

This family was one of consideration in King EDWARD III.'s time, and then of knightly degree. In the reign of HENRY VI.,

JOHN NORREYS was first usher of the chamber, next, esquire of the body, and afterwards master of the wardrobe to that monarch. He was subsequently sheriff of the co. Devon and Berks, and in the next reign (EDWARD IV.) he was continued in the post of esquire of the body to the king. He resided at Patenden, in Berkshire, and dying in the 6th EDWARD IV., was interred at Bray, in an aisle of that church, built at his own expense. He was s. by his son and heir,

SIR WILLIAM NORREYS, of Yatenden, one of the knights of the body to King EDWARD IV. In the 2nd HENRY VII., this gentleman had a command in the royal army at the battle of Stoke; and in the 19th of the same reign he obtained a grant from the king of the custody of the manor of Langley, which manor was then in the crown by reason of the minority of EDWARD, son and heir of Isabel, late wife of George, Duke of Clarence, and he had the stewardship of several other manors in the co. of Oxford, part of the property of the said EDWARD, and situated similarly during his minority. Sir William m. 1st, Isabel, dau. and heir of Edmund Ingoldesthorpe, and widow of John Nevil, Marquess of Montacute, by whom he had three sons, who all d. young, and three daus., viz.,

A dau., m. to Sir John Langford, of Bradfield.
 Joane, m. to John Cheney, Esq., of Wodhey, co. Berks.
 Elizabeth, m. to William Fermer, Esq., of Somerton, co. Oxford.

He m. 2ndly, the Lady Jane de Vere, dau. of John, Earl of Oxford, and had a son,

SIR EDWARD NORREYS, Knt., who m. Fridiswide, dau. and co-heir of Francis, Viscount Lovel, by whom he had two sons,

JOHN, one of the esquires of the body to King HENRY VIII., m. Elizabeth, sister of Edmund, Lord Bray, but d. without legitimate issue, in the 6th ELIZABETH.
 Henry.

The younger son,

HENRY NORREYS, or NORRIS, who s. eventually to the estates and representation of the family, was made usher of the black rod, upon the resignation of Sir William Compton, Knt., in the 18th HENRY VIII. He was also esquire of the body to the king, and one of the gentlemen of his privy chamber; but being afterwards involved in the fall of Anne Boleyn, he was committed to the Tower as one of her paramours. It is said, however, that the King felt some compunction in putting him to death, and offered him a pardon conditionally, that he would confess his guilt; but Norreys resolutely replied, "That in his conscience, he thought the Queen guiltless of the objected crime; but whether she were or not, he could not accuse her of anything; and that he had rather undergo a thousand deaths than betray the innocent." Upon the report of which declaration, the King cried out, "Hang him up, hang him up." He suffered death accordingly, 14 May, 1536, and was attainted in parliament the same year. He had m. Mary, dau. of Thomas, Lord Dacre of the south, and left a dau. Mary, m. 1st, to Sir George Carew, Knt., of Mohun's Ottery, and 2ndly, to Sir Arthur Champenowne, of Dartington, Devon, Knt., and a son,

HENRY NORREYS or NORRIS, Esq., who resided at Wytham, in Berks, and received, in 1566, the honour of knighthood. In the 14th ELIZABETH, Sir Henry was sent ambassador into France, and in consideration of his good services upon that occasion, as well as the sufferings of his father, he was summoned to parliament, 8 May, 1572, as BARON NORRIS, of Rycote. His lordship m. Margery, younger dau. and co-heir of John, Baron Williams, of Thame (and one of the co-heirs of the said Barony of Williams) by whom he acquired the lordship of Rycote, and had issue,

WILLIAM, Marshal of Berwick, who m. Elizabeth, dau. of Sir Richard Morrison, Knt., and dying v. p., left an only son, FRANCIS, who s. his grandfather.

John (Sir), a very eminent and gallant soldier, temp. ELIZABETH, distinguished in the wars of the Low Countries, and in those of Ireland, in which latter kingdom he filled the office of president of the Council of Munster, and d. there unm.

Edward, governor of Ostend, d. s. p.

Henry, d. of a wound received in action.

Thomas (Sir), of Mallow, co. Cork, president of Munster, and some time justice of Ireland. His only dau. and heiress, ELIZABETH NORREYS, m. the Right Hon. Sir John Jephson, Knt., of Froyle, Hants. and their descendant, Sir Charles Denham Orlando Jephson-Norreys, of Mallow, was created a baronet, 6 August, 1838.

Maximilian, slain in Brittany.

His lordship d. in 1600, and was s. by his grandson.

FRANCIS NORREYS, 2nd Baron Norreys, of Rycote, summoned to parliament, from 17 October, 1601, to 5 April, 1614. His lordship at the creation of King JAMES's son, Prince Charles, Duke of York, was made a knight of the Bath, and some years afterwards, 28 January, 1620, advanced to the dignities of Viscount Thame, and EARL OF BERKSHIRE. His lordship m. Lady Bridget de Vere, dau. of Edward, Earl of Oxford, and had an only dau. and heiress,

ELIZABETH, who m. Edward Wray (3rd son of Sir William Wray, of Grentworth), one of the groomes of the bed-chamber to King CHARLES I., and left an only dau.,

BRIDGET WRAY, who m. Edward, son of Edward, Earl of Dorset, and became, after his decease, 2nd wife of Montagu Bertie, Earl of Lindsay, lord great chamberlain of England: by the latter she had a son, JAMES BERTIE, who in her right, inherited the Barony of Norreys, of Rycote. He was afterwards created EARL OF ABINGDON—honours enjoyed by his descendant, the present Earl of Abingdon.

His lordship, who was a person of impetuous temperament, was at one time committed to the Fleet Prison, for a rude assault upon the Lord Scrope, in the House of Lords, while the peers were actually sitting, and the Prince present. He d. in 1623, from the effects of a wound which he had inflicted upon himself with a crossbow. The Barony of Norreys, of Rycote, passed eventually, through his grand-dau., into the family of BERTIE, and has since merged in the Earldom of Abingdon, while the Viscounty of Thame and Earldom of Berkshire became EXTINCT.

Arms—Quarterly: arg. and gu., a fesse, az., in the 2nd and 3rd quarters, a fret, or.

NORTH—BARONS GREY, OF ROLLESTON, CO. STAFFORD.

By Writ of Summons, dated 17 October, 1673.

Lineage.

The Hon. CHARLES NORTH, son and heir-apparent of Dudley, 4th Baron North, and brother of the Lord Keeper North, 1st Lord Guilford, having m. Katherine, widow of Sir Edward Moseley, Bart., of Hough, co. Lancaster, and dau. of William Grey, of Chillingham, 1st Lord Grey, of Werke, was summoned to parliament in the life-time of his father, 24 October, 1673, as BARON GREY, of Rolleston, co. Stafford. His lordship succeeded as 5th Baron North in 1677, and d. in 1690, when he was s. by his elder son, WILLIAM NORTH, 6th Baron North, and 2nd Lord Grey. This nobleman being bred to arms, served under the Duke of Marlborough, in all his campaigns, and had his right hand shot off at the battle of Blenheim. He was subsequently made lieutenant-general of the forces, and governor of Portsmouth. His lordship m. Maria-Margaretta, dau. of Mons. Elmet, receiver-general to the States of Holland; but d. in 1734, s. p., when the Barony of North devolved upon his cousin, Francis, 3rd Lord Guilford, and the Barony of Grey, of Rolleston, became EXTINCT.

Arms—Az., a lion passant, or, between three fleurs-de-lis, arg.

By Writ of Summons, dated 8 January, 1313.

Lineage.

In the 42nd HENRY III., upon the death of Reginald de Cobham, at that time sheriff of Kent,

SIR ROGER DE NORTHWODE, one of his executors, accounted to the exchequer for the sums he had received during his sheriffalty. This Sir Roger served in the wars under HENRY III. and EDWARD I. He m. Bona, sister and heiress to John de Wanton, of Shorne, in Kent, and d. in the 14th EDWARD I., whereupon his son and heir,

SIR JOHN DE NORTHWODE, doing his homage had livery of his lands. He was b. circa 38th HENRY III., and had summons to attend the king to advise upon the affairs of the realm in the 22nd EDWARD I. He had afterwards in the same reign a military summons; served in the wars of Flanders; accompanied EDWARD I. in his wars in Scotland, and was present at the siege of Carlaverock, in the 28th year of his reign, where he was knighted. He was sheriff of Kent in 20th, 21st, 28th, 33rd, and 34th EDWARD I. For his services on different public occasions he was summoned to parliament as a Baron, from 8 January, 1313, to 20 March, 1319. He m. 10th EDWARD I., Joane, eldest dau. of Sir Bartholomew Badlesmere, and sister and co-heiress to Giles, Lord Badlesmere. He d. 12th EDWARD II., and was s. by (the son of his deceased son, Sir John de Northwode, by Agnes, dau. of William de Grandison) his grandson,

SIR ROGER DE NORTHWODE, 2nd baron, b. circa 1st EDWARD II., summoned to parliament, 3 April, 1360. This nobleman served in the wars of Flanders and France, in the 14th and 16th EDWARD III. His lordship m. 1st, 14th EDWARD II., when under fifteen, Julian, dau. of Sir Geoffrey de Say, which lady d. 3rd EDWARD III.; 2ndly, 4th EDWARD III., Elizabeth, dau. of Sir John de Segrave, Lord of Folkestone, which lady d. s. p. 9th EDWARD III.; 3rdly, in 13th EDWARD III., Margery, widow of Sir Nicholas de Halgton, and she d. s. p. 13th EDWARD III.; 4thly, in 15th EDWARD III., Joane, widow of Thomas de Faversham, which lady d. s. p. 30th EDWARD III.; 5thly, 30th EDWARD III., Agnes, widow of Sir John de Cobham. He d. 35th EDWARD III., and was s. by his son,

SIR JOHN NORTHWODE, 3rd baron, summoned to parliament, from 1 June, 1363, to 20 January, 1376. This nobleman was in the French wars of King EDWARD III., and participated in the glory of that martial reign. He was b. 14th EDWARD II., and m. 23rd EDWARD III., Joane, dau. and co-heiress of Robert Hart, of Faversham, co. Kent, and dying in 1379, was s. by his son,

SIR ROGER NORTHWODE, 4th baron, who was never summoned to parliament. He was b. 30th EDWARD III., d. s. p., and was s. by his brother,

WILLIAM NORTHWODE, 5th baron, never summoned to parliament. This nobleman (if he ever assumed the dignity) did signal service at the battles of Agincourt and Verneuil. He was buried at Bredhurst, where there was once a brass plate in the church to the memory of him and four of his sons, who also lie buried there. The epitaph was: "Hic jacet Willielmus Northwood cum quatuor suis filiis verus hæres domini de Northwood." He had issue,

John, his successor.

NORWICH—BARON NORWICH.

By Writ of Summons, dated 25 February, 1342.

Lineage.

Geoffrey de Norwich, the first person of this name upon record, was involved in the baronial contest with King John, and committed to prison in consequence. From him descended, it is presumed,

Walter de Norwich, who, in the 5th Edward II., was constituted one of the barons of the exchequer, and at the same time obtained a charter of free warren in all his demesne lands. In some years afterwards he was made treasurer of the exchequer, and had a grant of the manors of Dalham and Bradfield, with the advowson of the church of Dalham, co. Suffolk. To this learned judge, who d. in 2nd Edward III., succeeded

Sir John de Norwich, Knt., who was in the wars of Flanders and Scotland in the reign of Edward III., and was summoned to parliament as a Baron, from 25 February, 1342, to 3 April, 1360. His lordship had grants from the crown for his services, and licence to make castles of his houses at Metyngham, in Suffolk, and at Blackworth, and Lyng, in Norfolk. He d. in 1362, and was s. by his grandson,

John de Norwich, 2nd baron, who does not appear to have been summoned to parliament. This nobleman d. in 1374, s. p., when the Barony of Norwich became extinct. His lordship's estates devolved upon his cousin, Catherine de Brews, dau. and heir of Thomas de Norwich, his grand-uncle, but that lady taking the veil at Dartford, William de Ufford, Earl of Suffolk, by Margery, his wife, sister of Thomas de Norwich, father of the said Catherine, inherited as her heir.

Arms—Per pale gu. and az., a lion rampant, ermine.

NOTE.—From this Baronial house is said to have sprung the eminent family seated at Brampton, co. Northampton, of which Sir Erasmus Norwich, in the time of William III., m. Anna-bella, dau. of Thomas Savage, Earl Rivers. For its ultimate fall and present decadence, see Vicissitudes of Families.

O'BRIEN—EARL OF THOMOND.

By Letters Patent, dated 1 July, 1543.

Lineage.

"It has been," says O'Donoghue, in his Historical Memoir of the O'Briens, "the fortune of the race of O'Brien to form an exception to those instances in which families once occupying a regal station, have, after their declension, sunk into obscurity. A reader of Irish history will find the names of the O'Briens so often mentioned in the pages of its annals, that he cannot hesitate to conclude, that, whether as kings of the whole island, or later, of the southern half, or again, after the arrival of the Anglo-Normans, ruling their restricted principality of Thomond with independent authority, as asserted by Sir John Davis of them and others, the descendants of Brian Borioimhe have written their names in indelible characters in the history of their country. In no part of the kingdom can so many memoirs of the energy and power of the native princes be found at this day, as in the territory of Thomond, before it was restricted to the present co. of Clare. The erection of the monasteries of Manister-nenagh, Holycross, the cathedral of Limerick, the abbey of Ennis, and many others, too numerous to mention, devoted to the promotion of learning and piety, exhibit to the modern traveller proofs of the genius and vigour of the descendants of Brien. And notwithstanding the various changes which the state of society has for so many ages undergone, and the downfall of so many of the ancient families of the country, we find the descendants of Brian of the Tributes still holding their own, while we may search in vain even amongst some of the royal houses on the continent of Europe for a line of greater antiquity, or one whose descent is more clearly traced through the historic records of their country."

CONNOR O'BRIEN, who was inaugurated King and Prince of Thomond, in 1628, d. in 1640, when his son DONOUGH was set aside, and his brother,

MORROUGH O'BRIEN, was elected the O'BRIEN and Prince of Thomond, according to the Brehon law. He surrendered his royalty to King HENRY VIII., and was created in consequence by that monarch, 1st July, 1543, Earl of Thomond, with remainder to his deposed nephew, DONOUGH O'BRIEN, and BARON OF INCHQUIN, to the heirs male of his own body. His lordship d. in 1551, when the Barony of Inchiquin devolved on his son, DERMOD, and is now enjoyed by MORROUGH's male representative, the present LORD INCHQUIN (see BURKE'S Extant Peerage). The Earldom of Thomond passed, however, to MURROUGH's nephew,

DONOUGH O'BRIEN, who, on surrendering the patent to King EDWARD VI., obtained a new grant of the dignities to himself and the heirs male of his body, by patent, dated 7 November, 1552, and also possession of all the honours and lands which had fallen to the crown by the death of his uncle. He m. Ellen, dau. of Pierce, Earl of Ormonde, and d. 1553, having had issue,

- i. CONNOR, 3rd earl.
- ii. Margaret, m. to Dermot, Lord Inchiquin.
- iii. More or Maud, m. to Teige Macnamara.

The son and heir,

CONNOR O'BRIEN, 3rd Earl of Thomond, m. 1st, Joan, only dau. of Sir Thomas, 16th Lord Kerry, by whom he had one dau., who d. young. He m. 2ndly, Una or Wonafrith, dau. of Terlaugh O'Brien, of Ara, co. Tipperary, and had issue,

- i. DONOUGH, his heir.
- ii. Teige, of Dromore, who m. 1st, Slana, dau. of Teige McMurrough; and 2ndly, Joane, dau. of Sir Dermot O'Shaughnessy, and relict of Sir William Bourke, Knt. By the latter he had issue, Dermot and Mortaugh, who both d. s. p.
- iii. DANIEL (Sir), VISCOUNT O'BRIEN, OF CLARE (see that title).
- iv. Hugh, whose grandson, CONOR, d. s. p.
- i. Mary, m. to Terlaugh Roe MacMahon, Lord of East Carhauskinn.
- ii. Margaret, m. to James Butler, Lord Baron of Dunboyne.
- iii. Honora, m. to Thomas Fitzmaurice, Lord Baron of Kerry and Lixnaw.

The eldest son,

DONOUGH O'BRIEN, 4th Earl of Thomond, and lord-president of Munster, called "the great earl," m. 1st, Ellen, dau. of Maurice, Lord Viscount Roche, of Fermoy, and had a dau., Margaret, m. to Charles McCarthy, 1st Lord Viscount Muskerry. He m. 2ndly, Elizabeth, dau. of Gerald, Earl of Kildare, and by her (who d. 12 January, 1617) had issue two sons,

- i. HENRY, 5th earl.
- ii. BRIAN or BARNABY, 6th earl.

The earl d. 5 September, 1624, and was s. by his eldest son,

HENRY O'BRIEN, 5th Earl of Thomond, who was summoned to parliament, 1616, as Lord O'Brien; he m. Mary, dau. of Sir William Brereton, and had issue,

- i. Mary, m. to Edward Cockayne, Lord Viscount Cullen.
- ii. Margaret, m. to Edward Somerset, Marquess of Worcester.
- iii. Elizabeth, m. to Dutton, Lord Gerrard of Bromley.
- iv. Anne, m. Henry, 7th Earl of Thomond.
- v. Honora, m. 1st, to Sir Francis Inglesfield, Knt., of Wotton-Bassett; and 2ndly, to Sir Robert Howard, Knt., son of the Earl of Berkshire.

The earl d. in 1639, and was s. by his brother,

SIR BRIAN or BARNABY O'BRIEN, 6th Earl of Thomond, knighted by King JAMES, 21 July, 1615. He was created MARQUESS OF BILLING, by privy seal, 1645, but the great seal not being then within the royal power, the patent never passed. He m. Mary, dau. of Sir James Fermer, Knt., and by her (whose will bears date 22 February, 1672), he had issue,

i. HENRY-HORATIO, Lord Ibrackan, m. 1686, Henrietta, 2nd dau. of Henry Somerset, Duke of Beaufort, K.G., and d. s. p., aged twenty-one, at Chester, having had issue,

HENRY, 8th Earl of Thomond.

Henrietta, widow of Lord Ibrackan, m. 2ndly, Henry, Earl of Suffolk.

i. Elizabeth, d. unm. 3 June, 1688.

ii. Penelope, m. Henry Howard, Earl of Suffolk and Bindon and was mother of Charles-William, 7th Earl of Suffolk. She d. in December, 1703, and was buried at Saffron Walden.

iii. MARY, m. to Sir Matthew Duley, Bart., of Clopton, Northamptonshire, and d. 9 November, 1735, leaving issue.

The earl d. at his seat, Billing, co. Northampton, May 1691, and was s. by his grandson,

HENRY O'BRIEN, 8th Earl of Thomond, b. 14 August, 1693, was M.P. for Arundel, in Sussex, and was created a peer of England by the title of VISCOUNT TADCASTER, co. York, 19 October, 1714. He m. 4 June, 1707, the Lady Elizabeth Seymour, eldest dau. of Charles, Duke of Somerset, but by her (who d. 2 April, 1734,) had no issue. He d. in Dublin, 20 April, 1741, and was buried with his ancestors in the cathedral church of Limerick. By his will dated 14 October, 1738, he left his estate to MURROUGH, Lord O'Brien, son and heir of the Earl of Inchiquin, with remainder to Percy Wyndham (see WYNDHAM O'BRIEN, Earl of THOMOND). At the earl's death, the Viscounty of Tadcaster EXPIRED, and the Earldom of Thomond became DORMANT.

O'BRIEN — EARL OF INCHQUIN, MARQUESS OF THOMOND, IN THE PEERAGE OF IRELAND, AND BARON THOMOND AND BARON TADCASTER, IN THE PEERAGE OF THE UNITED KINGDOM.

Earldom, by Letters Patent, dated 21 October, 1664.

Marquessate, by Letters Patent, dated 30 December, 1800.

Baronies by Letters Patent, dated 2 October, 1801, and 3 July, 1826.

Lineage.

The EARLDOM OF INCHQUIN was conferred by letters patent dated 21 October, 1664, on MURBOUGH, 6th Baron Inchiquin afterwards Viceroy of Catalonia; and descended in a direct line (refer to BURKE's Extant Peerage) to

MURBOUGH O'BRIEN, 5th Earl of Inchiquin in Ireland, who was created MARQUESS OF THOMOND, also in Ireland, by letters patent bearing date 30 December, 1800, with remainder to his brother Edward, and the heirs male of his body, and was made a peer of the United Kingdom by letters patent, dated 2 October, 1801, as BARON THOMOND, of Taplow, co. Bucks. His lordship m. 1st, Mary, Countess of Orkney, and had several children, of whom one dau. alone survived, namely,

MARY, who, succeeding her mother, became COUNTESS OF ORKNEY. Her ladyship m. the Hon. Thomas Fitz-Maurice.

The marquess m. 2ndly, Mary, dau. of John Palmer, Esq., of Torrington, co. Devon, and niece of Sir Joshua Reynolds, but by her had no issue. His lordship d. in consequence of a fall from his horse, 10 February, 1809, when the Barony of Thomond became EXTINCT, while his Irish honours devolved upon his nephew,

WILLIAM, 2nd Marquess of Thomond, K.P., who m. 16 September, 1799, Elizabeth, only dau. and heir of Thomas Trotter, Esq., of Duleck, and by her (who d. 3 March, 1852), had issue,

I. SUSAN-MARIA, m. 1824, Rear-Admiral Hon. George-F. Hotham, and d. 1867.

II. SARAH, m. 1830, Major William-Stanhope Taylor, and d. 1859.

III. MARY, m. 1836, Richard, Earl of Rantry, and d. 1853.

IV. ELIZABETH, m. 1835, Sir George Stucley Stucley, Bart.

The marquess was created a peer of the United Kingdom as BARON TADCASTER of Tadcaster, co. York, 3 July, 1826. His lordship d. 21 August, 1846, when this last named barony became EXTINCT, but the Irish honours devolved on his brother,

JAMES, 3rd Marquess of Thomond, G.C.H., admiral R.N., who m. 1st, 25 November, 1800, Eliza-Bridgeman, 2nd dau. of James Williams, Esq., of Carnanton, Cornwall (which lady d. 1802); 2ndly, Jane, 3rd dau. of Thomas Outley, Esq., of Antigua, and relict of Valentine-Horne Horsford, Esq., also of Antigua (which lady d. 8 September, 1843); and 3rdly,

8 January, 1847, Anne, widow of Rear-Admiral Fane, and sister of the late Sir Charles Flint. The marquess d. 3 July, 1855, when the Marquessate of Thomond, and the Earldom of Inchiquin became EXTINCT, but the old Barony of Inchiquin devolved on Sir LUCIUS O'BRIEN, Bart., of Dromoland, who established his right before the Committee for Privileges, as 13th Lord Inchiquin in 1862.

O'BRIEN—VISCOUNT TADCASTER.

By Letters Patent, dated 19 December, 1714.

See O'BRIEN, EARL OF THOMOND.

O'CARROLL—LORD OF ELY O'CARROLL.

It is stated that a barony was granted in 1552 to THOMAS O'CARROLL, as Baron of Ely O'Carroll, but the patent or the record of the patent is nowhere to be found.

O'DEMPSEY—VISCOUNT CLANMALIER.

By Letters Patent, dated 22 December, 1631.

Lineage.

The old Irish sept of O'Dempsey, whose country was Clanmalier, incorrectly written Glenmalire, extending on both sides of the river Barrow, partly in the King's County, and partly in the Queen's County, springs from a common ancestor with the family of O'Connor Faley, and may be traced in the Irish annals from a very early period.

DERMOT O'DEMPSEY, chief of Clanmalier and for a long time Lord of Offaly, founded, circa 1178, on the site of an ancient church dedicated to St. Evin, the great Cistercian Abbey of Monasterevan, which he richly endowed. His charter of foundation is given in the Monasticon Anglicanum. Dermot d. in 1193.

In the 12th century the O'Dempseys contended with the English forces under Strongbow, Earl of Pembroke, who in the year 1173, together with his son-in-law Robert de Quincy, constable and standard bearer of Leinster, marched a powerful force into Kildare and Offaley: but being opposed by the Irish clans, commanded by the chiefs of Clanmalier, the English were defeated with great slaughter, and amongst the slain was de Quincy, the standard bearer; the affair is thus mentioned by Maurice Regan in HARRIS's Hibernica. "From thence the earl (Strongbow) went to Kildare making many incursions into Offaley, upon O'Dempsey, lord of that country, who refused to come unto him, and to deliver hostages; the earl to subdue him made a journey in person upon him. Offaley was burned and harassed, the whole prey of the country taken and the army retired towards Kildare; in the retreat the earl with 1000 men marched in the vanguard, and the rear was commanded by Robert de Quincy; in the pass when the vanguard was passed, O'Dempsey gave upon the rear, at which charges Robert de Quincy with many others were slain and the banner of Leinster lost; and for his death, as well by the earl as the whole army, great lamentation was made."

The Four Masters further record that "Dermot, son of Con'oughda O'Diomusagh, a long time chief of Clan Maol-lughra and Lord of Hy Failge, d. A.D. 1193;" and that "Dermot O'Dempsey, Lord of Clanmalire (in Queen's County), was slain by the English in 1383." Passing down to a more recent period, we come to

OWEN O'DEMPSEY, Lord of Clanmalier, Queen's County, son of Hugh O'Dempsey, Lord of Clanmalier, who had a grant of the town of Coolroddery, d. s. p. before 1578, and was s. by his nephew,

TERENCE O'DEMPSEY, of Ballybrittas, who d. s. p., (Inq. p. m. 1578), and was s. by his brother,

HUGH O'DEMPSEY, Esq., of Loghire, Queen's Co., who had three sons,

I. Owen Mac Hugh, d. s. p.

II. Terence, d. s. p.

III. DERMOT, of whom we treat.

The 3rd son,

DERMOT O'DEMPSEY, was father of

SIR TERENCE O'DEMPSEY, who was heir to his great uncle in the estate of Coolroddery. This Terence who was knighted at Kiltennan in Munster, 22 May, 1599, was created Baron of Philipstown, and Viscount Clanmaller, 22 December, 1631, when he adopted, for "Supporters" to his Arms, two knights in armour ppr., chained one to the other, from the right leg of the one to the left leg of the other. He m. Fitzgerald of the House of Lakagh, and by her (who d. 4 January, 1614,) he had issue,

1. OWNY, of Clonygawny, King's Co., m. 1st, Mary, dau. of Christopher Nugent, Lord Delvin, and by her (who d. 1618), had issue,

1 Christopher, knighted 13 July, 1624, m. Cleopatra Cary, but by her (who d. 28 March, 1628) he left no issue,
2 Lewis, of whom presently.

3 Henry. 4 Charles, d. young.

5 Stephen, d. unm. 6 John, beyond seas.

7 Matthew, d. unm.

1 Elizabeth, d. unm.

2 Giles, m. to Conn MacGeoghegan, of Beallanurighir, co. Westmeath.

3 Mary. 4 Margaret.

5 Eleanor, m. to Robert Reeves, Esq.

6 Cicely. 7 Julia, d. unm.

He m. 2ndly, Jane, dau. of Sir John Moore of Croghan, King's Co., Knt., by whom he had one son and one dau., James, and Dorothy, who d. an infant. He m. 3rdly, Dame Ismae, dau. of Sir Christopher Bellew, Knt., and relict of Sir William Taaffe, Knt., but by her had no issue. His will bears date 24 February, 1637. He was buried in the chapel of Killmohaly, Queen's co.

1. Anne, wife of Gerald Fitzgerald, Esq.

LEWIS O'DEMPSEY, 2nd Viscount Clanmaller, eldest surviving son of Owny O'Dempsey, and heir to his grandfather was attainted for the rebellion of 1641. He m. Martha, dau. of John Itchingham, Esq., of Dunbrody, co. Wexford, and had issue,

1. MAXIMILIAN, of whom presently.

11. Terence, living, 1691, m. Joan, dau. of Conly Mac Geoghegan, and had a dau. Alice, wife of Thomas O'Gorman, Esq., of Inchiquin, co. Clare.

1. Mary, m. to John Quinn, of Quinnsborough, co. Kildare.

11 Elizabeth, m. to Hugh O'More, of Ballynakill, Queen's co.

The eldest son,

MAXIMILIAN O'DEMPSEY, 3rd viscount, lord lieutenant of the Queen's co., m. Anne, dau. and co-heir of Walter Bermingham, Esq., of Dunfert, co. Kildare, but by her (who d. 27 June, 1708), he had no issue. He d. intestate, and administration was granted to his nephew Dominick Quin, 13 January, 1714.

Dr. O'Donovan (Annals of the Four Masters) states that the O'Dempseys have fallen altogether from their high estate and can now be only traced among the farmers and peasantry of Ireland. Dr. O'Donovan adds that Mr. Dempsey, of Liverpool was, at the time he wrote, the most conspicuous person of the name of whom he was aware.

O'DONNELL—EARL OF TYRCONNELL.

By Letters Patent, dated 27 September, 1603.

Lineage.

Dr. O'Donovan, in his edition of the Four Masters, and John Cornelius O'Callaghan in his History of the Irish Brigade, have dwelt at much length on the ancestry of the illustrious House of O'DONNELL. Suffice it for our purpose to commence with

MAGNUS, or MANUS O'DONNELL, "Rex Tirconnellie," who succeeded his father Hugh Duv O'Donnell as Chieftain, in 1537: he was m. four times, and d. in 1563. Of his sons, we will confine ourselves to two, viz., CALVAGH O'DONNELL, and HUGH O'DONNELL, of whom in the sequel. The former, CALVAGH O'DONNELL, Prince of Tyrconnell, "Capitaneus Nationis Sum. de antiquis Regibus sive Principibus Tirconnellie, in recta linea oriundus," d. 1666, leaving one son, CON O'DONNELL, Prince of Tyrconnell, who m. a dau. of Sir Turlough Luineach O'Neill, and had several sons, of whom, it appears from McFibbia, three only left issue, viz., NIALL GARV, HUGH BOY, and CON OOR; the eldest, the famous SIR NIALL GARV O'DONNELL, "Vir animo magno et audaci, et rei militaria scientia præditus," was in constant hostility with his cousin, Hugh Rory O'Donnell, but incurring eventually the suspicion of the English government, he was arrested at Raphoe, in 1608, and d. in 1626, after a confinement of eighteen years in the Tower of London. HUGH BOY O'DONNELL, the 2nd son, was a person of weight among the Catholic confederates in the great civil war, and d. in 1649: his son, JOHN O'DONNELL, an officer in the Spanish service, m. Catherine O'Rorke, and was father of HUGH BALLDEARG O'DONNELL,* or "O'Donnell of the Red Spot." From

* This Hugh bore, with the sanction of the Spanish Crown, the title of Conde de Tyrconnell in that kingdom. He was probably the testamentary heir of Hugh-Albert O'Donnell, for though born in Ireland, he possessed property in Spain and possessed also and transmitted the family papers of Earl Rory and his son, including the original letters patent of JAMES I. for the earldom, which, with the great seal of Ireland still attached, remains among the muniments of Count Maximilian O'Donnell in Vienna. Hugh, whose memory has long been hardly dealt with by his countrymen, is commonly known in Ireland by the name of "Balldearg O'Donnell, or O'Donnell of the Red Spot," for many of the genuine O'Donnells have a curious red blood-mark beneath the skin, usually on the side; and the "old rhyming prophecies" spoke of an O'Donnell with the red mark, who was to be a mighty champion of the Irish race. He was the son of John O'Donnell, an officer in the Spanish service, and of Catherine O'Rorke, of the old princely lineage of Brefny. His grandfather was Hugh O'Donnell, of Ramelton, who acted a leading part in the Catholic Confederacy, and who, from documents of the time, appears to have been looked up to as "the O'Donnell" from 1642, or at least from 1646 to 1649, in which year he died. Hugh of Ramelton was son of Conn, who was the son of Calvagh, Prince of Tyrconnell, the eldest son of Prince Manus; the common ancestor of the principal existing branches as well as of the still more distinguished junior line, which was illustrated by the chivalry of Red Hugh, and by the calamities of Earl Rory and his children; and here I may remark, that in all the transmissions of native dignities, the line of hereditary succession gave way to the "worthiest elder of the blood," a point that should never be lost sight of in the modern and ancient bickerings about the claims of the representation of the Celtic chieftainries.

In the Spanish service, BALLDEARG had risen to the rank of a brigadier, and commanded an Irish regiment in the Spanish pay, when the news of the Jacobite war in Ireland sounded in his heart like the trumpet call of duty. Already he had frequently offered his services to the Stuarts, when CHARLES and JAMES were still, like himself, in exile. He now craved permission of the Spanish monarch to go and serve his lawful king in Ireland. It was refused. Listening to no voice but the cry of his patriotic conscience, he fled from Spain like a deserter; but addressing an eloquent justification of his act to the Spanish government, and taking shipping, he reached Cork just four days after the battle of the Boyne had struck dismay into the adherents of JAMES. On the fugitive king he waited in Kinsale Harbour, on board the vessel that bore that luckless sovereign to France. By his Majesty he was recommended to Richard Talbot, Duke and Earl of Tyrconnell, and by Talbot, as viceroy, was given a commission to raise 5,000 men. "If you can collect fifteen thousand," added Talbot, "the King will be better served, and your country the more grateful." Armed with this authority, Balldearg, by the sole magic of his name, raised, in the space of six brief weeks, eight regiments of foot and two of horse. If these fresh levies were ill armed, and consequently remained during the war less efficient than they might have been, it must not be imputed to O'Donnell, but to the jealousy of that knot of narrow-minded men, who renewed, in this most critical conjuncture, the internecine animosities of the old English Pale against the ancient native houses, thus damaging fearfully the cause which they had not only sworn to defend, but for which they in truth made otherwise such noble sacrifices. It is told by Macaulay, in his glittering language, how O'Donnell looked upon himself as no less royal than JAMES, and it is hinted that his object was to found a Celtic monarchy, of which he was to be the sovereign. Right royally proud of his regal blood, O'Donnell doubtless was: but his nature seems to have been less open to narrow jealousies than those of his rivals. His insular prejudices had been mitigated by a foreign education, and many years of foreign service, during which his views had become more just. It was not he that revived the jealousies of Celt and Norman then. He came to bind Celt and Norman together, for the nation's sake, in the cause of JAMES.

When fate declared against that monarch, when the flight at Aghrim was lost, and Galway had fallen, and Limerick was about to surrender, terms were generously offered by Ginkel to O'Donnell. The chieftain refused as long as a ray of hope remained, but his memory has been stained in Ireland for having, in that supreme hour, while stipulating favourable and honourable terms for his faithful followers, accepted what was misnamed in his country, a "pension" from the victorious party. The simple truth is this: he had abandoned his fortune and position in Spain, he had no fortune in Ireland, having given to his brother, who was King JAMES's lord lieutenant of Donegal, whatever fortune he may have been entitled to, and even that was doubtless exhausted by the sacrifices made to serve King JAMES. He could not enter Spain, where he had forfeited his rank, and was liable to be treated as a deserter, for having gone, contrary to the king's will, to serve his native monarch. He could not, like other adherents of the fallen cause of JAMES, and like that monarch

Hugh Boy descended the O'DONNELLS of Larkfield, co. Leitrim, of which line was CONNELL, COUNT O'DONNELL, a field-marshal in the Austrian service. CON OGE O'DONNELL, the 3rd son of CON O'DONNELL, Prince of Tyrconnell, was ancestor, inter alios, of LEOPOLD O'DONNELL, DUKE of TETUAN, in Spain, and of MAXIMILIAN, * COUNT O'DONNELL, of Austria.

We must now revert to the 2nd son of Manus O'Donnell, Prince of Tyrconnell, viz.,

SIR HUGH O'DONNELL, Prince of Tyrconnell. This Hugh m. Inneen Ddu (dark Ina) dau. of the House of the Macdonnells of the Isles, and had issue,

- I. HUGH ROE, his heir.
- II. RORY, of whom presently, as EARL of TYRCONNELL.
1. Joan, wife of Henry, Earl of Tyrone.

The elder son,

HUGH ROE O'DONNELL, was perhaps the most dangerous antagonist the English Government ever had to contend with in Ireland: he was b. in 1571, and, in early life, not only displayed considerable genius and independence of spirit, but made these qualities prized among his clansmen and countrymen, by the noble generosity of his manners, and the matchless symmetry of his form.

In former times, the O'Donnells of Tyrconnell, and the O'Neills of Tyrone, were often addressed by the English monarch as his equals, and aid against foreign foes was more than once asked of them, as peers in royalty, by English monarchs. In 1244, HENRY III, King of England, solicited help by a letter, still on record, addressed, "Donaldo Regi de Tyrconnell;" and some of the successors of the puissant HENRY of England, and the scarcely less proud King Donell of Tyrconnell, interchanged these royal courtesies as peers in degree. It was not unnatural that the high-spirited young Hugh should desire to substantiate an independence so often and so distinctly recognized. He made no secret of his intentions, which were soon the theme of conversation throughout Ireland, and which reaching the ears of the Lord Justice, alarmed in no light measure the royal council in Dublin Castle. Sir John Perrott, himself, accept the pay of France, for France was then the foe of Spain, and to Spain O'Donnell and his family were bound by the fealty of gratitude for nearly a century of protection, as well as by the fealty of military honour, for he had sworn to her allegiance. He stipulated from William, the ally of Spain, for the pay of a brigadier, which was his Spanish rank; and instead of going to fight for the Dutch, as he has been supposed to have done, he retired to the Spanish Low Countries, thence to Spanish Italy, and at length to Barcelona, and after serving for the space of five or six years as a volunteer with Spanish troops, he was rewarded for his constancy by being restored to his Spanish military station, and soon after, promoted to that of major-general, and sent to a command in the Low Countries. (BRUCE'S Vicissitudes of Families.)

* Count Maximilian O'Donnell was aide-de-camp to the Emperor of Austria, FRANCIS JOSEPH I., whom he saved from assassination in 1853. For this signal service, the Emperor granted him a special patent of nobility, from which we make the following extracts, illustrative of the services of the O'Donnells:—"He is descended from the exceedingly ancient and very illustrious race, the chiefs of Donegal, and dynasts of the former Tyrconnell, in Ireland. History speaks of them in early ages, when Christianity was first introduced into that country; and extols the zeal with which they founded churches and monasteries to assist in the propagation of the true faith. In later times they exercised princely power in the land of their descent, and enjoyed widely extended martial fame. Shortly before the final incorporation of Ireland with the royal crown of Great Britain, Roderick, one of this ancient princely race, was invested with the dignity of Earl of the above-named province, as we have satisfactorily ascertained by the original document of King JAMES I., with the seal of Ireland thereto attached, and dated the 10th day of February, in the first year of his reign in England, and thirty-seventh year of his reign in Scotland. Various concurrences in ecclesiastical and political affairs, unnecessary now to enumerate, compelled the above named to quit his native land and seek refuge in a Catholic foreign country, as his elder brother Hugh had previously done. The latter met with a distinguished reception at the court of PHILIP III., of Spain, and the former was welcomed with paternal kindness by the paternal head of the Church, POPE PAUL V.; since that period their descendants have devoted themselves to the service of the monarchs of the Spanish line of our most serene archducal House in the kingdom of Spain, and in latter times, in the beginning of the past century, to that of our most serene predecessors in the imperial government. During their stay in the land of Spain, as well as in that of Austria, they ever enjoyed the consideration and respect due to the rank of count, and to their original nobility. It is to us a grateful and pleasing thing to bring to mind the banished (but with honour and dignity expatriated) forefathers, and relatives of our beloved, loyal, Maximilian Charles, Count O'Donnell, here mentioned, whose virtues and deeds for the greatest welfare of our most serene House, and the highest interests of the State, shine with such peculiar and distinguished lustre. Charles (i.e. Connell), Count O'Donnell, general of then at the head of the Anglo-Irish government, instead of courting the haughty young chieftain with honours and favour, framed a plot to seize him, which, though successful at the time, conducted eventually to render implacable the proud and injured youth.

In the year 1587, a ship, laden with Spanish wines, was fitted out and dispatched to one of the harbours of Tyrconnell, and the young Hugh O'Donnell, Prince of Tyrconnell, having been lured by false appearances to trust himself on board, he was made prisoner and conveyed to Dublin Castle. There he was held captive full three years, but in 1591, he managed to elude his keepers, and found means to pass into Tyrconnell, where, his aged father resigning in his favour, he was proclaimed by the tribes chief of his name, and the white wand, the simple sceptre of his sway, was placed in his hands, with solemn and time-honoured rites, by the Coarb of Kilmacrinan.

For the sixteen years following he was the scourge and terror of the government. He kept his mountain territory of Donegal, in spite of ELIZABETH's best generals: carried his excursions to the remotest parts of Munster, and made his power dreaded, and his name a word of terror, "even in the rich plains of Meath, and to where the Shannon blends its waters with the Atlantic."

At last, the only military fault he was ever known to commit led to his total rout at Kinsale, in the early spring of 1601, by Lord Mountjoy, one of the ablest generals, and perhaps the wisest statesman ever sent by England to Ireland.

HUGH ROE, Prince of Tyrconnell, this bold and ill-fated chieftain, was the first exile of the O'Donnells.

After the defeat of the Irish, and the inefficient force of their Spanish allies at Kinsale, he sailed for Spain to crave further succours of PHILIP III. In the known religious sympathies of the Spanish king, the exile set his trust; and, as the annalists quaintly tell us, "Moreover, on account of that monarch's love for the Gaels, from their having primally come out of Spain to invade Ireland, as is manifest in the Book of Invasions."

cavalry, and colonel proprietor of his regiment, distinguished himself at the battle of Torgau, November 3rd, 1760, when appointed successor in command to Field Marshal Count Daun, and performed the important service of repelling the advance of the enemy on Dresden; for which achievement it was unanimously resolved by the chapter of the order of Maria Theresa, that although he was not a knight thereof, he should be invested with the grand cross of the order, which honour was conferred upon him, December 21st, 1761. John, Count O'Donnell, field-marshal, lieutenant and knight of the order of Maria Theresa, distinguished himself at the battle of Leuthen, December 5th, 1757, and at Maxen, November 20th, 1759. Henry, Count O'Donnell, commanded as major of the 49th regiment of infantry, and volunteered to lead in person the storming of the principal gate of the fortress of Schweidnitz, September 30th, 1761, by which the same was taken; and for which achievement, by a resolution of the chapter, April 30th, 1762, the knight-cross of the order of Maria Theresa was conferred upon him. In due gradation he attained the rank of major-general. Francis-Joseph, Count O'Donnell was president of the chief council, and the ministerial bank committee, and also of the board of finance and commerce, and was decorated with the grand cross of the order of St. Stephen. John, Count O'Donnell, was one of the first to offer himself as a volunteer for the campaign of 1809, and as such headed a corps with the greatest devotion and courage. Hugh, Count O'Donnell, also a major, was killed at the storming of the bridge of Kehl; and Charles, Count O'Donnell, a major-general, was killed in the battle of Aspern. Maurice, Count O'Donnell, distinguished himself as a commander of a battalion, in the defence of the bridge of Ebersburg, in 1814, and afterwards attained the rank of field-marshal lieutenant. Our well-beloved, trusty Maximilian Charles O'Donnell, son of the above-named Maurice, and grandson of Francis-Joseph, Count O'Donnell, was born October 29th, 1812, and entered our service in the year 1830, and in regular gradation was promoted to his present rank. In 1848, he served in the campaign of Italy, and in 1849, in that of Hungary; and on every occasion was distinguished for his valour. Already did we, as a mark of our confidence in his zeal and abilities, appoint him as aide-de-camp to our person. At all times he has fulfilled the high expectations we formed of him; and most fully was this exemplified, when, at the risk of being personally sacrificed, he warned off our imperial person the murderous attack on the 18th February in the present year, whereby he rendered to ourselves, to our royal house, and to our realm, a never to be forgotten service. We rewarded him by investing him with the cross of our order of St. Leopold. But that he may enjoy an enduring and conspicuous mark of our just acknowledgment, which can be transmitted to his posterity, we grant him further all the rights, privileges, of an Austrian Count; and as a further proof of imperial and royal grace and favour, we augment henceforth his hereditary and family arms, by the insertion of our own initials and shield of our most serene ducal house of Austria; and finally, the double-headed eagle of our empire, to be and endure as a visible and imperishable memorial of his proved and devoted services."

On the 6th of January, 1602, O'Donnell, with his brave companions, took shipping at Castlehaven, near Bantry; and on the 14th of the same month, he landed at Corunna, where he was nobly received by the Conde de Caragena, then Governor of Galicia, who invited him to lodge in his house.

The Four Masters record faithfully the princely welcome King PHILIP gave him; but O'Donnell's course was well-nigh run. On his arrival at Simancas, two leagues from the court, which was sojourning at Valladolid, the exiled chieftain took his death sickness, and d. 10 September, 1602, in the house which the King of Spain had in that town of Simancas. This celebrated Irishman had no child and was consequently a. by his brother.

RORY or RODERIC O'DONNELL, the O'Donnell and Prince or Lord of Tyrconnell, who submitting to the English government, obtained a regrant of his lands from the crown, to be held in capite, and was created 27 September, 1603, Baron of Donegal, and EARL OF TYRCONNELL, and to his heirs male, with remainder to his brother Geoffry alias Caffrie O'Donnell, and his heirs male with the title of Baron of Donegal to his heir apparent.

He soon, however, with reason or not, suspected the government of plotting his ruin, and fled to the continent for safety, perhaps for succour.*

He bore with him his only son, Hugh, then aged but eleven months. With them fled the earl's brother, Caffrie, together with his only son, Hugh, aged about two years and a-half, and Caffrie's young wife, the sister of the chivalrous Sir Cahir O'Doherty, chief of Innishowen. With them too fled their sister, the Lady Nuala O'Donnell, wife of her valiant but turbulent kinsman, Sir Niall garbh O'Donnell, who, after refusing from the government the title of Baron of Lifford, d. in the Tower of London, having lain there for a quarter of a century, a state prisoner of the government in whose service he had often risked life and honour against the cause of his tribe and his co-religionists.

Earl Rory m. Lady Bridget FitzGerald, dau. of Henry, Earl of Kildare, and, as we have seen, left an only and infant son, named Hugh, subsequently Hugh-Albert, or Albert-Hugh. He lived in Spain and the Low Countries, and styles himself, in existing documents, of almost regal character, Earl of Tyrconnell and Donegal, Baron of Lifford, Lord of Sligo and Lower Connaught, and knight commander of the order of Alcantara. He rose to be a general in the Spanish service, m. the dau. of a knight of the Golden Fleece (of a now extinct house in the Low Countries, hardly second at that time to any subject family on the continent), Anna-Margaret, dau. of Maximilian de Hennin, Count de Rosent, and a near kinswoman of the last eccentric Duke of Guise.

When Earl Rory d., this only son was aged about two years and a-half. For some few years one loses sight of both him and his cousin german, Hugh, son of Caffrie, but in all probability they were confided to the charge of Caffrie's youthful widow, the Lady Rose O'Doherty, who m. 2ndly, Owen Roe O'Neill, the famous general of the confederate Catholics, in the war against the Parliamentarians. It may be presumed that she brought back these children from Rome to the archducal court at Brussels; for from the Livre des Depenses de l'Archiduc Albert, governor of the Low Countries, which is preserved in MS., and which extends over the years between 1612 and 1618, we learn that from 1615 the "Conde de Tyrconnell" and Don Hugo O'Donnell were in the receipt of a modest pension from his Imperial Highness. As both boys were called Hugh, there was added to the name of him who was chief of his house that of the archduke his protector, who was in all likelihood his godfather in confirmation; and henceforward this Hugh is equally styled Hugh-Albert or Albert-Hugh. About this time he was attached as page to the court of the Infanta Isabella, the consort of Archduke Albert.

That the two young O'Donnells were brought up at the University of Louvain is clear, from the authority of Vernulmus, who, in his Academia Lovaniensis, enumerates among the men of distinction that were educated in that celebrated school, "Albert Hugh O'Donnell, Earl of Tyrconnell, Baron of Lifford Lord of Lower Connaught, of the ancient stock of the Kings of Ireland; and Hugh O'Donnell, paternal cousin german of the aforesaid Albert, died a captain during the siege of Breda."

The Irish naturally cherished a generous memory of this heir of one of their most famous chieftains. The court of Spain was fully alive to the political importance of the exile. Even at the cautious Roman Court there appears to have been some that partook in a measure of the illusions of the native Irish, that the exiled O'Donnells and O'Neills might one day be placed by circumstances in a position to renew the stern struggle for their faith and lands, in which fate had declared against their fathers. In 1641, when the Irish rose in arms to oppose the Parliamentarians, many an anxious eye was turned towards Albert Hugh, the banished heir of Tyrconnell, who was then a Spanish general of reputation. His military rank and experience, his undoubted claim to the position of chief, though not senior of his clan, the popular belief that he was alluded to in the "old rhyming prophecies," which for ages had such a strong hold upon the Celtic imagination, and even still are not forgotten—all contributed to make some of the ablest of his countrymen look anxiously for his return to his native land. He seems indeed, to have craved permission of the Spanish court to place himself at the service of his country; but owing to the war with France, in which he was employed, this permission was refused; and he d. or as some say was drowned in 1642, the year following that in which his country had again taken up arms.

Albert Hugh does not appear to have had any issue. The title attainted by King JAMES I., still remains under forfeiture.

* Macaulay affirms that Earl Rory fled to the court of Madrid, but this was not the fact. The fugitive never set foot on the soil of Spain. He landed in France, proceeded to Brussels, and thence through Germany to Rome, where he d. in the first year of his foreign sojourn, and was there interred, with the following inscription:

ODO—EARL OF KENT.

Creation of WILLIAM THE CONQUEROR, anno 1067.

Lineage.

Odo, bishop of Bayeux, in Normandy, half brother of the CONQUEROR, having with "divers monks, and secular clerks," assisted at the battle of Hastings, "with their devout prayers and councils," had the whole county of Kent committed to his charge after the victory, and was joined with William Fitz-Osborne, one of the principal generals, afterwards Earl of Hereford, in the superintendency of the military forces of the kingdom, as well in field as garrison. He was likewise a count palatine, and a justiciary of England. In the Lent succeeding his coronation, King WILLIAM having visited Normandy, Odo and Fitz-Osborne were constituted custodes Angliæ, or regents, during his absence, with authority to erect castles in all fit and proper places. Being thus seated in Kent, and so powerful that no man durst oppose him, he possessed himself of divers lordships belonging to the archbishopric of Canterbury; of which, when Lanfranke became archbishop, a complaint was made by that prelate to the king, who immediately ordered a convocation of the men of Kent, versed in old customs and usages, to sit upon the matter; a meeting took place, accordingly, at Penenden Heath, Geoffrey, bishop of Constance, presiding for the king, when judgment was given in favour of Lanfranke, viz.—“That he should enjoy the lands belonging to his church, as freely as the king himself did enjoy his own demesne lands.” In 1074, Odo, and the bishop of Constance, suppressed the rebellion of the Earls of Hereford and Norfolk; and in four years afterwards, being “next to the king” in authority, Odo was sent at the head of an army to waste Northumberland, by reason that the men of those parts had risen in insurrection and murdered Walcher, bishop of Durham. The Earl of Kent is accused of exercising great cruelty upon this occasion, and of despoiling the church of Durham of some rich ornaments, amongst which was a rare crossier of sapphire; certain it is, that his lordship was not proof against the seductions of unlimited power, and that he became proud and oppressive; the more so, it was alleged, because it had been foretold by certain soothsayers of Rome, that he was destined, at no remote period, to fill the papal chair, then the first throne in Christendom, and nothing short of that could now satisfy his ambition. He purchased a magnificent palace at Rome, attached the Senators to his interest by munificent gifts, and induced Hugh, Earl of Chester, by promise of ample rewards, to accompany him with a chosen body of soldiers, into Italy. King WILLIAM becoming, however, acquainted with Odo's proceedings, hastened back to England, and casually meeting the earl at the head of this pompous retinue, in the Isle of Wight, upon his route to Normandy, assembled the nobles together, and in a passionate harangue impeached his conduct, concluding by a command that the guards should seize upon the delinquent; but no one daring to do so on account of his episcopal character, the king himself arrested him: when Odo exclaimed, “That he was a clerk and a minister of God, and that he was amenable to the papal authority, by which alone he could be sentenced.” To this the king replied, “I neither sentence any clerk or bishop, but my own earl, whom I made my vicegerent in my kingdom, resolving that he shall give an account of that his trust.” Odo was immediately conveyed into Normandy, and during the remainder of the Conqueror's reign, he was kept close prisoner in the castle of Roan. He obtained his freedom, however, upon the accession of RUFUS, and was restored to his Earldom of Kent, but not to the high office of justiciary, which had been conferred upon William, bishop of Durham. This latter circumstance, with the consequent diminution of his authority, kindling his wrath, induced him to fling off his allegiance to RUFUS, his benefactor, and to espouse the cause of Robert Curthose. He raised the standard of rebellion in Kent, and wasted with fire and sword, several towns belonging to the king, and to his great enemy, Lanfranke, archbishop of Canterbury, but he was afterwards besieged by RUFUS, in Rochester Castle, and forced, upon surrendering, to relinquish all his honours, and to abjure the kingdom for ever. Thence he repaired to Normandy, where being cordially received by Prince Robert, he had the entire government of the dukedom committed to his care. He d. at Palermo, in 1099, and was there interred. This very eminent personage is thus characterized by one of the old historians—“He was eloquent and magnanimous, courtly, and (to speak according to the world) courageous; he was a great honourer of religious men; his clergy he stoutly defended, with his tongue and sword, and furnished his church with rich ornament, as his buildings, vestments, and plate of gold and silver, which he gave thereto, do testify.”

The Earl of Kent held after the Conquest in England, by the gift of his brother, no less than 450 lordships; in Kent, 184; in Essex, 39; in Oxfordshire, 32; in Herefordshire, 23; in Buckinghamshire, 30; in Worcestershire, 2; in Bedfordshire, 8; in Northamptonshire, 12; in Nottinghamshire, 5; in Norfolk, 22; in Warwickshire, 6; and in Lincolnshire, 76.

OGILVY—EARL OF FINDLATER.

Barony, by Letters Patent, dated 4 October, 1616.

Earldom, by Letters Patent, dated 20 February, 1638.

Lineage.

ALEXANDER OGILVY son of Sir James Ogilvy (who d. in 1510), by Agnes, natural dau. of George, 2nd Earl of Huntly, and great-grandson of Sir Walter Ogilvy, of Auchleven (by Margaret, his wife, dau. and heir of Sir John Sinclair of Deskford and Findlater), from whose 2nd son, Sir Walter, descended the Lord Banffs (see that title), obtained a charter in 1511 for incorporating the lands of Deskford, Findlater, and Keithmore, into one entire barony, to be designated by the name of Ogilvy. He m. Janet, 2nd dau. of James Abernethy, 3rd Lord Saltoun, and had a son, JAMES, whom he disinherited, settling his estates upon John Gordon, 2nd son of George, 4th Earl of Huntly; but after a feud and some bloodshed between the Gordons and Ogilvys, the baronies of Deskford and Findlater were restored by an arbitration, of which Queen MARY was overwoman, to the rightful heir,

JAMES OGILVY, of Cardell, who m. 1st, Janet, dau. of Sir Robert Gordon, of Lochinvar; and 2ndly, Marian Livingstoun, of the family of Linlithgow, and by the latter only had issue, a son and dau., the latter predeceasing him, he was s. by his grandson,

SIR WALTER OGILVY, Knt. (son of Alexander Ogilvy, by Barbara, dau. of Walter Ogilvy, of Boyne), who was elevated to the peerage of Scotland, 4 October, 1616, by the title of BARON OGILVY, of Deskford. His lordship m. 1st, Agnes, dau. of Robert, 3rd Lord Elphinstone, by whom he had a dau., Christian, m. to Sir John Forbes, of Pitligo; he m. 2ndly, Lady Mary Douglas, dau. of William, Earl of Morton, and by her had (besides two daus., Margaret, m. 1st, to James Douglas, Earl of Buchan, and 2ndly, to Andrew, 8th Lord Gray; and Mary, m. to Sir John Grant, of Grant), a son and successor,

JAMES OGILVY, 2nd baron; who was created, 20 February, 1638, Earl of Findlater. His lordship m. 1st, Elizabeth, dau. of Andrew, 5th Earl of Rothes, by whom he had two daus., Elizabeth, m. to Sir Patrick Ogilvy, of Inchmartin, and Ann, m. to William, 9th Earl of Glencairn. He m. 2ndly, Marian, dau. of William Cunningham, 8th Earl of Glencairn, by whom he had no issue. The earl not having a son, procured a renewed patent, dated 18 October, 1641, conferring the titles of Earl and Countess of Findlater upon his son-in-law, Sir Patrick Ogilvy, Knt., of Inchmartin, and that gentleman's wife, Lady Elizabeth Ogilvy, his lordship's eldest dau.: and at his decease the peerage so devolved upon

SIR PATRICK OGILVY and his wife, ELIZABETH, as Earl and Countess of Findlater. His lordship d. 30 March, 1658, and was s. by his son,

JAMES OGILVY, 3rd earl; who m. 1st, Anne, dau. of Hugh, 7th Earl of Eglinton; and 2ndly, Lady Mary, 3rd dau. of William, 2nd Duke of Hamilton, but by the former only had issue, three sons, Walter, d. unm., JAMES, and Patrick, and two daus.: and dying in 1711, was s. by his eldest surviving son,

JAMES OGILVY, 4th earl; a lawyer of great eminence at the Scottish bar, who filled successively the offices of Solicitor-General and Secretary of State for Scotland, Lord Chief Baron of the Exchequer, and High Commissioner to the General Assembly of the Church. His lordship had been elevated to the peerage before the decease of his father, 28 June 1698, by the title of Viscount Seafield, and created, 24 June, 1701, Viscount Reithaven, and EARL OF SEAFIELD, with remainder, in default of direct heirs male, to heirs-general. The earl m. Anne, dau. of Sir William Dunbar, Bart., of Durn, by whom he had three sons and two daus., Elizabeth, Countess of Lauderdale, and Janet, Countess of Fife. This nobleman made a motion in the House of Lords, 1 June, 1713, for leave to bring in a bill to dissolve the union with Scotland, which was refused by a majority of four only. In the same year, he was appointed keeper of the great seal in Scotland, and presided as chancellor in the court of Session. His lordship d. in 1730, and was s. by his eldest son,

JAMES OGILVY, 5th Earl of Findlater, and 2nd Earl of Seafield; who m. 1st, Lady Elizabeth Hay, dau. of Thomas, 6th Earl of Kinnoull, by whom he had issue,

JAMES, his successor.

Margaret, who m. Sir Lodovick Grant, Bart. of Grant, and had (with seven daus.) a son,

SIR JAMES GRANT, Bart. b. 1738, who m. in 1763, Jean, only child of Alexander Duff, Esq., of Hatton, and left, with other issue, a son and heir,

SIR LEWIS-ALEXANDER GRANT, who s. as 5th EARL OF SEAFIELD. (See BURKE'S Extant Peerage.)

Anne, the wife of John, 2nd Earl of Hopetoun.

The earl m. 2ndly, Sophia, dau. of Charles, Earl of Hopetoun, but had no issue. His lordship d. in 1764, and was s. by his only son,

JAMES OGILVY, 6th Earl of Findlater, and 3rd Earl of Seafield. This nobleman m. 9 June, 1749, Mary, dau. of John, Duke of Athole; and dying 3 November, 1770, was s. by his only child,

JAMES OGILVY, 7th Earl of Findlater, and 4th Earl of Sea-

field, who m. Christina-Teresa, dau. of Joseph, Count Murray, of Melgum, and d. s. p., 5 October, 1811, when the Earldom of Findlater, and the Viscounty of Seafield EXPIRED; but the other dignities reverted to his cousin, SIR LEWIS-ALEXANDER GRANT, Bart., who assumed the surname of Ogilvy in addition to that of his paternal family, and became 5th Earl of Seafield.

ALEXANDER OGILVIE (see next article OGILVY, LORD BANFF), M.D., Deputy-Inspector-General Royal Artillery, claimant to the Barony of Banff, would if that claim were established be, as a sequitur, male representative of the Earls of Findlater, and Barons of Deskford.

OGLE—BARONS OGLE.

By Writ of Summons, dated 26 July, 1461.

Lineage.

This family, one of great antiquity in the co. of Northumberland, assumed its surname from the lordship of Oggil, its principal seat.

SIR ROBERT DE OGLE, son of Robert Ogle, by Margaret, his wife, dau. and heir of Sir Hugh Gubium, and grandson of Sir John de Ogle, Knt., and Annabella, his wife, dau. of Sir Walter Selby (HODGSON'S Northumberland), obtained license 15th EDWARD III., to make a castle of his manor house there. In four years afterwards this Robert Ogle, upon the incursion of the Scots under the command of William Douglas, when they burnt Carlisle, Penrith, and other places, accompanied John de Kirkeby, then bishop of Carlisle, in a charge which he made, upon a strong party of the invaders, and encountering their chief commander, wounded him in the side with his lance, being severely wounded himself; while the bishop was unhorsed, but gallantly recovering his saddle, escaped unhurt. Sir Robert Ogle m. Joan, dau. and heir of Sir Robert Hepphale, Knt., and was father of

ROBERT OGLE, Jun., who m. Helen, dau. and heir of Sir Robert Bertram, Knt., feudal Baron of Bothal Castle, Northumberland, by whom he acquired a considerable accession of property, and had a son,

SIR ROBERT OGLE. This feudal lord having been made prisoner by the Scots, in the 2nd HENRY IV., obtained a grant from the king, of 100 marks, towards the payment of his ransom; after which, in the 6th of the same reign, he served in the garrison of Berwick-upon-Tweed, under John Plantagenet, afterwards Duke of Bedford, then governor thereof. The next year, upon the death of David de Holgrave, the last husband of his mother, Helen, he had livery, upon doing his homage, of the castle and manor of Bothal. Whereupon being thus possessed of that manor and castle, as also of the manor of Hepphale, and the town of Lour-bottill, he entailed the same upon the heirs male of his body, upon condition that every such heir-male should bear the surname of Ogle, with the arms of Ogle and Bertram quarterly. He m. Joan, 3rd dau. and co-heir of Sir Alan de Heton, Knt., of Chillingham, and had livery of her property in the 12th of RICHARD II. He d. 31 October, 1410, and was s. by his eldest son, ROBERT OGLE, who forcibly possessed himself of the castle and manor of Bothal, which had been settled upon John, his brother, who bore the name of BERTRAM. Whereupon complaint being made in parliament, it was ordered that a writ should be sent to the sheriff of Northumberland to require all those who then held that castle, to depart thence, and to command the said Robert to appear at Westminster by a certain day, to make answer to the king, for this misdemeanour. In the 5th HENRY V. he was constituted sheriff of Northumberland; and in the 2nd HENRY VI., he was joined with Henry, Earl of Northumberland, and other great men, in those parts, to conduct JAMES, King of Scotland, from Durham, into his own realm; that prince, being then, upon hostages given, enlarged after an imprisonment of some years. He departed this life in the 15th HENRY VI., leaving issue,* by his wife, Maud, dau. of Sir Thomas Grey, of Heton, by Alice, his wife, dau. of Ralph, 1st Earl of Westmoreland and Werke, by Catherine Mowbray, according to Collins, eight daus., m. to persons of the first rank in the county, and three sons, viz.,

ROBERT (Sir), his successor.

John (Sir).

William (Sir), from whom one account derives the OGLES of Kirkley, co. Northumberland, and the OGLES of Worthy, in Hampshire, baronets (see BURKE'S Peerage and Baronetage).

He was s. by his eldest son,

SIR ROBERT OGLE, who, in the 16th HENRY VI., was made sheriff of Northumberland, and in the 38th of the same reign, was in a commission to treat regarding a truce with the Scots. In the 1st EDWARD IV., he was made warden of the east marches, and in consideration of his good services had a grant of the offices of steward and constable of Alnwick, and other castles in Northumberland. Shortly after this he was summoned to parliament as a Baron (from 26 July, 1461, to 7 September, 1469), and in the same year he obtained from the crown a grant in special title of the Lordship of Redisdale, and castle of Herbotel, then vested therein by the attainder of Sir William Talboys. In the 2nd EDWARD IV., his lordship was with the king in arms against the Lancastrians, and assisting at the siege of Bamburgh Castle, was made governor of that fortress upon its surrender. He m. Isabel, dau. and heir of Alexander de Kirkeby, of Kirkeby, co. Lancaster, eldest son of Sir Richard de Kirkeby, Knt., by whom he had issue,

OWEN, his successor.

Isabel, who m. 1st, Sir John Heron, of Chipchase, Knt., and 2ndly, John Widdrington.

His lordship d. 1 November, 1469, and was s. by his son,

OWEN OGLE, 2nd baron, summoned to parliament 6th HENRY VII. This nobleman was in the battle of Stoke, 2nd HENRY VII., on the part of the king against the Earl of Lincoln, and his adherents, and is the same that Polydore Virgil calls by mistake George. In two years afterwards he marched with the rest of the northern nobles, under Thomas, Earl of Surrey, to relieve Norham Castle, then besieged by the Scots. His lordship, who d. 1485, m. Eleanor, dau. of Sir William Hilton, Knt., of Hilton Castle, co. Durham, and by her (who m. 2ndly, George Percy, Esq.) had an only son,

RALPH OGLE, 3rd baron, summoned to parliament from 17 October, 1509, to 29 November, 1511. This nobleman m. Margaret, dau. of Sir William Gascoigne, Knt., and had issue,

* Dugdale enumerates his issue thus:—

ROBERT, his successor.

Margaret, m. to Sir Robert de Harbottle, Knt.

Anne, m. to Sir William Heron, Knt.

Constance, m. to Sir John Milford, Knt.

Joane, m. to — Manera.

ROBERT, his successor.

William (Sir), m. Margaret, dau. of John Delaval, Esq., and had issue, James, of Cawsey Park.

John, of Bedayde.

John, from whom the Ogles of Kirkley, co. Northumberland, are said by some accounts to derive.

Anne, m. to Humphrey, son and heir of Sir William Lisle, Knt., and 2ndly, Sir John Delaval.

Dorothy, m. 1st, to Sir Thomas Forster, and 2ndly, to Sir Thomas Grey, of Horton, Knt.

Margery, m. to George Harbottle, Esq.

His lordship d. in 1512, and was s. by his eldest son,

ROBERT OGLE, 4th baron, summoned to parliament from 23 November, 1514, to 3 November, 1529. This nobleman was in the vanguard of the English army at the battle of Flodden, where the King of Scotland sustained so signal a defeat, but continuing in the Scottish wars, he fell eventually at Paunherhaugh, in 1529. His lordship m. Anne, dau. of Thomas, son and heir of George, Lord Lumley, by whom he had three sons, and was s. by the eldest surviving,

ROBERT OGLE, 5th baron, but never summoned to parliament. This nobleman m. 1st, Dorothy, dau. of Sir Henry Widdrington, of Widdrington, by whom he had issue, ROBERT, his successor; Margery, m. to Gregory Ogle, Esq. His lordship m. 2ndly, Jane, eldest dau. of Sir Cuthbert Ratcliffe, Knt., of Dilston, and by her (who m. 2ndly, Sir John Forster), had two sons, viz.,

CUTHBERT, successor to his brother.

Thomas, who m. Isabella, dau. of Sir Thomas Grey, of Horton, but d. without surviving issue.

Jane.

Margaret, m. to Robert Widdrington, Esq.

Lord Ogle fell at the battle of Halidon, in 1644, and was s. by his eldest son,

ROBERT OGLE, 6th baron, summoned to parliament from 14 August, 1553, to 5 November, 1558. His lordship m. Joan, dau. and heir of Sir Thomas Mauleverer, Knt., of Allerton Mauleverer, co. York, but dying s. p. in 1562, was s. by his half brother,

CUTHBERT OGLE, 7th baron, summoned to parliament from 11 January, 1563, to 17 October, 1601. This nobleman m. Catherine, dau. and co-heir of Sir Reginald Carnaby, Knt., and had issue, Joane, m. to Edward Talbot (eventually 8th Earl of Shrewsbury), son of George, 6th Earl of Shrewsbury, but d. s. p. in 1627.

Catherine, m. to Sir Charles Cavendish, Knt., of Welbeck, co. Nottingham.

His lordship d. in 1597, and the Barony of Ogle fell into ABERNACE between his two daus., and so continued until the decease of JOANE, COUNTESS OF SHREWSBURY, the elder, without issue, in 1627, when it was called out in favour of the younger,

CATHERINE CAVENDISH, relict of Sir Charles Cavendish, who obtained especial letters patent under the great seal, from King CHARLES I., dated 4 December, 1628, declaring her ladyship to be BARONESS OGLE, and ratifying the dignity to her heirs for ever. Her ladyship d. the next year, and was s. by her only surviving son,

SIR WILLIAM CAVENDISH, K.G., who had been created Baron Ogle, and Viscount Mansfield, 3 November, 1620. (For the particulars of this nobleman, afterwards so celebrated in the civil wars, as DUKE OF NEWCASTLE, reſer to Cavendish, Baron Ogle, Duke of Newcastle, &c.) His grace d. 1676, and was s. by his only son,

HENRY CAVENDISH, 2nd Duke of Newcastle, &c., and 9th Baron Ogle, K.G. This nobleman m. Frances, dau. of William, 2nd son of Robert Pierpoint, Earl of Kingston, by whom he had a son, HENRY, who d. s. p. in 1690, and five daus., viz.,

I. Elizabeth, m. 1st, to Christopher Monk, Duke of Albemarle, and 2ndly, to Ralph, Duke of Montagu, but d. s. p.

II. Frances, m. to John, 2nd Earl of Breadalbane, and d. s. p.

III. Margaret, m. to John Holles, Earl of Clare, afterwards created Duke of Newcastle, by whom she had an only dau.,

LADY HENRIETTA-CAVENDISH HOLLES, who m. Robert Harley, 2nd Earl of Oxford, and left an only dau.,

LADY MARGARET CAVENDISH HARLEY, who m. William Bentinck, 2nd Duke of Portland, K.G., and was mother of WILLIAM-HENRY-CAVENDISH, 3rd Duke of Portland, K.G., grandfather of William-John, present DUKE OF PORTLAND.

IV. Catherine, m. to Thomas, 6th Earl of Thanet, and had five daus., to survive, viz.,

1 Catherine, m. to Edward, Viscount Soudes, heir apparent to the Earl of Rockingham.

2 Anne, m. to James, 5th Earl of Salisbury, and from this marriage descends the MARQUESS OF SALISBURY.

3 Margaret, m. to Thomas Coke, Earl of Leicester, but d. s. p.

4 Mary, m. 1st, Anthony Grey, Earl of Harold, who d. s. p.; and 2ndly, John, Earl of Gower, by whom she had issue.

5 Isabella, m. 1st, Lord Nassau Paulett, and 2ndly, Sir Francis Blake-Delaval, K.B.

v. Arabella, m. Charles, Earl of Sunderland, and left an only dau.,

Frances, who m. Henry, 4th Earl of Carlisle.

His grace d. in 1691, when all his honours became EXTINCT, except the Barony of Ogle, which fell into ABREYANCE, and still continues amongst the representatives of those of his daws. who left issue.

O'HARA—BARON TYRAWLY, AND BARON KILMAINE.

By Letters Patent, dated 10 January, 1706, and 8 February, 1721.

Lineage.

The O'Haras are an ancient Milesian family, settled in the west of Ireland.

SIR CHARLES O'HARA, Knt., a native of the co. of Mayo, was a distinguished military officer in Spain, and was raised to the peerage of Ireland, as BARON TYRAWLY, 10 January, 1706. In the following year, his lordship commanded the left wing of the allied army at the battle of Almanza, and remained in the Peninsula until the conclusion of the war, when he returned to Ireland, took his seat in the house of peers, and was constituted commander-in-chief of the forces in that kingdom. He m. Frances, dau. of Gervase Rouse, Esq., of Rouse Lench, co. Worcester, and had issue, JAMES, his heir, and Mary, whose will dated 28 February, 1759, was proved 7 April, 1759. He d. 8 June, 1724, aged eighty-four, and was buried 11 June following in the chancel vault of St. Mary's church, Dublin. His son, JAMES O'HARA, 2nd Lord Tyrawly, b. in 1690, who had been previously, 8 February, 1721, created Baron Kilmaine, of Kilmaine, co. Mayo, in recompense for his eminent military services during Queen ANNE's wars, attained the rank of general in the army, filled several high diplomatic appointments, and was for a period, gov. gen. of Minorca. His lordship m. Mary, only surviving dau. of William, Viscount Mountjoy, but d. s. p. in 1774, when the titles became EXTINCT.

OLDCASTLE—BARON COBHAM.

By Writ of Summons, dated 8 January, 1313.

Lineage.

For an account of this nobleman, the celebrated Lollard leader, SIR JOHN OLDCASTLE, Baron Cobham, refer to Cobham, BARONS COBHAM.

OLIPHANT—LORD OLIPHANT.

Created before 1456.

Lineage.

Referring to CHALMERS' Caledonia for the more early pedigree, we need only mention that the 6th in descent from Sir William Oliphant, of Aberdalgie, the knightly warrior who so gallantly defended Stirling Castle against EDWARD I. in 1304, and whose tombstone is still extant, recording his death on 5 February, 1329, was

SIR LAURENCE OLIPHANT (eldest son and heir of Sir John Oliphant, of Aberdalgie, by Isabel, his wife, dau. of Walter Ogilvy, of Auchterhouse, and grandson of Sir William Oliphant), a minor in 1450, who was created BARON OLIPHANT before 1456, when he got a seisin of Auchterhouse, and was designed a noble and worshipful man, Laurence, Lord Oliphant and Aberdalgie. He obtained bonds of manrent from thirteen gentlemen in his neighbourhood, binding themselves to be his followers. He d. soon after 1495, leaving three sons, viz.,

JOHN, his heir.

William, of Berriedale, who m. Christian, only dau. and heir of Alexander Sutherland, of Duffus, in Moray, Strabrok, in Linlithgow, and Berriedale, in Caithness. As the connexion with the latter county is important to the history of this family, it may be remarked that Christian, besides representing a branch of the Earls of Sutherland, and the Morays, Cheynes, and Chisholms, of Moray, was co-heir to the Earldom of Caithness, of which she inherited a fourth part. Their son, Andrew, was so harassed in that district, where he was looked on as an intruder, that at length having no son by Dame Janet Sinclair, his wife, he gave up his estates to his chief, in 1520, on condition that Lord Oliphant should provide suitable matches and tochers (fortunes) for his daws. He accordingly m. two of the three to cousins of his and their own, probably at a small expense, viz.,

Margaret, m. to William Oliphant, of Newton.

Katherine, m. to Andrew Oliphant, of Binzian.

Helen.

George, of Balmactorn.

The eldest son,

JOHN OLIPHANT, 2nd Lord Oliphant, was served heir in 1500. He m. Elizabeth, dau. of Colin, 1st Earl of Argyll, and d. in 1516, leaving his wife surviving. His eldest son,

COLIN OLIPHANT, Master of Oliphant, was slain vita patris at Flodden in 1513. He m. Elizabeth Keith, who survived him, and m. William, Lord Sinclair. The Master of Oliphant left three sons, viz.,

LAURENCE, his heir.

Peter, ancestor of the Oliphants of Langton.

William, of Newton, ancestor of the Oliphants of Gask, in Perthshire, whose representative, the late JAMES BLAIR-OLIPHANT, Esq., of Gask, d. s. p., 7 December, 1847. His widow, Henrietta, dau. of James Gillespie Grahame, Esq., s. to the estate of Orchill, co. Perth.

The eldest son,

LAURENCE OLIPHANT, 3rd Lord Oliphant, is designed son and heir of Umquhill Colin, master of Oliphant, and grandson and heir of Umquhill John, Lord Oliphant, 18 November, 1516, when a gift of the ward of his lands passed. The 3rd lord purchased his cousin's whole estate in Caithness. He m. Margaret, eldest dau. of James Sandiland of Crutie, and d. at Aldwick, in Caithness, 26 March, 1566, leaving an eldest son and heir,

LAURENCE OLIPHANT, 4th Lord Oliphant, who joined the association on behalf of Queen MARY at Hamilton. He m. Lady Margaret Hay, 2nd dau. of George, 7th Earl of Errol; and dying in 1593, was s. by his grandson,

LAURENCE OLIPHANT, 5th Lord Oliphant (son and heir of Laurence, Master of Oliphant, by Christian, his wife, dau. of William, 2nd Earl of Morton). This nobleman m. Lillias Drummond, eldest dau. of James, 1st Lord Madherty, and had an only child, Anne, whose claim to the peerage was compromised by giving her husband the title of Mordington, while that of Oliphant was confirmed to her father's cousin german, Patrick, grandson of the 4th lord by his only younger son, John,

PATRICK OLIPHANT, who thus became 6th Lord Oliphant. By his 1st wife, Elizabeth, dau. of Sir Patrick Cheyne, of Eastlemon, he had an only child, Lillias, m. to Sir Lawrence Oliphant, of Gask; and by his 2nd wife, Mary, dau. of James Crichton, of Frendraught, three sons, CHARLES, WILLIAM, and FRANCIS, who all inherited the title. The eldest son,

CHARLES OLIPHANT, 7th Lord Oliphant, m. Mary, dau. of Ogilvy of Milton, and relict of Patrick Meldrum, of Leathers, by whom he had a son,

PATRICK OLIPHANT, 8th Lord Oliphant; at whose decease without issue, in 1721, the title devolved on his uncle,

WILLIAM OLIPHANT, 9th Lord Oliphant, colonel in the army; who d. s. p., and was s. by his brother,

FRANCIS OLIPHANT, 10th Lord Oliphant; who m. in 1747, Mrs. Mary Lingley, of York; and d. s. p. at Islington, 19 April, 1748. At his lordship's decease, William Oliphant, son of Charles Oliphant, of Langton, one of the clerks of Session, assumed the title as 11th Lord Oliphant, and voted at the election of 1750. He d. s. p. in 1761, acknowledging Laurence Oliphant, of Gask, to be heir to his peerage.

OLMIUS—BARON WALTHAM.

By Letters Patent, dated 22 June, 1762.

Lineage.

JOHN OLMIUS, Esq., of New Hall, co. Essex, a merchant of the city of London, descended from an ancient family settled at Arlon, in the Duchy of Luxembourg, was chosen deputy-governor of the bank of England in 1731, returned to parliament by the boroughs of Weymouth and Melcombe Regis, in 1737, and raised to the peerage of Ireland as BARON WALTHAM of Philipstown, King's Co., 22 June, 1762. He m. 8 September, 1741, Anne, dau. and heir of Sir William Billers, Knt., some time Lord Mayor of London, and had issue, DRIGUE-BILLERS, his heir.

Elizabeth, m. 1766, to John Luttrell, Earl of Carhampton.

Lord Waltham d. in September, 1762, and was s. by his only son,

DRIGUE-BILLERS OLIVIER, 2nd Lord Waltham, b. 12 March, 1746; who m. 5 June, 1767, Miss Coe; but d. s. p. in 1787, when the title became extinct.

O'MALLUN—BARON GLEAN-O'MALLUN.

By Letters Patent, dated 6 October, 1622.

Lineage.

SIR DERMOT O'MALLUN, or O'MULLANE, was created by patent, dated 6 October, 1622, Baron of Glean-O'Mallun, co. Clare, for life, with remainder to Albert O'Mallun, and the heirs male of his body. These are the words of the creation:—"R. Vto. die Octobris creavit Dermicium O'Mallun militi. in gradum et dignitatem Baronis de Glean-O'Mallun in Com. Clare, in Regno Hiberniæ duran. vita. Ac etiam creavit Albertum O'Mallun in gradum Baronis de Glean O'Mallun immediato post mortem pdict. Dermicii sibi et heredibus masculis." (Patent Rolls, 20th JAMES I, p. 3, N. 29.) The O'Mulluns were distinct from the Malones, and probably of the same house as the MacMullanes.

Arms—Arg., a bend, vert.

PAGET—BARONS BURTON, EARLS OF UXBRIDGE.

Barony, by Letters Patent, dated 31 December, 1711.

Earldom, by Letters Patent, dated 19 October, 1714.

Lineage.

"The first mention I find," writes Sir William Dugdale, "of any, bearing this name, who arrived to the dignity of the peerage, is WILLIAM PAGET, a person endowed with excellent parts, as may seem from his ascent from so low a condition to those high preferments, whereunto, by sundry degrees, he attained; being son to — Paget, one of the serjeants at mace in the city of London, who was born near Wednesbury in Staffordshire, of mean parentage, where there were some of that generation, till of late years, remaining." In the 23rd HENRY VIII., this William Paget, through his great abilities alone, obtained the appointment of clerk of the signet: in a few years afterwards he was made clerk of the council: he next became clerk of the privy seal, and then clerk of the parliament, having the latter office conferred upon him for life. He subsequently received the honour of knighthood, was employed by King HENRY VIII., upon several diplomatic occasions of high importance, and appointed one of his Majesty's executors, and of the council to his son, by that monarch upon his death-bed. In the 2nd year of the new reign (EDWARD VI.), Sir William Paget had a grant in fee from the crown of Exeter House (formerly belonging to the Bishops of that see), with a parcel of ground lying within the garden of the Middle Temple, adjoining thereto; which mansion he rebuilt for his own residence, and called it Paget House. But it did not retain that designation for any length of time, it being afterwards called Leicester House, and then Essex House. In the 4th EDWARD VI., Sir Edward was accredited ambassador extraordinary to the Emperor CHARLES V., and became so great a favourite with that monarch, that his imperial majesty was heard to say, "that Sir Edward Paget deserved to be a king as well as to represent one." Once, too, as the English ambassador came to court, the emperor observed, "Yonder is the man to whom I can deny nothing." At another time, his majesty remarked, that England sent three sorts of ambassadors to him; the first was Wolsey, whose great retinue promised much, but he did nothing; the second, Morlain, promised, and did much; the third, Paget, promised nothing, and did all. In the same year, Sir Edward being then a knight of the Garter, was constituted comptroller of the king's household: made chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster, and summoned to the House of Lords as BARON PAGET, of Beaudesert, co. Stafford, by writ, dated 23 January, 1552; after which he was sent with the Earl of Bedford and Sir John Mason, again to treat of peace with the French. Notwithstanding, however, these eminent services, he was accused by his enemies on the fall of the Protector Somerset, of divers offences, and committed to the Tower, deprived of the insignia of the Garter, and fined £6,000, two of which were remitted, on condition that the other four were paid within a year. At the demise of King EDWARD, his lordship, espousing the cause of MARY, rode post with the Earl of Arundel, to convey the announcement of the King's death to her Majesty, and of her proclamation by the city of London; for which loyal proceeding he was ever afterwards highly esteemed by her Majesty, and in the 3rd year of her reign was made lord privy seal. His lordship m. Anne, dau. and heir of Henry Preston, Esq., of the co. Lancaster (son of Lawrence, 2nd son of Thomas Preston, Esq., of Preston Patrick and Under Levins Hall), and had issue,

HENRY (Sir), his successor.

THOMAS, who s. as 3rd lord.

Charles, attainted with his brother Thomas, Lord Paget. Holingshed relates that the Charles Paget was principal agent for the Roman Catholics, as it was proved on examination of the Earl of Northumberland's case, viz.: that in September, 1583, he came privately beyond sea to the Earl of Northumberland, at Petworth, where the Lord Paget met him; and that on Throgmorton's being committed to the Tower, the Earl of Northumberland prevailed on the Lord Paget to quit the realm, and provided him a ship on the coast of Sussex, wherein he embarked.

Etheldreda, m. to Sir Christopher Allen, Knt.

Eleonor, m. 1st, to Jerome Palmer, Esq., and 2ndly, to Sir Rowland Clerk, Knt.

Grisild, m. 1st, to Sir William Waldegrave, and 2ndly, to Sir Thomas Rivet, Knt.

Joan, m. to Sir Thomas Kitson, Knt.

He d. in 1568, and was s. by his brother,

THOMAS PAGET, 3rd baron, summoned to parliament from 4 April, 1571, to 6 January, 1581. This nobleman, being a zealous Roman Catholic, was obliged, in the reign of ELIZABETH, to seek personal security in France, but he was attainted in parliament with his brother, Charles, as a well-wisher to the Queen of Scots, when the Barony of Paget became forfeited, and his lands being confiscated, the Earl of Leicester got a grant of Paget House. His lordship m. Nazaret, dau. of Sir Henry Newton, Knt., and left at his decease (anno 1589, at Brussels), an only son,

WILLIAM PAGET, who was with the Earl of Essex in the memorable attack upon Cadiz, 39th ELIZABETH, and being restored to the lands and honours forfeited by his father, was summoned to parliament as BARON PAGET, from 5 November, 1605, to 7 March, 1628. His lordship m. Lettice, dau. and co-heir of Henry Knollys, Esq., a younger son of Sir Henry Knollys, K.G., by whom he had issue,

WILLIAM, his successor.

WILLIAM PARKER, who had been summoned to parliament in the life-time of his father, in right of his mother, as BARON MONTEAGLE, and was summoned as LORD MORLEY AND MONTEAGLE from 30 January, 1621, to 4 November in the same year. This is the nobleman to whom the memorable anonymous letter was addressed, by which the Gunpowder-plot was fortunately discovered. It is said to have been written by his sister, Mary, wife of Thomas Abington (or Habington), of Hinlip, which Thomas had been cofferer to Queen ELIZABETH. Abington was concerned in many projects for the release of MARY, Queen of Scotland, and contrived various places of concealment in his old mansion at Hinlip. He was condemned to die for concealing Garret and Oldcorn, the Jesuits, but was pardoned, at the intercession of his wife and Lord Monteagle. Lord Morley and Monteagle m. His lordship d. 17 November, 1800, and was s. by his only son, GEORGE-AUGUSTUS-HENRY-ANNE PARKYNS, 2nd baron, b. 10 June, 1785, who s. to the baronetcy as 4th bart., at the decease of his grandfather, 17 March, 1806. He m. 15 October, 1807, Elizabeth-Mary, eldest dau. of George, 6th Earl of Granard, and d. s. p. 1 November, 1850, when the Barony became EXTINCT.

Arms—Arg., an eagle displayed, sa.; on a canton, or, seven billets, ermines.

PARR—BARON PARR OF KENDAL, EARL OF ESSEX, MARQUESS OF NORTHAMPTON.

Barony, by Letters Patent, dated in 1538.

Earldom, by Letters Patent, dated 23 December, 1543.

Marquessate by Letters Patent, dated 16 February, 1546-7.

Marquessate revived, 13 January, 1559.

Lineage.

The surname of PARR is local, being derived from a manor in the parish of Prescott, co. Lancaster, of which the family of Parr were anciently lords.

SIR JOHN DE PARR, Knt. of Parre, living about 1350, m. Matilda, dau. of Sir Richard de Leyborne, and was father of

SIR WILLIAM DE PARR, who m. 1383, Elizabeth, dau. of John de Ros, and grand-dau. and heiress of Sir Thomas de Ros, Baron of Kendal, and had livery of her inheritance.* On the accession of the Duke of Lancaster as HENRY IV., Sir William stood so high in the estimation of the new monarch, that he was deputed, with the bishop of St. Asaph, to announce the revolution to the court of Spain. He d. 4 October, 1405, being then seized of the fourth part of the manor of Kirby in Kendal, in right of the heiress of Ros, and was s. by his eldest son,†

JOHN PARR, of Parre and Kendal, who m. Agnes, dau. and heir of Sir Thomas Crophull, and relict of Sir Walter Devereux, and dying in 1409, was s. by his son,

SIR THOMAS PARR, of Kendal, who, taking part with Richard, Duke of York, was attainted in the parliament held at Coventry, 38th HENRY VI. He m. Alice, dau. of Sir Thomas Tunstall, of Thurland Castle, and had issue,

1. WILLIAM, his heir.

II. John (Sir), appointed sheriff of Westmoreland for life, in 1462, m. a dau. of Sir John Yonge, lord mayor of London, and had issue. From him it is stated derived a branch of the family long seated in Derbyshire, and the late Rev. SAMUEL PARR, LL.D.

III. Thomas, slain at Barnet-field, 1472.

1. Margaret, m. Sir Thomas Radclyffe, of Derwentwater.

II. Anne, m. William Harrington, of Cartmell.

III. Elizabeth, m. Sir Christopher Moresby, of Moresby.

IV. Agnes, m. Sir Thomas Strickland, of Syzergh.

V. Maud, m. Humphrey, Lord Daer, of Gillesland.

VI. Eleanor, m. Sir Henry Agard.

Sir Thomas d. 1464. His eldest son,

SIR WILLIAM PARR, was high in favour with King EDWARD IV., and repaid it with great fidelity. He was one of the commissioners appointed to adjust with JAMES III. of Scotland some alleged violations of the truce then subsisting between the two kingdoms; and on the return of King EDWARD, again to contest his right to the crown, with Margaret of Anjou, supported by the king-maker, Earl of Warwick, Sir William Parre met him at Northampton with a considerable force, and thence marched to Barnet-field, where the contest was decided in favour of his royal master. He was M.P. for Westmoreland in the 6th and 12th EDWARD IV., and served as sheriff of Cumberland in 1473. In the 22nd of the same reign he was constituted chief commissioner for exercising the office of constable of England; he was also created a knight banneret, and a knight of the Garter. Sir William m. Elizabeth, dau. of Henry, 5th Baron Fitz-Hugh, by whom (who m. 2ndly, Nicholas, Lord Vaux,) he had issue,

1. THOMAS, his successor.

II. WILLIAM, created LORD PARR, of Horton.

III. John, m. Constance, dau. and co-heir of Sir Henry Vere, of Addington, co. Northampton, d. s. m. 1504.

1. Anne, m. Sir Thomas Cheney, of Tithingborough, whose dau. and heiress, Elizabeth Cheney, m. Thomas, 2nd Lord Vaux.

He d. before 1512, and was s. by his eldest son,

SIR THOMAS PARR, of Parr and Kendal, who upon the decease of his first cousin, George, 7th Baron Fitz-Hugh, in 1512, was found joint heir of that nobleman's barony and lands. He m. Maud, dau. and co-heir of Sir Thomas Greene, of Greene's Norton, co. Northampton, by whom, who d. 1532, he had issue,

WILLIAM.

KATHERINE, m. 1st, Edward Borough; 2ndly, John Neville,

Lord Latimer; 3dly, King HENRY VIII.; and 4thly, Thomas, Lord Seymour, of Sudely. She d. 6 September, 1548.*

Anne, m. William Herbert, Earl of Pembroke, and her male descendant continues to inherit that earldom, but Philip, 6th Earl of Pembroke, leaving at his decease an only dau.,

LADY CHARLOTTE HERBERT, who m. 1st, John, Lord Jeffreys; and 2ndly, Thomas, Viscount Windsor, the co-heirship to the Barony of Fitz-Hugh, was thus severed from the Earldom of Pembroke. The representatives of her ladyship's two marriages are the Earl of Pomfret and the Marquess of Bute.

Sir Thomas, who was master of the Wards, and comptroller to HENRY VIII., served as sheriff of Northamptonshire in 1509, and of Lincolnshire in 1510. He d. in 1518, and was buried in Blackfriars Church, London.† His son,

WILLIAM PARR, was brought to Court by his sister, and rose rapidly into royal favour. He was first made one of the esquires of King HENRY VIII.'s body, and he attended his royal master in the celebrated interview with Francis, king of France, where he took part in the jousting and feats of arms, being amongst the challengers on the English side. In the 20th of the same reign, he was advanced to the dignity of BARON PARR, of Kendal; but upon what day or month the enrolment of his patent mentions not. He was summoned in the next year, and took his seat in parliament 28 April, 1539, to 4 June, 1543. His lordship m. 1st, Lady Anne Bouchier, only dau. and heiress of Henry Bouchier, 2nd Earl of Essex, (which marriage was dissolved by act of parliament, and the issue bastardized), and was soon after the elevation of his sister, Katherine, to the dignity of Queen Consort, created, being then a knight of the Garter, by letters patent, dated 23 December, 1543, EARL OF ESSEX, with the precedence which the late Henry Bouchier, Earl of Essex, had enjoyed. His lordship was constituted by King HENRY VIII. one of his executors, and upon the accession of his nephew, EDWARD VI., he was advanced to the MARQUESSATE OF NORTHAMPTON, by letters patent, dated 16 February, 1546-7. In four years afterwards he was made lord great chamberlain of England for life, and having about this time m. for his 2nd wife, Elizabeth, dau. of George, Lord Cobham, he obtained in the 5th EDWARD VI., an especial act of parliament for annulling his marriage with the Lady Anne Bouchier, as also for ratifying his marriage with the said Elizabeth, and legitimating the children that might be born of that lady. Shortly, after this his lordship was sent ambassador extraordinary to the King of France, to present to his majesty the order of the Garter, and to treat with him touching certain private affairs, being accompanied by the bishop of Ely, and other distinguished personages. Before the close of this year he was one of the peers who sat on the trial of the protector, Somerset. Espousing the cause of Lady Jane Grey, and joining the Duke of Northumberland, in proclaiming her Queen of England, upon the demise of King EDWARD, the marquess, on the total failure of the project, was committed to the Tower, and being afterwards arraigned, had sentence of death passed upon him, and all his honours became forfeited. Notwithstanding which, execution was forbore, and before the close of the year he was restored in blood by parliament, but not to his honours, so that he had no other title than William Parr, Esq., late Marquess of Northampton, and stood in no higher degree until Queen ELIZABETH ascended the throne, when her Majesty was graciously pleased to create him, by letters patent, dated 13 January, 1559, MARQUESS OF NORTHAMPTON, to restore him to his lands, to make him one of her privy council, and to re-invest him with the order of the Garter. His lordship outliving his 2nd wife, m. 3rdly, Helen, dau. of Wolfgang Suavenburgh, but had no issue. The delight of this nobleman is said to have been music and poetry, and his exercise war; though his skill in the field answered not his industry, nor his success, his skill. Yet King EDWARD called him "his honest uncle," and King HENRY "his integrity." His lordship d. in 1571, and was buried in the collegiate church at Warwick, where about half-a-century before Sir William Dugdale wrote, his body being dug up, was found perfect, the skin entire, dried to the bones; and the rosemary and bag lying in the coffin, fresh and green. His children by his 1st lady were illegitimated, and, as he had none by his other wives all his honours at his decease became extinct.

Arms—Arg., two bars, az., a border engrailed, sa.

* See BURKE'S Visitation of Seats, vol. i., p. 25.

† By Inq. p. m. taken 10th HENRY VIII., Sir Thomas was found to have held mesuages, rents, and woods in Parr and elsewhere in Lancashire. The manor of Parr continued in a collateral branch, descendants of which still exist. (See Landed Gentry).

PASTON—VISCOUNTS YARMOUTH, EARLS OF YARMOUTH.

Viscounty, by Letters Patent, dated 19 August, 1673.

Earldom, by Letters Patent, dated 30 July, 1679.

Lineage.

This very ancient and "worshipful" family of Paston, of Paston, was settled in the co. of Norfolk, time out of mind, and formed many high alliances. Passing over the earlier ancestry, we will begin with

JOHN PASTON, Esq., of Paston (son of William Paston, a judge of the Court of King's Bench), who m. 1st, Margaret, dau. and heir of John Mantby, and had by her a son, JOHN, and several other children; he m. 2ndly, Lady Ann Beaufort, dau. of Edmund, Duke of Somerset, and by her was father inter alios of Sir William Paston, one of whose daus. and co-heirs, Anna, m. Sir Gilbert Talbot, of Grafton. The eldest son and heir,

SIR JOHN PASTON, of Paston, m. Margery, dau. of Sir T. Brews, Knt., and was father of

SIR WILLIAM PASTON, of Paston, whose wife was Bridget, dau. of Sir Henry Heydon, of Baconsthorpe, by whom he had issue,

i. ERASMUS, his heir.

ii. Henry.

iii. John, m. Anne, dau. of John Moulton, and left two daus., her co-heirs, viz., Bridget, m. to Sir Edward Coke, attorney-general to Queen ELIZABETH; and Ann, m. to Anthony Germain, brother of Sir Robert Germain.

iv. Thomas (Sir), m. Ann, dau. of Sir John Leigh, and had issue.

v. Clement, d. s. p.

1. Alianore, m. to Thomas, Earl of Rutland.

ii. Ann, m. to Sir Thomas Tindall.

iii. Elizabeth, m. to Sir Francis Leke, of Walton.

iv. Mary, m. to Sir John Chaworth.

v. Margaret, m. to John Leke, of Worcop.

The son and heir.

ERASMUS PASTON, Esq., of Paston, m. Mary, dau. of Sir Thomas Windham, Knt., of Felbrigg, and was father of

SIR WILLIAM PASTON, of Paston, who m. Frances, dau. of Sir T. Clere, of Stokesley, and d. leaving, with four daus., Alianore, m. to John Echingham, Ann, m. 1st, to George Chaworth, Viscount Armagh; 2ndly, to Sir Nicholas L'Estrange; and 3rdly, to Sir Anthony Cope; Frances, m. to Thomas Greyan, and Gertrude, m. to William Read, a son and heir,

CHRISTOPHER PASTON, of Paston, who m. Anna, dau. of Philip Andeley, Esq., and left a dau., Bridget, m. to John Heveningham, and a son,

SIR EDWARD PASTON, of Paston, who m. Katherine, dau. of Thomas Knevit, Esq., of Ashwellthorpe, and was father of

SIR WILLIAM PASTON, of Paston, created a baronet in 1641. He m. Lady Katherine Bertie, dau. of Robert, Earl of Lindsey, and was s. by his son,

SIR ROBERT PASTON, 2nd Bart., of Paston, who having devoted his fortune and energies to the royal cause, during the civil wars, was elevated to the peerage by King CHARLES II., 19 August, 1673, as Baron Paston, of Paston, and Viscount Yarmouth, both in the co. of Norfolk. His lordship m. Rebecca, dau. of Sir Jasper Clayton, Knt., of London, and had with other issue,

WILLIAM, his successor.

Robert, m. 1st, Hester Mainwaring; and 2ndly, Anne, dau. and co-heir of Philip Harbord, Esq., and had an only dau. and heir, Ann.

Jasper, m. Lady Fairborne, widow of Sir Palmes Fairborne. Thomas, a colonel in the army, drowned in 1693, leaving by his wife, Dorothy, dau. of Edward Darcy, Esq.,

Robert, captain R.N.

Rebecca, m. to Admiral Sir Stafford Fairborne.

Margaret, m. to Hieronimo Alberto de Conti, a German.

The viscount was advanced to the EARLDOM OF YARMOUTH, 30 July, 1679. He was esteemed a man of refined taste and learning, and dying in 1682, æt. fifty-two, was s. by his eldest son.

WILLIAM PASTON, 2nd Earl of Yarmouth. This nobleman m. 1st, Charlotte-Jemima-Maria, natural dau. of King CHARLES II., by the Viscountess Shannon, wife of Francis Boyle, Viscount Shannon, and dau. of Sir William Killigrew, and had issue, CHARLES, Lord Paston, b. 1673, a brigadier in the army, who predeceased him.

William, captain R.N., b. 1682, d. unm. 1711.

Charlotte, m. 1st, to Thomas Herne, Esq., of Heveringland, in Norfolk, and 2ndly, Major Weldron.

Rebecca, m. to Sir John Holland, of Quidenham, Bart.

His lordship m. 2ndly, Elizabeth, dau. of Lord North, and widow of Sir Robert Wiseman, but had no issue. He d. in 1732, when leaving no male issue, and the male line of his brothers having previously ceased, the barony, viscounty, and earldom became EXTINCT.

PATESHULL—BARON PATESHULL.

By Writ of Summons, dated 25 February, 1342.

Lineage.

In the time of King HENRY III.,

SIMON DE PATESHULL, held the manor of Bletso, co. Bedford, of the Barony of Bedford, by the service of one knight's fee. In the 17th of the same reign, HUGH DE PATESHULL, uncle to Maud, wife of Nigel de Mowbray, gave to Hubert de Burgh, 300 marks fine on behalf of the said Maud, that she might marry whom she thought fit, and enjoy her dowry.

To either of the above Simon, or Hugh, s. another.

SIMON DE PATESHULL, who m. Isabel, dau. and heir of John de Steingreve, and was s. by SIR JOHN DE PATESHULL, who had summons to parliament as a Baron, 25 February, 1342, but not afterwards. He d. in 1349, leaving by Mabel de Grandison, heiress of Lydiard Tregory, a son and heir.

SIR WILLIAM DE PATESHULL, who was never summoned to parliament, nor can he have been esteemed a baron, for his father had but one writ of summons, and there is no proof of sitting. The Barony of Pateshull must therefore be considered as EXTINCT, at the decease of John, Lord Pateshull.

William d. in 1360, when his estates devolved upon his sisters as co-heirs, viz.,

i. Alice, m. to Thomas Wake, of Rlyseworth.

ii. Sybyl, m. to Roger de Beauchamp, and conveyed to him the manor of Bletso, which manor was transferred by MARGARET, heiress of the Beauchamps, to her husband, Sir Oliver St. John.

PAYNE—BARON LAVINGTON.

By Letters Patent, dated 1 October, 1795.

Lineage.

MR. BERTRAND PAYNE, in his splendid Armorial of Jersey, gives a full pedigree of the ancient and distinguished family of PAYNE.

"In Jersey," says that accomplished writer, "amongst the primeval Norman settlers are found seigneurs and other high officials, whose names are written indifferently, Payen, Paten, and Payn. Hugh Payen, Valvaor and Jurat, is one of the first officers of the Royal Court of Jersey, on record, and from that period to the last century, the family has never lacked representatives in the church or state of its native island.

In the oldest record possessed of the King's tenants in Jersey, the extente of 1331, several entries occur of sundry names of the Payn family, proving it to have then been of consequence and wealth. In the subsequent extentes, also, several landowners named Payn, are recorded.

The number of fiefs held at various times by members of this house, is perhaps greater than has ever been possessed by any other family in the island of Jersey. At different periods they have been seigneurs of Oulande, la Godelière, Samarée, le Hommet, la Fosse, Burey, Ponterrin, Gruchy, Montfort, Dièllement, les Cras, le Chastelet, Grainville, Quetivel, la Malletière, Sautteur, le Niesmes, the Fief Payn in St. Helier, the Fief Jourdain Payn in St. Laurence, and the Fief Guille Payn in St. Martin, which last alone remains, of all these immense possessions, "attached to its ancient owners."

ABRAHAM PAYNE, b. 1616, son of Abraham Payn, constable of St. Martin, by Susan, his wife, dau. of Michael Sarre, seigneur of the fief of Guille Payn was some time constable of St. Martin, and emigrated with his son to the neighbouring coast of Devonshire, from causes, it is supposed, connected with the political troubles of the period. From him descended a family which rendered itself conspicuous by the zeal with which its members espoused the royalist side at the time of the Rebellion, and to which belonged Colonel Payne, who succoured, and was the host of CHARLES II., after the battle of Worcester. Its chief representative in the early part of the last century, emigrated to St. Christopher's, and there attaining wealth and influence, was rewarded with a baronetcy, an honour which was repeated in the person of another representative of this branch, while a third eminent member of the same family became a peer of the realm.

RALPH PAYNE, distinguished for his attachment to CHARLES I., early joined the royal standard, and was present at the battle of Worcester. He left issue,

ABRAHAM.

Charles, created a baronet, 31 October, 1737.

Nathaniel, who left an only dau., who m. William Woodley, Esq., governor of the Leeward Islands.

The eldest son,

ABRAHAM PAYNE, Esq., m. Anne, dau. of Ralph Willett, Esq. and was s. by his son,

RALPH PAYNE, Esq. This gentleman m. 1st, Alice, dau. and heir of Francis Carlisle, Esq., of Antigua, and had issue,

RALPH, created 1 October, 1795, BARON LAVINGTON.

John.

Elizabeth.

He m. 2ndly, Miss Margaret Galloway, by whom he had, with other issue,

Stephen, of Tofts Hall, Norfolk, who assumed the name and arms of GALLOWAY. His only dau. and heir, Charlotte, m. in 1797, John Moseley, Esq., of Glemham House, Suffolk, and was mother of an only dau., Charlotte, m. to Sir Joshua-B. Rowley, Bart., of Tendring Hall, Suffolk.

John, rear-admiral of the Red, appointed commander-in-chief of the squadron sent to conduct her Majesty Queen Caroline to England, and d. unm.

WILLIAM, created a baronet, 8 December, 1812, and assumed, by sign-manual, in 1814, the surname and arms of GALLOWAY, in compliance with the testamentary injunction of Tobias-Wall Galloway, Esq., of the island of St. Christopher. Martha. Lucretia.

The eldest son,

SIR RALPH PAYNE, K.B., was raised to the peerage of Ireland, 1 October, 1795, as BARON LAVINGTON, of Lavington; but d. s. p. in 1807, when the title became extinct.

PAYNEL—BARON PAYNELL.

By Writ of Summons, dated 29 December, 1299.

Lineage.

SIR JOHN PAYNELL, of Drax, co. York, was summoned to parliament as a Baron, from 29 December, 1299, to 25 August, 1318. This nobleman is supposed to have died before 1326. No account is given of his issue, nor does Dugdale in his Baronage take any notice of him; but in his writs of summons to parliament the name of "Johannes Paynell de Drax" occurs amongst the barons summoned to parliament, the 28th and 30th EDWARD I., and the 11th and 12th EDWARD II. The same name also occurs in the 32nd, 33rd, 34th, and 35th EDWARD I., and in the 1st and 3rd EDWARD II., which is presumed, by Nicolas, to be that of the same person.

Arms—Or, two bars, az., within an orle of eight martlets, gu.

PEACHEY—BARON SELSEY.

By Letters Patent, dated 13 August, 1794.

Lineage.

HENRY PEACHEY, Esq. of New Grove (eldest son and heir of William Peachey, Esq., of Newgrove by Mary, his wife, dau. of Henry Bulstrode, Esq.) was created a baronet, 21 March, 1736, with remainder, in default of male issue to his brother John Peachey, Esq., of the city of London. Sir Henry m. Jane, dau. of William Garrett, Esq., by whom he had two sons and three dau., all of whom, however, d. unm., except Jane, who became the wife of G.-H. Nash, Esq., of Petworth. Sir Henry, who represented Sussex in parliament, d. 14 August, 1737, and was s., according to the limitation of the patent, by his brother, SIR JOHN PEACHEY, M.P., who m. Henrietta, dau. of George London, Esq., of Long Ditton, and had a dau., Mary, wife of Michael Seers, Esq., and two sons. He d. 12 April, 1744, and was s. by his eldest son,

PECHE—BARON PECHE, OF BRUNNE.

By Writ of Summons, dated 29 December, 1299.

Lineage.

HAMON PECHE was sheriff of the co. Cambridge from the 2nd to the 12th year of King HENRY II. He m. Alice, one of the daus. and co-heirs of Pain Peverell, and was, in her right, Lord of Brunne, in the same shire. To this Hamon, at his decease, in 1190, s. his son and heir,

GILBERT PECHE, who, in the 6th of RICHARD I., upon the collection of the scutage, then assessed for the king's redemption, paid £29 lb. 8d. for the knights' fees of his paternal inheritance, and 2 marks and a-half for those of the honour of Brunne, which descended to him through his mother. He d. before the year 1217, and was s. by his son,

HAMON PECHE, who d. in 1241, in his pilgrimage to the Holy Land, and was s. by his eldest son,

GILBERT PECHE. This feudal lord d. in 1291, and was s. by his son,

GILBERT PECHE, who, having served in the wars of Gascony, 22nd EDWARD I., was summoned to parliament as a Baron, from 29 December, 1299, to 3 November, 1306, and again 14 March, 1322. His lordship m. 1st, Maude de Hastings, by whom he had a son and heir, GILBERT, who, however, was not summoned to parliament, nor is any account given of their descendants. Lord Peche m. 2ndly, Joane, dau. of Simon de Grey, and to his children by that lady, he left the greater part of his property, making King EDWARD I. heir to the rest of the barony. He d. in 1323.

Arms—Arg., a fess between two chevrons, gu.

PECHE — BARON PECHE, OF WORMLEIGHTON.

By Writ of Summons, dated 15 May, 1321.

Lineage.

The connection of the Lords Peche of Wormleighton with the Lords Peche of Brunne has not been ascertained, nor is it at all certain that they were of the same stock: the arms would seem to indicate a different lineage. ROBERT PECHE, Bishop of Coventry temp. STEPHEN, belonged to the Wormleighton line.

SIR JOHN PECHE, of Wormleighton (son and heir of Richard Peche, who was Lord of Wormleighton, co. Warwick, in right of his mother, Petronile, dau. and heir of Richard Walsh), aided with King HENRY III. against the barons, and was summoned to parliament as BARON PECHE, from 13 May, 1321, to 22 January, 1336. His lordship was in the wars of Scotland, and was governor of Warwick Castle in the 16th EDWARD II.; he was afterwards governor of Dover Castle, and warden of the Cinque Ports. He d. about the year 1339, leaving his grandson,

SIR JOHN PECHE, Knt., his heir. This feudal lord was never summoned to parliament, nor esteemed a baron, for we find him serving as one of the knights for the co. Warwick, in the parliament held at Westminster, in the 28th EDWARD III., and again in the 47th of the same reign. He d. in 1376, and was s. by his son,

SIR JOHN PECHE (never summoned to parliament, nor esteemed a baron), who attended, 9th RICHARD II., John, Duke of Lancaster, then bearing the title of King of Castile and Leon, into Spain, and is supposed to have d. there in the same year, leaving two daus., viz., JOANE, who d. s. p., and MARGARET, m. to Sir William de Montfort.

Arms—Gu., a fess between six cross-crosslets, arg., with a label of three points in chief.

PELHAM-HOLLES—DUKE OF NEWCASTLE.

(See HOLLES-PELHAM.)

PENNANT—BARON PENRHYN.

By Letters Patent, dated 1763.

Lineage.

This family derived its descent from TUDOR TREYOR, Lord of Hereford.

THOMAS PENNANT, son of David ap Tudor Pennant, of Bychton, co. Flint, by Anne, his 2nd wife, dau. of John Done, Esq., of Utkington, co. Chester, and half-brother of Rees Pennant, of Bychton, ancestor of the PENNANTS of DOWNING, was abbot of Basingwerk, Flintshire, and is celebrated by Guttyn Owain, a Welsh bard of the year 1480, who records the hospitality of the abbot, in a poem, printed in the collection of Mr. Rhys Jones. The poet is so liberal of his praise as to say, "That he gave twice the treasure of a king in wine." Guttyn Owain and Tudor Aled, another noted bard, speak not only of the abbot's works of utility; of the water and windmills he erected, of his having enlarged and beautified the abbey; but also compliment him on his prowess in battle. Thomas Pennant, quitting his profession, became in the law term, a monk derainge, and m. Angharad, dau. of Gwiliam ap Griffith, of the great house of Penrhyn, in Carnarvonshire by whom he had, with two daus., three sons,

- I. EDWARD, of Holywell.

- III. Nicholas, abbot of Basingwerk, who m. and had a son, Edward, of Holywell, whose grandson, John Pennant, of Holywell, left a dau. and heir, Margaret, wife of David Pennant, Esq., of Bychton.

The eldest son,

EDWARD PENNANT, was seated at Holywell, in Flintshire. He m. Catharine, dau. of David ap Davydd Ithel Vychan, and had with other issue, an eldest son,

HENRY PENNANT, Esq., of Holywell and Bagillt, who, by Margaret, his wife, dau. of John ap Griffith Vychan, of Pant y Llonydy, had, with eight daus., three sons,

- I. EDWARD, of Bagillt, whose great-grandson Edward, of Bagillt, high sheriff in 1753, d. non. a. at Marseilles, in 1778, having previously, in 1776, sold Bagillt Hall, and all his estates in Holywell township, to Thomas Pennant, Esq., of Downing.
- II. GIFFORD, of whom we treat.
- III. George.
- I. Frances, m. to Robert Owen, bishop of St. Asaph.
- II. Elizabeth, m. to Philip Longton, Esq.
- III. Anne, m. to Edward Parry, Esq.
- IV. Jane.
- V. Mary, m. to John Mostyn, Esq., of Brynford.
- VI. Winifred.

The 2nd son,

GIFFORD PENNANT, Esq., a military officer, went to Jamaica, in 1655. He m. 7 September, 1669, Elizabeth Aldwinkle, and d. in 1676, leaving with a dau. m. to — Lewis, Esq., a son,

EDWARD PENNANT, Esq., of Clarendon, in Jamaica, chief justice of the Island, b. in 1672, who m. Elizabeth, dau. of Col. John Moore, and aunt of Sir Henry Moore, Bart., lieutenant-governor of Jamaica, by whom he had issue,

- I. Edward.
- II. John, of whom presently.
- III. Samuel (Sir), Kut., Lord Mayor of London in 1749, d. in the following year.
- IV. Gifford.
- V. Henry.
- I. Judith, m. to John Lewis, Esq.
- II. Smart, m. to the Rev. William May, rector of Kingston, killed in the storm of 1722.
- III. Elizabeth, m. to Henry Dawkins, Esq., of Jamaica, and had, with a younger son, James Dawkins (the Oriental traveller), an elder son,

Henry Dawkins, Esq., of Standlynch, co. Wilts, who m. the Lady Julia Colyer, dau. of the Earl of Portmore, and by her had six sons, of whom the 3rd was the late George-Hay Dawkins-Pennant, Esq., of Penrhyn Castle.

- IV. Sarah, m. to Col. Thomas Rowden.
- V. Mary, m. to John Morant, Esq.

The 2nd son,

JOHN PENNANT, Esq., m. Bonella Hodges, and had two sons, John, the elder, d. s. p., and

RICHARD PENNANT, Esq., of Winington and Penrhyn Castle, who was created in 1783, Baron Penrhyn, of the kingdom of Ireland. His lordship m. Barony of Percy, of Cockermouth, &c., by Creation, dated 3 April, 1557.

Earldom of Northumberland (New Creation), dated 1 May, 1557.

Lineage.

The illustrious family of Percy derived descent from one of the Norman chieftains (William de Percy) who accompanied WILLIAM THE CONQUEROR into England in 1066; and it took its name from the village of Percy, near Villedieu. The family of Percy, of Normandy, sprang from Geoffrey (son of Mainfred, a Danish chieftain, who assisted Rollo, in 912, in subjugating that principality, and acquired considerable possessions there.

WILLIAM DE PERCY, surnamed Algernon, being high in favour with the victorious duke, obtained, according to Madox, in his Baronia Anglica, a barony of thirty knights' fees from that monarch, in his new dominions, and thus became a feudal lord of the realm from the Conquest. This Lord William de Percy, who was distinguished amongst his contemporaries by the addition of Algernons (William with the whiskers), whence his posterity have constantly borne the name of Algernon, restored, or rather re-founded, the famous abbey of St. Hilda, in Yorkshire, of which his brother, Serio de Percy, became first prior. Accompanying, however, Duke Robert, in the first Crusade, 1096, he d. at Mountjoy, near Jerusalem, the celebrated eminence whence the pilgrims of the cross first viewed the Holy City, leaving four sons and two daus., by his wife, Emma de Port, a lady of Saxon descent, whose lands were amongst those bestowed upon him by the CONQUEROR, according to an ancient writer, "he wedded hyr that was very hère to them, in discharging of his conscience." His lordship was s. in his feudal rights and possessions by his eldest son.

ALAN DE PERCY, 2nd baron, surnamed the GREAT ALAN, who m. Emma, dau. of Gilbert de Gaunt (which Gilbert was son of Baldwin, Earl of Flanders, and nephew of Queen Maude, wife of WILLIAM THE CONQUEROR), and was s. by his eldest son.

WILLIAM DE PERCY, 3rd baron; at whose decease the eldest branch of the first race of Percys from Normandy became extinct in the male line, and their great inheritance devolved upon his lordship's two daus. (by Alice de Tunbridge, his wife, dau. of Richard, Earl of Clare, who was usually styled de Tunbridge, from his castle of that name), the Ladies Maude and Agnes de Percy, successively.

MAUDE DE PERCY, the senior, was 2nd wife of William de Plessetis, Earl of Warwick, by whom (who d. in the Holy Land, 1154), she had no issue. Her ladyship d. in 1204 or 1205, and then the whole possessions of the Percys descended to the family of her sister.

AGNES DE PERCY, who m. Joceline, of Louvain, brother of Queen Adelia, 2nd wife of HENRY I., and son of Godfrey Barlaim, Duke of Lower Lorraine, and Count of Brabant, who was descended from the Emperor CHARLEMAGNE. Her ladyship, it is stated, would only consent to this great alliance, upon condition that Joceline should adopt either the surname or arms of Percy; the former of which, says the old family tradition,*

* Mr. Hyton Dyer Longstaffe in his Old Heraldry of the Percys considers this tradition erroneous in all respects, and is unable to discover any traces of the blue lion until the reign of EDWARD I.

he accordingly assumed, and retained his own paternal coat, in order to perpetuate his claim to the principality of his father, should the elder line of the reigning duke at any period become extinct. The matter is thus stated in the great old pedigree at Slon House: "The ancient arms of Hainault, this Lord Joceline retained, and gave his children the surname of Percle." Of this illustrious alliance there were several children, of whom,

HENRY DE PERCY, the eldest son, who appears to have d. before his mother, m. Isabel, dau. of Adam de Brus, Lord of Skelton, with whom he had the manor of Levington, for which he and his heirs were to repair to Skelton Castle every Christmas-day, and to lead the lady of the castle from her chamber to the chapel to mass, and thence to her chamber again, and after dining with her, to depart. This Henry left two sons,

WILLIAM, of whom presently.

Henry, ancestor of the Percys, of Hessel, Sussex.

RICHARD DE PERCY, the youngest son of Agnes and Joceline, got possession of the entire property of his aunt, Maude, Countess of Warwick, and even of a great proportion of that of his mother, and retained the same during the principal part of his life: at length, subsequently to infinite litigation, it was settled between him and his nephew, William de Percy, to whom the inheritance belonged, after a solemn hearing before the king in person, 6 July, 1234 (18th HENRY III.), that the estates should be divided into equal portions between the parties during Richard's life; and that after his death, all the ancient patrimony of the Percy family should devolve upon his nephew aforesaid; a small reservation having been made for Richard's son and heir, Henry de Percy. This Richard de Percy continued for the whole of his life at the head of the family, and enjoyed all its baronial rights. He was one of those powerful feudal lords who took up arms, in 1215, against JOHN, and having a principal hand in extorting the great charters of English freedom, was chosen one of the twenty-five guardians to see the Magna Charta duly observed. He d. about 1244, and then his nephew,

WILLIAM DE PERCY, came into full possession of all those rights and properties which had been usurped at the decease of his mother; but did not live long to enjoy them, for he d. in 1245, and was s. by his son (by his 2nd wife, Elena, dau. of Ingelram de Balliol, by whom he obtained in dower, Dalton, afterwards called Dalton Percy, in the bishopric of Durham).

HENRY DE PERCY, who m. Eleanor, dau. of John Plantagenet, Earl of Warren and Surrey; and dying in 1272, was s. by his only surviving son,

HENRY DE PERCY, 9th feudal lord, who was summoned to parliament from 6 February, 1299 (27th EDWARD I.) to 29 July, 1315 (8th EDWARD II.) This nobleman, obtained, 19 November, 1309, from Anthony Beck, bishop of Durham, by purchase, a grant of the Barony of Alnwick, co. Northumberland. His lordship was one of the great barons who subscribed, in 1301, the celebrated letter to Pope BONIFACE VIII., upon the attempt of his holiness to interpose in the affairs of the kingdom, intimating, "That their king was not to answer in judgment, for any rights of the crown of England, before any tribunal under heaven, &c., and that, by the help of God, they would resolutely, and with all their force, maintain against all men." He m. Eleanor, dau. of John Fitz-Alan, Earl of Arundel; d. in 1315, and was s. by his eldest son,

HENRY DE PERCY, 2nd Lord Percy, of Alnwick. This nobleman had a grant from the crown in the 2nd EDWARD III., of the reversion of the barony and castle of Warkworth, &c. He had summons to parliament from 1322 to the time of his death, 26 February, 1351-2, when he was s. by his eldest son (by Idonia, dau. of Robert, Lord Clifford),

HENRY DE PERCY, 3rd Lord Percy, of Alnwick; who, in the lifetime of his father, had participated in the glories of Cressy (26 August, 1346). His lordship m. 1st, in her ladyship's fourteenth year, Lady Mary Plantagenet, dau. of Henry, Earl of Lancaster, which Henry was son of Edmund, Earl of Lancaster, Leicester, &c., 2nd son of King HENRY III., by this alliance his lordship had two sons,

HENRY, his successor.

Thomas, created in 1397, EARL OF WORCESTER, K.G., a very eminent warrior and statesman in the reigns of EDWARD III., RICHARD II., and HENRY IV., d. s. p. 1402.

His lordship m. 2ndly, Joan, dau. and heiress of John de Oreby, of Lincolnshire, one of the barons in the reign of EDWARD III., by whom he left one dau.,

Mary, who m. John, Lord Ros, of Hamlake, but d. s. p. in 1395.

He d. 17 June, 1363, and was s. by his elder son,

HENRY DE PERCY, 4th Lord Percy, of Alnwick, a distinguished military commander in the reign of EDWARD III., who, assisting as marshal of England at the coronation of King RICHARD II., was advanced on the same day, 6 July, 1377, to the Earldom of Northumberland, with remainder to his heirs generally, and, like a barony in fee, transmissible, it would appear, to female as well as male heirs. He m. 1st, 1358, Margaret, dau. of Ralph, Lord Nevill, of Raby, and had issue,

HENRY (Sir), the renowned Hotspur, so celebrated in all our histories. He fought the famous battle of Otterbourn, near the Cheviot Hills, in Northumberland (Chevy Chase), where James, Earl of Douglas, was slain, and himself and his brother, Sir Ralph Percy, made prisoners. He m. Philippa, dau. of Edmund Mortimer, Earl of March, by Philippa, dau. and heir of Lionel Plantagenet, Duke of Clarence, and falling at the battle of Shrewsbury in 1403, left issue,

HENRY, who s. as 2nd Earl of Northumberland.

Elizabeth, m. 1st, to John, Lord Clifford, and 2ndly, to Ralph, Earl of Westmoreland.

Thomas (Sir), of Athole, m. Elizabeth, elder dau. and co-heir of David Strathbogie, Earl of Athol, by whom (who m. 2ndly, Sir Henry Scrope), he had issue,

Henry Percy, of Athole, governor of Alnwick, who m. Elizabeth, widow of Robert, Lord Scates, and dying in 1433, left two daus. and co-heirs, viz.,

Elizabeth, m. 1st, to Thomas, Lord Burgh, and 2ndly, to Sir William Lucy.

Margaret, m. 1st, to Henry, Lord Grey, of Codnor, and 2ndly, to Richard, Earl of Oxford.

Sir Thomas d. in Spain, in 1393.

Ralph (Sir), m. Philippa, the other dau. and co-heir of David Strathbogie, Earl of Athole, but d. s. p. in Palestine, 1399.

Alan, d. young.

Margaret, d. young.

The earl m. 2ndly, Maud, sister and heir of Anthony, Lord Lucy, which Anthony settled upon his lordship and his heirs the honour and castle of Cockermouth, with other great estates, on condition that her arms should be for ever quartered with those of the Percys. In the 7th year of RICHARD II., the earl having been elected one of the knights of the Garter, the king bestowed upon him the robes of the order out of the royal wardrobe. In some years afterwards, however, being proclaimed a traitor, and his lands declared forfeited by King RICHARD, his lordship, in conjunction with his son, Sir Henry Percy, surnamed Hotspur, and Henry, Duke of Lancaster, accomplished the dethronement of that monarch, and placed the crown upon the head of Henry, Duke of Lancaster, under the title of HENRY IV. In requital, the king gave Percy the Isle of Man, by the tenure of carrying in the left hand the sword (which he wore when he landed in Holderness) at the coronation of himself and his successors. Again dissatisfied with the government, the duke is charged with concerting the rebellion, in which his son, Hotspur, and his brother, the Earl of Worcester, engaged, in 1403, for transferring the sceptre to Mortimer, Earl of March, then a boy. Of these two eminent persons, Sir Henry Percy, the renowned Hotspur, fell, performing prodigies of valour, at Battle-field, near Shrewsbury, 21 July, 1403, and Thomas Percy, Earl of Worcester, was beheaded, after the battle, at Shrewsbury. The Earl of Northumberland fell subsequently (29 February, 1407-8), in arms against the king, at Bramham Moor, near Haslewood, when his honours became forfeited under an attainder, but were restored, in 1414, to his grandson (Hotspur's only son),

HENRY DE PERCY, 2nd Earl of Northumberland, who m. Lady Eleanor Nevill, dau. of Ralph, 1st Earl of Westmoreland, and Joan de Beaufort, dau. of John of Gaunt, and aunt of King HENRY V. Of this nobleman and his countess, and their issue, the following account is given in a very curious MS. preserved in the British Museum, and there said to be extracted Ex Registro Monasterij de Whitby:—"Henry Percy, the son of Sir Henry Percy, that was slayne at Shrewsbury, and of Elizabeth, the dau. of the Erie of Marche, after the death of his father and grauntayre, was exiled into Scotland, in the time of King HENRY V.: by the labour of Johanne, the Countess of Westmerland (whose dau., Alianor, he had wedded in coming into England), he recovered the king's grace, and the county of Northumberland, so was the 2nd Earl of Northumberland. And of this Alianor, his wife, he begat IX sonnes and III daughters, whose names be Johanne, that is buried at Whitby; Thomas (created) Lord Egremont; Katheyne Grey, of Ruthyn (wife of Edmund, Lord Grey, afterwards Earl of Kent); Sir Raffe Percy; William Percy, a byshop; Richard Percy; John, that dyed without issue; another John (called by Vincent, in his MS. Baronage in the Heralds' office, John Percy, senior, of Warkworth); George Percy, clerk; Henry, that dyed without issue; besides the eldest sonne and successor, Henry, 3rd Erie of Northumberland." His lordship, who was at the battle of Agincourt, was made lord high constable by King HENRY VI., and fell at St. Alban's, 23 May, 1455, fighting under the banner of that monarch, and was s. by his eldest surviving son,

HENRY PERCY, 3rd earl, who had s. Eleanor, dau. and sole heiress of Richard Poyninga, who d. in the life-time of his father, Lord Poyninga; by which marriage the Baronies of Poyninga, Fitzpayne, and Bryan, came into the family of Percy; and Sir Henry Percy was summoned to parliament, while his father, the Earl of Northumberland, yet lived (29th HENRY VI.), as Baron Poyninga. His lordship fell leading the van of the Lancastrians, sword in hand, at the battle of Towton, 29 March, 1461, and his honours became subsequently forfeited by an act of attainder, but were restored to his only son,

HENRY PERCY, 4th earl, K.G., who was confined in the Tower of London, from the death of his father until 27 October, 1469, when, being brought before EDWARD IV., at his palace of Westminster, he subscribed an oath of allegiance, and was restored to his freedom and dignity, although the reversal of his father's attainder does not appear upon the rolls of parliament. The king had previously created John, Lord Montague, Earl of Northumberland, but upon the re-establishment of the rightful earl Lord Montague was created Marquess of Montague. This Henry, 4th Earl of Northumberland, fell a victim, in 1489, to the avarice of King HENRY VII. In that year, parliament having granted the king a subsidy for carrying on the war in Bretagne, the Earl of Northumberland, as lord-lieutenant of his county, was empowered to enforce the same, but the tax causing a general commotion, his lordship wrote to inform the king of the discontent, and praying an abatement, to which HENRY peremptorily replied, "that not a penny should be abated:" which message being delivered incautiously by the earl to the populace, who had assembled to complain of their grievances, they broke into his house, Cockledge, in Yorkshire, and murdered his lordship and some of his attendants, 28 April, 1489. The earl m. Maud, dau. of William Herbert, 1st Earl of Pembroke, and had, with three daus., four sons, HENRY-ALGERNON; William (Sir), a commander at Flodden; Alan, master of the college at Arundel; and Joscelin, of Beverley.

HENRY-ALGERNON PERCY, 5th earl, K.G., who m. Catherine, dau. and co-heiress of Sir Robert Spence, Knt., of Spencer-Combe, Devon, by Eleanor, his wife, dau., and, at length, co-heir of Edmund Beaufort, Duke of Somerset, by whom he had Margaret, m. to Henry Clifford, 1st Earl of Cumberland.

Maud, m. to William, Lord Coniers.

His lordship (we quote from Alexander Sinclair) "lived in great state and splendour, as his 'Household Book' shows, and although he was at the battles of Blackheath and Spurs, he d. in peace in 1527." He was s. by his eldest son,

HENRY PERCY, 6th earl, K.G., styled "the unthrifty," who was an attendant on Cardinal Wolsey, and a lover of Anne Boleyn. This nobleman m. Mary, dau. of George Talbot, Earl of Shrewsbury; but as he d. s. p. in 1537, and his brother, Sir Thomas Percy had been previously attainted and executed, all the honours of the family became forfeited, and the Dukedom of Northumberland was conferred, by King EDWARD VI., upon John Dudley, Earl of Warwick; but that nobleman having forfeited his life and honours, by treason against Queen MARY, in 1553, her Majesty was pleased to advance, by letters patent, dated 30 April, 1557,

THOMAS PERCY, son of the attainted Sir Thomas Percy, to the degree of a baron, by the title of Baron Percy, of Cockermouth, and on the day following, his lordship was created Earl of Northumberland, with remainder to Henry Percy, his brother, and his issue male. The earl m. Anne, 3rd dau. of Henry Somerset, 2nd Earl of Worcester, and had issue,

I. THOMAS, d. young, 1560.

I. ELIZABETH, m. to Richard Woodroffe, Esq., of Wolley, co. York.

II. LUCY, m. Sir Edward Stanley, K.B., of Tong Castle, and had two daus.,

IV. MARY, prioress of the English nunnery at Brussels.

This nobleman having conspired against Queen ELIZABETH, was beheaded at York, 22 August, 1572 (avowing the Pope's supremacy, and affirming the realm to be in a state of schism, when his honours would have fallen under the attainder, but for the reversionary clause in favour of his brother,

HENRY PERCY, who s. as 8th earl. His lordship m. Katherine, eldest dau. and co-heiress of John Neville, Lord Latimer, by whom (who d. 1596) he had eight sons, and three daus. The earl having been committed to the Tower, for participating in a supposed plot in favour of MARY Queen of Scots, was found dead in his bed there, wounded by three bullets from a pistol, 21 June, 1585, when he was s. by his eldest son,

HENRY PERCY, 9th earl, K.G. This nobleman, after every effort to involve him in the Gunpowder Plot had proved ineffectual was "cast" (says Osborne) "into the star chamber," by which he was sentenced to a fine of £30,000, with imprisonment in the Tower during his Majesty's pleasure, and he actually suffered several years' incarceration. His lordship m. Dorothy, sister of Queen ELIZABETH's favourite, the Earl of Essex, and widow of Sir Thomas Perrot, Knt., and dying 6 November, 1632, was s. by his eldest surviving son,

ALGERNON PERCY, 10th earl, K.G., who had been summoned to parliament in the lifetime of his father, 1626, as Baron Percy. This nobleman took an active part during the civil wars, against King CHARLES I., but was entirely free of any participation in his Majesty's death. He subsequently promoted the Restoration. His lordship d. 13 October, 1663, and was s. by his only son (by Lady Elizabeth Howard, 2nd dau. of Theophilus, 2nd Earl of Suffolk),

JOSELYN PERCY, 11th earl. This nobleman m. Elizabeth, youngest dau. of Thomas Wriothesley, Earl of Southampton, lord high treasurer of England, by whom he left, at his decease, 21 May, 1670, an only dau.,

LADY ELIZABETH PERCY, who m. 1st, when only fourteen years of age (1679), Henry Cavendish, Earl of Ogle (son and heir of Henry, Duke of Newcastle, who assumed the name of Percy, but his lordship d. s. p. 1 November, 1690, and her ladyship m. in 1682 (3rdly, it is stated, but she appears to have been only contracted to Thomas Thynne, Esq., of Longleat, who was assassinated by Koningsmark, 12 February, 1681-2), Charles Seymour, 6th Duke of Somerset, who also assumed, by preliminary engagement, the surname and arms of Percy, but from that stipulation he was released, when her grace attained majority. By this marriage the Duchess (who d. 1722) had thirteen children, the eldest surviving of whom,

ALGERNON SEYMOUR, was summoned to parliament, in 1722, as Baron Percy. His lordship s. to the Dukedom of Somerset, in 1748, and was created Baron Warkworth, of Warkworth Castle, co. Northumberland, and Earl of Northumberland, 2 October, 1749, with remainder to

SIR HUGH SMITHSON, Bart., who had m. his grace's dau., the Lady Elizabeth Seymour, and who s. to those honours upon the demise of the duke, in 1750, obtaining in the same year an act of parliament to allow himself, and his countess to assume the surname and arms of Percy. His lordship was installed a knight of the Garter in 1757; and created Earl Percy, and DUKE OF NORTHUMBERLAND, 18 October, 1768. His grace's eldest son, HUGH, 2nd Duke of Northumberland, K.G., was father of two sons, Hugh, 3rd Duke, K.G., and Algernon, 4th Duke, K.G., and also of four daus., all of whom, d. s. p. or m., except the youngest, EMILY, wife of James, Lord Glenlyon, whose grandson, John-James-Hugh-Henry Murray, DUKE OF ATHOLE, as heir-general of the Dukes of Northumberland, inherited the Barony of Percy. The 2nd son of the 1st Duke of Northumberland, Algernon, Earl of Beverley, was father of George, 5th Duke of Northumberland.

Upon the decease of his lordship (Joscelyn, 11th earl), all the honours of the Percys, save the baronies became EXTINCT.

PERCY—BARON EGREMONT.

By Letters Patent, dated 20 December, 1449.

Lineage.

SIR THOMAS PERCY, Knt., 3rd son of Henry, 2nd Earl of Northumberland, was created by King EDWARD IV., in consideration of his good services, BARON EGREMONT, of Egremont Castle, in Cumberland. His lordship fell at the battle of Northampton, in 1460, when the king was taken prisoner. He d. according to Dugdale, "without issue," when the Barony of Egremont became EXTINCT. Some other authorities state, however, that he left a son, Sir John Percy, who never assumed the title.

PERCY—BARON PRUDHOE.

By Letters Patent, dated 27 November, 1816.

Lineage.

LORD ALGERNON PERCY, K.G., 2nd son of Hugh, 2nd Duke of Northumberland, was created BARON PRUDHOE, of Prudhoe Castle, Northumberland, 27 November, 1816, and s. to the ducal honours as 4th Duke of Northumberland, at the decease of his brother, Hugh, 3rd duke. His Grace, m. 25 August, 1842, Eleanor, dau. of Richard, 2nd Marquess of Westminster, but d. s. p. 12 February, 1865, when the Barony of Prudhoe became EXTINCT.

The Barony of Percy passed to his grand-nephew, and heir-general the Duke of Athole, and the dukedom devolved on the heir male, the Earl of Beverley.

Arms—Quarterly: 1st and 4th grand quarters, 1st and 4th, or, a lion rampant, az. (being the ancient arms of the Dukes of BRABANT AND LOVAINE); 2nd and 3rd, gu., three lucies, or pikes, haurient, arg., for LUCY; 2nd and 3rd grand quarters, az., five fusils, in fesse, or, for PERCY.

PERCY—EARL OF WORCESTER.

Created 29 September, 1397.

Lineage.

SIR THOMAS PERCY, a younger brother of Henry, 1st Earl of Northumberland, having distinguished himself in the council and the camp, temp. EDWARD III. and RICHARD II., was created by the latter monarch EARL OF WORCESTER. Towards the end of EDWARD III.'s reign, Sir Thomas was the companion in arms of the Black Prince; and had a grant of 100 marks per annum for life, out of the exchequer, for his good services, with a similar annuity for his especial services to the Prince. In the 1st RICHARD II., he assisted at the coronation of that king, his brother, Henry, being then marshal of England.

The next year an admiral of the north seas, he was associated with Sir Hugh Calveley, Knt., and meeting with seven ships and one man of war, laden with wine, brought them all into Bristol. He was subsequently employed with the Earl of Buckingham to suppress Jack Straw's insurrection: and in the 10th of the same reign he was made admiral of the fleet, for the great army of 20,000 men then sent into Spain, with John of Gaunt, to establish that prince's right to the throne of Castile and Leon. In three years afterwards he was constituted justice of South Wales, and subsequently vice-chamberlain to the king. In the 18th he was sent ambassador to France, being then steward of the king's household, and in a few years afterwards appointed admiral of the king's fleet for Ireland. Notwithstanding his lordship's high position in the estimation of King RICHARD, upon the deposition of that monarch, he seems to have made his ground good with the new king, for we find him deputed with the bishop of Durham to announce to the court of France the revolution that placed the sceptre in the hand of HENRY IV., and reconstituted soon after, steward of the household. Subsequently, however, joining his brother, the Earl of Northumberland, and his nephew, Hotspur, in an effort to restore the dethroned monarch he was made prisoner at the battle of Shrewsbury, where his gallant nephew fell, and was beheaded immediately after, anno 1402. His lordship was a knight of the Garter; he d. s. p. when the Eardom of Worcester became EXTINCT.

Arms—Same as Percy, Earls of Northumberland.

PERY—VISCOUNT PERY.

By Letters Patent, dated 30 March, 1785.

Lineage.

EDMOND PERY, Esq., of Stackpole Court, co. Clare (son of Edmond Pery, Esq., by Susannah, his wife, only dau. and heir of Stephen Sexton, Esq.), a colonel in his Majesty's service, d. about the year 1721, leaving issue,

- I. Sexton, of Stackpole Court, d. s. p. in 1730.

PIERREPONT — VISCOUNTS NEWARK, EARLS OF KINGSTON - UPON - HULL, MARQUESSSES OF DORCHESTER, DUKES OF KINGSTON-UPON-HULL.

Viscounty, by Letters Patent, dated 29 June, 1627.
Earldom, by Letters Patent, dated 25 July, 1628.
Marquessate, by Letters Patent, dated 25 March, 1644.
Dukedom, by Letters Patent, dated 10 August, 1715.

Lineage.

SIR HENRY DE PIERREPONT, a person of great note at the period in which he lived, and representative of the Anglo-Norman family of Pierrepont, m. Annora, dau. of Michael, and sister and heir of Lionel de Manvers, whereby he acquired an extensive land property in co. Nottingham, with the lordship of Holme, now called Holme-Pierrepont. Sir Henry d. about the 20th Edward I., and was s. by his elder son,

SIMON DE PIERREPONT, who in the 32nd Edward I., was one of those that by special writ, bearing date 8 June, had summons amongst the barons of the realm, to repair with all speed to the king, wheresoever he should then be in England, to treat of certain weighty affairs, relating to his and their honour; the sheriffs of every county having also command to cause two knights for each shire, as also two citizens, and two burgesses for each city and borough, to attend the king at the same time, "to advise and consent for themselves and the commonality of their respective shires, cities, and boroughs, unto what the earls, barons, and nobles, should at that time ordain." This Simon leaving a dau. (only), Sibilla, who m. Edmund Ufford, was s. by his brother,

ROBERT DE PIERREPONT, a very eminent person in the reigns of EDWARD I. and EDWARD II., distinguished in the wars of Scotland. He m. Sarah, dau. and eventually heir of Sir John Heriz, Knt., and was direct ancestor of

SIR GEORGE PIERREPONT, who, at the dissolution of the monasteries, in the reign of HENRY VIII., purchased large manors in the co. Nottingham, part of the possessions of the abbot and convent of Welbeck, and others in Derbyshire, which had belonged to the monastery of Newsted. He d. in the 6th ELIZABETH, and was s. by his son,

SIR HENRY PIERREPONT, who m. Frances, elder dau. of Sir William Cavendish, of Chatsworth, and sister of William, Earl of Devonshire, and was s. by his son,

ROBERT PIERREPONT, who was advanced to the peerage by King CHARLES I., as BARON PIERREPONT, of Holme Pierrepont, co. Nottingham, and VISCOUNT NEWARK, by letters patent, dated 29 June, 1627, and the next year was created EARL OF KINGSTON-UPON-HULL. At the breaking out of the civil war, his lordship was one of the first and most zealous to espouse the royal cause, and he is said to have brought no less than 4000 men immediately to the standard of the king. He was soon after constituted lieutenant-general of all his Majesty's forces, in the co. of Lincoln, Rutland, Huntingdon, Cambridge, and Norfolk; and was amongst the most popular of the cavalier commanders. His lordship became, therefore, an object of more than ordinary watchfulness to the parliamentarians, and was at length surprised and made prisoner by Lord Wiltoughby, of Parham, at Gainsborough, whence he was despatched in an open boat towards Hull. But Sir Charles Cavendish, pursuing the boat, and overtaking it, demanded the release of the earl, which being refused, his men fired, and, unhappily, killed Lord Kingston, and his servant, though they captured the boat and put the crew to the sword. This melancholy event occurred 30 July, 1643. His lordship bore so high a character for benevolence, hospitality, and liberality, that he was usually styled by the common people, "the good Earl of Kingston." He m. Gertrude, dau. and co-heir of Henry Talbot, 3rd son of George, Earl of Shrewsbury, and by her (who d. 1649, at. sixty-one), had issue,

HENRY, Viscount Newark.

CHARLES MEDOWS, Esq., who succeeding to the estates of his uncle, Evelyn, Duke of Kingston, in 1773, assumed the surname of PIERREPONT, and was elevated to the peerage as Baron Pierrepont, Viscount Newark, and Earl Manvers. He d. in 1816, and was s. by his son,

CHARLES, late Earl Manvers, who d. in 1860, and was s. by his eldest surviving son,

CHARLES, 3rd EARL MANVERS.

Mary, m. to Edward Wortley-Montagu, Esq., and became celebrated as Lady Mary Wortley-Montagu.

Frances, m. to John, Earl of Mar.

Evelyn, m. to John, Lord Gower.

The duke m. 2ndly, Lady Isabella Bentinck, dau. of William, Earl of Portland, by whom he had,

Carolina, m. to Thomas Brand, Esq.

Anne, d. unm.

His grace d. in 1726, and was s. by his grandson,

EVELYN PIERREPONT, 2nd duke. This nobleman m. Elizabeth, Chudleigh, one of the maids of honour to the Dowager Princess of Wales, and only dau. of Colonel Thomas Chudleigh, of Chelsea Hospital, (2nd son of Sir George Chudleigh, Bart., of Ashton, co. Devon) but this lady, so notorious as Duchess of Kingston, was afterwards convicted by her peers of bigamy. The trial took place in 1776, the Lord Chancellor Apsley officiating as high steward. His grace d. s. p. in 1773, when all his honours became EXTINCT, while his estates devolved upon his nephew, Charles Medows, Esq., who assumed the name of PIERREPONT, and was created EARL MANVERS.

PIGOT—BARON PIGOT, OF PATSHUL.

By Letters Patent, dated 18 January, 1766.

Lineage.

The house of Pigott was founded in England by Pigott, Baron of Boome, in Normandy, one of the knightly companions of WILLIAM THE CONQUEROR. From GILBERT PIGOTT, Lord of Croxton, co. Chester, cotemporary with that monarch, derived the family of Pigott, of Butley, in the same co., ancestor of

RICHARD PIGOTT, Esq., of Butley, who m. Jocosa, heiress of Chetwynd, co. Salop, elder dau. and co-heir of Richard de Pershall, of Chetwynd, living 17th HENRY IV. (brother of Nicholas de Pershall, Lord of the manor of Pershall, and Horsley, co. Stafford, and grandson of Sir Richard de Pershall, Knt., high-sheriff of Shropshire, 50th EDWARD III., 1377, by Johanna, his wife, heiress of Chetwynd, dau. and heir of Reginald, son and heir of Sir John Chetwynd, of Chetwynd). The grandson of Richard Pigott, by the heiress of Pershall, of Chetwynd,

ROBERT PIGOTT, of Chetwynd, high sheriff of Shropshire in 1617, bore, "Azure, a chevron between three mullets, or, on a chief, ermine, three fusils, sable." From the marriage of this Robert and Margaret, his wife, dau. of Sir John Blount, Knt., of Kinlet, derived 7th in descent,

ROBERT PIGOTT, Esq., of Chetwynd, high sheriff of Shropshire in 1697, who m. Frances, dau. of the Hon. William Wael, of Willingsworth, co. Stafford, brother of Edward, Lord Dudley and Ward, by whom he had, inter alios, ROBERT PIGOTT, eldest son, and the Rev. William Pigott, rector of Edgmond and Chetwynd, ancestor of the PIGOTTS, of Doddershall Park, Bucks, represented by William-Harvey Pigott, Esq., of Doddershall Park (refer to that name, BURKE'S Landed Gentry.) The eldest son,

ROBERT PIGOTT, Esq., of Chetwynd, who d. May, 1770, was father by Anne, his wife, dau. of — Piers, Esq., of Croggion, co. Montgomery, of two sons,

- I. Robert Pigott, Esq., of Chetwynd, high sheriff of Shropshire, in 1774, who sold Chetwynd, which he had inherited through twelve generations, retired abroad, and d. 7 July, 1794, having had a son who predeceased him.
- II. The Rev. William Pigott, of Edgmond, co. Salop, rector of Chetwynd and Edgmond, who m. Arabella, dau. of John Mynon, Esq., of Halston, co. Salop, father of the Rev. JOHN DRYDEN PIGOTT, of Edgmond, rector of the same place, and of Habberley.

From the Pigotts of Chetwynd, claim descent two families, both of which bear "Ermine, three fusils, sable," the Pigotts, of Knapton, Queen's co., Ireland, baronets, so created 3 October, 1808, represented by the present SIR CHARLES-ROBERT PIGOTT, Bart., of Knapton, and an English branch. The immediate ancestor of the latter,

HUGH PIGOTT, of Peploe, co. Salop, who d. in 1697, was father, by Elizabeth Duke, his wife, of a 7th son,

RICHARD PIGOTT, Esq., of Westminster, who m. Frances, dau. of Peter Goode, Esq., and had issue, with a dau., Margaret, who m. in 1765, Thomas Fisher, Esq., three sons,

- I. GEORGE.
- II. ROBERT, successor to his brother.
- III. Hugh, vice-admiral, who m. 1st, Elizabeth, dau. of Peter Le Neve, Esq., and had, with a dau., Isabella, a son, Sir Henry Pigot, G.C.M.G., a general officer, to whom Malta was surrendered by the French, d. s. p. 1840.

He m. 2ndly, Frances, dau. of Sir Richard Wrottesley, Bart., and by her, who d. 1811, had a son and two daus.,

- 1 Sir Hugh Pigott, K.C.B., admiral of the white, who d. 30 July, 1857, mt. eighty-two.
- 1 Frances.
- 2 Caroline, m. in 1800, to Lord Henry Fitzroy, prebendary of Westminster, eldest son by his 2nd wife, Elizabeth, dau. of Sir Richard Wrottesley, Bart., of Augustus, 3rd Duke of Grafton, and by him, who d. 9 June, 1823, left at her decease, 1825, with other issue, an eldest son, Hugh Fitzroy, lieutenant-colonel, grenadier guards, d. 14 May, 1893.

Mr. Pigot, who d. in 1729, was s. by his eldest son,

GEORGE PIGOT, governor of Fort St. George, Madras, created a Baronet, 5 December, 1764, with remainder, in default of male issue, to his brother, Robert, and on failure of his issue to his brother, Hugh and his heirs male. Sir George was created a peer of Ireland 18 January, 1766, as BARON PIGOT, of Patshul, co. Du lin, but, at his death, s. p., in illegal confinement in India, 17 April, 1777, the barony EXPIRED, while the baronetcy devolved, according to the limitation, upon his brother, BROADIER-GENERAL SIR ROBERT PIGOT, an officer of high distinction during the American war, grandfather of the present SIR ROBERT PIGOT, of Patahul, 4th baronet.

III. Sarah, Maid of Honour to Queen Caroline.

The 2nd son,

WILLIAM PITT, Esq., b. at Boconnoc, 15 November, 1709, was educated at Eton and Oxford, and commenced life as cornet in the Blues, but, on being returned to parliament for Old Sarum, in 1735, he abandoned the military profession and devoting himself to politics, soon distinguished himself as one of the most eloquent senators and ablest statesmen of the reigns of GEORGE II., and GEORGE III., becoming secretary of State in 1766, and obtaining, 4 December, 1761, a peerage for his wife, Hester Grenville, only dau. of Richard Grenville, Esq., and sister of Earl Temple, by the style of Baroness of Chatham. He was himself created, 4 August, 1766, Viscount Pitt, of Burton Pynsent, co. Somerset, and EARL OF CHATHAM. His lordship had issue,

I. JOHN, late earl.

II. William, b. 28 May, 1759, educated at Pembroke Hall, Cambridge, under Dr. Pretzman, and called to the bar at Lincoln's Inn, 1780. This great statesman, who entered parliament as member for Appleby, was Prime Minister, with but one short interruption, from 1783 to 1806, during years, the most eventful in the annals of England. He d. unm. 23 January, 1806, and was buried at the public expense in Westminster Abbey, where a national monument has been erected to his memory. To the immortal credit of this powerful minister, who had the almost uncontrolled management of the public purse for a long series of years, he died in circumstances so far from affluent, that parliament found it necessary to devote £40,000 to the liquidation of his debts.

III. James-Charles, B.N., d. in 1780.

I. Hester, m. 19 December, 1774, to Charles, 3rd Earl Stanhope, and d. 20 July, 1780, leaving three daus., Lady Hester-Lucy Stanhope, who d. in Syria, 23 June, 1839; Griselda, m. 29 August, 1800, John Jekell, Esq., and d. 13 October, 1851; and Lucy-Rachel, m. 26 April, 1796, Thomas Taylor, Esq., of Sevenoaks, and d. 1 March, 1814.

II. Harriet, m. the Hon. Edward-James Elliot, eldest son and heir-apparent of Edward, Lord Elliot of St. Geruans, and d. in 1786, leaving an only child, Hester-Harriet-Pitt Elliot, who m. Lieutenant-General Sir William-Henry Pringle, G.C.B., M.P.

The death of Lord Chatham was sudden and impressive. In an effort to speak in the House of Lords, when labouring under infirmities, he suddenly dropt down, and, although dissolution did not immediately ensue, his lordship survived but a few weeks; he was stricken, 8 April, and died at Hayes, in Kent, 11 May, 1778. His remains were honoured with public obsequies in Westminster Abbey, a splendid monument was erected to his memory at the national expense and a pension of £4,000 a year, settled upon the Earldom of Chatham. "History," to borrow the eloquent words of Macaulay, "History, while, for the warning of vehement, high and daring natures, she notes his many errors, will yet deliberately pronounce, that, among the eminent men whose bones lie near his, scarcely one has left a more stainless, and none a more splendid name." The countess d. 3 April, 1803. The elder son,

JOHN PITT, 2nd Earl of Chatham, b. 10 September, 1756 K.G., was a general officer in the army, colonel of the 4th regiment of foot, and governor-general of Gibraltar. As lieutenant general he commanded the unlucky expedition to Walcheren in 1809. His lordship m. 9 July, 1783, Mary-Elizabeth, 2nd dau. of Thomas, 1st Viscount Sydney, by whom (who d. 20 May, 1821.) he had no issue. He was an Elder Brother of the Trinity House, governor of the Charter House, and high steward of Colchester. He d. 24 September, 1835, when all his honours became EXTINCT.

PITT—BARONS CAMELFORD.

By Letters Patent, dated 5 January, 1784.

Lineage.

THOMAS PITT, Esq., of Boconnoc, Cornwall (elder brother of William, 1st Earl of Chatham), was M.P. for Okehampton and Old Sarum, warden of the stannaries, and steward of the Duchy of Cornwall and Devon to Frederick, Prince of Wales. He m. Christian, dau. of Sir Thomas Lyttleton, of Hagley, and d. in 1761, having had a son, THOMAS, and two daus., Amelia, m. to William Spry, LL.D., and Christian m. to Thomas Saunders, governor of Fort St. George. The son,

THOMAS PITT, Esq., of Boconnoc, b. in 1737, was elevated to the peerage, 5 January, 1784, as BARON CAMELFORD, of Boconnoc, co. Cornwall. His lordship m. Anne, dau. and co-heiress of Pinkney Wilkinson, Esq., of Burnham, in Norfolk, and had issue,

THOMAS, his successor.

Anne, m. to William, Lord Grenville (uncle of the Duke of Buckingham). His lordship d. s. p. in 1834; his widow survived until 1864.

He d. in 1793, and was s. by his son,

THOMAS PITT, 2nd baron, a post captain, R.N. This nobleman fell in a duel with a gentleman of the name of Best, in 1804 (see BURKE'S ROMANCE OF THE ARISTOCRACY), and as he d. unm., the BARONY OF CAMELFORD became EXTINCT, while his estates devolved upon his sister, Anne, Lady Grenville, and are now enjoyed, under her ladyship's will, by the Hon George Matthew Fortescue, 2nd son of Hugh, 1st Earl Fortescue.

Arms—Sa., fesse chequy, arg. and az., between three bezants.

PITT—EARL OF LONDONDERRY.

By Letters Patent, dated 8 October, 1726.

Lineage.

THOMAS PITT, Esq., colonel of horse, and M.P. for Wilton (2nd son of Thomas Pitt, governor of Fort St. George, see EARL CHATHAM), m. Lady Frances Ridgeway, dau. and co-heiress of Robert, Earl of Londonderry, and was created, 3 June, 1719, BARON OF LONDONDERRY, in the kingdom of Ireland, and 8 October, 1726, advanced to the dignities of Viscount Galen Ridgeway, and EARL OF LONDONDERRY. His lordship was subsequently constituted captain-general of the Leeward Isles; he d. at St. Kitts, 12 September, 1729, and was buried in the family vault at Blandford, co. Dorset, leaving two sons (THOMAS and RIDGEWAY), and one dau., Lucy, m. to Pierce Meyrick, Esq., youngest son of Owen Meyrick, Esq., of Bodorgan, in the Island of Anglesey. The elder son,

THOMAS PITT, 2nd Earl of Londonderry, d. unm. 25 August, 1735, and was s. by his brother,

RIDGEWAY PITT, 3rd Earl of Londonderry, at whose decease, also unm. in 1764, the honours became EXTINCT.

Arms—Sa., a fesse, chequy, arg. and az., between three bezants.

PLANTAGENET—EARLS OF CORNWALL.

Creation, 30 May, 1226.

Lineage.

JOHN PLANTAGENET, youngest son of King HENRY II., bore the title of EARL OF CORNWALL (a dignity which had reverted to the crown upon the decease of Reginald de Dunstanvill, Earl of Cornwall, in 1176), in the life-time of his elder brother, King RICHARD I., but on succeeding that monarch, in 1199, as King JOHN, the EARLDOM OF CORNWALL merged in the crown; and so remained until it was conferred upon the same monarch's younger son,

RICHARD PLANTAGENET, who was made EARL OF POITOU AND CORNWALL by his brother, King HENRY III., 30 May, 1226. This prince acquired high reputation in the council and the field, and during the reign of his brother was one of the leading characters of Europe. In 1241, he was in the Holy Land, and then entered into a truce with the Soldan of Babylon, upon condition that the French prisoners there should be released; that Jerusalem, with all the parts adjacent, should be free from all molestation, and that other immunities should be granted to the Christians. In 1252, the earl, journeying through France with a pompous retinue, viz., forty knights, all in rich liveries, five waggons, and fifty sumpter horses (his lady and his son Henry being also with him), the Pope, being then at Lyons, sent all his cardinals, except one, besides a number of clerks, to meet the earl, and conduct him thither. And receiving the prince with great respect, feasted him at his own table. In 1255, upon a full meeting of the nobles in parliament assembled at Westminster, the king especially applied himself to the Earl of Cornwall in a formal speech for a large supply of money, viz., forty thousand pounds, the Pope having also written to him letters for that purpose; but the prince appears not to have complied with the request. In about two years afterwards, certain nobles of Almaine, having arrived in England, stated to the whole baronage, then met in full parliament, that, by the unanimous consent of the princes of the empire, the Earl of Cornwall was elected King of the Romans; and those ambassadors were followed by the archbishop of Cologne, and a numerous train of nobility, who came for the purpose of doing homage to the new monarch. Whereupon he gave them 500 marks towards their travelling expenses, and presented the prelate with a rich mitre, adorned with precious stones. Soon after this the earl repaired to his new dominions, and was solemnly crowned King on ascension-day. In the contest which subsequently took place between the barons and King HENRY, he adhered with great fidelity to the latter, and commanded the main body of the royal army at the unfortunate battle of Lewes, where he was made prisoner. But he lived to see the termination of those troubles, and departing this life in 2 April, 1272, at his manor of Berkhamstead, was buried in the abbey of Hales, which he had founded. The prince had married, 1st, the Lady Isabel Marshall, 3rd dau. and co-heiress of William, Earl of Pembroke, by whom he had four sons and a dau., who all died young, except HENRY, b. 1235, who was taken prisoner with his father at the battle of Lewes, in which he had a principal command. Subsequently, having embarked in the Crusade, and being at Viterbuin, in Italy, on his return he was barbarously murdered there in the church of St. Lawrence, at high mass, by Guy, son of Simon Montfort, Earl of Leicester, the general of the baronial army, in revenge of his father's death, who had been slain at the battle of Evesham.

The King of Almaine m. 2ndly, Sanchia, 3rd dau. and co-heiress of Raymond, Earl of Provence, by whom he had one surviving son,

EDMUND, his successor.

He m. 3rdly, Beatrix, niece of Conrad, archbishop of Cologne, but had no child by that lady. The prince was s. as Earl of Cornwall, by his son, EDMUND PLANTAGENET, who accomplishing his full age, in the 55th HENRY III., received the honour of knighthood, upon St. Edward's day, and was invested, soon after, with the title of EARL OF CORNWALL, by cincture, with the sword. In the 16th EDWARD I., he was made warden of England, during the king's absence in the wars of Scotland, and then marching into Wales, besieged Drocelan Castle, and demolished its walls. The next year, he was constituted sheriff for the co. of Cornwall, in fee. His lordship m. Margaret, dau. of Richard de Clare, Earl of Gloucester, but d. s. p., in 1300, when his great inheritance devolved upon the king, as his next of kin and heir-at-law, while the Earldom of Cornwall became EXTINCT.

Arms—Of RICHARD, King of the Romans: Arg., a lion rampant, gu., crowned, or, a bordure, sa., bezantee.

PLANTAGENET—EARLS OF CHESTER, EARLS OF LEICESTER, EARL OF DERBY, EARL OF LINCOLN, DUKE OF LANCASTER.

Earldom of Chester, anno 1253.
 Earldom of Leicester, 25 October, 1264.
 Earldom of Derby, 16 March, 1337.
 Earldom of Lincoln, 20 August, 1349.
 Dukedom of Lancaster, 6 March, 1351.

Lineage.

EDMUND PLANTAGENET, surnamed Crouchback, second son of King HENRY III., was born at London, in February, 1245, and when he had attained his eighth year, was solemnly invested by the Pope, in the kingdom of Sicily and Apulia. About this time too, he was made EARL OF CHESTER. But neither of these honours turned out eventually of much value, for the real King of Sicily, CONRAD, was then living; and the Earldom of Chester is said to have been transferred to the prince's elder brother, Edward, afterwards EDWARD I. He soon obtained, however, both possessions and dignities, for upon the forfeiture of Simon de Montfort, Earl of Leicester, the king, by letters patent, granted him the inheritance of the EARLDOM OF LEICESTER, as also the honour and stewardship of England: with the lands likewise of Nicolas de Segrave, an associate in the treason of Montfort. And the next ensuing year he had another grant from the crown of all the goods and chattels, whereof Robert de Ferrers, Earl of Derby, was possessed upon the day of the skirmish at Chesterfield. He subsequently had grants of the honour of Derby, with the castles, manors, and lands, of the said Robert de Ferrers; and the honour of Leicester, with all the lands of Simon de Montfort, late Earl of Leicester: to hold to himself and the heirs of his body. About the 54th HENRY III., the earl went into the Holy Land, and returned within two years. In the reign of EDWARD I., he was in the Scottish wars and had the grants which he had received from his father confirmed, with additional castles, manors, and lands of great extent. In the 21st of that reign, he procured licence from the crown to make a castle of his house, in the parish of St. Clement's Danea, in the co. Middlesex, called the Savoy; and founded the nunnery, called the Minoresees, without Aldgate, in the suburbs of London. He was afterwards in the Welsh wars; and then proceeded to France, being sent with the Earl of Lincoln, and twenty-six bannerets, into Gascony. He eventually invested Bordeaux, but not succeeding in its reduction, the disappointment affected him so severely, that it brought on a disease which terminated his life in the year 1295. The prince's remains were brought over to England, and honourably interred in Westminster Abbey. Upon his death-bed, he directed "that his body should not be buried 'till his debts were paid." This earl m. 1st, in April, 1269, Aveline (dau. of William de Fortibus, Earl of Albemarle), Countess of HOLDERNESSE, heir to her father, and by her mother, Countess of Devon and the Isle of Wight, but this great heiress d. the following year s. p. The prince m. 2ndly, 1276, Blanche, dau. of Robert, Earl of Artois (3rd son of Lewis VIII., King of France), and widow of HENRY, King of Navarre, by whom he had surviving issue,

THOMAS, his successor.

HENRY, of whom hereafter, as restored Earl of Lancaster.
 John d. in France.

His highness was s. by his elder son,

THOMAS PLANTAGENET, Earl of Lancaster, who in the 26th EDWARD I., doing his homage, being then esteemed of full age by the king, had livery of his lands, except the dowry of Blanche, his mother; and thereupon marched into Scotland, the king himself being in the expedition. The earl, who was hereditary sheriff of Lancashire, substituted Richard de Hoghton, his deputy in that office. For the remainder of this reign the Earl of Lancaster was constantly employed in the wars of Scotland. In the 4th EDWARD II., having m. Alice, only dau. and heiress of Henry de Lacy, Earl of Lincoln, he had livery of the castle of Denbigh, and other lands of her inheritance; his homage for them being performed the ensuing year, in the presence of divers bishops, earls, and barons, and other of the king's council, in a certain chamber within the house of the Friars Preachers, in London. The earl is said to have borne the title of EARL OF LINCOLN, in right of this lady; after his decease, she m. Eubold le Strange, who d. s. p., and 3rdly, Hugh le Fresne; the which Eubold and Hugh, are deemed, by many writers to have been Earls of Lincoln. The said Alice styled herself Countess of Lincoln and Salisbury, and d. s. p. in 1348. In the 5th EDWARD II., the Earl of Lancaster joined the confederation against Piers Gaveston, and was made their general by those nobles and great personages, who had united for a redress of grievances. It is said that his father-in-law, Henry de Lacy, Earl of Lincoln, had charged him upon his death-bed, to maintain the quarrel against Gaveston, and that thereupon he joined with the Earl of Warwick, and caused the favourite to be put to death. From this period he was never fully restored to the confidence of the king, but was esteemed the great champion of the popular party, in whose cause he eventually laid down his life; for taking up arms against the Spencers, he was made prisoner in a skirmish at Boroughbridge, and being thence conveyed to Pontefract, was beheaded on a plain without the town (where a beautiful church was afterwards erected in honour of his memory), in April, 1321. Dugdale details the events that immediately preceded the earl's untimely death, thus—"That being come to Boroughbridge, he there found Sir Andrew de Harcla, Warden of Carlisle, and the Marches, and Sir Simon Ward, sheriff of Yorkshire, ready to encounter him. Where relating to Harcla his just quarrel to the Spencers, (he the earl) promised him, if he would favour his cause, to give him one of those five earldoms which he had in possession; and that Harcla refusing, he told him that he would soon repent it, and that he should die a shameful death (as it afterwards happened). Also, that Harcla, then causing his archers to shoot, the fight began, in which many of this earl's party being slain, he betook himself to chapel, refusing to yield to Harcla, and looking to the crucifix, said, 'Good Lord, I render myself to thee, and put myself into thy mercy.' Also, that they then took off his coat armor, and putting upon him one of his men's liveries, carried him by water to York, where they threw balls of dirt at him. Moreover, that from thence they brought him back to the king at Pontefract Castle, and there put him in a tower, towards the abbey which he had newly made. Likewise, that soon after, being brought into the hall, he had sentence of death by these justices, viz.:—Aymer, Earl of Pembroke, Edmund, Earl of Kent, John de Bretagne, and Sir Robert Malmethorpe, who pronounced the judgment. Whereupon, saying, 'shall I die without answer?' A certain Gascoigne took him away, and put a pill'd broken hood on his head, and set him on a lean white jade, without a bridle; and that then he added, 'King of Heaven, have mercy on me, for the king of earth nous ad guerthi.' And that thus he was carried, some throwing pellets of dirt at him (having a fryer-procher for his confessor), to an hill without the town, where he kneeled down towards the east, until one Hugin de Muston caused him to turn his face towards Scotland, and then a villain of London cut off his head. After which the prior and monks obtaining his body from the king, buried it on the right hand of the high altar. The day of his death was certainly upon the Monday next preceding the Annunciation of the Blessed Virgin. Touching his merits," continues the same authority, "there happened afterwards very great disputes: some thinking it fit that he should be accounted a saint, because he was so charitable, and so much an honour of the religious; as also that he died in a just cause; but chiefly because his persecutors came within a short period to untimely ends. On the other side many there were who taxed him for adultery, in keeping of sundry women, notwithstanding he had a wife. Aspersing him likewise for cruelty, in putting to death some persons for small offences; and protecting some for punishment who were transgressors of the laws; alleging also, that he was chiefly swayed by one of his secretaries; and that he did not fight stoutly for justice, but fled and was taken unarmed. Nevertheless, many miracles were reported to have been afterwards wrought in the place where his corpse was buried; much confluence of people coming thereto, in honour thereof, till the king, through the incitation of the Spencers, set guards to restrain them. Whereupon, they flocked to the place where he suffered death; and so much the more eagerly, as endeavours had been used to restrain them, until a church was erected on the place where he suffered." All the honours of this prince became FORFEITED under his attainder: yet his brother and heir (Thomas Plantagenet having himself no issue), HENRY PLANTAGENET, being a distinguished soldier in the Scottish wars, had livery of his lands in the 17th EDWARD II., and was restored to the dignity of EARL OF LEICESTER. This prince was subsequently one of the leaders in the great confederacy which overturned the power of the Spencers, and deposed King EDWARD II. Upon the accession of EDWARD III., the earl had the honour of girding him with the sword of knighthood, and as soon as the new monarch was crowned, he was appointed, the king being a minor, his guardian. After which, in the parliament begun at Westminster, the attainder against his brother being reversed, he was restored to all the lands of his father and brother, with the EARLDOMS OF LANCASTER AND LEICESTER, and the same year (1st EDWARD III.) he was constituted captain-general of all the king's forces in the marches of Scotland. The earl m. Maud, dau. and heiress of Sir Patrick Chaworth, Knt., and had issue, HENRY, Earl of Derby, his successor.

Maud, m. 1st, to William de Burgh, Earl of Ulster, by whom she had an only dau. and heiress, ELIZABETH DE BURGH, m. to Lionel, Duke of Clarence.

The Lady Maud m. 2ndly, Ralph de Efford, Justice of Ireland, temp. EDWARD III., and brother of Robert, Earl of Suffolk, by whom she had an only dau.,

MAUD, m. to Thomas, son of John de Vere, Earl of Oxford.

Blanche, m. to Thomas, Lord Wake, of Lydell, and d. s. p.

Eleanor, m. 1st, to John, son and heir of Henry, Earl of Buchan; and 2ndly, to Richard Fitz-Alan, Earl of Arundel.

Jane, m. to John, 3rd Lord Mowbray.

Isabel, prioress of Ambresbury.

Mary, m. to Henry, Lord Percy.

His lordship d. in 1345, was buried at Leicester (where his obsequies were attended by the king and queen in person), and was s. by his son,

HENRY PLANTAGENET, called "of Gresmont," from a castle in Monmouthshire, the place of his birth, who, having distinguished himself in the lifetime of his father in the Scottish wars, was made captain-general of all the king's forces there, had considerable grants from the crown, and was created EARL OF DERRY (11th EDWARD III.) The next year he was with the king in the wars of Flanders, as he was in two years afterwards in the great naval engagement with the French off Sluces. In the 15th EDWARD III. we find the prince again in the wars of Scotland, being then the king's lieutenant for the northern parts of England, and general of his army against the Scots: in which capacity he was authorized to treat of peace. After this, as EARL OF DERRY (his father still alive), he became one of the first and most successful captains of the age, reducing no less than fifty-six French cities and places of note to the dominion of the king of England, and taking immense treasure in gold. In the year of those great exploits his father died, so that he was prevented assisting the deceased earl's funeral. He had afterwards a chief command at the siege of Calais, bearing then the title of Earl of Lancaster, Derby, and Leicester, and Steward of England; at which time he had, of his own retinue, 800 men-at-arms, and 2,000 archers, with 30 banners, which cost him, in hospitality, a daily disbursement of £100. In the 22nd EDWARD III., after having had previously for his brilliant services, extensive grants from the crown, he was made the king's lieutenant in Flanders and France, and the next year was created by letters patent, EARL OF LINCOLN, soon after which he was constituted the king's lieutenant and captain-general of Poitou, made a knight of the Garter (one of the Founders of the Order*) and created DUKE OF LANCASTER. To the latter high dignity he was raised in full parliament, and invested with power to have a chancery in the co. Lancaster, and to enjoy all other liberties and royalties appertaining to a county palatine, in as ample a manner as the Earls of Chester did, in the county palatine of Chester. About this time, too, he was constituted admiral of the king's whole fleet westward. The same year, having obtained license to go abroad to fight against the infidels, he was surprised in his journey, and forced to pay a large ransom for his liberty: which surprisal having occurred through the Duke of Brunswick's means, the English prince expressed his resentment in language so unmeasured, that the duke sent him a challenge; which being accepted, a day was appointed for the combat; but when it arrived, the Duke of Brunswick was so panic struck, that he could not wield his shield, sword, or lance; while the Duke of Lancaster, with the most undaunted firmness, in vain awaited his attack. They were, however, afterwards reconciled, by the interference of the French monarch; and thus the English prince acquired great renown for personal valour, while his adversary was covered with disgrace. The close of this heroic nobleman's martial career, was quite as splendid as its opening, and after a most brilliant course of achievements, he d. 24 March, 1360-1, deeply lamented by all classes of his countrymen, including his gallant companions in arms. He lived in one of the most glorious periods of English history, and he was himself the chief actor in that splendid era. The prince m. Isabel, dau. of Henry, Lord Beaumont, and left two daus., his co-heirs, viz.,

MAUD, who had been 1st, the betrothed wife of Ralph, son and heir of Ralph, Lord Stafford, and at the age of six years his widow; she m. 2ndly, 1352, William, Duke of Zealand and Bavaria, and d. s. p.

BLANCHE, m. to John of Gaunt, Earl of Richmond, 4th son of King EDWARD III.,

Which

JOHN (PLANTAGENET), b. 1340, styled of Gaunt, from the place of his birth, who had been created EARL OF RICHMOND, in 1342, was advanced to the DUKEDOM OF LANCASTER, by his father, King EDWARD III., in the 36th year of his reign. After the decease of his 1st wife, BLANCH, the great heiress of the Duke of Lancaster, he m. Constance, elder dau. and co-heiress of PETER, King of Castile, and in her right assumed the title of King of Castile and Leon, in which regal dignity, as well as in those of Duke of Lancaster, Earl of Richmond, Derby, Lincoln, and Leicester, he had summons to parliament; he was likewise Duke of Aquitaine, and a knight of the Garter. On the decease of EDWARD III., this prince was joined in the administration of affairs during the minority of his nephew, RICHARD II. He subsequently attempted the conquest of Spain at the head of a fine army; and landing at the Groyne, advanced to Compostella, where he was met by JOHN, King of Portugal, between whom and his eldest dau., the Lady Philippa, a marriage was concluded. Thence he marched into Castile, and there ratified a treaty of peace, by which he abandoned his claim to the throne of Castile and Leon, in consideration of a large sum of money, and the marriage of Henry, Prince of Asturias, with his only dau. by his 2nd wife, the Lady Katherine Plantagenet. In the latter part of his life he dwelt in retirement, having incurred the displeasure of King RICHARD, by a motion which he had made in parliament, that his son, Henry of Bolingbroke, should be declared heir to the crown. He d. at Ely House, Holborn, in 1399.

JOHN of Gaunt m. 1st, in 1359, as already stated, Lady Blanche Plantagenet, the eventual heiress of the Duke of Lancaster, and had by her,

PLANTAGENET, SURNAMED DE BROTHERTON—EARL OF NORFOLK AND EARL MARSHAL.

By Special Charter, dated 16 December, 1312.

Lineage.

THOMAS PLANTAGENET, eldest son of King EDWARD I., by his 2nd wife, Margaret, dau. of PHILIP III., or the Hardy, of France, was born at Brotherton in Yorkshire, anno 1301, whence the surname, "DE BROTHERTON," and before he had attained his thirteenth year, was advanced by special charter of his half brother King EDWARD II. (at the dying request of his predecessor), dated 16 December, 1312, to all the honours which Roger le Bigod, sometime Earl of Norfolk, and Marshal of England did enjoy by the name of earl, in the co. Norfolk, with all the castles, manors, and lands, which the said Roger possessed in England, Ireland, and Wales, which had become vested in the crown, by the surrender of the said Roger. But in some years afterwards, the king seized upon the marshalship in the Court of King's Bench, because the Earl of Norfolk had failed to substitute some person on his behalf, to attend the justices of that court, upon their journey into Lancashire; he had, however, restitution of the high office, upon paying a fine of £100. This prince was repeatedly in the wars of Scotland, temp. EDWARD II. and EDWARD III., in the latter of which reigns he had a confirmation of the Earldom of Norfolk, and the office of earl marshal. He m. 1st, Alice, dau. of Sir Roger Halya, Knt., of Harwich, by whom he had issue,

MARGARET, of whom hereafter.

JOAN, who m. William Ufford, Earl of Suffolk, and d. without male issue.

The prince m. 2ndly, Mary, dau. of William, Lord Boos, and widow of William Broose, and had a son,

John, who became a monk at the abbey of Ely.

Thomas of Brotherton d. in 1338, when the Earldom of Norfolk became EXTINCT. But his elder dau. and co-heir, who eventually became sole heiress,

The LADY MARGARET PLANTAGENET, was created DUCHESS OF NORFOLK for life, by King RICHARD II., 29 September, 1397. Her grace, at the time styled Countess of Norfolk, claimed the office of earl marshal, at the coronation of that monarch, and prayed that she might execute the same by her deputy; but her claim was not allowed, owing to the want of sufficient time to investigate its merits, and the prior appointment, for the occasion, of Henry, Lord Percy. This illustrious lady m. 1st, John, Lord Segrave, and had issue, Anne, abbess of Barking.

Elizabeth, m. John, Lord Mowbray (see Mowbray, Earl of Nottingham, and Duke of Norfolk). From this marriage descend the HOWARDS, and the BERKELEYS.

The duchess m. 2ndly, Sir William Manny, K.G., and had an only surviving dau.,

Anne, m. to John Hastings, Earl of Pembroke.

Her grace d. in 1399, when the dignity became EXTINCT.

PLANTAGENET—BARONS OF WOODSTOCK, EARLS OF KENT.

Barony, by Writ of Summons, dated 5 August, 1320.

Earldom, by Charter, dated 28 July, 1321.

Lineage.

EDMUND PLANTAGENET, b. 5 August, 1301, surnamed of Woodstock, from the place of his birth, 2nd son of King EDWARD I., was summoned to parliament, by writ, directed "Edmundo de Wodestok," 5 August, 1320, about two years before he attained majority. He had previously been in the wars of Scotland, and had obtained considerable territorial grants from the crown. In the next year he was created EARL OF KENT, and had a grant of the castle of Okham, in the co. Rutland, and shrievalty of the county. About the same time he was constituted governor of the castle of Tunbridge, in Kent; and upon the breaking out of the insurrection, under Thomas Plantagenet, Earl of Lancaster, he was commissioned by the king, to pursue that rebellious prince, and to lay siege to the castle of Pontefract. The Earl of Lancaster was subsequently made prisoner at Boroughbridge, and the Earl of Kent was one of those who condemned him to death. From this period, during the remainder of the reign of his brother, Edmund, of Woodstock, was constantly employed in the cabinet or the field. He was frequently accredited on embassies to the Court of France, and was in all the wars in Gascony and Scotland. But after the accession of his nephew, King EDWARD III., he was arrested and sentenced to death, for having conspired, with other nobles, to deliver his brother, the deposed EDWARD II., out of prison. Whereupon, by the management of Queen ISABEL and her paramour, Mortimer, he was beheaded at Winchester (1330), after he had remained upon the scaffold, from noon until five o'clock in the evening, waiting for an executioner; no one being willing to undertake the horrid office, till a malefactor from the Marshalsea was procured to perform it. The earl m. Margaret, dau. of John, Lord Wake, and sister and heiress of Thomas, Lord Wake, by whom (who d. 29 September, 1349,) he had issue,

JOANE, from her extraordinary beauty, styled "the Fair Maid of Kent," m. 1st, William Montacute, Earl of Salisbury, from whom she was divorced; 2ndly, Sir Thomas Holland, K.G., (who d. 26 December, 1360); and 3rdly, the renowned hero, EDWARD, Prince of Wales, K.G., the Black Prince, by whom (who d. 8 July, 1376), she was the mother of King RICHARD II.

The unfortunate earl's eldest son,

EDMUND PLANTAGENET was restored in blood and honours by parliament, the year in which his father suffered, and thus became Baron Woodstock and EARL OF KENT—but d. soon after in minority, unn., and was s. by his brother,

JOHN PLANTAGENET, 3rd Earl of Kent, who m. Elizabeth, dau. of the Duke of Julliers, but d. s. p. in 1352, when the Earldom of Kent, and Baronies of Woodstock and Wake, devolved upon his only surviving sister,

* Collins, in explanation of the divorce, states, that the Earl of Salisbury had intended to have married her, had she not been previously contracted to Sir Thomas Holland; yet, during the absence of Sir Thomas, the earl made a subsequent contract, and withheld the lady, until the Pope decided against him—when acquiescing, it was said, she was divorced.

PLANTAGENET--EARL OF CORNWALL.

By Patent, anno 1328.

Lineage.

JOHN PLANTAGENET, 2nd son of King EDWARD II., commonly called "John of Eltham," from the place of his birth, was created by patent, dated in 1327, EARL OF CORNWALL. This prince d. unm. in 1336, when the Earldom of Cornwall became extinct.

Arms—Same as the other branches of the House of Plantagenet.

PLANTAGENET—DUKE OF CORNWALL.

By Patent, dated in 1337.

Lineage.

EDWARD PLANTAGENET, the gallant Black Prince, eldest son of King EDWARD III., was advanced by patent, in 1337, to the dignity of DUKE OF CORNWALL, with the following limitation:—"Habend. et tenend. eidem Duci et ipsius et heredum suorum Regum Angliæ filijs primogenitis et dieti loci ducibus in regno Angliæ hereditarij succesor." He was subsequently created PRINCE OF WALES, and the dukedom merged in the principality. Since the dignity was so conferred upon Prince Edward, it has been vested in the heir apparent of the throne of England, who, at his birth, or at the decease of an elder brother, becomes Duke of Cornwall, and he is always created Prince of Wales. The Black Prince m. his cousin, Joane, commonly called the Fair Maid of Kent, dau. of Edmund, Earl of Kent, and widow of Sir Thomas Holland, by whom he left, at his decease, 8 July, 1376, his father, King EDWARD still living, an only surviving son,

RICHARD, afterwards King RICHARD II.

PLANTAGENET—DUKE OF CLARENCE.

Created 15 September, 1362.

Lineage.

GILBERT DE CLARE, Earl of Hertford and Gloucester, who fell at the battle of Bannockburn in 1313, leaving no issue, his titles became extinct, while his estates devolved upon his sisters, as co-heirs, of whom

ELIZABETH DE CLARE, the youngest sister, had m. JOHN DE BURGH, son of Richard, Earl of Ulster, and through this alliance the honour of Clare came into the possession of the De Burghs. The heiress of Clare left a son,

WILLIAM DE BURGH, Earl of Ulster, who m. Maud, sister of Henry Plantagenet, Duke of Lancaster, and left an only child and heiress,

ELIZABETH DE BURGH, who married

LIONEL PLANTAGENET, b. 29 November, 1338 (of Antwerp), 3rd son of King EDWARD III. who became jure uxoris, Earl of Ulster, and was created 15 September, 1362, DUKE OF CLARENCE.* The prince was likewise a knight of the Garter. He had an only child by the heiress of Ulster,

PHILIPPA PLANTAGENET, b. 16 August, 1355, who m. Edmond Mortimer, 3rd Earl of March, and had, with other issue,

ROGER MORTIMER, Earl of March, b. 1377, who, in the parliament held 9th RICHARD II., was declared next heir to the throne. This nobleman, slain at Kenlis, in Menth, 1398, had, with other issue,

EDMOND, his successor.

Anne (sister and heir of her brother, Edmond, Earl of March), who m. Richard Plantagenet, of Coningsburgh, Earl of Cambridge, younger son of Edmond, Duke of York, 5th son of EDWARD III., and had a son,

RICHARD, Duke of York, K.G., who fell at Wakefield, 31 December, 1460, leaving,

EDWARD, Duke of York, who ascended the throne as EDWARD IV.

George, Duke of Clarence, K.G., father of MARGARET PLANTAGENET, Countess of Salisbury (see that title).

RICHARD, Duke of Gloucester, who ascended the throne as RICHARD III.

Lionel, Duke of Clarence, m. 2ndly, 15 June, 1368, Valentina, dau. of Galeazzo, or Galeas II., Duke of Milan, but by her had no issue. About four years after the death of the Duchess Elizabeth (25 April, 1368), King EDWARD concluded the terms of a new marriage for his son, the Duke of Clarence, with Violanta, or Jolantia, the dau. of Galeas, or, as he was more classically called, Galeasius, prince of Milan, and sister to John Galeas, who subsequently became 1st Duke of Milan. The bargain, for such it was in the strictest meaning of the word, was struck at Windsor, upon which occasion the wealthy and munificent Prince Galeas paid down for his daughter's dowry, the sum of 100,000 florins. This, however, was but a prelude to the unbounded magnificence with which he received his son-in-law, and his small but chosen retinue of English nobles, who in number amounted to about 200. When the duke married his affianced bride, the luxury of the various feasts that followed upon the nuptials, and the richness of the gifts presented by Galeas to the bridegroom and his followers, were such as fairly to confound the imagination. The whole scene, as described by Paulus Jovius, is only to be paralleled by the wild dreamings of some eastern story. At one banquet, when the celebrated Petrarch was present, thirty courses succeeded each other, all composed of the choicest viands that the earth or sea could supply, and between each course, as many rare gifts were brought in by Galeas himself, and presented by him to Clarence.

"But not five months after, the Duke of Clarence (having lived with this new wife after the manner of his own country, forgetting, or not regarding his change of air, and addicting himself to immoderate feasting), spent and consumed with a lingering disease, departed this world at Alba Pompela, called also Longuevil, in the Marquisate of Montserrat, in Piedmont, on the vigil of St. Luke the Evangelist, viz., the 17th day of October, anno 1368."

The duke was first buried in the city of Pavia, but was afterwards brought over to England by Thomas Narbonne and others of the retinue, who had accompanied him in his nuptial expedition. The body was then conveyed to the church of the Augustine Friars, at Clare, in Suffolk, and finally deposited near the remains of his 1st wife, Elizabeth de Burgh. Violanta herself was afterwards m. to Otho, Marquis of Montserrat; but, as the chronicler quaintly observes, her 2nd marriage was not more fortunate than her first;—Otho soon perished ignobly in the mountain, being slain by a country stable-keeper.

At the death of Lionel, the Dukedom of Clarence became extinct.

PLANTAGENET—EARL OF CAMBRIDGE, DUKES OF YORK, DUKE OF ALBEMARLE.

Earldom, 13 November, 1362.

Dukedom, 6 August, 1385.

Dukedom of Albemarle, 29 September, 1397.

Lineage.

EDMUND PLANTAGENET, b. 5 June, 1341, surnamed Langley, from the place of his birth, 5th son of King EDWARD III., was created by his father, 13 November, 1362, EARL OF CAMBRIDGE, and by his nephew, King RICHARD II., 6 August, 1385, DUKE OF YORK. This prince m. 1st, 1372, Isabel, dau. and co-heir of PETER THE CRUEL, King of Castile and Leon, and sister of Constance, the wife of John of Gaunt, by whom (who d. in 1394) he had issue,

I. EDWARD, his successor in the Dukedom of York.

II. RICHARD, of Coningsburgh, who s. to the Earldom of Cambridge. This prince was beheaded at Southampton for conspiring against HENRY V., in 1415, when the Earldom of Cambridge became forfeited. He had m. Anne,* sister and heir of Edmond Mortimer, Earl of March, and dau. of Roger Mortimer, Earl of March, son of Edmond, 3rd Earl of March, by Philippa, his wife, only dau. and heiress of Lionel, of Antwerp, Duke of Clarence, 2nd son of King EDWARD III.:

2. Constance, m. to Thomas de Spencer, Earl of Gloucester.

Edmund, Duke of York, m. 2ndly, Joane, dau. of Thomas Holland, Earl of Kent, and sister and co-heir of Edmund, Earl of Kent, but had no issue. The Duke of York attained the highest reputation as a statesman and a soldier, and after vainly endeavouring to sustain his nephew, King RICHARD, upon the throne, he retired to his estate in Hertfordshire, and ubi spiravit, ibi exspiravit:—at Langley he was born, and at Langley he died 1 August, 1402, "having lived to see England's sceptre in three several hands, in which the royal stream never kept its immediate channel." In compliance with the terms of his will, he was buried at the Friary of Langley, under a tomb of alabaster and black marble; but upon the dissolution of the religious houses, both the monument, and the body which it had covered, were removed to the parish church of the same town, and placed in the east corner of the chancel. The prince, who was a knight of the Garter, was s. by his eldest son,

EDWARD PLANTAGENET, 2nd Duke of York, who had been created Duke of Albemarle, 29 September, 1397, and was restored to the Dukedom of York in 1406, which he had been previously rendered incapable of inheriting: he was also invested with the Garter. This gallant prince, who had become eminent in arms, fell at Agincourt in 1415, and his brother having been previously put to death, the Dukedom of York (the prince leaving no issue) devolved upon his nephew,

RICHARD PLANTAGENET, K.G., who was restored to the Earldom of Cambridge, and allowed to inherit as 3rd Duke of York. This prince becoming afterwards one of the most powerful subjects of the period in which he lived, laid claim to the throne as the descendant of Lionel, Duke of Clarence, 2nd son of EDWARD III., whereas the reigning monarch, HENRY VI., sprang from John of Gaunt, Duke of Lancaster, 3rd son of the same king: thus originated the devastating war of the Roses. In his pretensions, the Duke was supported by the Nevils and other great families, but his ambitious projects closed at the battle of Wakefield in 1460, where his party sustained a signal defeat, and he was himself slain. The prince had m. Cecily, dau. of Ralph Nevill, Earl of Westmoreland, and by her (who d. 31 May, 1495, and was buried at Fotheringhay) left issue,

EDWARD, his successor.

Edmund, said to have borne the title of Earl of Rutland. This prince at the age of twelve was barbarously murdered by Lord Clifford, after the battle of Wakefield.

George, Duke of Clarence (see Plantagenet, Duke of Clarence).

RICHARD, Duke of Gloucester (afterwards King RICHARD III.) Anne, m. 1st, to Henry Holland, Duke of Exeter, from whom she was divorced; and 2ndly, to Sir Thomas St. Leger, Knt., by whom she had a dau.,

ANNE ST. LEGER, who m. Sir George Manners, Lord Ros, ancestor of the dual house of RUTLAND.

Elizabeth, m. to John de la Pole, Duke of Suffolk.

Margaret, m. to Charles, Duke of Burgundy, but had no issue. This was the Duchess of Burgundy, so persevering in her hostility to HENRY VII., and her zeal in the cause of York, who set up the pretended Plantagenets, Warbeck and Symnel.

Ursula.

Richard, Duke of York, was s. by his son,

EDWARD PLANTAGENET, 4th Duke of York, who, after various fortunes at the head of the Yorkists, finally established himself upon the throne as EDWARD IV., when the Dukedom of York merged in the crown.

Arms—France and England, with a label of three points, arg., each charged with as many torteaux.

PLANTAGENET—EARLS OF BUCKINGHAM, DUKE OF GLOUCESTER.

Earldom, anno 1377.

Dukedom, 12 November, 1385.

Lineage.

THOMAS PLANTAGENET, b. at the royal Manor House, Woodstock, co. Oxford, 7 January, 1355, and thence surnamed "THOMAS OF WOODSTOCK," youngest son of King EDWARD III., m. the Lady Eleanor de Bohun, eldest dau. and co-heir of Humphrey, Earl of Hereford, Essex, and Northampton; and in consideration of that alliance was shortly afterwards made constable of England (a dignity enjoyed for nearly two centuries by the Bohuns). At the coronation of his nephew, King RICHARD II., the prince was advanced to the EARLDOM OF BUCKINGHAM, with a grant of 1,000 marks per annum, to be paid out of the exchequer, until provision of so much value should be made otherwise for him, and twenty pounds a-year out of the issues of the county, whence he derived his title. From this period, he was constantly employed as a commander in foreign wars, until the 9th of the same reign, when, for his eminent services, he was created 12 November, 1385, DUKE OF GLOUCESTER. Previously, he had been likewise sent into Essex, at the head of a large force, to suppress the insurrection of Jack Straw. The ceremony of his creation, as Duke of Gloucester, was performed at Heselow Lodge, in Tivdale, by girding with a sword, and putting a cap with a circle of gold, upon the prince's head; the parliament being then sitting at London, and assenting thereto. The parliamentary rolls tell us the king "ipseum ducem de prædictis titulo, nomine, et honore, per gladii cincturam, et pilei ac circuli aurei, suo capiti impositionem, maturius investivit,"—that instalment being by girding on the sword, and adorning his head with a coronet and cap of estate. This is the more worthy of being remembered, as, at a later period, we find dukes invested, "per appositionem cappæ suo capiti, ac traditionem virgæ aureæ"—by the imposition, that is, of a cap of estate and the delivery of a golden rod. In two years afterwards, he was constituted Justice of Chester, but he subsequently forfeited the favour of the king, by his opposition to Robert de Vere, Duke of Ireland, and his coalition with the lords who assembled in arms, at Haringey Park, to put an end to the power of that celebrated minion. After the disgrace and banishment of De Vere, the Duke of Gloucester obtained some immunities from the crown, but the king never pardoned the course he had pursued in that affair, and eventually it cost the duke his life. The story of his destruction is thus told by Froissart—"The king rode to Haverling, in the county of Essex, as it were on a hunting party, and came to Plessey, where the duke then resided, about five o'clock, the duke having just newly supped, who hearing of his coming (with the duchess and his children) met him in the court. The king hereupon being brought in, a table was spread for his supper. Whereat being set, he told the duke, that he would have him ride to London with him that night; saying, that the Londoners were to be before him on the morrow, as also his uncles of LANCASTER and YORK, with divers others of the nobles; and that he would be guided by their counsels, wishing him to command his steward to follow with his train. Hereupon the duke suspecting no hurt, so soon as the king had supp't, got on horseback, accompanied with no more than seven servants (three esquires and four yeomen), taking the way of Bondelay, to shun the common road to London; and riding fast, approached near Stratford, on the river Thames. Being got thus far, and coming near to the ambuscado* which was laid, the king rode away a great pace, and left him somewhat behind. Whereupon the earl marshal with his band, came galloping after, and overtaking him, said: I arrest you in the king's name. The duke therefore discerning that he was betrayed, call'd out aloud to the king, but to no purpose, for the king rode on, and took no notice of it. This was done about ten or eleven o'clock in the night; whence he was forthwith carried into a barge, and so into a ship, which lay in the Thames, wherein they conveyed him, the next day, to Calais. Being thus brought thither, he askt the earl marshal the cause thereof, saying: Methinks you hold me here as a prisoner; let me go abroad, and let me see the fortress; but the earl marshal refused." Froissart concludes by stating: "That the duke hereupon fearing his life, desired to have a priest, who sang mass before him, that he might be confessed; and so he had. When, soon after dinner, having washed his hands, there came into the chamber four men, who suddenly casting a towel about his neck, strangled him." After this violent death, the body of the prince was laid naked in his bed, and it was rumoured that he died of a palsy; the earl marshal going into deep mourning for his lamented cousin. This account of the duke's death is, however, according to Dugdale, erroneous, "As appeareth" (saith that celebrated antiquary) "by the deposition of John Hall, a servant to the earl marshal, then present, and in some sort assisting in that most barbarous murder, viz. 'That in the month of September, 21st RICHARD II., Thomas, Earl Marshal and Nottingham, whom the deposition calls Duke of Norfolk' (by reason he was soon afterwards advanced to that honour, as a reward for this bloody fact), 'and one John Colfox, his esquire, came in the night-time to the chamber of the said Hall, in Calais; and that Colfox calling him out of his bed, commanded him to come forthwith to his lord. Also, that when he came, the Duke of Norfolk asked him, 'If he heard nothing of the Duke of Gloucester;' and that he answered, 'He supposed him to be dead.' Whereupon the Duke of Norfolk replied, 'No, he is not; but the king hath given charge that he shall be murdered;' and farther said, 'that he himself, with the Earl of Rutland' (afterwards made Duke of Aumale), 'had sent certain of their esquires and yeomen, to be then there;' and likewise told him, the said Hall, 'that he should also be present, in his (Norfolk's) name;' but that Hall said, 'No;' desiring that he might rather lose all he had, and depart, rather than be present thereat: and that the duke then replied, 'He should do so, or die for it;' giving him a great knock on the pate.

"Moreover, that the said duke, with Colfox and Hall went to the church of Nostre Dame, in Calais, where they found William Hampsterley and — Bradeston (two esquires of the Duke of Norfolk), as also one William Serle, a yeoman of the chamber to the king; — Fraunceys, a yeoman of the chamber to the Earl of Rutland; William Rogers and William Dennys, yeomen of the said Duke of Norfolk, and another yeoman of the Earl of Rutland's, called Cock of the Chamber, and that there it was told to this Hall, that all the rest had made oath, that they should not discover anything of their purpose, causing him in like manner, to swear upon the sacrament, in the presence of one Sir William, a chaplain of St. George, in the church of Nostre Dame, that he should keep counsel therein. Furthermore, that after the oath thus made, they went along with the Duke of Norfolk, to a certain hostel, called Prince's Inn; and being come thither, that the said duke sent Colfox, Hampsterley, Bradeston, Serle, Fraunceys, William Roger, William Dennys, Cock of the Chamber, and Hall, into a house within that inn, and then departed from them, with some unknown persons. Likewise, that so soon as they were come into that house, there entered one John Lovetoft, with divers other esquires, unknown, who brought with him the Duke of Gloucester, and delivered him to Serle and Fraunceys, in an inner room of the house, and said, 'Here are Serle and Fraunceys;' and that they, thereupon, taking the duke from Lovetoft, brought him to a chamber, and said, 'They would speak with him;' adding, 'it was the king's pleasure that he must suffer death.' Whereunto he answered, 'If it be so, it is welcome.' Also, that Serle and Fraunceys, forthwith appointed a priest to confess him; and that being done, made him lie down upon a bed, and laying a feather-bed upon him, held it about his mouth till he died, William Roger, William Dennys, and Cock of the Chamber, holding down the sides of it; and Colfox, Hampsterley and Bradeston, upon their knees all the while, weeping and praying for his soul, Hall himself keeping the door. Which being done, he was attainted in the parliament, held on Monday next, ensuing the feast of the Exaltation of the Holy Cross, of the same year." Of those assassins, Hall, in the 1st HENRY IV., had judgment in parliament, to be drawn from Tower Hill to Tyburn, and there hanged and quartered; and Serle being taken in Scotland, in the year 1404, had a similar sentence. The others, it is presumed, never returned into England. The Duke of Norfolk ended his days, and died of grief, in exile; and Edward Plantagenet, Earl of Rutland, afterwards Duke of York, was slain at the battle of Agincourt. Thus the principal instigators and perpetrators of this foul deed, all met their deserts. The fate of King RICHARD, himself, is too well known, to require particularizing here. The death of the Duke of Gloucester occurred in 1397. In due time, his friends—or rather, the enemies of his enemies—being uppermost, the empty honours of a noble interment were bestowed upon his grace. His body was conveyed to Plashy, where it was laid in a handsome sepulchre, which he had caused to be built during his lifetime in the college of Canons Regular, founded by himself, and dedicated to the Holy Trinity. At a yet later period, his reliques were again removed, and were then deposited under a marble, inlaid with brass, in the royal chapel in Westminster Abbey, upon the south side of the shrine of EDWARD THE CONFESSOR. The Duke left by the Lady Eleanor de Bohun, his wife (who d. a nun, 3 October, 1399), one son and three daus., viz.,

HUMPHREY PLANTAGENET.

Anne Plantagenet (eventual heiress), m. 1st, to Thomas, Earl of Stafford, by whom she had no issue; and 2ndly, by virtue of the king's especial license (22nd RICHARD II.), to the said Thomas's brother, Edmund, Earl of Stafford, K.G., by whom (who was slain at Shrewsbury, 22 July, 1403,) she had a son,

Humphrey, created Duke of Buckingham. (See STAFFORD.)

Isabel, a nun.

The duke's son,

HUMPHREY PLANTAGENET, who was styled Earl of Buckingham, after the murder of his father, was conveyed to Ireland, by King RICHARD, and imprisoned in the castle of Trim, where he remained until the accession of HENRY IV., who purposed restoring him to all the honours, but he d. a. p. upon his return to England, at Chester, in 1399.

Arms—Quarterly, France and England, a bordure, arg.

NOTE.—Thomas of Woodstock, Duke of Gloucester, was summoned to parliament in 1385, as Duke of Aumale, but never afterwards by that title, nor did his above son, Humphrey, ever assume the dignity.

PLANTAGENET—EARL OF ALBEMARLE, DUKE OF CLARENCE.

Created, 9 July, 1411.

Lineage.

THOMAS PLANTAGENET, K.G., son of King HENRY IV., was created by his father, 9 July, 1411, Earl of Albemarle and Duke of Clarence. This martial and valiant prince being engaged in the wars of HENRY V., fell at the battle of Baugy in 1421, and dying without legitimate issue,* his honours became extinct.

PLANTAGENET—EARL OF KENDALL, DUKE OF BEDFORD.

By Letters Patent, dated 6 May, 1414.

Lineage.

JOHN PLANTAGENET, 3rd son of King HENRY IV., by his 1st consort, the Lady Mary de Bohun, dau. and co-heir of Humphrey, Earl of Hereford, was created by his brother, King HENRY V., by letters patent, dated 6 May, 1414, Earl of Kendall and Duke of Bedford, being designated previously, "John de Lancaster." The achievements of this eminent person form so prominent an era in the annals of the Plantagenets, and have been detailed so much at length by all our great historians, that it would be idle to attempt more than a mere sketch of his most conspicuous actions, in a work of this description. His first public employment in the reign of his father, was that of constable of England, and governor of the town and castle of Berwick-upon-Tweed. In the 3rd HENRY V., he was constituted lieutenant of the whole realm of England, the king himself being then in the wars of France, and the next year he was retained by indenture to serve in those wars, being appointed general of the king's whole army, both by sea and land; whereupon he set sail, and encountering the French near Southampton, achieved a great naval victory over them. In the year ensuing, the king making another expedition into France, the duke was again constituted lieutenant of the king—

* He had a natural son, Sir JOHN CLARENCE, called the "Bastard of Clarence," who accompanied the remains of his gallant father from Baugy to Canterbury for their interment. This Sir John Clarence had a grant of lands in Ireland from King HENRY VI., and according to Camden, he bore for arms, "Per chevron gu. and az., in chief, two lions combatant, and guardant, or, and in base, a fleur-de-lis, of the last."

dom during his absence. In the 7th HENRY V., he sailed with large reinforcements to the king in Normandy; and the next year assisted at the siege of Melon, which held out fourteen weeks and four days, before it surrendered. Upon the accession of HENRY VI., the duke was constituted chief counsellor and protector to the king, then an infant, and appointed at the same time Regent of France.

The prince, who, with his other honours, had been invested with the Garter, m. 1st, Anne, dau. of John, Duke of Burgundy, and 2ndly, Jacqueline, dau. of Peter, of Luxemburgh, Earl of St. Paul, but as he had no issue, the Earldom of Kendall, and Dukedom of Bedford became extinct, at his decease in 1435. The duke's remains were interred in the cathedral of Notre Dame, at Roan, under a plain tomb of black marble. He was deeply lamented by the English people. He had ever borne the character of one of the first captains of his age, and the greatest generals of his time. His widow Jacqueline of Luxemburgh, m. 2ndly, Sir Richard Wideville, and had, with other issue, Elizabeth Wideville, who m. 1st, Sir John Grey, of Groby, and after his decease in the second battle of St. Albans, became Queen Consort of King EDWARD IV.

Lewis XI. of France, says Banks, being counselled to deface the Duke of Bedford's tomb, is reported to have used these generous expressions:—

"What honour shall it be, either to us or you, to break this monument, and to rake out of the earth the bones of one, who, in his lifetime, neither my father, nor any of your progenitors with all their puissance, were ever once able to make fly one foot backwards; that by his strength or policy, kept them all out of the principal dominions of France, and out of this noble Duchy of Normandy. Wherefore I say, first, God save his soul and let his body rest in quiet: which when he was living, would have disquieted the proudest of us all; and as for his tomb, which I assure you is not so worthy as his acts deserve, I account it an honour to have him remain in my dominions."

PLANTAGENET—DUKE OF GLOUCESTER.

Created, 26 September, 1414.

Lineage.

HUMPHREY PLANTAGENET, 4th son of King HENRY IV., by his 1st wife, the Lady Mary de Bohun, dau. and co-heiress of Humphrey, Earl of Hereford, Essex, and Northampton, constable of England, was made a knight of the Bath at his father's coronation, along with his brothers, THOMAS, afterwards Duke of Clarence, and JOHN, Duke of Bedford. In the 1st HENRY V., he obtained with other grants, the castle and lordship of Pembroke; shortly after which, being made DUKE OF GLOUCESTER, in the parliament held at Leicester, he had summons by that title, as well as by the title of EARL OF PEMBROKE, 26 September, 1414. In the 3rd of the same reign, the prince assisted at the siege of Harfleur, and he received soon after a dangerous wound in the celebrated battle of Agincourt. During the remainder of the reign of his martial brother, the Duke of Gloucester was almost wholly engaged in the wars of France; and upon the accession of HENRY VI., he was constituted, as he had been twice before, upon temporary absences of the king, lieutenant of the realm. In this year it was, that he was involved in a serious dispute with William, Duke of Brabant, by reason of marrying that prince's wife Jaqueline, Duchess of Hainault, who had come to England, upon some disagreement with her husband. The matter led to open hostilities, and a challenge to single combat passed between the two dukes, and was accepted; but that mode of deciding the affair was prevented by the Duke of Bedford, and the contest was finally terminated by the Duke of Gloucester's bowing to the decision of the Pope, and withdrawing from the lady. He then m. his concubine, Eleanor, dau. of Reginald, Lord Cobham; and in a few years afterwards a complaint was made to parliament, against him, by one "Mistress Stokes and other bold women," because he suffered Jaqueline, his wife, to be a prisoner to the Duke of Burgundy, and for living himself with an adulteress. In the 14th HENRY VI., he obtained a grant for life, of the Earldom of Flanders, which was held of the king in capite, in right of his crown of France; and he had numerous and most valuable grants of manors and lordships in England; he had also an annuity of 2000 marks, out of the exchequer, during the king's pleasure. The duke incurring, however, the jealousy of Margaret of Anjou, fell, at length, a victim to her machinations. Attending a parliament which had been called at St. Edmundsbury, he was arrested upon the 2nd day of the session, by the Viscount Beaumont, constable of England, accompanied by the Duke of Buckingham, and some others, and put in ward; all his servants being taken from him, and thirty-two of the chief of them sent to different prisons. The following night, the prince was found dead in his bed, supposed to have been either strangled or smothered; and his body was exhibited to the lords as though he had died of apoplexy.

The duke, who received from the people the title of Good, and was called "the father of his country," had with his other honours been invested with the Garter. He was a proficient in learning; wrote some tracts; laid the foundation of the Bodleian library, and built the divinity schools in the University of Oxford. The death of the prince happened in 1446, and as he left no issue, his honours became extinct.

PLANTAGENET—DUKE OF GLOUCESTER.

Created in Parliament, 1461.

Lineage.

RICHARD PLANTAGENET, brother of King EDWARD IV., was created according to Dugdale, anno 1461, DUKE OF GLOUCESTER, but he was not summoned to parliament until 10 August, 1469. He usurped the throne, upon the murder of his nephews EDWARD V. and the Duke of York in the Tower, under the title of RICHARD III.; he had previously governed the realm as Protector. RICHARD fell at Bosworth Field, 22 August, 1485, and his rival Henry, Earl of Richmond, a him as HENRY VII. When the Duke of Gloucester assumed the reins of government as king, the dukedom merged in the crown.

Arms—France and England, on a label of three points, ermine, as many cantons, gu.

NOTE.—The body of King RICHARD was buried in the chapel of the monastery at Leicester, at the dissolution whereof, the place of his burial happened to fall into the hands of a citizen's garden; which being afterwards purchased by Mr. Robert Kerrick (sometime Mayor of Leicester), was by him covered with a handsome stone pillar, 3 feet high, with this inscription: "Here lies the body of RICHARD III., sometime king of England." This he shewed me walking in his garden, 1612 (see PECK's Collection of Curious Historical Pieces, p. 85.)—BANKS.

PLANTAGENET—DUKE OF CLARENCE, EARLS OF WARWICK AND SALISBURY.

Dukedom of Clarence, by Letters Patent, anno 1461.

Earldom of Warwick and Salisbury, by Letters Patent, dated 25 March, 1472.

Lineage.

GEORGE PLANTAGENET, K.G., son of Richard, Duke of York, and brother of King EDWARD IV., was created DUKE OF CLARENCE, in 1461, and having m. the Lady Isabel Nevil, dau. and co-heir of Richard Nevill, Earl of Salisbury, and Earl of Warwick, was advanced to those dignities by letters patent, dated 25 March, 1472. This unhappy prince was attainted of high treason, and suffered death, by being drowned, it is said, in a butt of Malmsey, in the Tower, 1477, when his honours became forfeited. King EDWARD IV. assented, of course, to the execution, but he is said subsequently to have most deeply lamented having done so, and upon all occasions when the life of a condemned person was solicited, he used openly to exclaim, "Oh, unhappy brother, for whose life no man would make suit." The Duke of Clarence left issue,

EDWARD, who, after his father's death, was entitled EARL OF WARWICK. This unhappy prince was born the child of adversity, and spent almost the whole of his melancholy life in prison. After the decease of his uncle, King EDWARD IV., his other uncle, the Duke of Gloucester, had him removed to the castle of Sheriff-Hutton, in Yorkshire, where he remained until the defeat of the Yorkists at Bosworth placed him in the hands of HENRY VII., by whose order he was transferred to the Tower of London, and there more closely confined than before, solely because he was the last male Plantagenet living. He was not allowed, however, a protracted existence, for being arraigned for high treason, and betrayed under a promise of pardon, into an acknowledgment of guilt, he was condemned, and executed upon Tower Hill, in 1499.

MARGARET. This lady upon the execution of her brother, became the last member of the royal and illustrious house of Plantagenet (see Plantagenet, Countess of Salisbury).

Arms—France and England quarterly; a label of three points, arg., each charged with a canton, gu.

NOTE—From the period that George Plantagenet, Duke of Clarence, lost his life in 1477, the Dukedom of Clarence lay dormant, until revived in the person of His Royal Highness PRINCE WILLIAM-HENRY (Guelf), 3rd son of His Majesty King GEORGE III., who was created DUKE OF CLARENCE and ST. ANDREWS, in the peerage of Great Britain, and EARL OF MUNSTER, in that of Ireland, 19 May, 1789, all which honours merged in the crown upon the accession of the duke in 1830, as KING WILLIAM THE FOURTH.

PLANTAGENET — COUNTESS OF SALISBURY.

By Letters Patent, dated 14 October, 1513.

Lineage.

MARGARET PLANTAGENET, dau. of George, Duke of Clarence, and the Lady Isabel Nevil, eldest dau., and eventually sole heir, of Richard, Earl of Warwick and Salisbury, son and heir of Alice, dau. and heir of Thomas Montacute, Earl of Salisbury, became the LAST OF THE PLANTAGENETS, upon the execution of her brother, Edward Plantagenet, called Earl of Warwick, by HENRY VII. in 1499, and petitioned parliament in the 5th King HENRY VIII., to be restored to the honours of her maternal family. Whereupon she was advanced to the dignity of COUNTESS OF SALISBURY, 14 October, 1513, and obtained at the same time letters patent, establishing her in the castles, manors, and lands of Richard, late Earl of Salisbury, her grandfather, which had fallen to the crown by the attainder of her brother, Edward, called Earl of Warwick. Notwithstanding these substantial marks of royal favour, an opportunity in several years after was seized upon to destroy the only remaining branch of the Plantagenets in this illustrious lady; and at a period of life too, when, in the natural progress of events, her course was nearly closed. At the advanced age of seventy years, 81st HENRY VIII., her ladyship was condemned to death, unheard by parliament, and beheaded on Tower Hill in two years afterwards, 27 May, 1541, when her dignity as Countess of Salisbury, fell under the attainder. Her ladyship had m. Sir Richard Pole, K.G., and had issue, HENRY, summoned to parliament as BARON MONTAGU (see Pole, Baron Montagu).

Geffery (Sir), upon whose testimony his elder brother, Lord Montagu, was convicted of, and executed for, high treason. He received sentence of death himself, but did not suffer.

Arthur, was charged, in the reign of ELIZABETH, with projecting a scheme for the release of the Queen of Scots, and had judgment of death; but by reason of his near alliance to the crown, no execution followed.

REGINALD, in holy orders, was educated at Oxford, and obtained the deanery of Exeter by the gift of King HENRY VIII. He was abroad at the period that king abolished the papal authority in England, and not attending when summoned to return, he was proclaimed a traitor and divested of his deanery. He was afterwards, anno 1536, made a cardinal, and, as CARDINAL POLE, presided (one of three presidents) at the celebrated Council of Trent. When Queen MARY ascended the throne, his eminence returned to England as legate from Pope JULIUS III., and had his attainder reversed by special act of parliament. He was made, at the same time, archbishop of Canterbury, in which high episcopal dignity he continued until his death, which occurred 17 November, 1558, being the very day upon which Queen MARY herself died; the tidings of that event are said to have broken the cardinal's heart, being at the time much weakened by a quartan ague. Whereupon his remains were interred in the cathedral at Canterbury. Few churchmen have borne so unblemished a reputation as this eminent prelate, and few have carried themselves with so much moderation and meekness. Ursula, m. to Henry, Lord Stafford.

Among the co-representatives of Margaret, Countess of Salisbury, may be mentioned the Marquess of Hastings; William Lowndes, Esq., of Chesham; William Selby Lowndes, Esq., of Whaddon.

PLANTAGENET—VISCOUNT L'ISLE.

By Letters Patent, dated 26 April, 1533.

Lineage.

ARTHUR PLANTAGENET (natural son of King EDWARD IV., by the Lady Elizabeth Lucy), having m. Elizabeth, dau. of Edward Grey, 1st Viscount L'Isle of that family; sole heir of her niece, Elizabeth, Countess of Devon, and widow of Edmund Dudley (see Grey, Viscounts L'Isle), was created Viscount L'Isle, with limitation to his heirs male, by the said Elizabeth, by letters patent, dated 26 April, 1533, upon the surrender of that dignity by Charles Brandon,* afterwards Duke of Suffolk. His lordship had issue by the heiress of Grey,

Bridget, m. to Sir William Carden, Knt.

Francis, m. 1st, to John Bassett, Esq., of Umberleigh, co. Devon, and 2ndly, to Thomas Monk, of Potheridge, in the same shire, from whom the celebrated General Monk descended.

Elizabeth, m. to Sir Francis Jobson, Knt., lieutenant of the Tower, and master of the jewel office to Queen ELIZABETH.

In the 24th HENRY VIII., Lord L'Isle was constituted lieutenant of Calais, and some time after, incurring suspicion of being privy to a plot to deliver up the garrison to the French, he was recalled and committed to the Tower of London; but his innocence appearing manifest upon investigation, the king not only gave immediate orders for his release, but sent him a diamond ring, and a most gracious message; which made such an impression upon the sensitive nobleman, that he died the night following, 3 March, 1541, of excessive joy. His lordship was a knight of the most noble order of the Garter. At his decease, the Viscounty of L'Isle became extinct.

Arms—The coat of his lordship's father, King EDWARD IV., quartered with Ulster and Mortimer under a baton.

PLAYZ—BARON PLAYZ.

By Writ of Summons, dated 1297.

Lineage.

In the 17th King JOHN, HUGH DE PLAYZ held seven knights' fees in co. Sussex, and was one of the barons who took up arms against that prince. He m. 1st, Beatrix de Say, widow of Hugh de Nevill, but was divorced from that lady, and m. 2ndly, Philippa, one of the daus. and co-heirs of Richard de Montfichet, by whom he had his successor,

RICHARD DE PLAYZ, who, in the 53rd HENRY III., as one of the nephews and heirs of Richard de Montfichet, paid his relief for a third part of the said Richard's lands. To this Richard de Playz, s. his son,

RALPH DE PLAYZ, who d. s. p., and was s. by his brother,

RICHARD DE PLAYZ, to whom succeeded,

GILES DE PLAYZ. This feudal lord had summons to attend the king on the affairs of the realm, in the 22nd EDWARD I. He had afterwards a military summons to proceed to Gascony, and ultimately summons to parliament as a Baron, in the 25th of the same reign, but not afterwards. He d. in 1303, seized of the manor of Fulmere, co. Cambridge, and was s. by his son,

* Elizabeth Grey, only dau. and heiress of John, last Viscount L'Isle, of the Grey family, was contracted to Charles Brandon, who was created in consequence Viscount L'Isle, but the lady refusing, when she had attained maturity, to fulfil the engagement, the patent was cancelled. She afterwards m. Henry Courtenay, Earl of Devon.

RICHARD DE PLAYS, 2nd baron, summoned to parliament, from 20 November, 1317, to 14 March, 1322. This nobleman was s. at his decease in 1327, by his son,

RICHARD DE PLAYS, 3rd baron, but never summoned to parliament. This nobleman was found in the 8th EDWARD III., heir to John de Lancaster, of co. Essex; he d. in 1359-60, and was s. by his son,

SIR JOHN DE PLAITE, 4th baron, but never summoned to parliament, who d. in the 33rd EDWARD III., leaving an only dau. and heiress,

MARGARET, who m. Sir John Howard (his 1st wife), and was mother of

SIR JOHN HOWARD, whose dau. and heir,

ELIZABETH HOWARD, m. John de Vere, 12th Earl of Oxford, and had with an elder son, John, 13th Earl of Oxford, a younger son,

SIR GEORGE VERE, who d. in 1503, leaving a son and heir, JOHN, 14th Earl of Oxford, who d. s. p. in 1526, when the Barony of Plaits fell into abeyance between his three sisters and co-heirs, viz.,

Dorothy, m. to John Nevil, Lord Latimer: for the co-heirs of this marriage (the senior of whom is the Duke of Athole), see p. 393.

Elizabeth, m. to Sir Anthony Wingfield, K.G., and had issue: the co-heirs of this marriage are ADRIEN, MARQUIS DE COUBONNELL, in France, and Vice-Admiral SIR WILLIAM-HENRY DILLON.

Urrula, m. 1st, to George Windsor, and 2ndly, to Sir Edward Knightley, but d. s. p. 1580.

The Barony of Plays, or Plaits, is now in ABYANCE between the co-heirs of the sisters of the 14th Earl of Oxford.

Arms—Per pale, or and gu., a lion passant, arg.

PLESSETS, OR PLESSETIS—EARL OF WARWICK, BARON PLESSETS.

Earldom, jure uxoris, temp. HENRY III.

Barony, by Writ of Summons, dated 6 February, 1299.

Lineage.

The first of this family mentioned is

JOHN DE PLESSETS, a domestic servant in the court of King HENRY III., and a Norman by birth; who having served in the Welsh wars, was constituted governor of the castle of Devizes, in Wiltshire, and warden of the forest of Chippenham, in the same shire. In the 24th King HENRY's reign he was sheriff of Oxfordshire, and in two years afterwards he had a grant of the wardship and marriage of John Bisset; and likewise of the heirs of Nicholas Malesmaines. Certain it is that he enjoyed in a high degree the favour of his royal master, for upon the death of John Mareschal, who had m. Margery, the sister and heir of Thomas de Newburgh, Earl of Warwick, the king sent his mandate to the archbishop of York, the bishop of Carlisle, and William de Cantilupe, requiring them that they should earnestly persuade this opulent widow to take John de Plessets for her 2nd husband. Nay, so much did he desire the union, that upon Christmas-day in the same year, being then at Bordeaux, he granted to John Plessets, by patent, the marriage of this Margery, in case he could procure her consent; and if not, that then he should have the fine, which the lady would incur by marrying without the king's license. This course of the king's, however, prevailed, and his favourite obtained the hand of Margery de Newburgh, Countess of Warwick, and widow of John Mareschal, styled Earl of Warwick. De Plessets was subsequently constituted constable of the Tower of London, but not by the title of Earl of Warwick, nor did he assume that dignity for some time afterwards. He did, however, eventually assume it, for we find him so styled (31st HENRY III.) by the king in a license granted him, to cut down oak timber in the forest of Dene; ever after which he is called Earl of Warwick. His lordship was appointed in four years afterwards one of the justices itinerant to sit at the Tower, for hearing and determining such pleas as concerned the city of London; and at the breaking out of the contest between HENRY and the barons, he was constituted sheriff of the cos. Warwick and Leicester: but he lived not to see the issue of those troubles. His lordship d. in 1263; not having had issue by the Countess of Warwick, the Earldom of Warwick passed at her ladyship's decease to the heir-at-law (see Newburgh, Earls of Warwick). But he left, by a former wife, Christian, dau. and heir of Hugh de Sandford, a son and heir,

HUGH DE PLESSETS, who doing his homage, in the April ensuing, had livery of the manors of Oxenardton, Kodelinton, and Stutesdon, co. Oxford, which were of his mother's inheritance; the two former being holden of the king by barony, for which manors in the 48th HENRY III., he paid £100 for his relief. This feudal lord m. Isabel, dau. of John de Riparius, and dying in 1291, was s. by his son,

HUGH DE PLESSETS, who being engaged in the Scottish wars was summoned to parliament as a Baron, 6 February, 1299, but Dugdale gives no further account of the family.

Arms—Arg., six annulets, gu., a chief chequy, or and sa.

NOTE.—Hutchins, in his History of Dorsetshire, says, that ROBERT DE PLECY, or PLESSETS, son of Sir Hugh, brother, or a near kinsman of John de Plessets, Earl of Warwick, in the 19th EDWARD I., held Upwinborne Placy in that co., which passed through several generations to

JOAN DE PLECY, and heiress, who m. Sir John Hamelyn, whose dau. and eventual heiress,

EODIA HAMELYN, m. for her 2nd husband, Robert Ashley, and conveyed to him the manor of Upwinborne-Plecy. The descendant of this marriage,

SIR ANTHONY ASHLEY, Knt., of Winborne, St. Giles, left an only dau. and heiress, ANNE ASHLEY, who m. Sir John Cooper, Bart., from which marriage the extant Earls of Shaftesbury descend, and through which they inherit the manor of Upwinborne-Plecy.

PLUGENET—BARONS PLUGENET.

By Writ of Summons, dated 24 June, 1295.

Lineage.

In the beginning of HENRY II.'s reign, HUGH DE PLUGENET had lands given him in the co. Oxford, and in some years afterwards was owner of Lamburne, in Berkshire. He m. Sibell, dau. and co-heir of Josceus de Dinant, and had two sons, Alan and Josceus. To one of whom succeeded,

SIR ALAN DE PLUGENET, Lord of Kliepe, who, after the battle of Evesham, in the 49th HENRY III., was made governor of Dunster Castle, co. Somerset, and in three years subsequently, obtained a grant from his maternal uncle, Robert Walron, of certain manors in the cos. Wilts, Dorset, and Somerset, with the castle of Kilpeck, &c., co. Hereford, and at the death of the said Robert without issue, in the 1st EDWARD I., had livery of the same. This Sir Alan de Plugenet, distinguishing himself in the Welsh wars, and being esteemed a person of wisdom, and of military knowledge, was summoned to parliament as a Baron from 24 June, 1295, to 26 January, 1297. He d. in 1299, and was s. by his son,

SIR ALAN DE PLUGENET, 2nd baron, K.B., summoned to parliament, 19 December, 1311. This nobleman was constantly engaged in the wars of Scotland. He d. about 1325, leaving his sister, JOAN DE BONUM, heir to the Barony of Plugenet, at whose decease s. p. in 1327, that dignity became extinct.

Arms—Erm., a bend engrailed, gu.

POINTZ—BARONS POINTZ.

By Writ of Summons, dated 24 June, 1295.

Lineage.

This family, and that of CLIFFORD, is said to have sprung from a common ancestor, PONZ, whose grandson, WALTER, derived his surname from the place of his abode, Clifford Castle, co. Hereford, and another of whose descendants was father of

OSBERT FITZ-PONZ, from whom sprang

HUGH POINTZ, who with his father, Nicholas Pointz, taking part with the revolted barons, had his lands, in the 17th JOHN, in the cos. of Somerset, Dorset, and Gloucester, seized by the crown, and given to Godfrey de Crancumbe. He was afterwards imprisoned in the castle of Bristol, but not strictly, as his friends had permission to visit him, and to supply him with necessaries. This Hugh m. Helewise, dau. of William, and sister and co-heir of William Mallet, of Carry-Malet, co. Somerset, and was s. by his son, NICHOLAS POINTZ, who, residing in Gloucestershire, had military summons from the crown to march against the Welsh, in the 41st and 42nd HENRY III., but afterwards joined the other barons who took up arms against the king. He d. in the 1st EDWARD I., seized of the manor of Carry-Malet, co. Somerset, and several other estates. He m. Elizabeth, dau. of William de la Zouch, and was s. by his son,

SIR HUGH POINTZ, who having been engaged in the wars of Wales, Gascony and Scotland, was summoned to parliament as a Baron by King EDWARD I., from 24 June, 1296, to 1 August, 1307. His lordship m. Margaret, dau. of Sir William Paveley, and d. in 1307, having had regular summonses to that year, and was s. by his son, NICHOLAS POINTZ, 2nd baron, summoned to parliament from 4 March, 1309, to 16 June, 1311. This nobleman was in the Scottish wars, before and after his father's decease. He m. 1st, Elizabeth, dau. of Eudo de Zouche, by Milicent, dau. of William Cantilupe, Lord of Bergavenny, and co-heir of her brother George; by whom he had the manor of Batecumba, in free marriage. He is stated to have m. 2ndly, Matilda, dau. and heir of Sir John Acton, of Iron Acton, co. Gloucester, by whom he left a son,

Sir John Pointz, of Iron Acton, who m. Elizabeth, dau. and co-heir of Sir Philip Clanvowe, and was ancestor of the families of POINTZ of Iron Acton, co. Gloucester, and of POINTZ of Midgham, co. Berks, whose last male heir was WILLIAM STEPHEN POINTZ, Esq., of Cowdray Park, in Sussex, and of Midgham, Berks, who m. Hon. Elizabeth-Mary Browne, sister and heir of Samuel, 6th Viscount Montagu, and d. leaving three daus. his co-heirs.

He d. in 1312, and was s. by his son,

HUGH POINTZ, 3rd baron, K.B., summoned to parliament, from 20 November, 1317, to 24 February, 1343. This nobleman was s. by his son,

SIR NICHOLAS POINTZ, 4th baron, but never summoned to parliament. This nobleman m. Alianore, dau. of Sir John Erleigh, Knt., and had two daus., viz.,

AVICIA, m. to John Barry, and had a son John, who d. s. p.
MARGARET, m. to John de Newburgh, and had issue.

At his lordship's death the Barony of Pointz, fell into ABERYANCE between his daus.

POLE — BARONS DE LA POLE, EARLS OF SUFFOLK, MARQUESS OF SUFFOLK, EARL OF PEMBROKE, DUKES OF SUFFOLK.

Barony, by Writ of Summons, dated 20 January, 1366.

Earldom of Suffolk, by Letters Patent, dated 6 August, 1385.

Earldom of Pembroke, 21 February, 1443.

Marquess, 14 September, 1444.

Dukedom, 2 June, 1448.

Lineage.

The founder of this family, which eventually attained such an exalted station, was

WILLIAM DE LA POLE, an opulent merchant at Kingston-upon-Hull, who left two sons,

WILLIAM, of whom presently.

Richard, to whom King EDWARD III., in the 11th year of his reign, gave, "for his extraordinary merits," £1,000 sterling, out of the exchequer. This Richard left a son and heir, WILLIAM, who m. Margaret, sister and heiress of John Peverel, of Castle Ashby, co. Northumberland, and had a son and heir,

JOHN, who left, by Joane, his wife, sister and heiress of John, Lord Cobham, an only dau. and heiress,

JOANE, who m. Reginald Braybrooke, and had a dau. and heiress,

JOANE BRAYBROKE, m. to Thomas Broke, who became in her right, Lord Cobham.

The elder son,

WILLIAM DE LA POLE, was, like his father, a merchant, at Kingston-upon-Hull, and mayor of that borough. In the 10th King EDWARD III., this William contracted to furnish the army in Scotland, with wine, salt, and other provisions, but losing part of the cargo, in the transmission to Berwick-upon-Tweed, he had an allowance for the same in passing his accounts. In three years afterwards, being a person of great opulence, he was enabled to advance the sum of £1,000, in gold, to the king, who then lay at Antwerp: for which important service,

EDWARD being much in want at the time of supplies, he was constituted 2nd baron of the exchequer, and advanced to the degree of banneret, with a grant out of the customs at Hull, for the better support of that rank. He was afterwards known as Sir William de la Pole, senior. He m. Catherine, dau. of Sir Walter Norwich, and dying in the 40th EDWARD III., possessed of extensive estates in the co. of York, had issue,

The eldest son,

MICHAEL DE LA POLE, had, in the lifetime of his father, a grant in reversion, of £70 a-year, to himself and his heirs from EDWARD III., in consideration of that opulent person's services, whom the king denominated his "Beloved Merchant;" which annuity, William, his father, and Richard, his uncle, had previously enjoyed. This Michael de la Pole, despite of Walsingham's observation, "That as a merchant himself and the son of a merchant, he was better versed in merchandize, than skilled in martial matters;" was an eminent soldier, and distinguished himself in the French wars, at the close of EDWARD III.'s reign, when he served immediately under the Black Prince. In the 1st year of RICHARD II., he accompanied John, Duke of Lancaster, then called King of Castile, in his voyage to sea; and the same year had the chief command of all the king's fleet to the northward; in which his own retinue were 140 men-at-arms, 140 archers, one banneret, eight knights and 130 esquires. In the next year he was employed upon a mission to the court of Rome; and in four years after, constituted chancellor and keeper of the great seal—having had summons to parliament as a Baron since the 39th King EDWARD III. In the 8th RICHARD II., his lordship procured license to castellate his manor houses at Wyngfield, Skernefield, and Huntingfield, co. Suffolk, and to impark all his woods and lands in the vicinity. And in the 9th of the same monarch, being still chancellor he was created by letters patent, dated 6 August, 1385, EARL OF SUFFOLK, with a grant of 1,000 marks per annum, to be received out of the king's exchequer. In the parliament held at this period, a dispute is recorded as having taken place between his lordship and Thomas Arundel, bishop of Ely, in consequence of the king's having restored, at the earnest solicitation of that prelate, the temporalities to the bishop of Norwich. The chancellor opposing the Restoration, thus interrogated the bishop, when he moved that measure:—"What is this, my lord, that you desire? Is it a small matter to part with those temporalities which yield the king more than a thousand pounds per annum? The king hath no more need of such advisers to his loss." To which the bishop answered, "What is that you say, Michael? I desire nothing of the king which is his own; but that which belongs to another, and which he unjustly detains, by thy wicked council, or such as thou art, which will never be for his advantage; (I think) if thou beest so much concerned for the king's profit, why hast thou covetously taken from him a thousand marks per annum, since thou wast made an earl?"

After this, in the same year, we find the earl, notwithstanding his being lord chancellor, retained to serve the king, being a banneret, in his Scottish wars for forty days, and obtaining a grant in consequence, to himself and his heirs male, of £500 per annum, lands, part of the possessions of William de Ufford, late Earl of Suffolk, deceased, viz., the castle, town, manor, and honour of Eye. In this year, too, he marched troops from all quarters to London and its vicinity, in order to resist a menaced invasion of the French. But he was soon afterwards impeached by the commons for divers misdemeanours and frauds, particularly for purchasing lands, while chancellor, "in deception of the king," and being found guilty was sentenced to death and forfeiture. Upon the dissolution of parliament, however, he seems, through the protection of the king, to have set his foes for the moment at defiance, and to have relinquished the chancellorship only. But subsequently, the storm again gathering, he fled the kingdom with Robert de Vere, Duke of Ireland, and repairing to Calais, approached the castle, of which his brother, Edmund de la Pole, was captain, in the disguise of a Flemish poulterer, having shaved his head and beard; but it is said that Edmund refused him admission without the previous permission of William de Beauchamp, the governor. "Brother," said the captain of the castle, "you must know that I dare not be false to the king of England for the sake of any kindred whatsoever; nor admit you in without the privy of William de Beauchamp, governor of this town." Whether this be true or false, certain it is that the earl never afterwards came back to England, but d. at Paris, an outlaw, in 1388, his dignities having previously fallen under the outlawry. His lordship, who, amongst his other honours, had the Garter, was, like all the great nobles of the period, a benefactor to the church, having founded a Carthusian monastery, without the north-gate, at Kingston-upon-Hull, and endowed it with lands of great value. He m. Katherine, dau. and heiress of Sir John Wingfield, Knt., and had issue,

SIR MICHAEL DE LA POLE, b. 1368, in the 21st RICHARD II., obtained the annulment of the judgment against his father; and upon the accession of King HENRY IV. was fully restored to the castle, manor, and honour of Eye, with the other lands of the late lord, as also to the EARLDOM OF SUFFOLK, with a reversionary proviso, that those lands and honours should, in default of his male issue, devolve upon the male heir of his deceased father. This nobleman, who spent his time chiefly in the French wars, d. 14 September, 1415, at the siege of Harfleur. His lordship m. Lady Catherine de Stafford, dau. of Hugh, 2nd Earl of Stafford, and left (with three daus., Katherine, abbess of Barking, Elizabeth, m. to John de Foix, Earl of Kendal, and Isabel, m. to Thomas, Lord Morley) four sons, MICHAEL, WILLIAM, Thomas, and John (Sir). The eldest

MICHAEL DE LA POLE, s. as 3rd Earl of Suffolk, but this gallant nobleman lost his life within a month of his accession to the title, at the battle of Agincourt, 25 October, 1415. He m. Lady Elizabeth Mowbray, dau. of Thomas, Earl Marshal (widow of Nicholas, Lord Audley, and John, Lord Beaumont), and had three daus., who all d. s. p. At the decease of his lordship the Barony of De la Pole and the Earldom of Suffolk devolved on his brother,

WILLIAM DE LA POLE, 4th Earl of Suffolk, who, in the 6th King HENRY V., making proof of his age, had livery of his inheritance, his homage being respited. This nobleman was actively engaged in the glorious wars of that monarch, and, for his eminent services, was made a knight of the Garter. At the death of King HENRY, his lordship was left in France with the Earl of Salisbury, to defend the castles and towns which had fallen to the English arms, and in the 1st year of King HENRY VI., his two nieces, Elizabeth and Isabel, dying in minority without issue, and the other, Katherine, having taken the veil, his lordship inherited the entire property of his deceased brother, Earl Michael. About this period, the Earl, in conjunction with the Earl of Salisbury, achieved a great victory over the French at Verneuil, and continued for several years afterwards to sustain the British banner upon the same soil. In the 6th HENRY VI. his lordship, with his companion in arms, Lord Salisbury, invested Orleans, and the latter nobleman being slain, the Earl of Suffolk was appointed captain of the siege, by the celebrated general, John Plantagenet, Duke of Bedford. In this affair he appears, however, to have been unfortunate, but he afterwards retrieved his reputation at Aumerle, which he carried with its fortress, after no less than twenty-four assaults. In the 9th of the same reign he assisted at the solemn coronation of King HENRY at Paris. In four years afterwards his lordship was deputed ambassador to Arras to treat of peace with the French, having license to take with him gold, silver, plate, and jewels, to the value of £2,000; and the next year was joined, in commission with the Duke of York, to proceed in the treaty. From this period the earl continued actively engaged as a military commander, or diplomatist, in the service of the crown, for which he was most amply compensated, by numerous and valuable grants (amongst which was the reversion of the Earldom of Pembroke, should Humphrey Plantagenet, Duke of Gloucester and Earl of Pembroke, the king's uncle, die without issue), until the 23rd year of HENRY's reign, when he was created MARQUESS OF SUFFOLK (14 September, 1444), by cincture with a sword, and putting a coronet of gold upon his head. This dignity was accompanied by a grant of £35 yearly out of the issues of the cos. of Norfolk and Suffolk. Being at this period lord steward of the household, the marquis was sent into Sicily, to perform the solemnity of marriage with Margaret of Anjou, dau. of Regnier, titular King of Sicily, and Duke of Anjou, as proxy for King HENRY VI., and to conduct the Princess into England. In the next year he was employed in negotiating peace with France, and he was soon after appointed lord chamberlain, and then lord high admiral of England. On the death of the Duke of Gloucester, in 1446, his lordship succeeded to the Earldom of Pembroke, and he was created DUKE OF SUFFOLK, 2 June, 1448. Which latter dignity is said to have been conferred upon him for advising the murder of the Duke of Gloucester; but be that as it may, his grace's prosperity endured not many years longer. For affairs becoming disastrous both at home and abroad, the popular voice became loud against him. He was charged with the loss of Anjou and Normandy, of having caused the murder of the good Duke of Gloucester, of rapacity, and of the numerous other crimes which are generally attributed to an unsuccessful minister, in a season of calamity, by a disappointed people. Parliament soon after assembling, he was regularly impeached by the Commons, of high crimes and misdemeanors, and committed prisoner to the Tower; but he was released within a month, and restored to the king's favour. This act of royal clemency exciting, however, universal clamour, the king was obliged at length to banish him the realm; with the intention of recalling him, however, so soon as the storm had abated. But the unfortunate nobleman was doomed to immediate destruction, for after embarking at Ipswich for France, he was boarded by the captain of a ship of war belonging to the Duke of Exeter, then constable of the Tower of London, called the Nicholas of the Tower, and being brought into Dover Road, was decapitated without further trial, on the side of the cock-boat. It is recorded of this gallant personage that he served in the wars of France, full twenty-four years, seventeen of which were in uninterrupted succession without once visiting his native country. He was at one time made prisoner, whilst only a knight, and paid £20,000 for his ransom. His grace was fifteen years a member of the privy council, and thirty, one of the knights of the Garter.

It is said that he first m. privately, the Countess of Hainault, and by her had a dau., who m. — Barentine, but that afterwards taking to wife, Alice, dau. and heiress of Thomas Chaucer, a grand-daughter of Geoffrey Chaucer, the poet, and widow of Sir John Philip, Knt., that daughter was proved a bastard.

All the duke's honours, including the old Barony of Delapole, which he inherited from his nieces, devolved on his eldest son,

JOHN DE LA POLE, who, having m. the Lady Elizabeth Plantagenet, sister of King EDWARD IV. and King RICHARD III., was confirmed as DUKE OF SUFFOLK, by letters patent, dated 23 March, 1463. After which, in the 11th of the same reign, he was one of the lords then assembled in parliament, who recognized the title of Prince Edward, eldest son of that king, and made oath of fidelity to him. Upon the accession of King HENRY VII. his grace was made constable of Wallingford. The duke had issue,

JOHN, who, by special charter, dated 13 March, 1467, was created EARL OF LINCOLN, and in the 2nd RICHARD III., was appointed lord lieutenant of Ireland. After this, he was declared, by his uncle, the same monarch, heir to the crown of England, in the event of the decease of his own son, Prince Edward. His lordship, in the next reign, having reared the standard of revolt, fell at the battle of Stoke, 16 June, 1487 (see De la Pole, Earl of Lincoln).

His grace, who was a knight of the Garter, d. in 1491, and was s. by his eldest surviving son,

EDMUND DE LA POLE, 2nd Duke of Suffolk. We find this nobleman, although one of the last persons of rank remaining of the house of York, and of a family previously devoted to that cause, engaged in the beginning of HENRY VII.'s reign, in that monarch's service; and so late as the 12th year, he was in arms with the Lords Essex and Mountjoy, against Lord Audley and the Cornish men, who suffered so memorable a defeat on Blackheath. But his grace being subjected to the ignominy of a public trial and condemnation (although immediately pardoned), for "killing an ordinary person in wrath," became so indignant that he immediately withdrew, without permission, to the court of his aunt, Margaret, Duchess of Burgundy (sister of the Kings EDWARD IV. and RICHARD III.), then the asylum for all the discontented spirits, who retained any feeling of attachment to the House of York, or had any cause of dissatisfaction with the existing order of things in England. He returned, however, soon after, and excusing himself to the king, assisted at the nuptials of Prince Arthur, with Katherine of Arragon. But he again departed for Flanders, accompanied by his brother, Richard, and remained in exile, until treacherously delivered up to the English monarch, by Philip, Duke of Burgundy, upon an express stipulation, however, that his life should not be endangered. On arriving in England, he was immediately committed to the Tower, where he remained a close prisoner until the 5th HENRY VIII., when that monarch caused the unfortunate duke, solely from being a Yorkist, to be decapitated on Tower Hill, 30 April, 1513. His grace m. Margaret, dau. of Richard, Lord Scrope, and left an only dau.,

Anne, who became a nun, in the convent of Minoresses, without Aldgate, in the suburbs of the city of London.

Notwithstanding the attainder of this duke, and the consequent forfeiture of his honours, the title, after his decease, was assumed by his brother,

RICHARD DE LA POLE, as 3rd Duke of Suffolk, then living an exile in France. This gallant person commanded 6,000 French at the siege of Therouenne, when assaulted by King HENRY VIII., and he fell at the battle of Pavia, in 1524, where his heroic conduct extorted the praise even of his foes; and the Duke of Bourbon honouring his remains with splendid obsequies, assisted in person, as one of the chief mourners. Thus terminated the male line of this gallant and highly gifted race; and the Dukedom of Suffolk passed by a new creation to King HENRY VIII.'s brother-in-law, the celebrated Charles Brandon.

POLE—EARL OF LINCOLN.

By Special Charter, dated 13 March, 1467.

Lineage.

JOHN DE LA POLE, eldest son of John de la Pole, Duke of Suffolk, by the Lady Elizabeth Plantagenet, sister of Kings EDWARD IV. and RICHARD III., was created, in the 7th year of the former monarch, his father being then living, EARL OF LINCOLN. Upon the accession of his uncle, RICHARD, his lordship obtained several important grants of land from the crown, and was soon afterwards appointed lord-lieutenant of Ireland. Firmly attached to the house of York, the earl could ill brook the triumph of King HENRY VII., and accordingly, upon the accession of that prince, removed to the court of his aunt, Margaret, Duchess of Burgundy, where he entered zealously into the affair of Lambert Simnel; in promotion of whose pretensions to the crown his lordship returned at the head of four thousand German soldiers, under the immediate command of Martin Swart, and having first landed in Ireland, and proclaimed the Pretender there, made a descent upon Lancashire, whence marching towards Newark-upon-Trent, co. Nottingham, he encountered the royal army at Stoke, 16 June, 1487, where he sustained a signal defeat, and fell himself in the conflict. His lordship d. s. p., when his honours became EX-TINCT.

POLE—BARON MONTAGUE.

By Writ of Summons, dated 5 January, 1553.

Lineage.

The first of this family of whom anything memorable occurs is

SIR RICHARD POLE, Knt. (son of Sir Jeffrey Pole, Knt., of Buckinghamshire, by Edith, dau. of Sir Oliver St. John, and aunt of HENRY VII.), who, being a valiant and expert commander, was first retained to serve King HENRY VII. in the wars of Scotland, and being a person highly accomplished, was made chief gentleman of the bed-chamber to Prince Arthur, and a knight of the Garter. He m. the LADY MARGARET PLANTAGENET (afterwards COUNTESS OF SALISBURY—see Plantagenet, Countess of Salisbury), and had, with junior issue,* a son and heir,

HENRY POLE, who, in the 5th HENRY VIII., had special livery of the lands of his inheritance, and in eight years afterwards was restored to the king's favour by the title of LORD MONTACUTE. But as to any creation, by patent or otherwise, nothing appears until the 24th of the same reign, when his lordship had summons to parliament as "Henrico Pole de Montacute." He attended King HENRY in the celebrated interview with FRANCIS, King of France, and was made a knight of the Bath at the coronation of Anne Boleyn. But in a few years afterwards being charged, along with the Marquess of Exeter, by his own brother, Sir Jeffrey Pole, with a design to elevate his youngest brother, Reginald, dean of Exeter, to the throne, he was convicted of high treason before the Lord Audley (lord chancellor), acting as high steward of England, at Westminster, and was beheaded on Tower Hill, 9 January, 1539, when the Barony of Montagu became FORFEITED. His lordship left by his wife, Jane, dau. of George Nevill, Lord Abergavenny, two daus., his co-heirs, namely,

Katherine, m. to Francis, 2nd Earl of Huntingdon, K.G., now represented by the MARQUESS OF HASTINGS, one of the co-heirs of the Barony of Montacute.

Winifred, m. 1st, to Sir Thomas Hastings (a younger brother of the Earl of Huntingdon), who d. s. p.; and 2ndly, to Sir Thomas Barrington, of Barrington Hall, in Essex, of which latter marriage, WILLIAM LOWNDES, Esq., of Chesham, Bucks, and WILLIAM SELBY LOWNDES, Esq., of Whaddon, in the same co., are the representatives, being as such co-heirs of the BARONY OF MONTACUTE.

In the 1st year of PHILIP and MARY, these ladies being restored in blood and honour, the Barony of Montagu was then placed in ABREYANCE, as it so continues to the present period.

POWER—EARL OF TYRONE.

By Letters Patent, dated 9 October, 1673.

Lineage.

SIR ROGER DE LA POER, Knt., who accompanied Strongbow into Ireland, obtained for his services there very considerable territorial grants. Of Sir Roger, Cambrensis writes, "It might be said without offence, that there was not a man who did more valiant acts than Roger le Poer, who, although he were young and beardless, yet he shewed himself a lusty, valiant, and courageous gentleman, and who grew into such good credit, that he had the government of the country about Leighlin, as also in Ossory, where he was traitorously killed; on whose slaughter a conspiracy was formed among the Irish to destroy the English, and many castles were destroyed." Sir Roger m. a niece of Sir Amory St. Laurence (ancestor of the noble house of Howth), and left a son,

JOHN LE POER, from whom descended

NICHOLAS LE POER, who had summons to parliament as BARON LE POER, 23 November, 1375, and thrice afterwards, in 1378, 1381, and 1383, being the most ancient writs to be found in the Rolls' office of Ireland. This nobleman was s. by his son,

Lineage.

In the time of King HENRY II.,

ADAM DE POYNINGS, of Poynings, co. Sussex, was a benefactor to the monks of Lewes. This Adam left three sons, Adam, William, and John; from one of whom, it is presumed, descended

MICHAEL DE POYNINGS, who, in the 17th JOHN, adhered to the rebellious barons, and was s. by

THOMAS DE POYNINGS, who held ten knights' fees in Poynings, and had issue, two sons, Michael and Lucas. The elder of whom,

MICHAEL DE POYNINGS, received summons 8 June, 1294 (22nd EDWARD I.) to attend the king, with other great men of the time, in order to advise touching the most important affairs of the realm; and he had military summons immediately after, to proceed in the expedition against France, which had been the result of that council. He was likewise actively engaged in the Scottish wars both in the reign of EDWARD I. and in that of EDWARD II. He was s. by his son,

THOMAS DE POYNINGS, who was summoned to parliament as a Baron, 23 April, 1337. His lordship m. Agnes, one of the co-heirs of John, son of Bartholomew de Cryol, and was slain in the great sea-fight with the French at Sluse, in 1339. He was s. by his elder son,

MICHAEL DE POYNINGS, 2nd baron, summoned to parliament from 25 February, 1342, to 24 February, 1368. Upon the decease of the last lord, the king, by his letters patent, dated the 14th of the same month, acknowledging his great valour and eminent merits, and reciting that he was slain in his service, received the homage of the present baron though then under age; and in recompense of those his father's sufferings, not only granted him livery of his lands, but the full benefit of his marriage, taking security for the payment of his relief. This Michael, Lord Poyning, participated in the glories of the reign of EDWARD III., and was amongst the heroes of Cressy. His lordship m. Joane, dau. of Sir Richard Rokeseley, and widow of Sir John de Molyna, Knt., and d. in 1369; he was s. by his son,

THOMAS DE POYNINGS, 3rd baron, who does not appear to have been summoned to parliament. This nobleman m. Blanche de Mowbray (who m. 2ndly, Sir John de Worthe, Knt.), but dying s. p. in 1375, was s. by his brother,

RICHARD POYNINGS, 4th baron, summoned to parliament from 7 January, 1383, to 3 September, 1385. This nobleman m. Isabel, dau. and heir of Robert Grey, of Charlton-Grey, co. Somerset, who assumed the surname of FITZ-PAYNE (see Fitz-Payne, Barons Fitz-Payne), by his wife, Elizabeth, dau. and co-heir of Sir Guy de Bryan; which Isabel inherited eventually the estates of her maternal grandfather, as well as those of her father. Lord Poyning accompanied John of Gaunt into Spain, and dying there in 1387, was s. by his son,

ROBERT DE POYNINGS, 5th baron, summoned to parliament from 25 August, 1404, to 13 January, 1415. This nobleman who was in the French wars of HENRY IV., HENRY V., and HENRY VI., fell at the siege of Orleans in 1446. His lordship m. Elizabeth or Eleanor, dau. of Reginald, Lord Grey de Ruthyn, and had two sons, viz.,

RICHARD, who m. Alianore, dau. of Sir John Berkeley, of Deverstone, Knt., and dying before his father, left an only dau. and heir, Allanore, who m. Sir Henry Percy, son and heir of Henry, 2nd Earl of Northumberland, and d. 11 November, 1474.

ROBERT, of East Hall, Faukham-Aske, and Chellesfield (for whom and his descendants, see POYNINGS, Baron Poyning, by letters patent).

Upon the decease of Robert, Lord Poyning, his grand-dau., Alianore, became heir to his estates and barony, and her husband,

SIR HENRY PERCY, was summoned to parliament as BARON POYNINGS, from 14 December, 1446, to 26 May, 1455, in which latter year his lordship succeeded to the EARLDOM OF NORTHUMBERLAND; and the BARONY OF POYNINGS, thenceforward shared the fortunes of the superior dignity. With the earldom it was forfeited in 1408—restored in 1414—forfeited in 1461—restored 1471. On the death of Henry, 6th Earl of Northumberland, s.p. in 1537, the Barony of Poyning, with the earldom, became EXTINCT, in consequence of the attainder of the earl's brother, Sir Thomas Percy. On the 30 April, 1557, Thomas Percy, son and heir of the attainted Sir Thomas Percy, was created by patent, Baron Percy, of Cockermouth and Petworth, with remainder, falling issue male, to his brother, Henry Percy, and his issue male; and he was shortly afterwards advanced to the dignity of Earl of Northumberland, with the same reversionary grant. This Henry Percy, the person in remainder, inherited the honours, and they remained vested in his descendants, until the demise of JOCELYNE, 11th Earl of Northumberland, without male issue, in 1670, when all the honours conferred by the patent to Thomas Percy, became EXTINCT.

POYNINGS—BARON ST. JOHN, OF BASING.

By Writ of Summons, dated 29 December, 1299.

Lineage.

LUCAS DE POYNINGS, younger son of Thomas 1st Lord Poyning, under the writ of EDWARD III., having m. in the 23rd EDWARD III., Isabel, widow of Henry de Burghersh, dau. of

Hugh de St. John, Lord St. John, of Basing (a barony created by writ in the 28th EDWARD I., see St. John), and sister and co-heir of Edmund, Lord St. John, had an assignation of all the lands of her inheritance, and in some years afterwards, on the death of Margaret, the said Isabel's mother, he had a further assignation of the manors of Basing and Shireborne. This Lucas was in the wars of France, and had summons to parliament in his wife's barony (it is supposed) of St. John of Basing, from 24 February, 1368, to 20 January, 1376. His lordship d. about the year 1385, and was s. by his son,

SIR THOMAS POYNINGS, Knt., who obtained license in the 2nd HENRY IV., by the title of LORD ST. JOHN, to go on a pilgrimage to Jerusalem, but was never summoned to parliament. His lordship had an only son,

HUGH, who d. r. p. in 1426, leaving

JOANE, m. to Thomas Bonville, and had a son, John.

CONSTANCE, who m. John Paulet, and was grandmother of

SIR WILLIAM PAULET, 1st Marquess of Winchester. (See BURKE's Extant Peerage.)

Alice, m. to John Orrell.

Lord St. John d. about the 7th HENRY VI., when his grandchildren above-mentioned became his heirs, and the Barony of St. John, of Basing, fell into ABEYANCE amongst them, as it still continues with their descendants.

POYNINGS—BARON POYNINGS.

By Letters Patent, dated 30 January, 1545.

Lineage.

ROBERT DE POYNINGS, 2nd son of Robert, 5th and last Lord Poyning, of the family, under the writ of EDWARD III. (see Poyning, Baron Poyning, by summons), was seized of the manors of East Hall, Faukam-Ayske, and Chellesfield, and was s. at his decease, 9th EDWARD IV., by his son,

SIR EDWARD POYNINGS, who, taking an active part in the revolution which placed HENRY VII. upon the throne, was sworn of the privy council to that monarch, and during the whole of the reign enjoyed the king's full confidence. He was one of the chief commanders sent in the 5th HENRY VII., to the assistance of the Emperor MAXIMILIAN, against the French; and he was subsequently despatched at the head of a large force, to put down the supporters of Perkyng Warbeck, in Ireland; of which realm, Sir Edward (10th EDWARD VII.), was made deputy in the absence of Prince Henry, the king's younger son, then lieutenant thereof. In ten years afterwards he was constituted constable of Dover Castle, and was in the same office at HENRY's decease. Sir Edward was the third of eighteen councillors, bequeathed by the king to his successor; a privy council, in which it is said, there was not one lawyer but a complete body of active and experienced men in their own orb. In the 1st HENRY VIII., being then a knight of the Garter, and comptroller of the king's household, he was again made constable of Dover Castle, and warden of the Cinque Ports. In the 5th of the same reign, he was with the king at the siege of Therouenne, at the head of 600 chosen men in the body of the army, and upon the surrender of that place, he was left its governor with a strong garrison. Sir Edward Poyning m. Elizabeth, dau. of Sir John Scott, but had no surviving issue. He had, however, by four concubines, three sons and four daus., viz.,

THOMAS (Sir), of whom presently.

Adrian (Sir), Governor of Portsmouth, in 1561. Sir Adrian d. in the 13th ELIZABETH, leaving three daus., viz.,

Elizabeth, m. to Andrew Rogers, Esq.

Mary, m. to Edward Moore, Esq.

Anne, m. to George Moore, Esq.

Edward, slain at Boloin, in the 38th HENRY VIII.

Mary, m. to Thomas Clinton, Lord Clinton.

Margaret, m. to Edmund Barry, of Sennington, in the co. Kent.

—, m. to Sir Thomas Wilford, Knt.

Rose, m. to — Leukenore.

Sir Edward d. 14th HENRY VIII. The eldest of the above illegitimate sons,

SIR THOMAS POYNINGS, Knt., was with Charles Brandon, Duke of Suffolk, at the siege of Bure, in the 36th HENRY VIII., and was despatched with an account of the progress of the siege to the king, who was then before Boloin, at the head of a powerful army. Sir Thomas was graciously received, and, for his gallant services, elevated to the peerage, by letters patent, dated 30 January, 1545, as BARON POYNINGS, being at the same time appointed general of the king's whole army at Boloin; after which nothing further is recorded. His lordship m. Katherine, dau. and co-heir of John, Lord Marney, and widow of George Ratcliffe, Esq., but had no issue. By this lady he acquired considerable property in the county of Dorset, two parts of which he entailed upon his brothers successively, and after them upon the children of his sisters. He d. in 1545, when the Barony of Poynings became EXTINCT.

Arms—Same as the Barons Poynings, by writ.

PRESTON—VISCOUNTS TARA.

By Letters Patent, dated 2 July, 1650.

Lineage.

The HON. THOMAS PRESTON (2nd son of Christopher, 4th Viscount Gormanston), was appointed a General in the army of the Confederate Catholics of Ireland in 1642, and was created VISCOUNT TARA, co. Meath, in the peerage of Ireland, by a patent dated at Ennis, 2 July, 1650. His son and successor.

ANTHONY PRESTON, 2nd Viscount Tara, m. Margaret, dau. of Anthony Warren, Esq., of the King's co., and was father of several daus. and a son (with whom the title EXPIRED),

THOMAS PRESTON, 3rd Viscount Tara, who was killed 6 July, 1674, by Sir Francis Blundell, Knt., of the King's Co., and his brothers, William and Winwood Blundell. These gentlemen being all, however, acquitted of murder, received his Majesty's pardon in the December of the same year (see ADDENDA).

PRESTON—LORD DINGWALL.

By Charter, dated 8 June, 1609.

Lineage.

SIR SIMON DE PRESTON, representative of the ancient family of Preston, witnessed a charter of donation to the monastery of Newbottle in 1360. He was s. by his son,

SIR SIMON DE PRESTON, who left issue,

GEORGE, (Sir), his successor, ancestor of the PRESTONS of Valleyfield. (See BURKE'S Extant Peerage and Baronetage.)
Henry (Sir). ANDREW.

The 3rd son,

ANDREW PRESTON, was father of

GEORGE PRESTON, of Whitehill, great-grand father of

SIR RICHARD PRESTON, one of King JAMES I.'s favourites and one of the gentlemen of his bedchamber, who was made a knight of the Bath at the coronation, 25 July, 1603, and created a peer of Scotland, in the dignity of BARON DINGWALL, confirmed by charter, 8 June, 1609, to himself and his heirs whatsoever. His lordship through the favour of his royal master, JAMES I., obtained the hand of Lady Elizabeth Butler, only surviving child of Thomas, 10th Earl of Ormonde and Ossory, and had an only child,

ELIZABETH.

Lord Dingwall was created Viscount Callan, and EARL OF DESMOND in the peerage of Ireland, with limitation to George, Lord Feilding, 20 November, 1622. He d. 28 October, 1628, being drowned on the passage between Dublin and Holyhead, when the Earldom of Desmond passed to George, Lord Feilding, and the Barony of Dingwall devolved on Lord Dingwall's only child,

ELIZABETH PRESTON, Baroness Dingwall; b. 25 July, 1615, who m. in 1629, James, Lord Thurles, afterwards the great Duke of Ormonde, and dying 21 July, 1684, was buried in Westminster Abbey, and s. by her grandson,

JAMES BUTLER, 2nd Duke of Ormonde, who was impeached in 1715, and attainted, when all his English honours expired; but it is doubtful if the attainder could affect the claim of the Preston family to the Barony of Dingwall, the line (Butler) of the attainted duke having failed, and the dignity reverting, as it has done, to the heir-general of the 1st Lord Dingwall.

PULTENEY—EARL OF BATH.

By Letters Patent, dated 14 July, 1742.

Lineage.

SIR WILLIAM PULTENEY, Knt., of Misterton, co. Leicester (of very ancient descent), one of the leading members of the House of Commons, temp. CHARLES II., m. Grace, dau. of Sir John Corbett, Bart., of Stoke, and had issue, 1 WILLIAM, his heir; 2 John (father, by Lucy, his wife, of DANIEL); 1 Catherine, m. to Sir Charles Heron, Bart.; and 2 Anne, m. to Charles, Duke of Cleveland. The eldest son,

WILLIAM PULTENEY, Esq., m. 1st, Mary Floyd, and 2ndly, Arabella, dau. of George, Earl of Berkeley: by the latter he left two daus., Arabella and Elizabeth, and by the former four sons, WILLIAM, Henry, Corbet, and Thomas, who all d. s. p. The eldest son,

WILLIAM PULTENEY, Esq., was the popular statesman of the reigns of the two first sovereigns of the House of Brunswick. In 1714, Mr. Pulteney was appointed Secretary of State, an office which he resigned in 1717. In 1723 he was made cofferer of the household, and sworn of the privy council; but he resigned again in 1725. In the reign of GEORGE II., he was leader of the opposition to the administration of Sir Robert Walpole, and so keenly was his eloquence felt by the court, that his name was erased in 1731 from the list of privy councillors. That proceeding having no other effect, however, than rendering Pulteney more popular, Sir Robert, at length, discovered that the only manner in which he could hope to triumph over so gifted a rival, was to cajole him into the acceptance of a peerage; and for that purpose the following letter was written to his royal master:—

"Most Sacred,

"The violence of the fit of the stone, which has tormented me for some days, is now so far abated, that although it will not permit me to have the honour to wait on your majesty, yet is kind enough to enable me so far to obey your orders, as to write my sentiments concerning that troublesome man, Mr. Pulteney; and to point out (what I conceive to be) the most effectual method to make him perfectly quiet. Your majesty well knows, how, by the dint of his eloquence, he has so captivated the mob, and attained an unbounded popularity, that the most manifest wrong, appears to be right, when adopted and urged by him. Hence it is, that he has become not only troublesome but dangerous. The inconsiderate multitude think he has not one object but the public good in view; although, if they would reflect a little, they would soon perceive, that spleen against those your majesty has honoured with your confidence, has greater weight with him than patriotism. Since, let any measure be proposed, however salutary, if he thinks it comes from me, it is sufficient for him to oppose it. Thus, Sir, you see the affairs of the most momentous concern are subject to the caprice of that popular man; and he has nothing to do, but to call it a ministerial project, and bellow out the word favourite, to half an hundred pens drawn against it, and a thousand mouths open to contradict it. Under these circumstances he bears up against the ministry (and, let me add, against your majesty itself); and every useful scheme must be either abandoned, or if it is carried in either house, the public are made to believe it is done by a corrupted majority. Since then things are thus circumstanced, it is become necessary for the public tranquillity, that he should be made quiet; and the only method to do that effectually, is to destroy his popularity, and ruin the good belief the people have in him.

"In order to do this, he must be invited to court; your majesty must condescend to speak to him in the most favourable and distinguished manner; you must make him believe that he is the only person upon whose opinion you can rely, and to whom your people look up for useful measures. As he has already several times refused to take the lead in the administration, unless it was totally modelled to his fancy, your majesty should close in with his advice, and give him leave to arrange the administration as he pleases, and put whom he chooses into office (there can be no danger in that, as you can dismiss him when you think fit); and when he has got thus far (to which his extreme self-love, and the high opinion he entertains of his own importance, will easily conduce), it will be necessary that your majesty should seem to have a great regard for his health; signifying to him, that your affairs will be ruined if he should die; and that you want to have him constantly near you, to have his sage advice; and that, therefore, as he is much disordered in body, and something infirm, it will be necessary for his preservation, for him to quit the House of Commons, where malevolent tempers will be continually fretting him; and where indeed, his presence will be needless, as no step will be taken but according to his advice; and that he will let you give him a distinguished mark of your approbation, by creating him a peer. This he may be brought to; for if I know anything of mankind, he has a love of honour and money; and notwithstanding his great haughtiness and seeming contempt for honour, he may be won, if it be done with dexterity. For as the poet Fenton says,

'Flattery is an oil that softens the thoughtless fool.'

"If your majesty can once bring him to accept of a coronet, all will be over with him; the changing multitude will cease to have any confidence in him; and when you see that, your majesty may turn your back to him, dismiss him from his post, turn out his meddling partizans, and restore things to quiet; for then if he complains, it will be of no avail; the bee will have lost his sting, and become an idle drone, whose buzzing nobody heeds.

"Your majesty will pardon me for the freedom with which I have given my sentiments and advice; which I should not have done, had not your majesty commanded it, and had I not been certain that your peace is much disturbed by the contrivance of that turbulent man. I shall only add, that I will dispose several whom I know to wish him well, to solicit for his establishment in power, that you may seem to yield to their entreaties, and the scheme be less liable to be discovered.

"I hope to have the honour to attend your majesty in a few days; which I will do privately, that my public presence may give him no umbrage.

(Signed) "ROBERT WALPOLE.

"24th January, 1741."

In this scheme the king acquiesced, and William Pulteney having been restored to the privy council, was created by letters patent, dated 14 July, 1742, Baron of Heydon, co. York, Viscount Pulteney, of Wrington, in Somersetshire, and EARL OF BATH. His lordship m. Anna-Maria, dau. of John Gumley, Esq., of Isleworth, co. Middlesex, by whom he had a son, WILLIAM, Viscount Pulteney, who d. unm., v. p., anno 1763; he had likewise a dau., who d. in 1741, at the age of fourteen. The earl d. in 1764, when failing male issue, all his honours became EXTINCT. His lordship's great estates devolved on his brother, General Henry Pulteney, who d. in 1765, and was s. in the Pulteney property by his cousin Frances, dau. of Daniel Pulteney, Esq., son of John Pulteney, Esq., uncle of the Earl of Bath. This lady, Frances Pulteney, was wife of William Johnstone, Esq., who took the name of Pulteney, and s. his brother as 5th baronet of Westerhall: their only dau. and co-heiress, Henrietta-Laura Johnstone, who assumed the name of Pulteney, was created Baroness of Bath with limitation to the barony to her male issue, 26 July, 1792, and Countess of Bath, with similar limitation 26 October, 1803. Her ladyship m. Sir James Murray, Bart., and d. s. p. 14 August, 1808, when her titles also became EXTINCT.

PULTENEY—BARONESS BATH, COUNTESS OF BATH.

Barony, by Letters Patent, dated 23 July, 1792.

Earldom, by Letters Patent, dated 26 October, 1803.

Lineage.

SIR WILLIAM JOHNSTONE, Bart., of Westerhall, co. Dumfries, m. Frances, dau. and heir of Daniel Pulteney, Esq., first cousin of William, Earl of Bath (which lady was eventually heiress to his lordship's estates), and had an only dau.,

HENRIETTA-LAURA JOHNSTONE, who, succeeding to the great Pulteney fortune, assumed the surname and arms of PULTENEY, and was elevated to the peerage, 23 July, 1792, as BARONESS BATH, with limitation to the dignity of Baron Bath to her issue male. Her ladyship was created COUNTESS OF BATH, with a similar reversion of the Earldom of Bath, by letters patent, dated 26 October, 1803. She m. General Sir James Murray, Bart., who adopted likewise the name of PULTENEY, but had no issue. The Countess d. in 1808, when the Barony and Earldom of Bath both became EXTINCT.

QUEROUAILLE — DUCHESS OF PORTSMOUTH.

By Letters Patent, dated 19 August, 1673.

Lineage.

In the retinue of Henrietta, Duchess of Orleans, sister of King CHARLES II., came to the court of St. James's, a young French lady.

LOUISE RENEE DE PERRENCOURT DE QUEROUAILLE, who, captivating the English monarch CHARLES II., was mother, by his Majesty, of a son, CHARLES LENNOX, DUKE OF RICHMOND, founder of the present noble house of Richmond, and was created FOR LIFE, by letters patent, dated 19 August, 1673, Baroness Peterfield, Countess of Farnham, and Duchess of Portsmouth, all in Hampshire. Her grace being of a noble family in Brittany, LOUIS XIV., in 1684, conferred upon her the DUCHY OF AUBIGNY, a dignity still held by the Dukes of Richmond. The duchess, to whom CHARLES II. was strongly attached during the whole course of his life, proved a great means of supporting that monarch's connection with her native country of France. "A life of frivolity and vice," says Macaulay, "had not extinguished in the Duchess of Portsmouth all sentiments of religion, or all that kindness, which is the glory of her sex." At the death-bed of King CHARLES, she stood in an agony of grief, and it was by her intercession and entreaty alone that the dying monarch received the last consolation of religion. She d. at an advanced age at Paris, in the year 1734.

QUINCY—EARLS OF WINCHESTER.

By Creation of King JOHN, about the year 1210.

Lineage.

In the reign of King HENRY II.,

SALES DE QUINCY had a grant from the crown, of the manor of Bushby, co. Northampton, formerly the property of Anselme de Conchis. He m. Maud de St. Liz, and had two sons,

Robert, a soldier of the cross, and one of the companions in arms of RICHARD CŒUR DE LION.

And

SALES DE QUINCY, who was created EARL OF WINCHESTER, by King JOHN. This nobleman was one of the lords present at Lincoln, when WILLIAM, King of Scotland, did homage to the English monarch, and he subsequently obtained large grants and immunities from King JOHN; when, however, the baronial war broke out, his lordship's pennant waived on the side of freedom, and he became so eminent amongst those sturdy chiefs, that he was chosen one of the celebrated twenty-five barons, appointed to enforce the observance of Magna Charta. Adhering to the same party, after the accession of HENRY III., the Earl of Winchester had a principal command at the battle of Lincoln, and there being defeated, he was taken prisoner by the royalists. But submitting in the following October, he had restitution of all his lands; and proceeded soon after, in company with the Earls of Chester and Arundel, and others of the nobility, to the Holy Land, where he assisted at the siege of Damietta, anno 1219, and d. in the same year, in his progress towards Jerusalem. His lordship m. Margaret, younger sister and co-heir of Robert Fitz-Parnell, Earl of Leicester, by which alliance he acquired a very considerable inheritance, and had issue,

Robert, who d. in the Holy Land, leaving issue by his wife, Hawyse, dau. of Hugh Kevelioke, Earl of Chester, an only dau.,

Margaret, who m. 1st, John de Lacie, Earl of Lincoln; and 2ndly, Walter, Earl of Pembroke.

Mabel, m. to Hugh Audley.

ROGER, successor to the earldom.

Robert, m. the Princess Helen, widow of John Scot, Earl of Huntingdon, and 8th Earl Palatine of Chester, who d. s. p., June, 1244 (brother of WILLIAM THE LION, King of Scotland). By this princess, who was eldest dau. of Llewelyn the Great, Prince of North Wales, by his 3rd consort, Joan, illegitimate dau. of JOHN, King of England, Robert de Quincy, who d. 41st HENRY III., 1257, in the tournament at Blis, had three daus and co-heirs,

1 Anne, a nun.

2 Joane, m. to Humphrey de Bohun, the younger.

3 Margaret, m. to Baldwin Wake, a powerful feudal lord, and by him, who d. in 1282, was mother of John Wake, summoned to parliament as a Baron, 1 October, 1296.

At the decease of the earl, his 2nd son,

ROGER DE QUINCY (his elder brother being still in the Holy Land,) had livery of his father's estates, and he subsequently s. to the Earldom of Winchester. This nobleman marrying Helen, eldest dau. and co-heir of Alan, Lord of Galloway, became, in her right, constable of Scotland. By this lady he had issue,

Margaret, m. to William de Ferrers, Earl of Derby, and brought to her husband the Manor and Barony of Groby.

Elizabeth, m. to Alexander Comyn, Earl of Buchan, in Scotland.

Ela, m. to Alan, Lord Zouch, of Ashby.

His lordship m. 2ndly, Maud, dau. of Humphrey de Bohun, Earl of Hereford (widow of Anselme Mareschall, Earl of Pembroke), and 3rdly, Alianore, dau. of William de Ferrers, Earl of Derby, and widow of William de Vaux (this lady survived the earl, and m. after his decease, Roger de Leybourne). Dugdale says, that the earl had another dau., but by which wife he could not discover, namely, Isabell, with whom a contract of marriage was made, by John, son of Hugh de Nevil, for his son, Hugh.

His lordship d. in 1264, when the Earldom of Winchester became extinct, and his great landed possessions devolved upon his daus., as co-heiresses.

Arms—Robert de Quincy—or, a fesse, gu., a label of twelve points, az. Roger de Quincy—gu., seven mascles, or, three, three, and one. The arms of Quincy, Earl of Winchester, are mentioned by Habington, as in the church of Hibberford, Worcestershire.

RADCLIFFE — EARLS OF DERWENTWATER.

By Letters Patent, dated 7 March, 1633.

Lineage.

The Radcliffes, of Derwentwater, were one of the oldest families in Cumberland. In that county, beyond Hay Castle, the river Derwent, runs along the mountains, called Derwent-Fells, and "spreads itself into a spacious lake wherein are three islands: one the seat of the family of Radcliffe, Knt., temp. HENRY V., who m. Margaret, dau. and heir of Sir John de Derwentwater, Knt.; another inhabited by miners; and the third supposed to be that wherein Bede mentions St. Herbert to have led a hermit's life." From the time of the Conquest, up to the reign of HENRY III., the castle of Dilstone was possessed by the family bearing the local name, and, after having passed through many hands, the Tynedales, the Crafters, and the Claxtons, at length devolved on the Radcliffes, in the person of Sir Nicholas Radcliffe, who m. the heiress of the Derwentwaters.

SIR FRANCIS RADCLIFFE, Baron of Dilston, co. Northumberland, was elevated to the peerage by King JAMES II., as Baron Tyndale, Viscount Radcliffe and Langley, and EARL OF DERWENTWATER. His lordship m. Catherine, dau. and heir of Sir William Fenwick, of Meldon, co. Northumberland, and had issue,

i. FRANCIS, Viscount Radcliffe, his successor.

ii. Edward, d. unm.

iii. Thomas, a military officer.

iv. William.

v. Arthur.

i. Anne, m. to Sir Philip Constable, Knt., of Flamborough, in Yorkshire.

ii. Catherine.

iii. Elizabeth.

iv. Mary.

His lordship d. in 1696, and was s. by his eldest son,

FRANCIS RADCLIFFE, 2nd earl, who had m. in his father's life-time, Mary Tudor, natural dau. of King CHARLES II., by Mrs. Mary Davis, and had issue,

JAMES, Viscount Radcliffe, his successor.

Francis, d. s. p.

CHARLES, of whom hereafter.

Mary-Tudor.

His lordship d. in April, 1705, and was s. by his eldest son,

JAMES RADCLIFFE, 3rd earl. This ill-fated nobleman who became the victim of his steadfast, though misguided loyalty, embarked with his brother Charles in the attempt to place the CHEVALIER ST. GEORGE upon the throne. He was a perfect cavalier, and a fine specimen of an English nobleman: amiable, brave, open, generous, hospitable, and humane, "of so universal a benefit once that he seemed to live for others." He gave bread to multitudes of people whom he employed upon his estate: the poor, the widow, the orphan, rejoiced in his bounty. Having been taken prisoner, he was sent to the Tower of London, and, having been soon afterwards found guilty of high treason, was, when only twenty-eight years of age, beheaded on Tower Hill, 24 February, 1715-16, when all his honours became FORFEITED. The best authenticated account affirms that the earl was buried in the church of St. Giles-in-the-Fields, but there is also a tradition extant of his having found his last resting place at Dilstone: but let Derwentwater's bones be where they may, his memory is still cherished by the people, and lives in many a rude ballad: the exquisitely touching lament, Farewell to Lochaber, is said to have been written by the earl, and addressed to his wife, on the eve of his departure for the miserable venture wherein he forfeited life, lands, and nobility. His lordship left a young and beautiful widow, Anna Maria, the dau. of Sir John Webb, Bart., and two infant children to deplore his untimely fate, and suffer by his attainder. Those children were,

JOHN, Viscount Radcliffe, d. in 1731.

Mary, m. 1732, Robert-James, 5th Lord Petre.

His lordship's brother,

CHARLES RADCLIFFE, one of the most unbending adherents of the house of Stuart, took a prominent part in those stirring times. He was made prisoner at Preston, 14 November, 1715, and being transferred to London, was condemned for high treason. After his conviction, in 1716, he received several reprieves from time to time, and probably on account of his youth, and the government wishing to shed no more of the blood of his house, he would have been paroled, but he and thirteen others made their escape from Newgate 11 December, 1716, and thus placed themselves beyond the benefit even of the general act of grace which was passed about that time. Radcliffe, on reaching the continent, went to Rome, and obtained a small pension from the Chevalier; he then settled in Paris, and there became, in 1724, the 2nd husband of Charlotte-Maria, Countess of Newburgh, in her own right. By her he had two sons: 1. James-Bartholomew Radcliffe, Earl of Newburgh (father of an only son, Anthony-James, Earl of Newburgh who d. s. p. 29 November, 1814); 2. James-Clement, d. s. p.; and four daus., the youngest of whom, Lady Mary, m. Francis Eyre, Esq., of Hassop (refer to BURKE'S Peerage). In 1731, on the death of his nephew, John, Viscount Radcliffe, called Earl of Derwentwater, Charles Radcliffe assumed the title of EARL OF DERWENTWATER, though attainted. Twice, during his exile, he came to London, and, though his presence was known to government, his visits passed unmolested. The rising of 1745 brought him again into action. Still adhering to the fortunes of the Stuarts, he embarked on Calais, in the November of that year, on board the "Espérance," a French man-of-war, or privateer, with his son, and with some other officers, and a quantity of ammunition of war, to join CHARLES-EDWARD. The vessel, no doubt bound for Scotland in aid of the insurgents (though there was no legal proof given of the fact) was seized in open sea by the "Sheerness" man-of-war, and brought to Deal. Radcliffe and his son were immediately committed to the Tower. The son being deemed a foreigner, was exchanged on the first cartel; but Radcliffe himself was confined till the rebellion was over, when in Michaelmas term, 1746, he was brought to the bar of the court of King's Bench, to have execution awarded against him under his former sentence. He pleaded that he was not the same person as the party convicted, and prayed time to bring witnesses; but as he would not deny, in his affidavit relative to the absence of witnesses, that he was the attainted Charles Radcliffe, the court proceeded, and decided against his plea. He then wished to plead the general pardon of 1716, but the court (one judge, Sir Michael Foster, dissenting) would hear no further plea, and the prisoner was ordered for execution. Though then, legally, no nobleman, regard was so far paid to the rank and station of his family that he did not undergo the, in those days, ordinary and horrible punishment for treason, but, like his brother, the Earl of Derwentwater, he was decapitated on Tower Hill, 8 December, 1746. He behaved at his execution with dignified calmness and courage. This ill-starred Charles Radcliffe was the mainpring of the support his house gave to the Chevalier; he and his brother, the earl, besides their lives, lost in the cause £300,000 in real value. A book, entitled, Impartial Memoirs of the Life and Character of Charles Radcliffe, Secretary to the Young Pretender, with a portrait, was published in London, 1746.

The EARLDOM OF DERWENTWATER fell under the attainder of JAMES, the 3rd earl; if it had been, however, restored to the male heir of Charles Radcliffe, JAMES-BARTHOLOMEW, 3rd Earl of Newburgh, it would have become EXTINCT upon the decease of that nobleman's son and successor, ANTHONY-JAMES, 4th Earl of Newburgh, without male issue, in 1814, unless there remain some male descendants of Thomas, William, and Arthur, the younger sons of FRANCIS, the 1st earl.

RAMSAY—LORD OF BOTHWELL.

Lineage.

SIR JOHN RAMSAY, Lord of Bothwell, was son of John Ramsay, of Corstoun, descended from the house of Carnock, in Fife, by Janet Napier, his wife, who afterwards m. John Wilson, burgess of Edinburgh. His genius and accomplishments recommended him to the notice of King JAMES III., and he was the only one of the favourites of that monarch that escaped execution at Lauder, July, 1482, owing his safety to his clasping the person of JAMES, and jumping behind him on horseback. His Majesty bestowed on him the lands, barony, and lordship of Bothwell, in Lanarkshire, together with 40 marks of land of the Barony of Monipennie, which fell into the king's hand by recognition, and he sat in parliament as a peer, by the title of LORD BOTHWELL. His lordship was ambassador from JAMES III. to England, 1486; and in 1487 was employed in arranging a treaty of peace between the two kingdoms. His attachment to King JAMES III. occasioned his proscription; he was FORFEITED in the parliament held at Edinburgh by King JAMES IV., 8 October, 1488; and the lordship of Bothwell was conferred on Patrick, Lord Hales, created Earl of Bothwell, 17 October, 1488. The forfeited lord fled to England, and entered into a nefarious scheme with HENRY VII. to deliver into his hands the King of Scots and his brothers. Eventually, however, in 1498, he received a royal pardon under the simple recognition of John Ramsay, and obtained, at the same time, some lands including the Barony of Balmaln, co. Kincardine, which gave designation to his descendants, the RAMSAYS of Balmaln, Baronets of Nova Scotia.

Arms—Arg., an eagle displayed, sa., beaked and membered, gu., charged on the breast with a rose of the field.

RAMSAY—VISCOUNT HADDINGTON AND EARL OF HOLDERNESS.

Viscounty, by Letters Patent, dated 11 June, 1606.

Earldom, by Letters Patent, dated 22 January, 1621.

Lineage.

SIR JOHN RAMSAY, of an ancient Scottish family (brother of George, 1st Lord Ramsay, of Dalhousie, see BURKE'S Peerage: DALHOUSIE), was one of the pages of honour of King JAMES (VI.) I., and had the good fortune to be one of the chief agents in the preservation of King JAMES VI. from the attempt of the Earl of Gowrie and his brother, Alexander Ruthven, at Perth, in August, 1600. His Majesty had been induced by Alexander Ruthven to accompany him to the Earl of Gowrie's house at Perth, and soon after his arrival had been murderously attacked by Ruthven. At the moment young Ramsay, the page, happened to be hurrying to the stable for his horse, and heard the King crying, from the window of Gowrie's house, "Treason! murder!" The royal attendants, who had rushed up the principal staircase to his assistance, found the doors locked, but Ramsay fortunately entered the room by a back stair, and perceiving Alexander Ruthven struggling with the king, drew his dagger, plunged it twice into Alexander's body, and then threw him down stairs, where he was met by Sir Thomas Erskine and Hugh Harris, the king's physician, who dispatched him, and went up to the king. Just then the Earl of Gowrie rushed into the apartment, with a sword in each hand, followed by six of his attendants completely armed, but was met by Ramsay, Erskine, and Harris, and after a mortal struggle, was slain. For these acceptable services, Ramsay, rewarded with knighthood, had the Barony of Eastbarns, co. Haddington, conferred on him, and had a charter of the same, 15 November, 1600. He was also created VISCOUNT OF HADDINGTON, and LORD RAMSAY, of Barns, 11

This coat was granted in honour of his service to King JAMES VI.

RANDOLPH—EARL OF MORAY.

Created about 1312.

Lineage.

The 1st EARL OF MORAY was the renowned

SIR THOMAS RANDOLPH, the warrior, statesman, and patriot of a very memorable period of Scottish history. He was nephew of ROBERT BRUCE, being the son of Lady Isabel Bruce, that monarch's sister by her husband, Thomas Randolph, Lord of Strathnith. Our confined space permits but a passing reference to Randolph's capture by assault of the castle of Edinburgh, in 1312, and to his glorious participation in the victory of Bannockburn in 1314. On that famous field, he commanded a division of the Scottish army, and mainly contributed to the successful issue of the day. Subsequently, he accompanied Edward Bruce to Ireland, in principal command of the Scotch troops, and displayed his usual military ability in that campaign. He returned to Scotland before the disastrous battle of Dundalk, in which Edward Bruce was slain; and not long after was sent at the head of a large army, across the Border, with the object of compelling Edward to raise the siege of Berwick. This object was effectually performed by the defeat at Mitton, in Yorkshire, of the troops collected by the archbishop of York. At the death of his uncle, Robert Bruce, Randolph became Regent of Scotland, and guardian of the young King DAVID, and applied himself with great vigour to the internal settlement of the kingdom. At length, in 1332, while leading the Scottish army to provide against the threatened descent of Baliol, he d. at Musselburgh, 20 July in that year. The Earl of Moray m. Isabel, only dau. of Sir John Stewart, of Bonkyl, and had issue,

THOMAS, } successively earls.
JOHN, }
AONES, of whom hereafter.

The elder son,

THOMAS RANDOLPH, 2nd Earl of Moray, adopting, like his illustrious father, the profession of arms, fell in action at Duplin, 12 August, 1332, just twenty-three days after the late earl's decease: dying unm., he was s. by his brother,

JOHN RANDOLPH, 3rd Earl of Moray, also a great warrior of his time, who commanded the first body of the Scottish army at Halidon Hill, 19 July, 1333, and, escaping from the carnage of that dreadful day, fled to France. Returning to Scotland the next year, he resumed his military career, and in 1342, invaded England, King DAVID II., serving as a volunteer under him, and in 1346 (17 October) fell in command of the right wing of the Scots at the battle of Durham. He m. Isabel, dau. of Sir Alexander Stewart, of Bonkyl, but d. s. p., whereupon the Earldom of Moray was assumed by his lordship's sister, leaving two sons, GEORGE, EARL OF DUNBAR AND MARCH, and JOHN, EARL OF MORAY. The 2nd son,

JOHN DUNBAR, obtained, 9 March, 1371-2, from ROBERT II., a charter confirmatory of the whole Earldom of Moray. He fought at Otterburn, and was killed in a tournament in 1394. He m. Marjory, dau. of King ROBERT II., and left with a dau., Mabella, Countess of Sutherland, two sons, THOMAS and ALEXANDER, of Frendraught. The elder son,

THOMAS DUNBAR, Earl of Moray, was at the battle of Homildon Hill, and was there taken prisoner by the English in 1402: his son,

THOMAS DUNBAR, Earl of Moray, was one of the hostages for King JAMES I., 31 May, 1421 and 13 December, 1423. He was s. by his cousin,

JAMES DUNBAR, Earl of Moray (son of Alexander, of Frendraught), who m. Lady Janet Gordon, and had two daus., Janet, styled "Countess of Moray," m. to James, 2nd Lord Crichton, and Mary. The Earl of Moray d. without male issue, in 1430, when the husband of the dau. of Earl Thomas, Lady Elizabeth Dunbar,

ARCHIBALD DOUGLAS, (3rd son of the 7th Earl of Douglas) obtained the Earldom of Moray. This nobleman joining his brother, the Earl of Douglas, in arms against JAMES II., fell at Arkinholm, 1 May, 1455, and was afterwards attainted, when the Earldom of Moray became vested in the crown of Scotland.

RATCLIFFE—BARONS AND VISCOUNT FITZ-WALTER, EARLS OF SUSSEX.

Barony, originally, by Writ of Summons dated 23 June, 1295.

Barony, to the Ratcliffes, by Writ of Summons, dated 15 September, 1486.

Viscounty, by Letters Patent, dated 18 June, 1525.

Earldom, by Letters Patent, dated 28 December, 1529.

Lineage.

The family of Ratcliffe or Radcliffe took its name from the village of Radcliffe, near Bury, in Lancashire, one of decidedly Saxon origin.

RICHARD DE RADCLIFFE, of Radclyffe Tower, co. Lancaster, seneschal and minister of the forests of Blackburnshire, accompanied King EDWARD I. in his wars in Scotland, and received from that prince, in the 32nd year of his reign, a grant of a charter of free warren and free chase, in all his demesne lands of Radclyffe, &c. He m. a dau. of Boteler, of Bewsey, Baron of Warrington, and had issue: I. ROBERT, of Radclyffe Tower, ancestor of the Radclyffes of Smithills; II. WILLIAM, of Colceth and Edgworth, and afterwards of Radclyffe Tower, usually styled the "Great William," ancestor of the RADCLIFFES of Radclyffe Tower, and of the Radclyffes, Barons Fitz-Walter and Earls of SUSSEX; III. JOHN (Sir), of Ordsall, co. Lancaster, ancestor of the Radclyffes of Ordsall, Foxdenston, &c., co. Lancaster, the Radcliffes of Hitchin Priory, Hert., &c., &c. A descendant of the 2nd son, WILLIAM of Colceth,

SIR JOHN RATCLIFFE, Knt., governor of Trounsak, in Aquitaine, had 1,000 marks per annum allowed to him for the guard thereof, 7th King HENRY V., and in the 1st HENRY VI., being retained to serve the king, as seneschal of that duchy, had an assignation of 4s. per day for his own salary, and 20 marks a piece per annum for 200 archers. In the 4th year of the same monarch, Sir John had a grant of the wardship of Ralph, Earl of Westmoreland, in consideration of 2,000 marks, then due to him by the king, for wages in his military capacity; and in seven years afterwards, he had an assignation of all the revenues of the crown, issuing out of the counties of Caernarvon and Merioneth, as also out of the lordships of Chirk, and Chirkland, to liquidate another arrear of service money, to the amount of £7,029 13s. 1d. This eminent soldier, who was a knight banneret, and a knight of the Garter, m. Elizabeth Fitz-Walter, only dau. and heiress of Walter Fitz-Walter, last Baron Fitz-Walter of that family (revert to Fitz-Walter, Baron Fitz-Walter), and was s. at his decease by his son,

SIR JOHN RATCLIFFE, who, in the 39th HENRY VI., obtained a pardon of intrusion, for entering upon the lands of his inheritance without livery; and in the 1st HENRY VII., 15 September, 1485, was summoned to parliament in right of his mother, as BARON FITZ-WALTER. In which year, being at that time steward of the king's household, he was joined in commission with Sir Reginald Bray, Knt., for exercising the office of chief justice of all the forests beyond Trent. And at the coronation of King

HENRY's consort, Queen ELIZABETH, his lordship was associated with Jasper Tudor, Duke of Bedford, for performing the duties of High Steward of England. But afterwards implicated in the conspiracy in favour of Perkin Warbeck, he was attainted of high treason, and being carried prisoner to Calais, whence he endeavoured to make his escape, by corrupting his keepers, he was there beheaded in the year 1496, when the Barony of Fitz-Walter became forfeited. Nevertheless his son and heir,

ROBERT RATCLIFFE, K.G., found much favour from HENRY VII., and was restored in blood and honours by act of parliament in the 1st HENRY VIII., when he became 2nd LORD FITZ-WALTER of the Ratcliffe family. In the 4th of the same reign, his lordship attended the king in the great expedition then made to Therouenne and Tournay; and in ten years afterwards, he commanded the van of the army sent into France, under the Earl of Surrey; for which eminent services he was created, by letters patent, dated 18 June, 1525, Viscount FITZ-WALTER. His lordship was one of those peers, who, in four years afterwards, subscribed the articles against Cardinal Wolsey. He was subsequently made a knight of the Garter, and elevated to the EARLDOM of SUSSEX, 8 December, 1529. The next year he subscribed the remonstrance of the peers to Pope CLEMENT VII., regarding the king's divorce from Queen Katherine, and he was one of the nobles who attended HENRY into France, in 1532; after which he obtained a special patent to himself, and his heirs male of the office of Sewer, at the time of dinner, upon the coronation day of all the future kings and queens of England, with a fee of £20 per annum out of the exchequer; and was constituted Lord High Chamberlain of England for life, upon the attainder of Thomas Cromwell, Earl of Essex. Besides all those honours, his lordship in the spoliation of the church, was a considerable participator, having obtained from his royal master grants of the site of the abbey of Cleve, in Somersetshire, with its revenues; and of the college and chantry of Attleburgh, in Norfolk. The earl m. 1st, Elizabeth, dau. of Henry, Duke of Buckingham, and had issue,

He m. 3rdly, Mary, dau. of Sir John Arundel, of Lanherne, in Cornwall, and had an only son,

John (Sir), who d. s. p.

His lordship d. in 1542, and was s. by his eldest son,

SIR HENRY RATCLIFFE, K.G., as 3rd Lord Fitz-Walter, and 2nd Earl of Sussex, who, in the 1st EDWARD VI., upon the expedition then made into Scotland, had the command of 1,600 demi-lances; in which service, being unhorsed, he escaped very narrowly with his life. At the demise of King EDWARD, the Earl of Sussex was amongst the first that declared for Queen MARY, and was in consequence constituted by that sovereign, soon after her accession, warden and chief justice itinerant of all the forests south of Trent. He was also made a knight of the Garter. His lordship m. 1st, Lady Elizabeth Howard, dau. of Thomas, Duke of Norfolk, and had issue,

THOMAS, } successive Earls of Sussex.
HENRY, }
Francis.

He m. 2ndly, Anne, dau. of Sir Philip Calthorpe, Knt., by whom he had a son and dau., viz.,

Egremont, who, being a principal actor in the northern rebellion, was attainted and forced to fly the kingdom. He was afterwards put to death at Namur, by Don John of Austria, for purposing to murder that prince.

Frances, m. to Sir Thomas Mildmay, Knt., of Mulsh, co. Essex, and had issue,

Sir Thomas Mildmay, Bart., who d. s. p. 13 February, 1625-6.

SIR HENRY MILDMAI, Knt., who, in 1640, claimed, by petition to the Long Parliament, in right of his mother, the BARONY OF FITZ-WALTER, but owing to the civil wars, nothing was done at that time therein. Sir Henry m. Elizabeth, dau. of John Darcy, Esq., of Toleshurst Darcy, co. Essex, and dying in 1654, left three sons, viz.,

1. ROBERT, m. Mary, dau. and co-heir of Sir Thomas Edmonds, Knt., and had issue,

Henry, d. s. p.

BENJAMIN, who was allowed the Barony of Fitz-Walter in 1669 (see MILDMAI, BARONS FITZ-WALTER).

Mary, m. to Henry Mildmay, Esq., of Graces, and had issue.

Mary, m. to Charles Goodwin, Esq., of Rovent, co. Sussex, and d. s. p.

Lucy, m. to Thomas Gardiner, Esq., of Tollesbury, Essex, and had, with other issue, who d. s. p., two daus., Lucy, who m. in 1728, Sir Richard Bacon, Bart., but their issue is extinct; and Jemima, who is stated to have m. John Joseph, surgeon, and to have had an only dau., Jemima, wife of Robert Duke, woollen draper, of Colchester, who, it is asserted, settled in America.

Elizabeth, m. to Edmund Waterson, Esq., and d. s. p.

Frances, m. to Christopher Fowler, Esq., and d. in 1705, leaving a son, EDMUND FOWLER, of Graces, who m. Elizabeth Pateshall, and d. in 1751, leaving a dau. and heir, FANNY, wife of Sir Brook Bridges, Bart., of Goodnestone, and mother of the late Sir Brook-William Bridges, Bart., whose son and heir, Sir Brook-William Bridges, Bart., of Goodnestone, is one of the co-heirs, if not sole heir, of the Barony of FITZ-WALTER.

Katherine, m. to Colonel Thomas Townshend, and had issue, but since extinct.

2. Henry, d. s. p.

3. Charles, m. to Martha, dau. and heir of Sir Cranmer Harris, Knt., and left an only dau.,

Mary, m. to Sir Charles Tyrrell, Bart., of Thornton.

The earl, being divorced from his 2nd countess, obtained a special act of parliament in the 2nd and 3rd PHILIP and MARY, to debar her from jointure and dower. He d. 17 February, 1556, and was s. by his eldest son,

SIR THOMAS RATCLIFFE, K.G., 4th Lord Fitz-Walter, and 3rd Earl of Sussex, b. in 1526. In the life-time of his father, he was deputed ambassador by Queen MARY to the Emperor CHARLES V. to treat of a marriage between herself and Prince Philip, the emperor's eldest son; and he proceeded afterwards to the court of Spain to the prince himself to obtain a ratification of the treaty. In the 2nd and 3rd PHILIP and MARY, Sir Thomas Ratcliffe was constituted lord deputy of Ireland, and soon after his father's decease, his lordship was made chief justice of all the forests south of Trent. In the 4th and 5th of the same reign, the earl being then a knight of the Garter, and captain of the pensioners, had his commission as deputy of Ireland renewed: which high office was confirmed to him upon the accession of Queen ELIZABETH, with instructions to reduce the revenues of Ireland to the standard of England. In the 3rd ELIZABETH he was constituted lord-lieutenant of the same kingdom, and in six years afterwards he had the honour of bearing the order of the Garter to the Emperor Maximilian. He was afterwards engaged in negotiating a matrimonial alliance between his royal mistress, and the Archduke CHARLES of Austria. In the 12th ELIZABETH he was lord president of the north, and the next year, upon an incursion of the Scots, his lordship invaded Scotland and laid several of their towns and castles in ashes; amongst which were the castles of Annand and Caerlaveroc. He sat subsequently upon the trial of the Duke of Norfolk; and he was one of the commissioners (24th ELIZABETH), to treat regarding a marriage between her Majesty and the Duke of Anjou. His lordship m. 1st, Lady Elizabeth Wriothesley, dau. of Thomas, Earl of Southampton, by whom he had two sons, Henry and Robert, who both d. young. He m. 2ndly, Frances, dau. of Sir William Sidney, Knt., sister of Sir Henry Sidney, Knt., but by her (who was foundress of Sydney-Sussex College, Cambridge, and d. 19 March, 1589, aged fifty-eight) Lord Sussex had no issue.

This Thomas, Earl of Sussex, Sir Robert Naunton, in his Fragmenta Regalia, describes "as a goodly gentleman; of a brave noble nature, and constant to his friends and servants;" and goes on to state, "that there was such an antipathy in his nature to that of the Earl of Leicester's, that being together at court, and both in high employments, they grew to direct forwardness, and were in continual opposition; the one setting the watch and the other the sentinel, each on the other's actions and motions: for this Earl of Sussex was of great spirit, which backed with the Queen's special favour, and supported by a great and ancient inheritance, could not brook the other's empire: in so much as the queen, upon sundry occasions, had somewhat to do to appease and attain them, until death parted the competition, and left the place to Leicester." Upon his death-bed his lordship is said, by the same authority, thus to have addressed his friends: "I am now passing into another world, and I must leave you to your fortunes, and the queen's grace and goodness; but beware of the gipsy (meaning Leicester), for he will be too hard for you all; you know not the beast so well as I do."—He d. in June, 1583, at his house of Bermondsey, in Southwark, and was buried at Boreham, in Sussex; but leaving no issue surviving, was s. by his brother,

SIR HENRY RATCLIFFE, 5th Lord Fitz-Walter, and 4th Earl of Sussex, captain and chief governor of Portsmouth, and knight of the Garter. He had a grant from Queen ELIZABETH of undry rectories and lands in Ireland by patent, in 1577. His lordship m. Honora, dau. of Anthony Pound, Esq., of Hampshire, and dying 10 April, 1593, was s. by his only child.

ROBERT RATCLIFFE, K.G., 6th Lord Fitz-Walter, and 5th Earl of Sussex. This nobleman was with the Earl of Essex in the attack and sacking of the city of Cadiz in the 39th ELIZABETH, and was installed a knight of the Garter, 19th of the ensuing reign (1621). His lordship m. 1st, Bridget, dau. of Sir Charles Morrison, Knt., of Cashibury, co. Hertford, and had issue, Henry, who m. Jane, dau. of Sir Michael Stanhope, Knt. Thomas.

Elizabeth, m. 9 February, 1608, to Sir John Ramsey, Viscount Haddington, afterwards Earl of Holderness (see that name). Honora.

All of these, however, d. s. p. before himself. The earl m. 2ndly, Frances, dau. of Hercules Mentas, Esq., of Hame, in Essex, but had no issue by her. His lordship d. in 1623, when the Barony of Fitz-Walter devolved upon the descendants of his aunt, of the half blood, Lady Frances Mildmay (referred to issue of Henry, 2nd Earl of Sussex, by his 2nd marriage; and see MILDWAY, Lord Fitz-Walter), and the other honours devolved upon (the son of Sir Humphrey Ratcliffe, of Elinstow; revert to issue of Robert, 1st Earl of Sussex,) his cousin,

SIR EDWARD RATCLIFFE, as 7th Lord Fitz-Walter, and 6th Earl of Sussex. This nobleman d. in 1641 s. p., when his honours became EXTINCT.

RAWSON—VISCOUNT CLONTARFE.

Created for life, 8 November, 1641.

Lineage.

SIR JOHN RAWSON, Knight of Rhodes, and Prior of Kilmalmainham, co. Dublin, a man in whom the English Government placed the highest confidence, and one of the lords of the privy council, surrendered, with the consent of the convent, to King HENRY VIII. the hospital of St. John of Jerusalem at Kilmalmainham, 22 November, 1541, and was in accordance with a king's letter, dated at Windsor, 6 November, in that year, confirmed in his pension of 500 marks, and created VISCOUNT CLONTARFE (with an annuity of £10) for life. Several grants by him are enrolled in the Chancery Records of Ireland. He d. in 1660, when the title of course became EXTINCT.

The following representation preceded, and appears to have influenced the marks of royal favour he received:—

"May it further please your Majesty," writes the Lord Deputy St. Leger, in 1540, to King HENRY VIII., "according to your high commandment, I, at my repair to these parts, moved the Lord Kilmalmainham, Lord of St. John's here, concerning the surrender of his name and lands, and how good and gracious your Majesty is to him, assigning unto him for term of his life five hundred marks by the year. The said Lord Kilmalmainham is not only glad and willing to obey your said commandment and pleasure, but also desired me to render unto your excellent Majesty his most humble thanks for your said goodness towards him. And also he, perceiving your said pleasure, hath not only given to me, your poor servant, certain implements very necessary for the house there, with corn, hay, and other things whereof I had great need, but also hath caused the principal house there to be well and substantially repaired in all places needful, which assuredly is a good house, and great pity that it should decay. And furthermore, as by the report of the most part of the counsel here, the said Lord Kilmalmainham hath, for the long time of his abode here, been the person which, next your Majesty's Deputy, hath always kept the best house, and English sort, and at all times, when strangers of other countries hath repaired thither, feasted and entertained them to your Highness's honour; and also for that it is thought by those of your English counsellors here, that it shall be a great lack to miss him out of council, and also out of the parliament (when any shall be), as well for his honesty as for his long experience, they have all desired me to write unto your most excellent Majesty in favour of the said Lord Kilmalmainham, that for as much as your Majesty hath assigned him so honourable pension, and that he intended here to remain for term of his life, that your Majesty would be so good and gracious as to give him the name of honour of Viscount of Clontarf, which is a place where he intendeth with your Majesty's favour, to make his abode, and to be a Lord of the Parliament and of your Council, assigning to him such annuity with the said name of honour, as shall stand with your Highness's pleasure. Wherefore in accomplishment of their said requests, I most humbly beseech your Majesty to be good unto him in this their humble suits and mine. The man is very aged, and not like to charge your Majesty very long."* This request was further urged by a memorial from the Privy Council to the king, signed by the Master of the Rolls (John Alen), the Archbishop of Dublin, the Bishop of Meath, Dean Basset, Lord Gormanston, Justices Aylmer and Luttrell, Thomas Eustace, afterwards created Lord Baltinglass, and three others.

RAYMOND — BARONS RAYMOND, OF ABBOTS LANGLEY, CO. HERTFORD.

By Letters Patent, dated 15 January, 1731.

Lineage.

In the reign of King CHARLES II..

SIR THOMAS RAYMOND, Knt., was one of the judges of the King's Bench, and his name is handed down to posterity by his Law Reports. He was father of

ROBERT RAYMOND, another eminent lawyer, who became chief justice of the Court of King's Bench, and was elevated to the peerage by letters patent, dated 15 January, 1731, in the dignity of LORD RAYMOND, BARON OF ABBOT'S LANGLEY, co. Hertford. His lordship m. Anne, dau. of Sir Edward Northey, Knt., of Epsom, co. Surrey, attorney-general, temp. Queen ANNE, and King GEORGE I., and dying in 1732, was s. by his only son, ROBERT RAYMOND, 2nd baron. This nobleman m. Chetwynd, dau. and co-heir of Montagu, Viscount Blundell, in Ireland, but d. in 1753 s. p., when the barony became EXTINCT.

RICH—BARONS RICH, EARLS OF WARWICK, BARONS KENSINGTON, EARLS OF HOLLAND.

Barony of Rich, by Letters Patent, dated 16 February, 1547. Earldom of Warwick, by Letters Patent, dated 6 August, 1618. Barony of Kensington, by Letters Patent, dated 8 March, 1622. Earldom of Holland, by Letters Patent, dated 24 September, 1624.

Lineage.

The founder of this family, RICHARD RICH, was an opulent mercer of London, who served the office of sheriff for that city, in 1441. He d. in 1469, leaving a son,

JOHN RICH, whose grandson,

RICHARD RICH, having studied law in the Middle Temple, was appointed, in the 21st HENRY VIII., autumnal reader to that society. Shortly after which, he advanced through several eminent employments, to great wealth and high honour. In the 24th year of the same king, he was constituted attorney-general for Wales, and in the next year, appointed the king's solicitor-general. In the 27th, he had a grant of the office of chirographer to the Common Pleas; and about that time, visiting Sir Thomas More, ex-lord chancellor, then a prisoner in the Tower, used his utmost exertions to persuade that great and eminent person to acknowledge the king's supremacy in spiritual affairs. In this year, too, he was appointed chancellor of the Court of Augmentations, a court formed to take cognizance of the revenues of the monasteries, which had considerably augmented the funds of the crown; and he had a grant of the site of the priory of Leez, with the manor thereunto appertaining, in the county of Essex. Upon the accession of King EDWARD VI., being then a knight, he was elevated to the peerage, by letters patent, dated 16 February, 1547 (the fourth day before the coronation), as BARON RICH, of Leez, and constituted 30 November following, lord chancellor of England. But within five years, observing the dangers of the times, by the Duke of Somerset's fall, and

* State Papers, temp. HENRY VIII.

other circumstances equally ominous, and having amassed a very large fortune, "like a discreet pilot," says Dugdale, "who seeing a storm at hand, gets his ship into harbour, he made suit to the king, by reason of some bodily infirmities, that he might be discharged of his office, which being granted, the great seal was delivered to Thomas Goodrick, bishop of Ely; after which, he (Lord Rich) lived many years, and at his own charge built the tower steeple at Rochford, in Essex." The cause of his lordship's resignation of the chancellorship is thus, however, more feebly accounted for: "The Lord Rich being a fast friend to the great Duke of Somerset, then in the Tower, was endeavouring to serve him with the king; and for that purpose had written him notice of something designed against him by the council; and being in haste, directed the letter only 'to the duke,' bidding his servant carry it to the Tower, without giving him any particular directions 'to the Duke of Somerset.' The servant not knowing that his master was intimate with Somerset, but knowing that he was so with the Duke of Norfolk (then also in the Tower), gave the latter nobleman the letter by mistake. When the chancellor found out his error at night, fearful that Norfolk would discover him, he immediately repaired to the king, and desired to be discharged his office, feigning illness, which was merely to raise pity for himself, and prevent the malice of his enemies." The reputation of Lord Rich suffered deeply in the opinion of all honourable men, by the baseness of his conduct to Sir Thomas More. Upon the trial of the ex-chancellor, Rich was a witness against him, as to a pretended conversation in the Tower; and when he gave his evidence, Sir Thomas made answer: "If I were a man, my lord, that had no regard to my oath, I had no occasion to be here a criminal; and if this oath, Mr. Rich, you have taken, be true, then I pray I may never see God's face; which, were it otherwise, is an imprecation I would not be guilty of to gain the world." Sir Thomas then proceeded to charge him with being "light of tongue, a great gamester, and a person of no good, in the parish where they had lived together, or in the Temple, where he was educated." After which, he went on to show how unlikely it was, that he should "impart the secrets of his conscience to a man, of whom he always had so mean an opinion."

His lordship m. Elizabeth, sister of William Jenks, of London, grocer, and had issue, ROBERT, his successor, with three other sons, all of whom d. s. p., and nine daus., viz.,

- Margery, m. to Henry Pigot, Esq., of Abingdon.
- Agnes, m. to Edmund Mortlaunt, Esq.
- Mary, m. to Sir Thomas Wrothe, Knt.
- Dorothy, m. to Francis Barley, Esq.
- Elizabeth, m. to Robert Peyton, Esq.
- Winifride, m. 1st, to Sir Henry Dudley, Knt.; and 2ndly, to Roger, Lord North.
- Etheldreda, m. to Robert Drury, Esq.
- Anne, m. to Thomas Pigot, Esq.
- Frances, m. to John, Lord Darcy, of Chiche.

Lord Rich d. in 1568, and was s. by his eldest son,

ROBERT RICH, 2nd baron. This nobleman was one of the peers upon the trial of the Duke of Norfolk, in the reign of ELIZABETH, and was afterwards employed by her Majesty upon a diplomatic mission to France, as well as on some complicated affairs in Ireland. His lordship m. Elizabeth, dau. and heir of George Baldry, Esq., son and heir of Sir Thomas Baldry, Knt., of London, and had issue,

Charles, created a Baronet, by King CHARLES II., a dignity which expired with Lieut.-General Sir Robert Rich, Bart., whose only dau. and heiress,

MARY-FRANCES RICH, m. 4 January, 1784, the Rev. Charles Bostock, LL.D., of Shirley House, Hants, who assumed the surname and arms of Rich, and was created a Baronet, 11 June, 1791 (see Baronetage).

- Frances, m. to Nathaniel Acton, Esq.
- Margaret. Honoria.

- Frances, m. to Thomas Camock, Esq.
- Elizabeth, m. to — Castleton, Esq.

His lordship d. in 1591, and was s. by his eldest son,

ROBERT RICH, 3rd baron. This nobleman, in the 40th ELIZABETH, was at the sacking of Cadiz, under the Earl of Essex, and was advanced by King JAMES I., 6 August, 1618, to the EARLDOM OF WARWICK. His lordship m. 1st, Lady Penelope Devereux, dau. of Walter, Earl of Essex, and had issue,

1. ROBERT, Lord Rich, his successor.

11. HENRY (Sir), K.B., captain of the king's guard, "Incomparably the most accomplished English courtier of his time, who, under a veil of universal complaisance and condescension concealed the purest selfishness." He was elevated to the peerage, by letters patent, dated 8 March, 1622, as BAZON KENSINGTON. His lordship was subsequently employed to negotiate a marriage between Prince Charles (afterwards CHARLES I.), and the Spanish Infanta; and when that treaty proved abortive, he was sent into France to sound the French Court, regarding a consort for the English prince. He was advanced, 24 September, 1624, to the dignity of EARL OF HOLLAND, co. Lincoln, and installed shortly after a knight of the Garter. His lordship m. Isabel, dau. and heir of Sir Walter Cope, of Kensington, co. Middlesex, Knt., by whom he acquired the manor and mansion of Kensington,* and had (with four daus., Frances, m. to Sir James Thynne; Susannah, m. to James, Earl of Suffolk; Mary, m. to John, Earl of Breadalbane; and Diana) three sons,

ROBERT, 2nd Earl of Holland, and 5th Earl of Warwick.

Charles.

Cope, m., and had a son,

COPE, whose son,

EDWARD eventually was the last Earl of Warwick and of Holland.

Henry, the 1st Earl of Holland, after King CHARLES I., became a prisoner in the Isle of Wight, took up arms, with other loyal persons to effect his restoration, but miscarrying at Kingston-upon-Thames, 7 July, 1648, he was pursued, made prisoner, and committed to the Tower, where he remained until after the execution of the king, when, being brought to trial with the Duke of Hamilton, the Earl of Norwich, Sir John Owen, &c., he was condemned to death, and executed by decapitation before the gates of Westminster Hall, 9 March, 1649.

111. Charles (Sir), slain at the Isle of Rhee, in the expedition under the Duke of Buckingham.

I. Lettice, m. 1st, to Sir George Cary, Knt., of Cockington, co. Devon, and 2ndly, to Sir Arthur Lake, Knt.

11. Penelope, m. to Sir Gervase Clifton, Bart., of Clifton, co. Nottingham.

111. Essex, m. to Sir Thomas Cooche, Knt., of Pirgo, in Essex.

11. Isabel, m. to Sir John Smythe, Knt.

Lord Rich being divorced from his 1st countess (who re-m. Charles Blount, Earl of Devon), m. 2ndly, Frances, widow of Sir George Paul, and dau. of Sir Christopher Wray, Knt., lord chief justice of the court of King's Bench, but had no other issue. His lordship d. in the same year in which he was advanced to the earldom (anno 1618), and was s. by his eldest son,

ROBERT RICH, 2nd Earl of Warwick. This nobleman was a very distinguished personage in the time of the civil war. He was admiral for the long parliament, and during the usurpation, enjoyed the full confidence of Cromwell. Lord Clarendon says, "That he was a man of a pleasant and companionable wit and conversation; of an universal jolity; and such a license in his words, and in his actions, that a man of less virtue could not be found out. But with all these faults he had great authority and credit with the people; for by opening his doors, and spending a good part of his estate, of which he was very prodigal, upon them, and by being present with them at his devotions, and making himself merry with them, and at them, which they dispensed with, he became the head of that party, and got the style of a godly man." His lordship m. 1st, Frances, dau. of Sir William Hatton, alias Newport, Knt. (by Elizabeth, his wife, dau. and heir of Sir Francis Gundi, Knt., lord chief justice of the court of Common Pleas), by whom he had issue,

ROBERTS OR ROBARTES—BARONS ROBERTS OF TRURO, EARLS OF RADNOR.

Barony, by Letters Patent, dated 16 January, 1623.
Earldom, by Letters Patent, dated 23 July, 1679.

Lineage.

RICHARD ROBERTS, Esq., of Truro, in Cornwall, had the honour of knighthood conferred upon him by King JAMES I., at Whitehall, in 1616, and was created a baronet in 1621. In four years afterwards he was advanced, through the influence of the favourite Buckingham, to the peerage, in the dignity of BARON ROBERTS, of Truro. For this, Sir Richard is said to have paid £10,000; and one of the charges brought against the Duke of Buckingham in parliament, anno 1626, was, "that, knowing Roberts to be rich, he forced him to take that title of honour; and that, in consideration thereof, he paid ten thousand pounds to the duke's use." Lord Roberts m. Frances, dau. and co-heir of John Hender, Esq., of Botreaux Castle, in Cornwall, and had issue,

JOHN, his successor, of whom presently.

II. Diana, d. unm.

III. Aramintha, m. to Ezekiel Hopkins, bishop of Derry.

IV. Olympia.

V. Essex, m. to John Speccot, Esq., of Penhale, in Cornwall.

The Earl of Radnor, was "a staunch presbyterian; sour and cynical; just in his administration, but vicious under the semblance of virtue; learned above any of his quality; but stiff, obstinate, proud, and jealous, and every way intractable." He d. in 1685, and was s. by his grandson,

CHARLES-BODVILE ROBARTES, 2nd Earl of Radnor, who m. Elizabeth, dau. and heir of Sir John Cutler, Knt., of the city of London, but d. s. p. in 1723, when his honours devolved upon his nephew,

ROCHE—VISCOUNT ROCHE OF FERMOY.

Lineage.

The family of Roche was established in Ireland by ADAM DE RUPE, of Roch Castle, co. Pembroke, who accompanied Robert FitzStephen to that country in 1196.

DAVID ROCHE, Lord Roche, surnamed "the Great," sat in parliament as VISCOUNT ROCHE, of Fermoy, in the reigns of EDWARD IV. and HENRY VII. He m. Joanna, dau. of Walter de Burgo, called MacWilliam, and had issue, MAURICE, his heir.

Redmond, of Ballymagly.

Ulick, of Cragh.

Theobald, of Ballyhindon and Clash.

William, of Ballyhowly.

Philip, of Scral and Rahan.

Gerald, of Ballyhonan.

Edmund, of Ballenine.

Jacob.

Ellena, m. to James, 13th Lord Kingsale.

The eldest son,

MAURICE ROCHE, Viscount Roche, of Fermoy, was present in the parliament of 6th HENRY VII., anno 1490, being styled "Dominus de Fermoy," and was placed next after William, Lord Buttevant. In 1487, he m. Joan, dau. of James, 9th Earl of Desmond, and by her had DAVID, his heir; and Ellen, m. to Maurice, 10th Earl of Desmond. He m. 2ndly, More, dau. of — O'Brien, and by her had Edmund, in the army, who also m. an O'Brien. The son and heir,

DAVID ROCHE, Lord Roche of Fermoy, m. Catharine, dau. of Teige MacCarthy More, and had a son and heir,

MAURICE ROCHE, Viscount Fermoy, generally called the Mad, living in 1641, 33rd HENRY VIII., who, by Grany, dau. of Cormac MacTeige MacCarthy, chief of Muskerry, had three sons and three daus., viz.,

- I. DAVID, his heir.
- II. William, of Carrickdownan, who m. Ellen, dau. of John Tobin, of Compahinagh, co. Tipperary, Esq., and had issue, John, James, and Edward: John, the eldest son, was father of William, father of Ulick, of Carrigdownan, co. Cork, Gent., to whom a special livery of his estate was granted 29 May, 1629, for the fine of £6 Irish.
- III. John, who d. unm.
- I. Ellen, m. to John, Lord Barry.
- II. Margery, m. to James Barrett, of Ballincolly.
- III. Catharine, m. to Conogher or Connor O'Callaghan, of Clonmeen, co. Cork, chief of his name.

The eldest son,

DAVID ROCHE, Viscount Roche and Fermoy, who succeeded, m. Ellen, dau. of James, Lord Dunboyne, by whom he had seven sons and two daus., viz.,

- I. MAURICE, his heir.
- II. William, of Ballingaugin, who m. a dau. of James Tobin, of Killakin, co. Tipperary, Esq.
- III. Richard, d. unm.
- IV. Theobald, who m. Grany, dau. of Murrough O'Brien Ara, and was killed by the Seneschal of Imokilly, in the Queen's wars.
- V. John.
- VI. Redmond.
- VII. A son, killed by the rebels in the Queen's wars.
- I. Joan, m. to Patrick, 17th Lord of Kerry.
- II. Helen, m. David, Viscount Buttevant, father to David, 1st Earl of Barrymore.

The son and heir,

MAURICE ROCHE, Viscount Roche and Fermoy, sat in the parliament, held by Thomas, Earl of Sussex, 12 January, 1558, and 17 May, 1580, was joined in commission of martial law with Sir Cormac MacTeige MacCarthy, of Muskerry, and had power to give provision for fifteen days to any other than the principal rebels. By letters from Greenwich, 19 July, 1581, his lordship had a grant in fee farm of the lands of Dounemaghell, and others in the county of Cork. "But his lordship and his wife being suspected in their loyalty, were sent for by the government to Cork, and the next day were brought thither by Capt. Walter Raleigh, from the castle of Ballinharsh; when his lordship being examined did so well answer for himself, that he was acquitted and taken for a true and good subject, and which in time was known by experience, for not he himself, but all his sons and followers did attend to and perform all such services as were laid upon them, and in which three of his sons were killed in her Majesty's service by the enemy. On the 18 October, 1577, he had a grant from Queen ELIZABETH for 30 years, of all the lands in Ballindrehed alias Ballindre, in Roche, and county; on the 26 October, 1588, the Queen granted to him and the heirs male of his body, a castle and lands in Johnstowne and Downe; and 24 October, 1600, he d. at his seat of Glanogher (as by inquisition), seized of the manor of Castletown and county." He m. 1st, Ellener, dau. of Sir Maurice Fitz-John, 3rd son of John, 14th Earl of Desmond; and 2ndly, Catharine, 3rd dau. of Gerald, 16th Earl of Desmond; by the latter, who survived him, he had no issue, yet by another inquisition he is said to have had his children by her; they were three sons, and two daus., viz.,

- I. DAVID, his heir.
- II. Theobald, who m. Grany, dau. of Sir Owen MacCarthy, on whom he settled divers lands, 25 January, 1602, and making his will, 21 January, 1620, d. 27th of that month, seized in fee of the castles, towns, and lands of Croagh-Mac-piers, containing five plough-lands, and several other lands and premises in co. Cork, held of the king in capite by knight's service, of which he made a settlement by indenture, dated 1 April, 1620, having issue by his said wife, who survived him, David, his heir, then aged sixteen years.
- III. John.
- I. Ellen, or rather Joan, m. to Donogh, 3rd Earl of Thomond.
- II. Amy, m. to Dermot MacCarthy, of Duhallow, alias Mac-Donogh.

The son and heir,

DAVID ROCHE, Viscount Fermoy, "was never touched with the least disloyalty against Queen ELIZABETH, yea, such loyal countenances did he always impress and practice, that in the universal inundation of treasons, when all Munster in general, and his father in particular, did combine against their anointed sovereign, at that time, and ever since did he continue himself within the lists of an obedient subject; 13 April, 1603, attended with about 800 soldiers and others, he proclaimed King JAMES I. in the north suburbs of the city of Cork, near Shandon bridge, the mayor of Cork refusing to do it; 22 February, 1604, he had a special livery of his estate; was present in the parliament of 1613, 1614, and 8 July, 1615, was rated £200 to the subsidy then granted; 16 December, 1611, upon his surrender, made 9th of that month, the king granted and confirmed to his lordship in fee (in consideration of his faithful services to his Majesty and Queen ELIZABETH, and also at his humble suit) the manor of Dounegroe, alias Castletown, and all other his estates in co. Cork, with the usual privileges belonging to manors; and to hold three weekly markets and three yearly fairs upon the premises. Also by letters from Westminster, 8 July, 1614, his Majesty, for the foregoing reasons, and in respect that he had been always true and loyal to the crown, and as a mark of his princely favour and royal bounty towards him, was pleased to direct a grant to be made to him and his heirs, of so many manors, lands, and other hereditaments, either abstracted or unjustly detained from the crown, as should be of the clear yearly value of £50 sterling, or thereabouts, as the same should be valued by the surveyor-general, and likewise such and so many other lands, being then in charge, as should amount to other £50 English per annum; which said lands, by deed dated 18 February following, his lordship assigned to Sir Gerald Aymer, of Muncetown, co. Dublin." He m. Joan, dau. of James, Viscount Buttevant, and dying at Castletown, 22 March, 1635, was buried 12 April in the abbey of Bridgetown, "with a solemn funeral according to his degree," having had issue five sons and four daus., viz.,

- I. MAURICE, his heir and successor.
- II. John, deaf and dumb, who d. unm. after 1642.
- III. Theobald (Sir), who m. Julia, dau. of Dominick, 1st Viscount Kilmallock, and left no issue by his said wife, who re-married with Philip Barry-Oge, of Rincorran, co. Cork, Esq.
- IV. Ulick, who m. Gyles (Cecilia) dau. of John O'Conor Kerry, of Carrigfoyll, co. Kerry, Esq., and had Theobald, of Ballymagoulán, who took to wife, Anne, dau. of John Boyle, and had Francis; David, who m. Miss Lundy; Joan, who m. Sir Tyrlogh MacMahon, Bart.; and Catharine, the wife of Charles MacCarthy, of Carrignevar, Esq.
- V. Redmond, who, 4 December, 1641, accompanied Sir William St. Leger, president of Munster, to quell the rebellion in co. Waterford. He m. 1st, Joan, dau. and co-heir to Sir John Dowdall, of Kilfinny, co. Limerick, Knt.; and 2ndly, Alice, dau. of Sir Richard Smyth, of Ballynatray, co. Waterford, Knt., but had no issue.
- I. Ellen, m. 1st, to Donell MacCarthy Reagh, of Kilbrittain, co. Cork, Esq.; 2ndly, to Charles, Viscount Muskerry; and 3rdly, to Thomas Fitzmaurice, 4th son of Thomas, 18th Lord Kerry.
- II. Ellinor.
- III. Joan.
- IV. Amy or Catherine, who m. John Everard, of Fethard, co. Tipperary, Esq.

The son and heir,

MAURICE ROCHE, Viscount Fermoy, took his seat in the House of Peers, 26 October, 1640, by proxy, when it was ordered by the lords, that the placing of him before the Lord Viscount Mountgarret, should be with a salvo jure to that lord who claimed precedence of him. After the commencement of the troubles in 1641, it appears, from sundry depositions, that his lordship was deeply engaged therein; he was a colonel in the Munster army, under their general, Garret Barry, and was at the siege of the garrison of Limerick, and the reduction of other places in that province, for which he was outlawed in the co. Cork, 23 October, 1643; and his estate, then forfeited, was divided by Cromwell amongst his followers, Viscount Roche, of Fermoy being excepted, by act of parliament, 12 August, 1652, from pardon for life or estate.* He m. Ellen, dau. of

* The following interesting document, transcribed from the Records of the Auditor-General's Office, Custom House, Dublin (Vol. 17, folio 112), furnishes some information respecting the Viscount:—

"March, 1660-1—To the Right Honourable ye L. L. Justices of Ireland.

"The humble petitioner, of Maurice, LORD VISCOUNT ROCHE, of Fermoy.

"Most humbly sheweth that your Petitioner, hath been seven years agoe dispossessed of his whole estate havinge the charge of Four young daughters, unpreferred, to whose misery was added the loss of their mother your Petitioner's wife by an unjust illegal proceeding, as is knowne and may be attested by ye best Protestant Nobility and Gentry of the County of Corke who have heard and scene it. And whose charitable compassion it moved:

"That your Petitioner, and his said children ever since have lived in a most disconsolate condition, destituted of all kinde of subsistence (except what Almes some good Christians did in charity afford them) by occasion whereof one of your Petitioner's daughters falling sick about three yeares agoe died for want of requisite accomodacion either for her cure or diet:

"That your Petitioner, had often supplicated those in authority in ye late Government for Reliefe who after ten months' attendance in Dublin gave him noe other succour but an order to ye Commissioners in Connaught to set out some lands for him De Bene Esse there or in ye County of Clare:

The elder son,

DAVID ROCHE, Viscount Fermoy, a naval officer, was drowned near Plymouth, in the great storm of 1703, and dying unmarried, was s. by his nephew,

ULICK ROCHE called Viscount Fermoy, who m. Miss Anne Carr, of the co. Northumberland, and d. 1733 (his will dated 6 November, 1729, was proved 16 June, 1733), leaving an only dau., ANNA-MARIA, who d. 1763; the title was subsequently assumed by DAVID ROCHE, of Ballydangan, a general in the King of Sardinia's service, who greatly distinguished himself in the war between Maria-Theresa and France, particularly at the siege of Gerona, in 1746.

Since his death, the title has not been assumed. The Roches of Trabolgan, co. Cork, descend from Philip Roche, merchant, of Cork, who by deed, dated April, 1554, purchased from Gerald, Lord Kingsale, the estates now enjoyed partly by Thomas Cuthbert-Kearney, Esq., of Garretstown, co. Cork, and by the Right Hon. EDMUND-BURKE ROCHE, LORD FERMOY, who was elevated to the peerage of Ireland as BARON FERMOY, 10 September, 1856 (see Peerage).

ROLLE—BARON ROLLE.

By Letters Patent, dated 8 January, 1748; and 20 June, 1796.

Lineage.

This family was originally of the co. Dorset, and the first of its members that removed into Devon, was

GEORGE ROLLE, a merchant of great opulence and high reputation in the city of London, who became an extensive purchaser of abbey lands. Besides which he bought temp. HENRY VIII., the seat, manor, and large demesnes of Stevenstone, in Devonshire, from the Moyles, who had acquired the property by marriage with the heiress of the Stevenstones, the former lords. This George Rolle married thrice, and had no less than twenty children. By his 2nd wife, Eleanor, 2nd dau. of Henry Dacres, Esq., of London, merchant, he had (with two daus.) six sons, viz.,

JOHN, his successor, whose male line became EXTINCT.

GEORGE, of whom presently.

Christopher, d. unm.

Henry, who m. Mary, dau. and heir of Robert Yeo, Esq., of Heanton, and was grandfather of two brothers, Sir Samuel Rolle, ancestor (in the female line) of Lord Clinton; and Henry Rolle, an eminent lawyer, who became lord chief justice, and one of the council of state, during the first years of the Commonwealth, from 1648 to 1655.

Robert.

Maurice.

The 2nd son,

GEORGE ROLLE, Esq., m. Margaret, dau. and heiress of Edmund Marraia, Esq., of Marraia, in Cornwall, and was s. by his son,

ANDREW ROLLE, Esq., of Marraia, whose son,

SIR JOHN ROLLE, K.B., inherited Stevenstone, and became chief of the family upon the failure of the male line of John Rolle, Esq., his great uncle in 1647. This gentleman, who was zealously attached to King CHARLES II., accompanied that monarch from Holland upon his Restoration, and was made a knight of the Bath, at the ensuing coronation. Sir John Rolle afterwards represented Devon in parliament, and was a leading member of the House of Commons. He m. Florence, dau. and co-heir of Dennis Rolle, Esq., and dying at an advanced age, in 1706 (accounted the wealthiest commoner in England), was s. by his grandson,

ROBERT ROLLE, Esq., M.P. (son of John Rolle and the Lady Christian Bruce, his wife), he d. s. p. in 1710, and was s. by his brother,

JOHN ROLLE, Esq., M.P. for the co. Devon. This gentleman is said to have been offered an earldom by Queen ANNE's last ministry, and to have declined it. He m. Isabella, dau. of Sir William Walter, Bart., of Sarsden, in Oxfordshire, and grand-dau. (maternally) of Robert, Earl of Allesbury, by whom he had issue,

i. HENRY, his successor.

ii. John, M.P., co. Devon, who assumed the surname of WALTER, d. in 1779.

iii. William, d. s. p.

iv. Dennis, of Tuderly, Hanta, and of Shapwick, co. Somerset, father of JOHN, last Lord ROLLE.

i. Christian, m. to Henry Stevens, Esq., of Winscot, co. Devon.

ii. Isabella, m. to Robert Duke, Esq., of Otterton.

iii. Letitia.

iv. Lucilla.

Mr. Rolle d. 6 May, 1730, and was s. by his eldest son,

HENRY ROLLE, Esq., M.P., co. Devon, D.C.L., b. 7 November, 1708, who was elevated to the peerage, 8 January, 1747-8, by the title of BARON ROLLE, of Stevenstone, co. Devon. His lordship d. unm. in 1759, when the dignity became EXTINCT, but the estates devolved on his brother,

DENNIS ROLLE, Esq., who then became of Stevenstone. He m., 1748, Ann, dau. of Arthur Chichester, Esq., of Stowford and Hall, co. Devon, and was s. at his decease, 25 July, 1797, by his son,

JOHN ROLLE, Esq., of Stevenstone, and Bickton, b. 16 October, 1756, who was elevated to the peerage, 20 June, 1796, as BARON ROLLE, of Stevenstone, co. Devon: he m. 1st, 22 February, 1778, Judith Maria, dau. and heir of Henry Walrond, Esq., of Bovey, co. Devon, which lady d. 1 October, 1820; and 2ndly, 24 September, 1822, the Hon. Louisa Trefusis, 3rd dau. of Robert-George-William, 16th Lord Clinton. His lordship d. s. p. 1842, when the barony EXPIRED.

ROMARE—EARL OF LINCOLN.

Created circa 1142.

Lineage.

The first of this name upon record,

ROBERT DE ROMARE, feudal Lord of Bolingbroke, co. Lincoln, m. Lucia, dau. and co-heir of Ivo de Tailboys; by whom (who m. after his decease, Ranulph de Meschines, Earl of Chester), he had a son and successor,

WILLIAM DE ROMARE, Lord of Bolingbroke, who, in 1118, being governor of the garrison of Newmarch, in Normandy, stoutly resisted Hugh de Gournay, then in rebellion there; and remaining firm in his allegiance to King HENRY I., was with that monarch at the battle of Brenneville, where a glorious victory was achieved over Lewis, King of France. Long after this, however, having laid claim, unsuccessfully, to those lands in England, of his mother's inheritance, which Ranulph, Earl of Chester, her last husband, had delivered up to the king, in exchange for the earldom, he returned to Normandy in great indignation, and rearing the standard of rebellion in favour of William, son of Robert Curthose, continued in open hostility for two years, but the king at length made him compensation and restored him to the greater part of his right. Whereupon being honourably reconciled, Henry gave him in marriage a noble lady, viz., Maud, dau. of Richard de Redvers, Earl of Devon. Upon the decease of HENRY I., and the accession of Stephen, this eminent person espoused the cause of the new monarch, who appointed him one of his principal delegates to administer justice in Normandy; but he soon after went over to the Empress MAUD, and joined his half-brother, Ranulph, Earl of Chester, in the surprisal of the castle of Lincoln (anno 1141). He had subsequently a command at the battle of Lincoln, so disastrous to the fortunes of STEPHEN, and the next year (1142) bore the title of EARL OF LINCOLN, in the grant by which he founded the Cistercian monastery at Revesby, in that co. His lordship had issue,

William, who d. v. p. (1152), leaving by Hawise, dau. of Stephen, Earl of Albemarle, a son,

WILLIAM.

Hawyse, m. to Gilbert de Gant (see GANT, Earls of Lincoln)

The earl was s. at his decease, by his grandson,

WILLIAM DE ROMARE, Lord of Bolingbroke, who never assumed the title of Earl of Lincoln. In the 12th HENRY II., on the assessment of aid for marriage of the king's dau., he certified his knights' fees de veteri feoffamento, to be thirty-two, and those de novo, twenty-five, a fourth and a third part. This feudal lord d. without issue, when the male line of the family ceased, but the earldom passed through the dau. of Earl William, to the house of Gant (See GANT, Earls of Lincoln).

ROPER—VISCOUNT BALTINGLASS.

By Letters Patent, dated 27 June, 1627.

Lineage.

THE RIGHT HON. SIR THOMAS ROPER, Knight, a member of the Irish privy council, "a very valiant commander in this said realme of Ireland, in the reigns of Queen ELIZABETH, of most famous memory," m. Dame ANN, dau. of Sir Henry Harrington, some time of Baltinglass, Knt., brother to Sir John Harrington, Knt., Lord Harrington in England, and had issue six sons and three daus., viz., I. THOMAS; II. Christopher, who m. Anne, dau. of Rolland Wilcocks, of Coventry, Esq., and widow of Sherrington Talbot, Esq., and had two daus., Ruth, m. to Thomas Langley, Esq., and Dorothea; III. Henry; IV. John, slain at Marston Moor; V. CARY; VI. Robert; I. Ruth, m. to Sir Edward Denny, of Tralee, co. Kerry, Knight; II. Mary, 2nd wife of Rev. Thomas Fuller, D.D., author of "The Worthies;" III. Elizabeth, m. to Thomas Humphrey, Esq., of Swepston.

Sir Thomas had an assignment of the site of the dissolved monastery and lordship of Baltinglass, and other lands confirmed to him by royal patent of CHARLES I., 10 November, 1626, "in regard of the many acceptable services done unto our father and the late Queen ELIZABETH," and "having performed many worthy services in the last war, and gained an extraordinary reputation in the eminent employments of command and government,"—(King's Letter, dated at Westminster, 18 May, 3rd of King CHARLES I.), he was by letters patent, bearing date 27 June of that year, 1627, created a Baronet of Ireland, and raised to the Irish peerage as Baron of Bantry, co. Cork, and Viscount BALTINGLASS, co. Wicklow, with remainder to the heirs male of his body. By a king's letter of 26 February, 1629, the viscount had a respite of £2,000 arrears due upon his farm of the licensing of ale houses, and £1,000 received from the clergy, and a pension of six shillings a-day assigned by the viscount to one of his sons, as well as his pay as captain of a company of fifty to be secured to him. The viscount d. 15 February, 1637, and was buried in St John's church, Dublin, 20th same month. His eldest son and successor,

THOMAS ROPER, 2nd Viscount Baltinglass, m. Anne, dau. of Sir Peter Temple, Bart., of Stowe, Bucks, but d. s. p. in 1665, and was s. by his brother,

CARY ROPER, 3rd Viscount Baltinglass, who d. and was buried at Castle Lyons in 1676.

Arms—Erm., two chevrons, paly, or and gu.

ROS, OR ROOS—BARONS ROS.

By Writ of Summons, dated 24 December, 1264.

Lineage.

"That Peter, the ancestor of this great and noble family," says Dugdale, "did originally assume his surname in the time of HENRY I., from that lordship in Holderness, called Ros, where he then had his residence, needeth not to be doubted." This

PETER DE ROS, or ROOS, a feudal baron, m. Adeline, one of the sisters and co-heirs of the famous Walter Espec, Lord of the manor of Helmesley, called sometimes Helmeslac, but oftener Hamlake, in the north riding of Yorkshire, and was s. at his decease, by his son, ROBERT DE ROS, who, in the 3rd HENRY II., paid 1,000 marks of silver to the king for livery of the lands inherited by his mother from her brother, Walter Espec. This Robert was a munificent benefactor to the Knights Templars. He m. Sybelle de Valoines (who, after his decease, m. Ralph de Albini,) and dying sometime about the middle of the 12th century, was s. by his son.

EVERARD DE ROS, a minor, and in ward to Ranulph de Glanvil. In the 12th HENRY II., this feudal lord held of the crown eight knights' fees, and in two years afterwards, upon collection of the aid for marrying the king's dau., answered 112s. for those which were de veteri feoffamento, and 31s. 1d. for what he had de novo. He m. Roysia, dau. of William Trusbut, of Wartre, in Holderness, and at the decease of her brothers, s. p., co-heir to her father's estate, which estate was eventually inherited by her descendants, Lords Ros, her sisters and co-heirs having no posterity. They had two sons. This Everard de Ros must have been a very considerable personage at the period in which he lived, for we find him in the year 1176, paying the then very large sum of £526 as a fine for his lands, and in four years subsequently, £100 more to have possession of those which the Earl of Albemarle held. He d. about 1186, and was s. by his elder son, ROBERT DE ROS, surnamed Farfaw, who, in the 1st RICHARD I., paid 1,000 marks fine to the crown for livery of his lands. In the 8th of the same reign, being with the king in Normandy, he was committed to the custody of Hugh de Chaumont, for what offence appears not; with especial charge to the said Hugh, that he should keep him as safe as his own life; but Chaumont trusting William de Spiney with his prisoner, that person being corrupted, allowed him to escape out of the castle of Bonville. De Ros eventually gained nothing, however, by this escape, for RICHARD caused him nevertheless to pay 1,200 marks for his freedom, while he had the false traitor Spiney, hanged for his breach of faith. In the next reign, however, Robert de Ros found more favour, for upon the accession of King JOHN, that monarch gave him the whole barony of his great-grandmother's father, Walter Espee, to enjoy in as large and ample a manner as he, the said Walter, ever held it. Soon after which he was deputed, with the bishop of Durham, and other great men, to escort WILLIAM, King of Scotland into England, which monarch coming to Lincoln, swore fealty there to King JOHN, upon the cross of Hubert, archbishop of Canterbury, in the presence of all the people. About the 14th of King JOHN's reign, Robert de Ros assumed the habit of a monk, whereupon the custody of all his lands, viz., Werke Castle, in the co. Northumberland, with his whole barony, was committed to Philip de Ulcote, but he did not continue long a recluse, for we find him the very next year executing the office of sheriff for the county of Cumberland. At the commencement of the struggle between the barons and JOHN, this feudal lord took part with the king, and obtained, in consequence, some grants from the crown; but he subsequently espoused the baronial cause, and was one of the celebrated twenty-five appointed to enforce the observance of Magna Charter. In the reign of King HENRY III. he seems, however, to have returned to his allegiance, and to have been in favour with that prince, for the year after the king's accession, a precept was issued by the crown to the sheriff of Cumberland, ordering the restoration of certain manors granted by King JOHN to De Ros. This feudal lord was the founder of the castle of Helmesley, otherwise Hamlake, in Yorkshire, and of the castle of Werke, in Northumberland—the former of which he bequeathed to his elder son—the latter to the younger, with a barony in Scotland, to be held of the elder by military service. In his latter days he became a Knight Templar, to which order himself and his predecessors had ever been munificently liberal, and dying in that habit, anno 1227, was buried in the Temple Church. Robert de Ros m. Isabel, natural dau. of WILLIAM THE LION, King of Scotland, and widow of Robert de Brus, and had issue two sons,

WILLIAM, his successor.

ROBERT, Baron Ros, of Werke, concerning whom see next article.

He was s. by his elder son,

WILLIAM DE ROS, of Hamlake, who, upon giving security for the payment of £100 for his relief, had livery of his lands. This feudal lord, in the lifetime of his father, was an active supporter of the baronial cause, and was made prisoner at the battle of Lincoln (1st HENRY III.) by the royalists, but soon after released and delivered up to his father upon bail. He was subsequently engaged in the wars of Gascony, and he had two military summonses in the 42nd HENRY III., to march against the Scots and Welsh. By the deaths of his two great aunts, the sisters of his grandmother, Rose Trusbut, s. p., he became sole heir of the baronial estate of Trusbut and Wartre. He m. Lucia, dau. of Reginald Fitz-Piers, of Blewlevey, in Wales, and d. in 1258. He was s. by his son,

ROBERT DE ROS, who had m. in the lifetime of his father, Isabel, dau. and heiress of William de Albini, feudal lord of Belvoir, in Leicestershire, by whom he acquired Belvoir Castle, co. Lincoln (see Daubeney, Barons Daubeney, and Earl of Bridgewater), and other extensive landed possessions. This great heiress was in ward to the king, and a mandate upon her marriage, bearing date at Windsor, 17 May, 1244, was directed to Bernard de Savoy and Hugh Giffard, to deliver her to her husband, the said Robert: "but not," says Dugdale, "without a round composition, for it appears that both he and his wife, in the 32nd HENRY III., were debtors to the king in no less than the sum of £3,285 13s. 4d., and a palfrey; of which sum the king was then pleased to accept by 200 marks a year until it should be all paid." In the 42nd of the same reign he had two military summonses with his father, to march against the Scotch and Welsh—but afterwards rearing, with the other barons, the standard of revolt, he had a chief command at the battle of Lewes, so disastrous to the royalists; and to his custody in the castle of Hereford, was especially committed the person of Prince Edward. He was at the same time summoned 24 December, 1264, as Baron de Ros, to the parliament then called in the king's name by the victorious lords. But the fortune of war changing at the subsequent battle of Evesham, his lands were all seized by the crown, and held until redeemed by his lordship under the Dictum of Kenilworth. In two years after this he must, however, have regained somewhat of royal favour, for he had then permission to raise a new embattled wall around the castle of Belvoir. He d. 16 June, 1285, leaving issue by the heiress of Belvoir,

WILLIAM, his successor.

Robert (Sir), knighted 1296.

Isabel, m. to Walter de Fauconberge.

His lordship was s. by his elder son,

WILLIAM DE ROS, 2nd baron, b. 1255, summoned to parliament as Baron Ros, of Hamlake, from 23 June, 1295, to 6 October, 1315. This nobleman was one of the competitors for the crown of Scotland, in the 19th EDWARD I., 1296, through his grandmother, Isabel, natural dau. of WILLIAM THE LION, King of Scotland. He was subsequently engaged in the wars of Gascony and Scotland, and discovering the intention of his kinsman, Robert de Ros, then Lord of Werke, to deliver up that castle to the Scots, he lost no time in apprising the king, who thereupon despatched him with 1000 men to defend that place, but the Scots attacking this force upon its march, cut it to pieces; when EDWARD himself advancing from Newcastle-upon-Tyne, soon obtained possession of the fort, and appointed Lord Ros its governor—allowing him, during his absence in Gascony, to nominate his brother, Robert, lieutenant. In a short time after, he had a grant of this castle, with its appurtenances, forfeited by the treason of his before-mentioned kinsman; and for several subsequent years, his lordship was actively engaged in Scotland. In the 1st EDWARD II., he was constituted the king's lieutenant, between Berwick and the river Forth, and in six years afterwards, he was appointed warden of the west marches of Scotland. He m. Maud, or Matilda, one of the dau. and co-heirs of John de Vaux, who brought him the manor of Foston, and lands in Boston, co. Lincoln, and had issue,

I. WILLIAM, his successor.

II. JOHN, a very eminent person, temp. EDWARD II. and EDWARD III. In the former reign, he took an active part against the Spencers, and, upon the accession of the latter king he was appointed steward of the household, and entrusted with a command in Scotland. He was likewise constituted one of the governors of the young monarch. In the 10th of the same reign, he was made admiral of the seas, from the river Thames, northwards; and the next year, he was with the king in Gascony, as he was again in two years afterwards. He was summoned to parliament as Baron de Ros, from 27 January, 1332, to 15 June, 1338, but d. s. p. in the latter year, when the barony became EXTINCT, while his property devolved upon his brother, William, Lord Ros, of Hamlake.

III. Thomas.

I. Margaret.

II. Anne, m. to Paine, son of Robert de Tibetot.

III. Mary, m. 1st, to William Braose, and 2ndly, to Thomas de Brotherton, Duke of Norfolk.

His lordship d. in 1316, and was s. by his elder son,

WILLIAM DE ROS, 3rd baron, summoned to parliament, from 20 November, 1317, to 12 September, 1342. This nobleman, in the 5th EDWARD II., was one of the commissioners appointed to negotiate peace with ROBERT BRUCE, King of Scotland, about which time he came to an agreement with the king, regarding the castle of Werke, which he then exchanged with the crown for other lands. He was subsequently much engaged in the wars of Gascony and Scotland. His lordship m. Margery, elder sister and co-heir of Giles de Badlesmere, of Ledes Castle, in Kent, a great feudal baron, by whom he had issue,

WILLIAM, his heir.

THOMAS, who s. his brother.

Margaret. Maud, m. to John, Lord Welles.

Alice, m. Nicholas, Lord Meinell.

Milcent, m. to William, Lord d'Eyncourt.

He d. 16 February, 1342-3, and was s. by his elder son,

WILLIAM DE ROS, 4th baron, b. 1326, summoned to parliament, from 25 November, 1350, to 20 November, 1351. This nobleman was one of the eminent martial characters of the glorious reign of EDWARD III. He was at the memorable battle of Cressy, a leader in the 2nd brigade of the English army; he had a command at Newcastle-upon-Tyne, in the conflict, where DAVID BRUCE, King of Scotland, and many of his nobles, after sustaining a defeat, fell into the hands of the English; and he was subsequently (21st EDWARD III.) at the siege of Calais with the Black Prince. His lordship m. Margaret, dau. of Ralph, Lord Nevill (who m. after his decease, Henry, Lord Percy), but dying in the Holy Land, in 1352, s. p., he was s. by his brother,

THOMAS DE ROS, 5th baron, summoned to parliament, from 24 August, 1362, to 3 March, 1384. This nobleman was also engaged in the French wars, and is supposed to have shared the glory of Poitiers. His lordship m. Beatrix, dau. of Ralph, 1st Earl of Stafford, and widow of Maurice, Fitz-Maurice, 2nd Earl of Desmond, by whom he had issue, JOHN, William, Thomas, Robert, Elizabeth, m. 1st to Lord Zouche, of Haryngworth, and 2ndly, to Thomas, son and heir of Roger, Lord Clifford; and Margaret. He d. in 1384, and was s. by his eldest son,

JOHN DE ROS, 6th baron, summoned to parliament, from 8 August, 1386, to 13 November, 1393. This nobleman was in the naval expedition in the 11th RICHARD II., under Richard, Earl of Arundel, and the next year he was joined with Henry, Earl of Northumberland, and Ralph, Lord Nevill, in the government of Carlisle, and wardenship of the west marches of Scotland. His lordship, who was not less distinguished for piety than valour, d. upon his pilgrimage to Jerusalem, at Paphos, in the Isle of Cyprus, anno 1393-4. He m. Mary, dau. of Henry de Percy, but having no issue, was s. by his brother,

WILLIAM DE ROS, 7th baron, summoned to parliament, from 20 November, 1394, to 24 December, 1413. This nobleman was appointed lord treasurer of England, in the 4th HENRY IV., and in the 6th he obtained, in consideration of his services, a grant from the crown of 100 marks per annum for his life, to be paid out of the exchequer. In the 16th of the same reign, being then one of the king's council, and in such esteem that his residence near the court was deemed indispensable, he had the town of Chyngilford, in Essex, assigned him, for the abode of his servants and horses. It was about this period that his lordship preferred a complaint in parliament against Robert Tirwhit, one of the justices of the King's Bench, for withholding from him, and his tenants, of the manor of Melton Roos, co. Lincoln, certain commonage of pasture and turbay, and with lying in wait for him, with 500 men. To which charges, Mr. Justice Tirwhit pleading guilty in the presence of the king, and craving pardon, the case was referred to the chief justice, Sir William Gascoigne, who determined that Tirwhit, attended by all his party, should meet Lord Ros, at the common in dispute, and bring with him two tuns of Gascony wine, with two fat oxen, and twelve fat sheep, as provision for a dinner, to be then eaten by the assembled friends and adherents of the disputants, and that Tirwhit, in the presence of all, should make Lord Ros, a most submissive apology, tendering him, at the same time, 500 hundred marks, as a compensation. To which, it was also settled by the arbitrator, that the baron should reply; "At reverence of the king, who hath shewed himself to be a good and righteous lord; I will take nothing but the oxen and sheep, for the dinner of those here collected." A free and open act of forgiveness was to follow this speech to Tirwhit and his partisans, and thus the matter terminated. His lordship m. Margaret, dau. of Sir John Arundel, son of John Fitzalan, Lord Maltrevera, 2nd son of Richard, 9th Earl of Arundel. Lord De Ros d. at Belvoir, 1 September, 1414, having had issue,

I. JOHN, of whom presently.

II. Thomas.

III. Robert (Sir), whose dau., Elizabeth, m. 1st, Robert Lovel, 2ndly, Thomas Proude, and 3rdly, Sir Richard Haut.

IV. William.

V. Richard, who had a dau., Mary, m. to Sir Giles Capel.

I. Beatrice, a nun.

II. Alice.

III. Margaret, m. 1st, Reginald, Lord Grey de Ruthyn, and 2ndly, to James, Lord Audley.

IV. Elizabeth, m. to Robert, 6th Lord Morley.

The eldest son,

JOHN DE ROS, 8th baron, but never summoned to parliament. His lordship was retained in the 4th HENRY V., to serve the king in France, being then scarcely eighteen years of age. In two years afterwards he was with the Dukes of Exeter and Clarence at the siege of Roan, where he so gallantly distinguished himself, that he had a grant of the castle of Basqueville, in Normandy, to himself and his heirs male for ever. Continuing in those wars, he was slain within two years, anno 1421, at Beaugé, in which disastrous battle his brother, William de Ros, as well as the Duke of Clarence (under whom he served), and a great many of the flower of the English nobility fell. His lordship m. Margaret, dau. and heir of Sir Philip Despenser, but having had no issue (his widow m. 2ndly, Sir Roger Wentworth), was s. by his next brother,

SIR THOMAS DE ROS, 9th baron, summoned to parliament 12 July, and 3 August, 1420. This nobleman m. Allanor, dau. of Richard Beauchamp, Earl of Warwick, and was a. at his decease, 18 August, 1431, by his eldest son,

THOMAS DE ROS, 10th baron, b. 9 September, 1427. During the minority of this nobleman, his great uncle, Sir Robert Ros, Knt., was deputed by the king to perform the office of chamberlain to the archbishop of Canterbury upon the day of his installation, which office belonged to the Lord Ros, in right of the tenure of a certain manor. His lordship, who was in ward to the crown, had, by especial favour, the livery of his lands in the 24th HENRY VI. In the memorable contests commenced in that monarch's reign between the houses of Lancaster and York, Lord Ros entered zealously into the cause of the former, and participated in its disasters, particularly at the battle of Towton-field. Being with the king at York, when tidings of the defeat reached the unfortunate monarch, he fled with his royal master to Berwick, and was attainted in the 1st EDWARD IV., when his lands were confiscated, and Belvoir Castle granted to the Lord Hastings, who eventually dismantled the splendid structure, which remained from that period little better than a heap of ruins until the reigns of HENRY VIII. and ELIZABETH, when its renovation was commenced, and completed by Thomas and Henry Manners, 1st and 2nd Earls of Rutland. His lordship m. Philippa, dau. of John, Lord Tiptoft, and sister and co-heir of John, Earl of Worcester, and by her (who m. 2ndly, Sir Thomas Wingfield, and 3rdly, Edward Grimston) had issue,

EDMUND. John, d. s. p.
 ELEANOR, m. to SIR ROBERT MANNERS, M.P., ancestor of the Earls and Dukes of Rutland and of the present LORD DE ROS.
 ISABEL, m. 1st, to Sir Thomas Everingham, 2ndly, to Thomas Grey, youngest son of Sir Ralph Grey, of Werke, and 3rdly, to Sir Thomas Lovel, K.G.: she d. s. p. 1524.
 MARGARET, d. unm.

Lord Ros was summoned to parliament from 2 January, 1449, to 30 July, 1460. He was attainted 4 November, 1461, and his honours thereupon became forfeited. He d. in the same year. The Barony of Ros lay under the attainder until the complete triumph of the Lancastrians, by the accession of King HENRY VII., when the elder son, EDMUND DE ROS, obtained (1st HENRY VII.) an act of parliament, annulling and making entirely void the act by which his father was attainted, and restoring to him all the estates and honours of the family. He was never, however, summoned to parliament. His lordship d. 13 October, 1508, unm., when the Barony of Ros fell into ABEYANCE between his three sisters and co-heirs, but the two younger sisters having d. s. p., the abeyance terminated in favour of Sir GEORGE MANNERS, the son and heir of Sir Robert and Lady Eleanor Manners. His eldest son was created EARL OF RUTLAND, and the title of Ros descended for some generations in that family. (For particulars refer to BURKE'S Peerage).

Thus terminated the male line of the family of DE ROS, BARONS ROS, of Hamlake, but the barony has long survived its original possessors, and after having remained in ABEYANCE from the year 1687, was after the lapse of nearly a century and a quarter, called out of abeyance in 1806 in favour of Lady Henry Fitzgerald, who assumed the additional surname of DE ROS, and was mother of the late and present LORDS DE ROS. For particulars of more recent lineage, refer to the Extant Peerage.

By Writ of Summons, dated 24 June, 1295.

Lineage.

ROBERT DE ROS, feudal Lord of Hamlake (refer to that family), conferred the castle and Barony of Werke, co. Northumberland, which he held of the crown by the service of two knights' fees, upon his younger son,

ROBERT DE ROS, who, in the 21st HENRY III., was constituted chief justice of the forest in the counties of Nottingham, Derby, York, Lancaster, Northumberland, and Cumberland, which office he held for several years afterwards. In the 39th of the same reign he made a temporary surrender of his castle of Werke to the king, who was then advancing with an army upon Scotland, and deemed it impolitic to permit so strong a fort to remain in private hands. About this time charges were preferred against Robert de Ros, to whose care and guidance, with John de Baliol, the kingdom of Scotland, as well as its King, ALEXANDER III., and the Queen MARGARET (dau. of the English monarch), were committed, for arbitrary conduct in the discharge of his duty; for which he was, eventually, fined no less than 100,000 marks, but his innocence appearing afterwards manifest, the penalty was entirely remitted. In the 22nd EDWARD I., he had summons with other of the barons to repair to the king, to advise upon the affairs of the realm; and the next year he was summoned to parliament, 24 June, 1 October, and 2 November, by writ addressed "Roberto de Roos de Werke," but never afterwards. In a short time, subsequently, however, falling in love with a Scottish lady, he deserted to the Scots, having previously endeavoured to seduce from his allegiance, his kinsman, Lord Ros, of Hamlake. But that nobleman repairing to King EDWARD divulged the treason, and was forthwith despatched at the head of 1,000 men to take possession of Werke, whither he was proceeding, when Robert de Ros, with a great body of Scots, surprised him at the village of Presten, and cut the whole English force to pieces. King EDWARD very shortly, however, most amply avenged himself, at the battle of Dunbar, where no less than 10,053 Scotamen fell: and Werke coming into the possession of the crown, was conferred upon Lord Ros, of Hamlake.

Robert, Lord Ros, of Werke, m. Margaret, one of the four sisters and co-heirs of Peter de Brus, of Skelton, but regarding his heirs the records differ, but the more reliable state that he had a son, WILLIAM, to whom his mother gave the castle of Kendal; and from whom descended his eventual heir ELIZABETH DE ROS, m. Sir William Parr, Knight, from whom sprang the PARRS of Kendal, ennobled by that title, which see. The barony of Ros of Werke EXPIRED under the treason of the baron.

John de Ros, 2nd son of William de Ros, 2nd Baron Ros, of Hamlake.

ROSS—LORD ROSS.

Lineage.

SIR JOHN ROSS, of Halkhead, in Renfrewshire, son and heir of Sir John Ross, of Halkhead, was one of the conservators of a treaty with the English, 20 September, 1484, under the designation of John Rosse de Halkhede, miles. Ross Dominus de Halkhed occurs among the barons in the parliament, 3 February, 1489-90; and Ross de Halkhed is inserted among the Domini barones in the parliament, 11 March, 1503-4. His son and heir,

JOHN ROSS, 2nd Lord Ross, of Halkhead, fell at the battle of Flodden, 9 September, 1513. By Christian, his wife, dau. of Archibald Edmonston, of Duntreath, he had a son,

NINIAN ROSS, 3rd Lord Ross, of Halkhead, one of the Scottish nobles who, in 1515, despatched ambassadors to France, to endeavour to include Scotland in the pacification with England. He m. 1st, Lady Janet Stewart, 3rd dau. of John, Earl of Lennox, by whom he had a son, ROBERT, Master of Ross, killed at Pinkie in 1547, leaving a dau., Elizabeth, wife of John, Lord Fleming. Lord Ross m. 2ndly, Elizabeth, dau. of William, 1st Lord Ruthven, and relict of William, 8th Earl of Erroll, by whom he had a son,

JAMES ROSS, 4th Lord Ross; who d. in April, 1581, leaving by Jean, his wife, dau. of Robert, 3rd Lord Semphill, two sons,

ROBERT, his heir.
William (Sir), of Muiriston.
Elizabeth, m. to Alan Lockhart, jun., of Cleghorn.
Jean, m. to Sir James Sandilands, of Calder.
The son and heir,

ROBERT ROSS, 5th Lord Ross, m. Jean, dau. of Gavin Hamilton, of Raploch, by whom he had a dau. (Grizel, m. to Sir Archibald Stirling, of Keir and Cawder,) and a son,

JAMES ROSS, 6th Lord Ross; who m. Margaret, eldest dau. of Walter, 1st Lord Scott, of Buccleuch, and by her (who m. 2ndly, Alexander, 6th Earl of Eglinton, and d. in October, 1651) he had issue,

JAMES, 7th Lord Ross.

WILLIAM, 8th Lord Ross.

ROBERT, 9th Lord Ross.

Margaret, b. 19 December, 1615; m. to Sir George Stirling, of Keir and Cawder; and d. 10 March, 1633, aged eighteen, leaving one dau., Margaret, who d. 11 May, 1633.

Mary, m. to John Hepburn, of Waughton.

Jean, m. to Sir Robert Innes, Bart. of Innes.

JAMES ROSS, 7th Lord Ross, the eldest son, was served heir of his father in the lordship and Barony of Melville, &c., 18 September, 1634, and had charters of Halkhead, Melville, Craig, and Balgowne, 25 January, 1636; also of Easter Stanley, in Renfrewshire. He d. unm. 17 March, 1636, and was s. by his brother,

WILLIAM ROSS, 8th Lord Ross; who also d. unm. in August, 1640, and was s. by his brother,

ROBERT ROSS, 9th Lord Ross; who d. unm. in August, 1648, when his estates and titles devolved on the heir male (the son of Sir William Ross, of Muiriston, 2nd son of James, 4th Lord Ross),

SIR WILLIAM ROSS, of Muiriston, as 10th Lord Ross. His lordship was colonel of foot in the cos. of Ayr and Renfrew, in 1648, and one of the committee of estates in 1649. He d. in 1656, leaving by Helen, his wife, eldest dau. of George, 1st Lord Forrester, of Corstorphine, a son and heir,

GEORGE ROSS, 11th Lord Ross; who, on the restoration of CHARLES II., was sworn a privy councillor, and appointed lieutenant-colonel of the royal regiment of guards. He m. 1st, Lady Grizel Cochrane, only dau. of William, 1st Earl of Dundonald, and had issue,

WILLIAM, 12th Lord Ross.

Grizel, m. to Sir Alexander Gilmour, Bart., of Craigmiller, co. Edinburgh.

His lordship m. 2ndly, Lady Jean Ramsay, eldest dau. of George, 2nd Earl of Dalhousie, and by her (who took to her 2nd husband, Robert, Viscount of Oxford) had issue,

Charles, of Balnagowan, colonel of the 5th, or royal Irish regiment of dragoons, from 1695 to 1716, and again from 1726 to 1732; who ranked as general in the army from 1 April, 1712. He d. unm. at Bath, 5 August, 1732, and was buried at Fearn, in Ross-shire.

Jean, m. to William, 6th Earl of Dalhousie, and had issue.

The eldest son,

WILLIAM ROSS, 12th Lord Ross, b. 1656, s. his father, 1692. He entered zealously into the revolution, 1689; was a privy councillor to King WILLIAM and Queen ANNE, high commissioner to the church of Scotland, 1704; one of the lords of the treasury, and a commissioner for the Union, of which treaty he was a staunch supporter. He was chosen one of the sixteen representatives of the Scottish peerage at the general election, 1715; appointed lieutenant of the co. of Renfrew, the same year; and d. at Halkhead, 15 March, 1738, in the eighty-second year of his age. His lordship m. 1st, 7 February, 1679, Agnes, dau. and heiress of Sir John Wilkie, of Foulden, co. Berwick, and by her had issue,

GEORGE, 13th Lord Ross.

Eupheme, m. to William, 3rd Earl of Kilmarnock, and had issue.

Mary, m. in 1710, to John, 1st Duke of Athole, and had issue.

Grizel, m. to Sir James Lockhart, Bart., of Carstairs, co. Lanark, who d. 31 July, 1755: the great grandson and heir male of this marriage is the present SIR CHARLES-WILLIAM-AUGUSTUS ROSS, Bart., of Balnagowan.

Lord Ross m. 2ndly, a dau. of Philip, Lord Wharton, but she d. s. p.; and 3rdly, Lady Anne Hay, eldest dau. of John, 2nd Marquess of Tweeddale, by whom he had one dau.,

Anno, who d. unm.

He lordship m. 4thly (contract dated 16 June, 1731), Henrietta, dau. of Sir Francis Scott, of Thirlestane, but by her, who d. at Edinburgh, 16 January, 1750, had no issue. His only son,

GEORGE ROSS, 13th Lord Ross, was appointed one of the commissioners of excise in Scotland, 24 November, 1726, and one of the commissioners of customs, 21 September, 1730. He s. his father in 1738; made a settlement of his estates 17 June, 1751, on his son, and the heirs of his body; which failing, on his dau., Jane, Elizabeth, and Mary, respectively, and the heirs male of their bodies, remainder to his nearest heirs and assigns; and dying 17 June, 1754, in the 73rd year of his age, was buried at Renfrew. He m. Lady Elizabeth Kerr, 3rd dau. of William, 2nd Marquess of Lothian, and by her, who d. at Halkhead, 22 May, 1758, had issue,

WILLIAM, 14th Lord Ross.

Charles, M.P. for Renfrewshire, who, in 1732, s. to the estate of Balnagowan, in virtue of an entail executed by his uncle, 1727. He held a commission in the army, and fell at the battle of Fontenoy, 30 April, 1745, unm.; the estate of Balnagowan devolving on his father.

George, d. s. p.

Jane, m. 23 July, 1755, to John Mackye of Polgowan, M.P., who took the name of Ross, but d. s. p., at Clifton, 19 August, 1777.

ELIZABETH (eventually heiress), m. 11 June, 1755, to John Boyle, 3rd Earl of Glasgow, and had issue: the son and heir, GEORGE, 4th Earl of Glasgow, G.C.H., was created a peer of the United Kingdom, 11 August, 1815, and took the title of BARON ROSS, of Halkhead, co. Renfrew.

Mary, d. unm. at London, 22 October, 1762, aged thirty-two.

The only surviving son,

WILLIAM ROSS, 14th Lord Ross, was an officer in the royal army commanded by Lord Loudoun, at Inverness, 1745; and in the march to surprise the Chevalier at Moy, in February, 1746, was thrown down by the cavalry, and much hurt. He s. his father in June, 1754, but enjoyed the title only two months, dying at Mount Teviot, the seat of his uncle, the Marquess of Lothian, of gout in his head, 19 August, 1754, aged thirty-four, unm. The title became extinct; the estate of Balnagowan went to his cousin, Sir James Ross Lockhart, after an ineffectual opposition from Sir Alexander Gilmour; and his other property devolved on his sisters, and is now possessed by the Earl of Glasgow.

Arms—Quarterly: 1st and 4th, arg., a chev., chequy, of the field and sa., between three water bougets, of the last, for Ross; 2nd and 3rd, gu., three crescents, with a bordure, arg., the latter charged with eight roses of the field, barbed and seeded, ppr., for MELVILLE.

ROWLEY—VISCOUNT LANGFORD.

(See BARON LANGFORD in BURKE'S Extant Peerage.)

RUPERT—DUKE OF CUMBERLAND.

By Letters Patent, dated 24 June, 1644.

Lineage.

The Princess ELIZABETH, of England, b. 19 August, 1569, only dau. of King JAMES I., m. 14 February, 1612-13, FREDERICK V., Duke of Bavaria, Elector Palatine of the Rhine, and King of Bohemia, and had issue,

I. CHARLES-LEWIS, successor to the Dukedom of Bavaria, whose dau. and heir, CHARLOTTE, m. Philippe, Duke of Orleans.

II. RUPERT, Count Palatine of the Rhine, of whom presently.

III. Maurice, the companion in arms during the civil wars of his gallant brother, Rupert, known in English history as "Prince Maurice," d. unm. (shipwrecked), in 1654.

IV. Edward, Duke of Bavaria, Count Palatine of the Rhine, K.G., m. Anne de Gonzaga of Mantua, and d. 10 March, 1663, leaving three daus., viz.,

1 ANNE, m. to Henry-Julius, Prince of Condé.

2 BENEDICTA, m. to John-Frederick, Duke of Brunswick-Lunenburgh.

3 LOUISA-MARIA, m. to Charles-Theodore, Prince of Salms.

V. Philip, killed in battle, unm. in 1650.

I. Elizabeth, Abbess of Hervorden, d. 1690.

II. Louisa, Abbess of Maubisson.

III. Henrietta, m. to Sigismund, Prince of Transylvania, and d. s. p. 1651.

IV. SOPHIA, b. 13 October, 1630; m. in 1658, to Ernest-Augustus, Duke of Brunswick-Lunenburgh, Elector of Hanover, and was mother of GEORGE-LEWIS, who ascended the British throne, as King GEORGE I.

The 2nd son,

PRINCE RUPERT, coming into England in 1642, was elected knight of the Garter, and created by his uncle, King CHARLES I., 24 June, 1644, Baron of Kendal, co. Westmoreland, Earl of Holderness, and Duke of Cumberland. His highness, with his gallant brother, Prince MAURICE, was ever found amongst the most intrepid, enterprising, and indefatigable of the cavalier commanders; RUPERT, as general of the royal horse, and MAURICE, in command of some forces in the west. Indeed Rupert's fiery disposition appears frequently to have outrun his better judgment, and he has acquired the reputation of a bold and high-spirited officer, rather than of a cool and able commander. To his unbridled zeal the loss of Marston Moor has been attributed, and upon that the fate of King CHARLES I. mainly depended. In glancing at the chapter of English history, which records the great Civil War, we find much to console us, and much to retrieve the character of the country, in the gallant bearing assumed by the gentlemen of England, and the thorough devotedness of her high-minded nobility. The foes of royalty may decry, with as much malignity as they please, the cause in which the cavaliers so nobly fought and bled; but they must concede to those chivalrous men, the meed of loyalty, the most enthusiastic; fidelity, the most disinterested; and valour, the most heroic. Prince RUPERT retired into France when the royal cause became hopeless, but returned at the Restoration, and subsequently filled some high official situations. In the different naval engagements with the Dutch, his highness was particularly signalized by his able conduct and his characteristic bravery. He d. unm. 19 November, 1682, in the sixty-third year of his age, when the Dukedom of Cumberland (of this creation) and the minor honours became EXTINCT.

Arms—Quarterly: 1st and 4th, sa., a lion rampant, or; 2nd and 3rd pale bendy, arg., and az.

NOTE.—Prince RUPERT had by FRANCES, dau. and co-heir of Henry Bard, Viscount Bellamont, in Ireland, an illegitimate son, DUDLEY RUPERT, who was slain at the siege of Buda, a volunteer in the imperial army. His highness had likewise, by Mrs. Margaret Hughes, a dau., RUPERTA, m. to Emanuel-Scroope Howe, brother of Scroope, Viscount Howe.

RUSSELL—EARL OF ORFORD.

By Letters Patent, dated 7 May, 1697.

Lineage.

EDWARD RUSSELL, 2nd son (by Penelope, his wife, dau. of Sir Moses Hill, of Hillsborough), of the Hon. Edward Russell, 4th son of Francis, 4th Earl Bedford (refer to Extant Peerage), had been, says Burnet "bred at sea, and was bedchamber-man to the King (JAMES II.), when Duke of York; but upon Lord Russell's death, retired from the court. He was a man of much honour and great courage. He had good principles and was firm to them." Strenuously supporting the Revolution, he obtained high naval commands from the new King (WILLIAM III.); attained to the rank of admiral; and distinguished himself as one of the most eminent naval heroes of the period particularly by the splendid victory which, while commander of the fleet, he achieved in 1692 over the French under Count de Tourville, off La Hogue, for which, and his other gallant services, he was created 7 May, 1697, BARON OF SHINGAY, co. Cambridge (with remainder to the issue male of LETITIA, his elder sister), Viscount of Barfleur, in the Duchy of Normandy, and EARL OF ORFORD, co. Suffolk. His lordship m. his cousin, Lady Margaret Russell, dau. of William, 1st Duke of Bedford, but d. s. p. in 1727, when (his sister LETITIA having deceased previously without male issue), all his honours became EXTINCT.

Arms—Arg., a lion rampant, gu., on a chief, sa., three escallops of the field: a crescent for difference.

RUTHERFORD—EARL OF TEVIOT, AND BARON RUTHERFORD.

Barony, by Letters Patent, dated 19 January, 1661.

Earldom, by Letters Patent, dated 2 February, 1663

Lineage.

ANDREW RUTHERFORD, only son of William Rutherford, of Quarryholes, a cadet of Rutherford, of Hunthill, by Isabel, dau. of James Stuart of Traquair, was by King CHARLES II., created a peer of Scotland, by the title of LORD RUTHERFORD, by diploma or patent of dignity, dated 19 January, 1661, to him and the heirs male of his body, "quibus deficientibus, quacunque aliam personam seu personas quas sibi quoad vixerit, quinetiam in articulo mortis, ad ei succedendum, ac fore ejus heredes tallis et provisionis in eadem dignitate, nominare et designare placuerit, secundum nominationem et designationem manu ejus subscribendam, subque provisionibus restrictionibus et conditionibus a dicto Andrea, pro ejus arbitrio, in dicta designatione exprimendis." "Being chosen governor of Tangier," says Mr. Alexander Sinclair, in his learned Dissertation on Heirs Male, "his lordship, before departing, executed a settlement, which is probably the most curious patent of honor extant, as his title, lands, legacies, debts, and executry, are all intermingled in his appointment of heirs, who were SIR THOMAS RUTHERFORD, of Hunthill, then to the eldest son of Sir Thomas, and failing thereof, to the nearest heir male of the said Sir Thomas, and then to Sir Thomas's eldest daughter. This deed in connection with the patent was quite sufficient, on his being slain by the Moors next year, to convey the peerage to his nominee and distant cousin, who thus became 2nd Lord Rutherford." His lordship, in two years after (2 February, 1663), was advanced to the EARLDOM OF TEVIOT, with limitation to the heirs male of his body. He d. s. p. (being killed at Tangier), 4 May, 1664, when the earldom became EXTINCT; but the barony under the settlement made by the earl, in accordance with the special provisions of the patent above quoted, devolved on his kinsman.

SIR THOMAS RUTHERFORD, of Hunthill, as 2nd Lord Rutherford. This nobleman m. Christian, dau. of Sir Alexander Urquhart, of Cromarty, but by her (who m. 2ndly, James, 2nd Viscount Frendraught; and 3rdly, Alexander Monson, of Bognie) had no issue. He d. in 1668, leaving no issue, and was s. by his youngest brother.

ARCHIBALD RUTHERFORD, 3rd Lord Rutherford, who d. without male issue, in 1685, when the title devolved on the youngest brother.

ROBERT RUTHERFORD, 4th Lord Rutherford, who d. s. p. in 1724.

After his lordship's decease, George Durie, Esq., of Grange, Fifeshire, grandson of Christian Rutherford (sister of the Earl of Teviot) by her husband, Robert Durie, of Grange, voted without objection, as Lord Rutherford, at the election of a representative peer, in 1733. In 1734, he again entered his vote, but under protest from the procurator of Captain John Rutherford, and in 1739, both George Durie and John Rutherford voted, which they continued to do at several elections. "Claimants" observes Mr. Alexander Sinclair, "have repeatedly come forward as heirs male to the last lord, and others as heirs general of the first lord, so that from 1734, for two generations, the rival parties continued voting at elections, each protesting that the other had no right, the alleged heir male stating that the peerage was granted first to heirs male, and that no provision whatever had been made for the succession of the 1st lord's female relations, and the undoubted heir-general asserting that the other could not prove any male connexion with his pretended cousins, either the first or the last peer. There was no settlement of these conflicting claims when they dropped in 1782; but in 1786, the House of Lords resolved that the vote of the heir-general should have been rejected, and assuredly he could have no right whatever. The original destination to Sir Thomas and his heirs male having been admitted to include collaterals in general, the succession could not open to heirs-general while any male branch of the Hunthill family existed; and if they did fail, the ultimate clause in favour of females was to the 2nd lord's daughter, and not to the 1st lord's sister, whom her brothers had cut off probably from her inferior status. The 4th lord appointed Thomas Rutherford one of the family of Edgerston to succeed him; but this could not affect the settlement of the peerage. This is a case of the admission of collateral succession under a settlement on heirs-male, simply; as the proviso, regarding the name and arms, refers to the case of Sir Thomas's daughter becoming the heir, and her husband and issue not being Rutherfords by birth."

MARGARET RUTHERFORD, only sister of the last Lord Rutherford, named in the limitation, m. Charles, 2nd son of Sir John Scott, Bart., of Ancrum, and left one son, JOHN SCOTT, of Belford, who m. Marion Bailie, of Ashetiel: this gentleman was engaged in the rising of 1745, and did not set up a claim to the peerage: his representatives are his great-grandsons, SIR ALEXANDER COCKBURN CAMPBELL, Bart., and JOHN HOOD, Esq., of Stoneridge, co. Berwick (by double descent), and his great great-grandson, Sir Stafford H. Northcote, Bart.

Arms—Arg., an orle, gu., and in chief, three martlets, sa.

RUTHVEN — BARONS RUTHVEN AND EARLS OF GOWRIE.

Barony, created 29 January, 1487-8.

Earldom, by Letters Patent, dated 23 August, 1681.

Lineage.

SIR WILLIAM DE RUTHVEN was created a lord of parliament, 29 January, 1487-8. He m. 1st, Isabel, dau. of Livingston, of Saltcoats, co. Haddington, and relict of Walter Lindsay, of Beaufort, by whom he had two sons, born before marriage, and a dau., viz.,

I. WILLIAM, slain at Flodden, who had a legitimation under the great seal, 2 July, 1480. He m. Catherine Buttergask, and had a son, WILLIAM, heir to his grandfather.

II. John, who obtained a legitimation under the great seal, 2 July, 1480, with his brother William, wherein they were styled natural sons of William de Ruthven, of Ruthven.

I. Margaret, m. 1st, to Alexander, 2nd Earl of Buchan.

William, Lord Ruthven, m. 2ndly, Christian, dau. of John, Lord Forbes, and by her had a son, and a dau.,

WILLIAM, of Ballindean, ancestor of the EARL OF FORTH.

Elizabeth, m. 1st, to William, 4th Earl of Erroll, and 2ndly, to Ninian, 2nd Lord Rosa, and had issue to both.

Lord Ruthven was s. by his grandson,

WILLIAM RUTHVEN, 2nd Lord Ruthven, who s. in 1523. He was appointed an extraordinary lord of session, 16 February, 1539, and keeper of the privy seal in 1547. He d. before 16 December, 1552. He m. Janet, eldest dau. and co-heir of Patrick, Lord Halyburton, of Dirleton, with whom he got that barony, and a considerable accession to his estate, and had issue by her,

I. PATRICK, 3rd Lord Ruthven.

II. JAMES, of Forteviot. There is a charter to William, Lord Ruthven, Janet Halyburton, his wife, and James, their son, of half of the lands of Forteviot, 24 January, 1535-6, and another to James, 2nd son of William, Lord Ruthven, of the Barony of Seggo, in Kinross-shire, 5 February, 1550-1. He d. s. p., as Patrick, Lord Ruthven, was served heir to James Ruthven, of Forteviot, his brother, 9 January, 1553.

V. Ganet, m. to John Crichton, of Strathurd.

VI. Margaret, m. to John Johnston, of Elphinstoun.

VII. Christian, m. to William Lundin, of Lundin.

The eldest son,

PATRICK RUTHVEN, 3rd Lord Ruthven and Dirleton, b. about 1520, acted a prominent part in the political and religious controversies of his time, but is most known as the principal actor in the murder of David Rizzio, 9 March, 1566. He m. 1st, Janet Douglas, natural dau. of Archibald, Earl of Angus, and 2ndly, Janet, Lady Methven, dau. of the 2nd Earl of Athole, and by the former had issue,

I. PATRICK, master of Ruthven, m. Margaret, eldest dau. of Patrick, 5th Lord Gray, and d. s. p. v. p.

II. WILLIAM, 4th Lord Ruthven.

III. Alexander.

I. Jean, m. 1st, to Henry, 2nd Lord Methven, and 2ndly, to Andrew, 5th Earl of Bothes.

II. Isabel, m. to James, 1st Lord Colvill, of Culross, and had issue.

Lord Ruthven, after the murder of Darnley, fled to England, and d. in that country three months after, 13 June, 1566-7. His eldest surviving son,

WILLIAM RUTHVEN, 4th Lord Ruthven and Dirleton, took part with his father in the murder of David Rizzio, 9 March, 1566, and fled into England; but eventually making his peace with the Scottish court, he obtained, by means of the Earl of Morton, the Queen's pardon, was appointed treasurer for Scotland for life, by patent, dated 24 June, 1571, and one of the extraordinary lords of Session, 26 November, 1578, and created EARL OF GOWRIE, by patent, dated 23 August, 1681. Subsequently joining in the treasonable conspiracy for seizing on the king (JAMES VI.), known in history as the "Raid of Ruthven," he was tried and found guilty of high treason, at Stirling, 28 May, 1584, and executed between eight and nine in the evening of the same day. He m. Dorothea, 2nd dau. of Henry, Lord Methven (by his 2nd wife, Lady Janet Stewart, afterwards m. to his father, Lord Ruthven), and had issue by her,

JAMES, 2nd Earl of Gowrie.

John, 3rd Earl of Gowrie.

Alexander, engaged in "the Gowrie conspiracy" at Perth, 5 August, 1600, in which he was killed.

William, who went abroad, and became famous for his knowledge in chemistry.

Patrick, an eminent physician, who was confined for many years in the Tower of London, from which he was released in 1619. His dau. Mary m. Sir Anthony Vandyke, the famous painter, and left a dau. and sole heiress.

JUSTINA, m. to Sir John STEPHEN, Bart.

Margaret, m. to James, 4th Earl of Montrose, and was mother of the gallant Marquess of Montrose.

Mary, m. 1st, to John, 5th Earl of Athole, and 2ndly, to John, Lord Innerneath, created Earl of Athole.

Sophia, m. to Ludovick, 2nd Duke of Lennox, but d. s. p.

Jean, m. to James, Lord Ogilvy, of Airly, and was mother of the 1st Earl of Airly.

Beatrice, m. to Sir John Home, of Coldingknows, and had issue.

Isabel, m. 1st, to Sir Robert Gordon, of Lochinvar, and had issue. She was divorced from him, and m. 2ndly, George, 1st Lord Loudoun, and had issue.

Dorothea, m. to James Wemyss, of Pittencreeff, co. Fife.

The eldest son,

JAMES RUTHVEN, 2nd Earl of Gowrie, Provost of Perth, was restored to his estate and honours in 1586, and d. in the fourteenth year of his age, 1588, when his brother, JOHN RUTHVEN, s. as 3rd Earl of Gowrie, Provost of Perth. He was killed at Perth, 5 August, 1600, with his brother Alexander, in the mysterious attempt on the person of King JAMES VI., known as the "Gowrie Conspiracy." A life of him, by the Rev. James Scott, of Perth, was printed at Edinburgh, in 1818, and all the evidence respecting the conspiracy is ably investigated in Pitcairn's Criminal Trials of Scotland. (See RAMSAY, EARL OF HOLDERNESSE.) The dead bodies of the Ruthvens were afterwards arraigned and convicted of treason at Edinburgh, and the honours and the whole of the estates of the deceased declared forfeited by parliament.

Arms—1st and 4th, paly of six, arg. and gu., for Ruthven; 2nd, or, three bars, gu., for Cameron; 3rd, or, on a bend, az., three mascles of the 1st, for Halyburton; all within a border, or, firy and counterfiry, gu.

RUTHVEN—LORD RUTHVEN OF ETTRICK, EARL OF FORTH AND EARL OF BRENTFORD.

By Letters Patent, dated in 1639; 27 March, 1642; and 27 May, 1644.

Lineage.

PATRICK RUTHVEN (son of William Ruthven of Ballindean, and grandson of William Ruthven, only son of the 1st Lord Ruthven) served with great distinction in the wars of Sweden, Denmark, Russia, Poland, Prussia, and also in the German wars under Gustavus-Adolphus, attained the rank of lieutenant-general, and upon the surrender of Ulm, in 1632, was appointed governor of that important place, which he gallantly defended. Returning home, General Ruthven was created a peer of Scotland, as Lord Ruthven of Ettrick, in 1639; made governor of the castle of Edinburgh, and advanced to the EARLDOM OF FORTH, in the peerage of Scotland, 27 March, 1642. Subsequently, having drawn his sword in the cause of King CHARLES I. and taken a leading part as a cavalier commander, he distinguished himself at Edghill, where, on the death of Lord Lindsay, he had the chief command, was made general of the king's army, and created a peer of England by letters patent, dated 27 May, 1644, as EARL OF BRENTFORD, deriving his title from the town of Brentford, where he had defeated the parliamentary forces in 1642. Clarendon, although strongly prejudiced in his estimate of this gallant officer, is constrained to admit that "in the field he well knew what was to be done." His lordship m. Miss Clara Barnard, and had issue,

PATRICIA, m. to the Hon. Sir Thomas Ogilvy, son of James, 1st Earl of Airrie, and had issue. (See Peerage.)

JEAN or JANE, who alone survived her father, m. James, 2nd Lord Forrester, and had issue.

ELSPETH or ELIZABETH, m. Major George Pringle. (See PRINGLE, of Fair, in BURKE's Landed Gentry.)

The earl d. at Dundee, very old, in 1651, without male issue, and with him all his honours EXPIRED.

Arms—Paly of six, arg. and gu.; a crescent for difference.

RUVIGNY—EARL OF GALWAY.

(See MASSUE.)

RYTHRE—BARON RYTHRE.

By Writ of Summons, dated 29 December, 1299.

Lineage.

In the 26th EDWARD I.

SIR WILLIAM DE RYTHRE, having taken a part in the Scottish and French wars, was summoned to parliament, as a Baron, by King EDWARD I., 29 December, 1299, and he had writs from that period to 26 August, 1307. His lordship was s. by his son,

JOHN DE RYTHRE, 2nd baron, who was never summoned to parliament. In the 11th EDWARD II. he was governor of Skipton Castle, and in the 17th of the same reign, had a charter for free warren in all his demesne lands at Haselwode, &c., and Adington, in Yorkshire. Neither this lord, nor any of his descendants, having had summons to parliament, Dugdale gives no further account of the family, although modern genealogists (borne out by a Visitation entry signed by James Rythre, of Harewood), have endeavoured to connect with this old baronial house the existing one of RYDER.

Arms—Az., three crescents, or.

SACKVILLE—BARONS BUCKHURST AND EARLS AND DUKES OF DORSET.

Barony, by Letters Patent, dated 8 June, 1567.

Earldom, by Letters Patent, dated 13 March, 1603.

Dukedom, by Letters Patent, dated 18 June, 1720.

Lineage.

The Sackvilles or Saukevilles, as the name was originally written, were persons of considerable power, wealth, and influence from the Conquest, and the house of Dorset traced its foundation to

SIR ROBERT DE SACKVILLE, Knt., 3rd son of Herbrand de Sakavilla, one of the chieftains in the army of the CONQUEROR. From this Robert descended

SIR RICHARD SACKVILLE, Knt., member of the privy council in the reigns of MARY and ELIZABETH; chancellor of the court of Augmentation in the former and under treasurer of the Exchequer in the latter; M.P. for the co. Kent, and subsequently for the co. Surrey. Sir Richard m. Winefred, dau. of Sir John Bruges, lord mayor of the city of London, and dying in 1556, left by her (who m. 2ndly, John, Marquess of Winchester, and d. 1586,) a dau. Anne, wife of Gregory, Lord Dacre, and a son and successor,

THOMAS SACKVILLE, Esq., who was knighted in the presence of Queen ELIZABETH, by the Duke of Norfolk, 8 June, 1567, and on the same day created a peer of the realm, as BARON BUCKHURST, of Buckhurst, co. Sussex. In 1594, his lordship was appointed lord high treasurer of England, and 13 March, 1603-4, he was elevated to an earldom as EARL DORSET. Of this nobleman Warton says, "At both universities (he had been a student at Oxford and Cambridge) he became celebrated as a Latin and English poet; and he carried his love of poetry, which he seems to have almost solely cultivated, to the Inner Temple. It was now fashionable for every young man of fortune before he began his travels or was admitted into Parliament, to be initiated in the study of the law. But instead of pursuing a science which could not be his profession, and which was unaccommodated to the bias of his genius, he betrayed his predilection to a more pleasing species of literature, by composing the tragedy of Gorboduc; which tragedy was exhibited in the great hall of the Inner Temple, by the students of that society, as part of the entertainments of a grand Christmas festival, and afterwards before Queen ELIZABETH, at Whitehall, 18 January, 1601." His lordship m. Cecily, dau. of Sir John Baker, Knt., and d. suddenly at the council table at Whitehall, 19 April, 1608, having had issue,

1. ROBERT, his heir.

11. Henry.

111. William (Sir), who was knighted in France by King HENRY IV., in October, 1589, at the age of nineteen years, and lost his life in the wars in that country in 1591.

iv. Thomas, who distinguished himself against the Turks, in 1595.

i. Anne, m. to Sir Henry Glemham, of Glemham, co. Suffolk.

11. Jane, m. in February, 1591, to Anthony, Viscount Montague.

111. Mary, m. to Sir Henry Neville, son and successor to Edward, Lord Abergavenny, whom he s. in that title.

The eldest son,

ROBERT SACKVILLE, 2nd earl, who enjoyed the family honours but a few months, and d. 25 February, 1608-9, m. 1st, Margaret, dau. of Thomas, Duke of Norfolk, which lady dying 4 September, 1591, he m. 2ndly, Anne, dau. of Sir John Spencer, of Althorp, co. Northampton, and widow of Henry, Lord Compton. He had issue by his 1st wife,

1. RICHARD, his successor.

11. EDWARD, successor to his brother Richard.

1. Cecily, m. to Sir Henry Compton, K.B., 3rd son of Henry, Lord Compton.

11. Anne, m. 1st, to Edward Seymour, Lord Beauchamp, grandson to Edward, Earl of Hertford, and afterwards to Sir Edward Lewis, Knt.

The elder son,

RICHARD SACKVILLE, 3rd earl, b. 28 March, 1589, m. Anne, dau. and sole heiress of George (Clifford), Earl of Cumberland, by whom he had two daus.,

Margaret, m. to John, Earl of Thanet.

Isabella, m. to James, Earl of Northampton.

He d. in 1624, when the honours devolved upon his brother,

EDWARD SACKVILLE, 4th earl, K.G., who m. Mary, dau. and heiress of Sir George Curzon, of Croxhall, co. Derby, by whom he had issue, two sons. His lordship, before he attained the title, was concerned in a fatal duel, which is thus mentioned by Lord Clarendon:—"He entered into a fatal quarrel upon a subject very unwarrantable, with a young nobleman of Scotland, the Lord Bruce; upon which they both transported themselves in Flanders, and attended by only two chirurgions placed at a distance, and under an obligation not to stir but at the fall of one of them, they fought under the walls of Antwerp, when the Lord Bruce fell dead upon the place; and Sir Edward Sackville (for so he was then called) being likewise hurt, retired into the next monastery which was near at hand." His lordship d. in 1652, having had two sons,

1. RICHARD, his successor.

11. Edward, who m. Bridget, Baroness Norreys, dau. and sole heir to Edward Wray, 3rd son of Sir William Wray, of Glentworth, co. Lincoln, Bart., by his wife Elizabeth, dau. and heir of Francis, Lord Norreys, Earl of Berkshire.

The eldest son,

RICHARD SACKVILLE, 5th earl, m. Frances Cranfield, eldest dau. of Lionel, Earl of Middlesex, by whom he had several children, viz.,

1. CHARLES, his successor.

11. Edward, b. 2 April, 1641, d. unm. 1678.

111. Lionel, b. 25 June, 1645.

iv. Richard, b. 30 April, 1646, and d. 1712.

v. Lionel, b. 25 October, 1656, d. young.

vii. Thomas, b. 3 February, 1662, d. 14 August, 1675.

1. Elizabeth, d. young.

11. Anne, d. young.

111. Catherine, d. young.

iv. Mary, b. 4 February, 1648, m. Roger Boyle, Lord Broghill, son and heir of Roger, 1st Earl of Orrery.

v. Anne, b. 7 June, 1650, m. Alexander, 4th Earl of Hume, in Scotland.

vi. Frances, b. 6 February, 1655, m. 11 December, 1693, Sir George Lane, of Tulske, co. Roscommon, Bart., afterwards created Lord Lanesborough.

His lordship d. 1667, and was s. by his elder son,

CHARLES SACKVILLE, K.G., 6th earl, b. 24 January, 1627, who succeeding also in right of his mother to the estates of the Earl of Middlesex, had been created 4 April, 1675, Earl of Middlesex and Baron Cranfield, of Cranfield, co. Bedford. His lordship's 2nd wife was Mary, dau. of James Compton, Earl of Northampton, by whom, besides a dau., he had his successor,

LIONEL CRANFIELD SACKVILLE, K.G., 7th earl, b. 18 January, 1688, created DUKE OF DORSET, 13 June, 1720. His grace m. in June, 1708-9, Elizabeth, dau. of Lieut.-General Walter Philip Colyear, and niece of David, Earl of Portmore, by whom he had issue,

1. CHARLES, his successor.

11. John-Phillip, b. 22 June, 1713, m. in 1744, Frances, dau. of John, Earl of Gower, and dying 1765, left

JOHN-FREDERICK, who s. as 3rd duke.

Mary, m. 30 August, 1767, to Sackville, 8th Earl of Thanet.

111. George, the well known Lord George Sackville, b. 26 January, 1715-16, assumed by act of parliament, 16 February, 1770, the surname of GERMAIN, pursuant to the will of Sir John and Lady Elizabeth Germain of Drayton, co. Northampton. This nobleman was distinguished as a soldier and statesman. In the former he was less fortunate than in the latter, having incurred the displeasure of the commander-in-chief, Ferdinand, Prince of Brunswick, at the battle of Minden, and being censured by a court-martial held at his own request on returning to England. His lordship was endowed with very considerable talents, and filled subsequently some of the highest offices in the administration. He was elevated to the peerage, 11 February, 1782, as BARON FOLKEBROKE and Viscount SACKVILLE, of Drayton. He m. 3 September, 1754, Diana, 2nd dau. and co-heiress of John Sambrooke, Esq., by whom (who d. 15 January, 1778) he had issue,

1 CHARLES, 2nd Viscount Sackville, and 5th and last Duke of Dorset.

2 George, b. 7 December, 1770; m. December, 1814, Miss Harriet Pearce, and by her (who d. 18 April, 1836), left at his decease, 31 May, 1836, an only child, CAROLINE-HARRIET, m. 2 June, 1837, to William Bruce Stopford, Esq., now of Drayton, co. Northampton.

1 Diana, m. to John, 2nd Earl of Glandore, and d. 1814.

2 Elizabeth, m. to Henry Arthur Herbert, Esq., of Muckross, co. Kerry.

3 Caroline, d. unm. 1789.

He d. 28 August, 1785.

i. Lady Anne, d. 23 March, 1720-1, aged eleven years.

ii. Lady Elizabeth, m. 6 December, 1726, Thomas, Viscount Weymouth, and d. 9 June, 1729.

iv. Lady Caroline, m. 27 July, 1742, to Joseph Damer, Lord Milton, and d. 24 March, 1775.

His grace d. 10 October, 1765, and was s. by his eldest son,

CHARLES, 2nd duke, b. 6 February, 1710-11, who d. s. p. 6 January, 1769, when the honours devolved upon his nephew,

JOHN-FREDERICK SACKVILLE, 3rd duke. His grace was lord-lieutenant and custos rotulorum of the co. Kent, and of the city of Canterbury, vice-admiral of the coasts of that county, and, in 1783, ambassador to the court of France. He m. 4 January, 1790, Arabella-Diana, dau. and co-heiress of Sir Charles Cope, Bart., of Brewerne, and dying in 1799, left issue,

1. GEORGE-JOHN-FREDERICK, his heir.

2. MARY, m. 1st, Other-Archer, 6th Earl of Plymouth; and 2ndly, William Pitt, Earl Amherst. This lady d. s. p. 20 July, 1864.

ii. ELIZABETH, m. 21 June, 1813, George-John, Earl Delawarr, who assumed by royal license, 6 November, 1843, the additional surname and arms of SACKVILLE. The Countess Delawarr was created in 1864, BARONESS BUCKHURST, of Buckhurst, co. Sussex, with limitation to her 2nd son, the Hon. and Rev. REGINALD WINDSOR SACKVILLE WEST (see Extant Peerage.)

His grace was s. by his only son,

GEORGE-JOHN-FREDERICK SACKVILLE, 4th duke, b. 15 November, 1793, killed by a fall from his horse while hunting near Dublin, 14 February, 1815, being on a visit at the time to his mother, who had m. Charles, Lord Whitworth, then lord-lieutenant of Ireland. As he d. unm., the family honours devolved upon his cousin,

CHARLES SACKVILLE-GERMAIN, 2nd Viscount Sackville, who became 5th Duke of Dorset, K.G., P.C., b. 27 August, 1767, at whose decease unm., 29 July, 1843, all his honours became EXTINCT.

Arms—Quarterly: or and gu., over all a bend, vair.

ST. AMAND—BARONS ST. AMAND.

By Writ of Summons, dated 29 December, 1299, and 22 March, 1313.

Lineage.

In the 6th year of HENRY III.,

ALMARIC DE ST. AMAND obtained a grant of two parts of the manor of Liskaret, in Cornwall, for his support in the king's service, and in nine years afterwards, being in the expedition then made into Wales, deported himself so gallantly, that the king remitted to him a debt, due by Walter de Verdon, his uncle (whose heir he was), which otherwise he should have paid to the exchequer by 10 marks annually. The next year he had a grant of the manor of Bloxham, in Oxfordshire, and soon afterwards we find him governor of St. Briavels Castle, in Gloucestershire, and warden of the forest of Dene, as also sheriff of Herefordshire, and governor of Hereford Castle. In the 21st of the same reign, he was again entrusted with the same important fortresses; and standing high in favour at court, he was one of the sponsors at the font when Prince Edward (son of HENRY III.) was baptized, by Otto, the Pope's legate. He was s. by his son,

RALPH DE ST. AMAND, who m. Aceline, dau. and co-heir of Robert de Albini, son of Robert de Albini, Baron of Caynho.

co. Bedford, and paid in the 25th HENRY III., £25 for his relief of one moiety of the lands of Joane de Beauchamp, another of the daus. and co-heirs of the said Robert de Albini. This Ralph d. in five years afterwards, and was s. by his son,

ALMARIC DE ST. AMAND, for whose wardship, and the benefit of his marriage, Paulyne Peyvre, a great personage at that period, gave 1000 marks. In the 40th HENRY III., Almaric, however, made proof of his age, and had then livery of his lands; and the next year had a military summons to march against the Welsh. He d. in the 14th EDWARD I. (1285-6), and was s. by his eldest son,

GUY DE ST. AMAND, who d. s. p. soon after, and was s. by his brother,

ALMARIC DE ST. AMAND. This feudal lord distinguished in the wars of France and Scotland, was summoned to parliament as a Baron, from 29 December, 1299, to 16 June, 1311. His lordship was at one time governor of Bordeaux. He d. s. p. in 1312, when the Barony of St. Amand became EXTINCT, but his lands devolved upon his brother,

JOHN DE ST. AMAND, a professor of the canon law, and at that time called Magister Johannes de Sancto Amand, who, doing his fealty, had livery of the deceased lord's lands, and was summoned to parliament as a Baron from 22 March, 1313, to 10 October, 1325. His lordship d. in 1330, leaving by his wife, Joane, dau. of Hugh le Despencer, Earl of Winchester, a son,

ALMARIC DE ST. AMAND, 2nd baron, summoned to parliament from 8 January, 1371, to 22 August, 1381. This nobleman was in the Scottish and French wars, temp. EDWARD II. and EDWARD III. In the 31st of the latter king (1357-8) he was made justice of Ireland, and had forty men at arms, with 100 archers on horseback, assigned to attend him there, over and above the usual number of men at arms which appertained to his high office. In the 47th EDWARD III., he was made steward of the forest of Rockingham, and governor of the castle. He d. in 1381, and was s. by his son,

ALMARIC DE ST. AMAND, 3rd baron, summoned to parliament from 9 August, 1382, to 2 December, 1401. This nobleman, by indenture in the 8th RICHARD II. (1384-5), was retained to serve the king in his wars of Scotland, and in the 1st of HENRY IV. (1399-1400,) was made a knight of the Bath, at the coronation of that monarch. By Ida, his 1st wife, he had issue,

ALIANORE, who m. Sir Gerard de Braybroke, Knt., and was mother of

GERARD DE BRAYBROKE, who left issue,

ELIZABETH, who m. 1st Sir WILLIAM DE BEAUCHAMP, afterwards summoned to parliament as LORD ST. AMAND, and 2ndly, Sir Roger Tocotes.

Maud, m. to John Rabington, and d. s. p. 5th HENRY VI.

Alianore, d. unm. 7th HENRY VI.

His lordship m. 2ndly, Alianore, heiress of the St. Elen family, and left a dau.,

IDA, m. to Sir Thomas West, Knt., and d. s. p. 1416.

Lord St. Amand d. in 1403, leaving his younger dau., IDA, and his grandson, GERARD DE BRAYBROKE (son of his deceased elder dau., Alianore), his heirs; between whom the Barony of St. Amand fell into ABEYANCE, and so continued until the year 1449, when it was called out in favour of Sir William de Beauchamp, husband of the deceased lord's great granddau., ELIZABETH DE BRAYBROKE (revert to BEAUCHAMP, BARONS ST. AMAND).

Arms—Or, fretté, sa., on a chief of the 2nd, three bezants.

ST. JOHN—BARONS ST. JOHN, OF STANTON ST. JOHN, CO. OXFORD.

By Writ of Summons, dated 24 December, 1284.

Lineage.

THOMAS DE ST. JOHN, of Stanton St. John, 2nd son of JOHN DE ST. JOHN, of Stanton St. John, co. Oxford, and younger brother of Roger de St. John, ancestor of the St. Johns, of Basing, was father of

ROGER DE ST. JOHN, who, in the 22nd HENRY II., was amerced £133 6s. 8d., for trespassing in the king's forests, in the co. Oxford. This Roger, who d. before 1215, was s. by his son,

JOHN DE ST. JOHN, living 1229, who was s. by his son,

ROGER DE ST. JOHN. This feudal lord having taken up arms with the barons against King HENRY III., was summoned to parliament after the victory of those lords at Lewes, 24 December, 1264, and appointed governor of the castle of Oxford. He was slain, however, the following year at Evesham, where his party sustained so signal a defeat. His lordship m. a sister of Richard de Luci, by whom he acquired a moiety of the lordship of Wolnesteade, co. Surrey, and had an only son, JOHN, who was never summoned to parliament, nor were his descendants. He d. s. p.

The Barony of St. John, of Stanton, EXPIRED therefore with the 1st lord.

Arms—Arg., on a chief, gu., two mullets, or.

ST. JOHN—BARONS ST. JOHN, OF LAGEHAM.

By Writ of Summons, dated 21 September, 1299

Lineage.

In the 46th HENRY III.,

ROGER DE ST. JOHN, younger son of the 1st baron, obtained license to fortify his house at Lageham, co. Surrey, and so to hold the same, whilst himself and his heirs should continue loyal to the king; but within two years he joined the baronial standard, and, after the battle of Lewes, was one of the nine barons chosen to form the council of state. To this turbulent feudal lord succeeded

JOHN DE ST. JOHN, who had summons to parliament as a Baron, from 21 September, 1299, to 6 October, 1315, after the 6th EDWARD II., with the addition of "de Lageham." This nobleman was actively engaged in the Scottish wars, temp. EDWARD I. and EDWARD II. His lordship d. in 1316, and was s. by his son,

JOHN DE ST. JOHN, 2nd baron, summoned to parliament, from 20 November, 1317, to 18 September, 1322. His lordship was in the expedition made into Scotland, 11th EDWARD II., and dying in 1322, was s. by his son,

JOHN DE ST. JOHN, 3rd baron, summoned to parliament, from 1 August, 1327, to 18 February, 1331, being the last summons received by a member of this house. This nobleman m. Katharine, dau. of Geoffrey de Say, and dying in 1349, was s. by his son,

ROGER DE ST. JOHN, 4th baron, who in the 25th EDWARD III., released to Sir Nicholas de Lovoyane, Knt., and Margaret, his wife, all his right in the manor of Lageham, and d. shortly after (in 1353), s. p., leaving PETER DE ST. JOHN, his kinsman (son of his brother William), his next heir. He d. s. p., whereupon the representation vested in the heir of Nicolas St. John, of Glimpton, co. Oxford, younger son of John, 1st Baron of Lageham, whose descendants continued for several generations, but none of the family were subsequently summoned to parliament.

Arms—Ermine, on a chief, gu., two mullets, or.

ST. JOHN — BARONS ST. JOHN, OF BASING.

By Writ of Summons, dated 29 December, 1299.

Lineage.

At the time of the General Survey,

HUGH DE PORT held fifty-five lordships of the crown, in Hampshire, whereof Basing was one, and the head of the barony. He had also lands in the cos. Dorset and Cambridge. In the reign of RUFUS, he took the cowl at Winchester, and was s. by his son,

HENRY DE PORT, Lord of Basing, who was s. by his son,

JOHN DE PORT, who, in the 12th HENRY II. (1165-6), contributed for his knights' fees (seven in number) to the assessment for marrying the king's dau., 57 marks. He was s. by his son,

ADAM DE PORT, Lord of Basing. This feudal baron was governor of the castle of Southampton, in the 15th (1213-14) King JOHN; and in the 22nd HENRY II., he was fined 300 marks for trespassing in the king's forests. In the 26th of the same reign, he gave 1000 marks to the king for livery of his wife's inheritance in Normandy; and that he might be restored to the king's favour, and do his homage. He m. Mabel, dau. of Reginald de Aurevalle, and grandchild and heir through her mother, Muriell, of Roger de St. John, and Cecily, his wife, dau. and heir of Robert de Haya, Lord of Hainac, co. Sumex; and his posterity ever afterwards bore the surname of ST. JOHN. By this lady he had two sons, WILLIAM and Robert. The elder,

WILLIAM DE ST. JOHN, assuming that surname, wrote himself Willielmus de Sancto Johanne filius et heres Ada de Port, and in the 16th JOHN, gave 500 marks to the king for livery of all the lands of ADAM DE PORT, his father. The two following years he executed the sheriff's office for the co. Southampton; but was subsequently in arms with the other barons against the crown, and did not return to his allegiance until some time after the accession of HENRY III. He made his peace, however, effectually, for we find him in the 11th of that king, appointed governor of the islands of Guernsey and Jersey. He m. Godchild, dau. of N. Paganell, and was s. by his son,

ROBERT DE ST. JOHN, who had a military summons in the 42nd HENRY III., to oppose the incursions of the Welsh, and in three years afterwards, obtained a license to fix a pale upon the bank of his moat at Basing; as also to continue it so fortified, during the king's pleasure.* In the 50th of the same reign he was constituted governor of Porchester Castle, and dying soon after, 1266, left (by his wife, Agnes, dau. of William de Cantilupe,)

JOHN, his heir.

William, of Faumont, co. Glamorgan, ancestor of the ST. JOHNS, Barons of Bletahoe, and of the Viscounts Bolingbroke.

The elder son,

JOHN DE ST. JOHN, Lord of Basing, succeeded likewise to the governorship of Porchester Castle. This baron acquired high military reputation in the wars of EDWARD I.; and, in his capacity of lieutenant of Aquitaine, achieved some important conquests. In 1296, he took the city of Bayonne by assault, and its castle surrendered after a siege of eight days. Thence marching to Bellegard, at the time invested by the Earl of Arras, he was made prisoner, and conveyed to Paris; being, however, redeemed (it was said by ALFONSO, King of Castile), he was again in the wars of Gascony, as well as in those of Scotland; and was afterwards deputed ambassador to France, with John, Earl of Warren, and other persons of rank. He d. in 1301, having m. Alice, dau. of Reginald Fitz-Piers, and had issue,

JOHN, his successor.

William.

The elder son,

JOHN DE ST. JOHN, had been summoned to parliament as a Baron, in the life-time of his father, from 29 December, 1299, to 12 November, 1303, under the designation of "John de St. John, Junior," but afterwards, viz., from 14 March, 1322, to 10 October, 1325, as "St. John of Basing." This nobleman was eminent in the wars of Scotland, temp. EDWARD I. and EDWARD II. His lordship m. Isabel, dau. of Hugh de Courtenay, and d. in 1329, was s. by his son,

HUGH DE ST. JOHN, 2nd Baron St. John, of Basing, who d. in 1337, without being summoned to parliament, leaving him surviving, besides his wife, Mirabelle,† dau. of Thomas Wake,

EDMUND, his successor, aged then four years.

Margaret, m. to John de St. Philibert, and had a son, John, who d. infancy. She d. 35th EDWARD III. (1361-2).

* Basing House, supposed to have occupied the site of the old castle of the St. Johns, was built by Sir William Paulet, Baron St. John, and Marquess of Winchester. It is famous for the siege which it underwent during the parliamentary wars, when, under Lord Winchester's command, it held out nearly two years for the king. Cromwell finally carried it by storm, massacred nearly the whole of its valiant garrison, and burned it to the ground. He is reported to have said that Basing was a fitter abode for a sovereign than a subject. In the chivalric spirit of the time Winchester named his house château loyalité—ever since the family motto, and so rich were its stores of plate, jewels, furniture, &c., that each soldier of the besiegers had £300 worth of plunder. The gate-house, built of brick in the style of the 15th century, and portions of the baillium yet remain.

† BANKS, quoting Berry's Sussex Genealogies, says there was a 3rd dau. of Hugh de St. John, named Alice, who m. John Kingstone, and had a son, Thomas Kingstone. Banks also surmises that Roger de St. John, summoned, with his wife, to the coronation of EDWARD II., was an elder brother of Edmund, last Lord St. John, but that he predeceased his father, and d. s. p.

ISABEL, m. 1st, to Henry de Burgherah, who d. s. p., and 2ndly, to Lucas de Poyninge, who was summoned to parliament, it is presumed, jure uxoris, 24 February, 1368, and on to 1372.

His lordship was s. by his elder son,

EDMUND ST. JOHN, 3rd Baron St. John, of Basing, b. 1333, who dying in minority, 21st EDWARD III. (1347-8), then a ward of the king, his sisters, MARGARET and ISABEL, became his heirs. The elder sister, Margaret, did not long survive, and her only issue, John de St. Philibert, dying an infant, the whole of the inheritance centered in the younger sister, Isabel, then m. to her 2nd husband, LUCAS DE POYNINGE, who in her right was summoned to parliament, and the Barony of St. John, of Basing, was thus conveyed to the family of Poyninge (= Poyninge, Barons St. John).

ST. JOHN—EARLS OF BOLINGBROKE.

By Letters Patent, dated 28 December, 1624.

Lineage.

SIR OLIVER ST. JOHN, of Penmark, co. Glamorgan, (of the family of St. John of Stanton St. John), m. Margaret,* dau. of Sir John de Beauchamp, and sister and heir of John, Lord Beauchamp, of Bletshoe, and had two sons, viz., JOHN, his heir, and Oliver, ancestor of the present Viscount BOLINGBROKE. The elder son,

SIR JOHN ST. JOHN, K.B., of Bletshoe, m. Alice, dau. of Sir Thomas Bradshaigh, of Haigh, co. Lancaster, and was s. by his son,

SIR JOHN ST. JOHN, K.B. of Bletshoe, who m. Sibyl, dau. of Morgan ap Jenkyns ap Philip, and had besides several daus., three sons, JOHN, (Sir) his heir; Oliver (Sir), of Sharnbrook, co. Bedford, and Alexander, of Thorley, co. Herts, whose great grandson, Oliver, was lord chief justice of the Common Pleas, and was grandfather of Sir Francis St. John, created a baronet in 1715. Sir John was s. by his eldest son,

SIR JOHN ST. JOHN, who m. Margaret, dau. of Sir William Waldegrave, of Smallbridge, co. Suffolk, K.B., and his son and successor,

OLIVER ST. JOHN, was elevated to the peerage 13 January, 1559, as BARON ST. JOHN, of Bletshoe, and d. in 1582; his elder son and heir,

JOHN ST. JOHN, 2nd Lord St. John of Bletshoe, d. in 1596, leaving an only dau. and heiress, Anne, m. to William, Lord Howard, (son and heir-apparent of Charles, Earl of Nottingham) in whose descendants the Barony of Bletshoe became vested. He was s. by his brother,

OLIVER ST. JOHN, 3rd Baron St. John, of Bletshoe, who d. in 1618, leaving with other issue,

1. OLIVER, his successor.

2. Rowland (Sir), K.B., whose son Oliver was created a baronet, and was father of Sir Andrew St. John, 2nd baronet whose youngest son, JOHN, eventually s. to the Barony of St. John, and was ancestor of the present Baron St. John. (See BURKE's Extant Peerage).

The elder son,

OLIVER ST. JOHN, 4th Lord St. John, of Bletshoe, was advanced, by letters patent, dated 28 December, 1624, to the dignity of EARL OF BOLINGBROKE. His lordship m. Elizabeth, dau. and heir of William Paulet, grandson of St. George Paulet, a younger brother of William, 1st Marquess of Winchester, and had issue,

OLIVER, Lord St. John, summoned to parliament by writ in his father's lifetime, in the Barony of St. John, and took his seat 14 May, 1641; made knight of the Bath at the coronation of King CHARLES I. This nobleman fell fighting under the royal banner at Edgehill, 23 October, 1624. He had m. Lady Arabella Egerton, dau. of John, 1st Earl of Bridgewater, and left four daus., viz.,

Frances, m. Sir William Beecher, Knt., of Howberry, co. Bedford.

Elizabeth, m. to George Bennett, Esq., of Cotsback, in Leicestershire.

Arabella, m. to Sir Edward Wyse, K.B., of Sydenham, Devon.

Dorothy, m. to Francis Charlton, Esq., of Apley Castle, Salop.

* This lady m. 2ndly, John Beaufort, Duke of Somerset, K.G., by whom she was mother of Lady MARGARET BEAUFORT, who m. Edward Tudor, Earl of Richmond, and had a son, HENRY, EARL OF RICHMOND, who ascended the throne as HENRY VII. The Duchess of Somerset m. 3rdly, John, Viscount WELLES, K.G.

PAULET (Sir), made knight of the Bath, at the coronation of King CHARLES I.; m. Elizabeth, dau. and heir of Sir Rowland Vaughan, of the Spital, near Shoreditch, in the suburbs of London, and dying before his father, left,

PAULET, }

Francis, d. unm.

Anthony, m. a dau. of — Kensham, Esq., of Tameford.

Dorothy, m. to John Carey, Lord Rochford, eldest son of Henry, Earl of Dover.

His lordship d. in 1646, and was s. by his grandson,

OLIVER ST. JOHN, 2nd Earl of Bolingbroke, and 5th Lord St. John of Bletshoe. His lordship m. Lady Frances Cavendish, dau. of William, Duke of Newcastle, but dying s. p., 18 March, 1687-8, was s. by his brother, PAULET ST. JOHN, 3rd Earl of Bolingbroke, and 6th Lord St. John, of Bletshoe. This nobleman d. unm. 17 October, 1711, when the Barony of St. John, of Bletshoe, passed to the heir-at-law, Sir Andrew St. John, of Woodford, co. Northampton (see BURKE's Extant Peerage and Baronetage), and the Earldom of Bolingbroke became EXTINCT.

ST. JOHN—BARON TREGOZE OF HIGHWORTH.

By Letters Patent, dated 21 May, 1626.

Lineage.

SIR OLIVER ST. JOHN, of Lydiard Tregoze, an eminent soldier, obtained great renown in the Irish wars of ELIZABETH and JAMES, and was created Viscount Grandison, in the peerage of Ireland, temp. JAMES I., with limitation to the male issue of his nephew Sir Edward Villiers. He was first president of Munster, and was afterwards constituted lord deputy of that kingdom. His lordship returned, in the 20th of the same monarch, and by his majesty's successor, was made a peer of England, 21 May, 1626, in the dignity of BARON TREGOZE, of Highworth, co. Wilts. His lordship m. Joan, dau. and heir of Henry Roydon, Esq., of Battersea, and widow of Sir William Holcroft, but had no issue. He d. in 1629, when the Barony of Tregoze became EXTINCT; the Viscounty of Grandison passed in accordance with the limitation to the family of Villiers, and the manors of Battersea and Wandsworth devolved on his lordship's nephew, Sir John St. John, Bart., ancestor of the Viscounts BOLINGBROKE.

ST. LEGER—VISCOUNT DONERAILE.

(See BURKE's Extant Peerage.)

ST. LIZ—EARLS OF HUNTINGDON.

Creation of WILLIAM THE CONQUEROR.

Lineage.

The county which gave designation to this earldom was, according to Dr. Heylin, a thickly wooded forest, until the reign of the 2nd HENRY, when the timber was first cleared away; the chief town, from the celebrity of the forest as a chase, was called Huntingtown, which soon became abbreviated into Huntingdon, or Huntingdon. The Earldom of Huntingdon was conferred, by WILLIAM THE CONQUEROR, upon

WALTHEOF (son of Syward, the Saxon Earl of Northumberland), who had m. the dau. of that monarch's sister, by the mother's side, JUDITH. He was also Earl of Northampton, and of Northumberland; but conspiring against the Normans, he was beheaded, in 1073, at Winchester, leaving issue,

Maud, m. 1st, to Simon de St. Liz; and 2ndly, to David, brother of ALEXANDER, King of Scotland.

Judith, m. 1st, to Ralph de Toney, and afterwards to Robert, 5th son of Richard de Tonbridge, ancestor of the Lords Fitz-Walter.

After the execution of Walthoof, King WILLIAM offered Judith, his niece, the deceased earl's widow, in marriage to Simon St. Liz, a noble Norman, but the lady peremptorily rejected the alliance, owing, Dugdale says, to St. Liz's halting in one leg; which refusal so displeased the CONQUEROR, that he immediately seized upon the castle and honour of Huntingdon, which the Countess held in dower, exposing herself and her dau. to a state of privation and obscurity in the Isle of Ely, and other places; while he bestowed upon the said Simon St. Liz the town of Northampton, and the whole hundred of Falkeley, then valued at £40 per annum, to provide shoes for his horses. St. Liz thus disappointed in obtaining the hand of the Countess of Huntingdon, made his addresses, with greater success, to her elder dau., the Lady Maud, who became his wife, when William conferred upon the said

SIMON DE ST. LIZ, the Earldoms of Huntingdon and Northampton. This nobleman built the castle of Northampton, as also the priory of St. Andrews there, about the 18th year of the CONQUEROR's reign, and was a liberal benefactor to the church. His lordship was a witness to King HENRY I.'s laws in 1100, after which he made a voyage to the Holy Land, and d. on his return (1115), at the abbey of Charity, in France, leaving issue, SIMON, who s. to the Earldom of Northampton, but was excluded from that of Huntingdon. He was, subsequently, however, restored.

Walthoof, Abbot of Melros, in Scotland.

Maud, m. 1st, to Robert, son of Richard de Tonbridge; and 2ndly, to William de Albini, according to Dugdale; but Hornby, in his remarks upon Dugdale's errors, proves that such alliances, if not impossible, were very improbable. A Maud de St. Liz is mentioned as wife of Saier de Quincy, being father and mother of Saier, 1st Earl of Winchester.

Upon the death of Simon, Earl of Huntingdon and Northampton, his elder son, Simon, should have succeeded to both dignities, but it appears he only inherited the former. The Earldom of Huntingdon being assumed by

DAVID, son of MALCOLM III., King of Scotland, who had m. the deceased earl's widow, the Countess Maud, under the especial sanction of King HENRY I. This nobleman succeeded to the Scottish throne, on the decease of Alexander, his elder brother, in 1124; and invading England, was met upon the border by King STEPHEN, when their differences were amicably adjusted; and

HENRY, son of the said DAVID, King of Scotland, on condition of swearing allegiance to STEPHEN, had the Earldom and honour of Huntingdon, with the borough of Doncaster and Carlisle as an augmentation thereto. Nay, he was in such high estimation with King STEPHEN, that upon that monarch's solemn celebration of the feast of Easter, he placed the Earl of Huntingdon on his right hand; which gave such displeasure to the nobility then present, that William Corbois, or Corbel, Archbishop of Canterbury, Ranulph, Earl of Chester, and several others, withdrew from court. He m. Ada, sister of William, Earl of Warrenne and Surrey, and had issue, MALCOLM, } successively Kings of Scotland.

WILLIAM, }
David.

Ada, m. to Floris, Earl of Holland.

Margaret, m. to Conan le Petit, Earl of Brittany.

The earl d. in 1153, a little before his father, and upon his decease,

SIMON DE ST. LIZ, Earl of Northampton, was restored to the Earldom of Huntingdon. This nobleman was a zealous supporter of King STEPHEN, against the Empress MAUD, and continued ever opposed to any amicable adjustment of the contest. He m. Isabel, dau. of Robert, Earl of Leicester, and had issue, SIMON, who succeeded to the Earldom of Northampton, but not to that of Huntingdon. He was, however, restored, temp. HENRY II.

Amice.

Hawyse.

His lordship* d. about the year 1154, and after his decease, King HENRY II., in the 1st year of his reign, conferred, in exchange for the coa. of Northumberland, Cumberland, and Westmoreland (which the Scots had subjugated), upon

MALCOLM, King of Scotland, son of Henry, Earl of Huntingdon, the Earldom of Huntingdon. This monarch d. s. p., in 1165, and was s. by his brother,

WILLIAM, King of Scotland, as Earl of Huntingdon. This monarch taking up arms in favour of Prince Henry, so exasperated

King HENRY II., that he immediately sent an army against him, and promised that the castle and earldom should be restored to the family of St. Liz, the rightful heirs; whereupon Simon St. Liz, Earl of Northampton, son and heir of Simon, last Earl of Huntingdon, of that family, levied troops, and appeared before the castle, when WILLIAM, of Scotland, finding it untenable, made a surrender to St. Liz of that fortress, which the King of England ordered to be demolished, but, nevertheless,

SIMON DE ST. LIZ was restored to the Earldom of Huntingdon, circa 1174, which he enjoyed for the remainder of his life. He d. s. p., in 1184, whereupon King HENRY II. restored the Earldom to King WILLIAM, of Scotland, and that monarch transferred it to his younger brother, who thus became

DAVID, Earl of Huntingdon. This prince accompanied King RICHARD I. to the Holy Land, with 500 men in his train; but upon his return, his fleet being scattered, his lordship was made prisoner by the Egyptians, and eventually redeemed by the Venetians. He m. Maud, dau. of Hugh Kyvelloc, and sister and co-heir of Ralph, Earl of Chester, and had surviving issue,

JOHN, surnamed Le Scot.

Margaret, m. to Alan, of Galloway and had two daus., Christian, m. to William, Earl of Albemarle, and d. s. p.; and DEVORGILDA, m. to JOHN BALIOL (see BALIOL).

Isabel, m. to Robert Bruce, of Annandale.

Ada, m. to Henry de Hastings, Lord Hastings.

Maud, d. unm.

His lordship d. in 1219, and was s. by his son,

JOHN LE SCOT, as Earl of Huntingdon, who, in right of his mother, became likewise Earl of Chester (see SCOT, Earl of Chester). This nobleman d. in 1237, s. p., when the Earldom of Huntingdon became EXTINCT, but his great possessions devolved upon his sisters as co-heirs.

ST. MAUR—BARONS ST. MAUR.

By Writ of Summons, dated 29 July, 1314.

Lineage.

The first of this family upon record (though the name Dr. St. MAUR entered England contemporaneously with the CONQUEROR),

MILO DE ST. MAUR, was involved in the baronial war against King JOHN. He was father of Peter, Lord of Weston, in Gordano and Kingston Seymour, co. Somerset, temp. HENRY III., father of Maud, who m. Simon de Ludgate, and their son assumed the name of St. Maur, but had, as in the preceding generation, an heiress only, named Milicent, m. to Sir John de Perceval. Returning to the male line, though the connection between them does not appear, the next is

GEFFREY DE ST. MAUR, who m. the dau. and heir of William de Rughton; and after him

LAURENCE DE ST. MAUR, who in the 11th EDWARD I. obtained a grant for a weekly market at his manor of Rode, co. Somerset, and d. in the 24th of the same reign. He m. Isabella, dau. and co-heiress of Hugh de Morewick, widow of Sir Roger Lumley, and was s. by his son, NICHOLAS DE ST. MAUR. This feudal lord having been engaged in all the expeditions made into Scotland from the 27th to the 34th EDWARD I., was summoned to parliament as a Baron in the 8th of the ensuing reign. His lordship m. 1st, Eva de Meysey; and 2ndly, Elena, eldest dau. and co-heir of Alan le Zouche, Lord Zouche, of Ashby, co. Leicester, and dying in 1316, was s. by his elder son, by his 1st marriage,

THOMAS DE ST. MAUR, 2nd baron, but never summoned to parliament. This nobleman d. s. p. in 1358 (leaving his nephew, John Worthy, his heir of the whole blood), and was s. by his half-brother,

SIR NICHOLAS DE ST. MAUR, 3rd baron, summoned to parliament from 15 November, 1351, to 20 November, 1360. This nobleman was in the wars of France, temp. EDWARD III., first in the retinue of Maurice de Berkeley, and afterwards in that of Thomas de Holland. His lordship m. Muriel, dau. and heir of James Lovel, only son of Sir Richard Lovel, Lord Lovel of Karl, by whom he acquired the estates of Winfred-Eagle, co. Dorset, and of Castle Kary, in Somersetshire, with the Barony of Lovel. He d. in 1361, and was s. by his elder son, NICHOLAS DE ST. MAUR, 4th baron, b. 1353, who also d. in 1361, under age, and was s. by his brother,

RICHARD DE ST. MAUR, 5th baron, summoned to parliament under the name of SKYMOKE, from 26 August, 1390, to 3 October, 1400. This nobleman was in the wars of France, in

* This earl is stated to have had a brother also called Simon de St. Liz, whose descendants settling at Seton, co. Rutland, assumed the surname of SERON. The heir female of this family m., in the reign of HENRY VI., Sir William Fielding, ancestor of the Fieldings, Earls of Denbigh.

the 10th RICHARD II., in the retinue of Richard, Earl of Arundel, admiral of England. His lordship m. Ela, dau. and co-heir of Sir John St. Lo, Knt., and by her (who made her will in 1409) had issue,

RICHARD, his successor.

John (Sir), m. Margaret, dau. and heir of Sir John Erleigh, son of Sir John Erleigh, by Margaret, his wife, sister and eventually co-heir of Sir Gui de Bryan, and was s. by his son,

JOHN, who m. Elizabeth, dau. of Thomas, Lord Cobham, and left a son,

THOMAS (Sir), who got a share of the Bryan inheritance, in 1488, and d. in the beginning of HENRY VII.'s reign. He m. Philippa, dau. of Sir Edward Hungerford, and had a son,

JOHN, of Rode, in the co. of Somerset, who d. v. p., leaving

WILLIAM, whose only dau. and heiress,

JOANNE, m. Sir Robert Drury, and d. s. p.

Anne, m. to Robert Stawell, Esq., ancestor of the Lord Stawell.

Margaret, m. to William Bampfylde, and had a son,

SIR EDWARD BAMPFYLDE, who m. Elizabeth, dau. of Sir Michael Wadham, and had a dau.,

ELIZABETH, who m. George Percival, Esq., Lord of Tykenham, co. Somerset, ancestor of the Earls of Egmont.

Nicholas.

The baron d. in 1401, and was s. by his eldest son,

RICHARD DE ST. MAUR, 6th baron, summoned to parliament from 21 June, 1402, to 26 August, 1408, by writ addressed "Ricardo Seymour." This nobleman went into Ireland with Thomas, Duke of Surrey, in the 22nd of RICHARD II., then lieutenant of that kingdom; and in the 4th HENRY III., he was in the wars of France. His lordship m. Mary, dau. and heir of Thomas Peyver, by Margaret, his wife, dau. and co-heir of Sir Nigel Loring, and d. 1409, leaving his wife, then enclinte, who was afterwards delivered of a dau.,

ALICE ST. MAUR, b. in the house of Thomas Cressy, citizen and mercer of London, in the parish of St. Lawrence, Cripplegate, in that city. This lady m. WILLIAM ZOUCHE, 5th Baron Zouche, of Haryngworth, and the BARONY OF ST. MAUR continued vested in the Lords Zouche until the decease of

EDWARD, 11th Baron Zouche, in 1625, when the Baronies of Zouche of Haryngworth, of St. Maur, and of Lovel of Kary, fell into ABEYANCE between his lordship's two daus. and co-heirs, viz.,

ELIZABETH, m. 1597, to Sir William Tate, M.P., of De la Pre, Northamptonshire, and d. 1617: their descendant in the 4th generation,

CATHERINE TATE, dau. and co-heir (with her sisters, Mary, wife of Samuel Long, Esq., and Susannah, who d. unm.) of Bartholomew Tate, Esq., of De la Pré Abbey, m. 1720, Charles Hedger, Esq., of Finchley, and was grandmother of SIR CECIL BISHOPP, Bart.

Mary, m. 1st, to Thomas Leighton, Esq., and 2ndly, to William Connard, Esq.

The BARONY OF ZOUCHE was, however, called out in favour of SIR CECIL BISHOPP, 27 August, 1815, to whom succeeded his dau., HARRIET-ANNE, BARONESS ZOUCHE.

The Baronies of St. Maur, and of Lovel of Kary, fell into ABEYANCE, as stated above, upon the decease of Edward, 11th Baron Zouche, of Haryngworth, in 1625, between his daus., ELIZABETH, wife of Sir William Tate, of De la Pre, co. Northampton, and MARY, wife of Thomas Leighton, Esq., as they still continue amongst the descendants of those ladies.

ST. MAUR—BARON ST. MAUR.

By Writ of Summons, dated 20 November, 1317.

Lineage.

WILLIAM ST. MAUR, supposed to have been of the old baronial family of St. Maur, was summoned to parliament as a Baron, under the name de Sancto Mauro, from 20 November, 1317, to 14 March, 1322, but there is nothing further known of his lordship or his descendants.

BANKS conjectures (with a strong appearance of probability) that this William St. Maur was elder brother of Thomas de St. Maur, 2nd baron, under the creation set forth in the preceding article (which see).

ST. PHILIBERT—BARONS ST. PHILIBERT.

By Writ of Summons, dated 6 February, 1299.

Lineage.

NICHOLAS DE ST. PHILIBERT, in the 15th JOHN, was in the expedition then made in Poitou; and in the same reign,

HUGH DE ST. PHILIBERT was in arms with the other barons against the crown, and did not return to his allegiance before the 1st HENRY III., when he had restitution of his lands. In the 10th of the latter king he was made governor of the island of Jersey. After this Hugh, came

ROGER DE ST. PHILIBERT, one of the rebellious barons made prisoner in 47th HENRY III., at the battle of Northampton. And about the same time,

WILLIAM DE ST. PHILIBERT was also in the baronial ranks, and assisted in the defence of Dover Castle. But after the battle of Evesham, making his peace, and returning to his allegiance, he had restitution of his lands which had been seized, in the co. Northampton. The next of the family we find, is

HUGH DE ST. PHILIBERT, who, having been engaged in the French and Scottish wars, was summoned to parliament by King EDWARD I., as a Baron, 6 February, 1299, but never afterwards. His lordship was s. by his son,

JOHN DE ST. PHILIBERT, who had livery of his lands 7th EDWARD II., and like his predecessor, was in the French and Scottish wars; and in the 5th EDWARD III., was constituted mayor of Bordeaux. He d. in two years afterwards, leaving Ada, his wife, him surviving, and was s. by his son,

JOHN DE ST. PHILIBERT, who, in the 21st EDWARD III., making proof of his age, and doing his homage, had livery of his lands, and was summoned to parliament, 20 November, 1348, and 1 January, and 10 March, 1349. His lordship was in the wars of France, temp. EDWARD III., and d. in 1359. He m. Margaret, dau. of Hugh de St. John, and one of the co-heirs of her brother, Edmund de St. John, by whom he left a son,

JOHN DE ST. PHILIBERT, who d. in infancy, when the Barony of St. Philibert became EXTINCT.

ST. QUINTIN—BARON ST. QUINTIN.

By Writ of Summons, dated 8 June, 1294.

Lineage.

This family is said to have adopted its surname from the town of St. Quintin, the capital of Lower Picardy.

SIR HERBERT DE ST. QUINTIN came into England with the CONQUEROR, and was father of OLIVER, father of

SIR ROBERT DE ST. QUINTIN, who, in the time of RUFUS, was one of the twelve knights who divided, with Robert Fitz-Hamon, certain lands in Wales, which they had won by conquest, and there he erected the castle of St. Quintin. The brother of this Sir Robert,

SIR HERBERT ST. QUINTIN, was father of

AMATELLUS ST. QUINTIN, who, in the reign of RICHARD I., was entitled BARON ST. QUINTIN, and was s. by his son,

HERBERT ST. QUINTIN, also styled Baron St. Quintin, who m. Agnes, or Anne, sister and co-heir of Anselm de Stutevill, and had five sons, of whom the three elder, Herbert, John, and Amateillus, d. s. p. WILLIAM, the 4th, carried on the line of the family, and Alexander is said to be ancestor of the baronets of the name, viz., the ST. QUINTINS of Harpham, co. York. He had also two daus., viz., Margery, m. to Sir William Rochfort, Knt., and Agnes, m. to Sir Fulke Constable, Knt. The 4th son,

WILLIAM ST. QUINTIN, had, by Beatrix, his wife, a son, HERBERT, Baron of St. Quintin, who by his wife, Margery, dau. of Walter de Fauconberg, of Skelton, had issue, HERBERT, who d. v. p., leaving by his wife, Anastasia, dau. of John, Lord Maltravers, HERBERT, Baron of St. Quintin, husband of Lora,

dan. of William, Lord Fauconberg, of Skelton (on occasion of which marriage a dispensation was obtained owing to the near relationship of the parties) and had a son and heir,

HERBERT ST. QUINTIN, who was summoned to parliament as BARON ST. QUINTIN, by King Edward I., 8 June, 1294.* This nobleman m. Margery, sister of Gerard de Lisle, and dau. and co-heir of Warine de Lisle, and left two daus., viz.,

ELIZABETH, who is called, by one account, wife of John, Lord Grey, of Rotherfield, d. s. p., but she is stated by Banks, on the authority of an ancient record in the Tower of London, to have m. John Marmion.

LORA, m. Robert de Grey, of Rotherfield, who took the name of Marmion; in the record Robert, brother to John Marmion, had an only dau. and heir,

ELIZABETH GREY, who m. Henry, Lord Fitz-Hugh, and her grandson,

HENRY, Lord Fitz-Hugh (see Fitz-Hugh), left, with other issue,

ELIZABETH FITZ-HUGH, 2nd dau., who m. Sir William Parr, Knt., and had (with an elder son,) William, created Lord Parr,

SIR THOMAS PARR, who left,

WILLIAM PARR, Marquess of Northampton.

ANNE PARR, m. to William Herbert, Earl of Pembroke, from which period the titles of ST. QUINTIN and MARMION have been numbered amongst the honours of the house of Pembroke.

KATHARINE PARR, wife of HENRY VIII.

SANDFORD—BARON MOUNT SANDFORD.

By Letters Patent, dated 31 July, 1800.

Lineage.

CAPTAIN THEOPHILUS SANDFORD, of Moyglare, co. Meath, d. February, 1668, leaving by Anne, his wife, dau. of Richard Tighe, Esq., a son and heir,

HENRY SANDFORD, of Castlereagh, M.P., co. Roscommon, m. 1692, Elizabeth, sister of Robert FitzGerald, Earl of Kildare, and d. 9 September, 1733, leaving a dau., Frances, wife of Michael Cuffe, Esq., and a son and heir,

ROBERT SANDFORD, Esq., of Castlereagh, M.P. co. Roscommon, m. 1717, Henrietta, dau. of William O'Brien, Earl of Inchiquin, and had issue,

- I. HENRY, his heir.
- II. Robert, general in the army, d. 1793.
- I. Rachael, m. to Thomas Crofton, Esq.
- II. Mary, m. to Robert Cooke, Esq.
- III. Anne, m. to John Bourne, Esq.
- IV. Henrietta, m. to Edward Nicholson, Esq.

The son and heir,

HENRY SANDFORD, Esq., of Castlereagh, m. 21 September, 1750, Sarah, dau. of Stephen Moore, Viscount Mountcashell, and by her (who d. 1764,) had issue,

HENRY-MOORE, created Baron Mount Sandford.

William, in holy orders, b. 1752, d. 17 August, 1809, having m. 1789, Jane, 2nd dau. of the Right Hon. Silver Oliver, of Castle Oliver, co. Limerick, and had issue, Mary, b. 1791, m. William Robert Wills, Esq., of Willagrove, co. Roscommon, and was mother of Thomas-George Wills-Sandford, Esq., of Castlereagh and Willagrove.

Eliza, b. 1796, m. Hon. and Very Rev. Henry Pakenham,

* Nicolas does not consider this writ a regular summons to parliament, nor the person summoned under it a baron of the realm. Because "none of the higher temporal nobility, nor any of the spiritual peers, were included in it; nor was there any day fixed for the meeting." "It is also to be observed," continues the same authority, "that the writ in question is the earliest on record, excepting that of 49th HENRY III., that the majority of the persons summoned in the 22nd EDWARD I. were never again summoned, excepting in the 25th of the same king; that several of the persons were not considered barons by tenure; and that of those who were barons by tenure, and summoned on those occasions, many were never included in any subsequent summons to parliament. The writ of the 22nd EDWARD I. has, however, on one occasion (in the case of the Barony of Ros), been admitted as a writ of summons to parliament at the bar of the House of Lords; but the last General Report of the Lords Committee, appointed to search for matters touching the dignity of a Peer of the Realm, appears to confirm the objections here expressed." Yet under this, at least, doubtful writ, the extant EARLS OF PEMBROKE assume the dignity of BARONS OF ST. QUINTIN.

SANDYS—BARON SANDYS, OF THE VINE.

By Writ of Summons, dated 3 November, 1529.

Lineage.

SIR WILLIAM SANDYS (son of Sir William Sandys of the Vine by Elizabeth, his wife, dau. of Sir John Cheney, of Shurland) was an eminent soldier in the reigns of HENRY VII. and HENRY VIII. In the 7th of the former king he was in the expedition sent into Flanders, under the Earls of Derby, Shrewsbury, and other English noblemen, to aid the Emperor MAXIMILIAN against the French; and in five years afterwards he shared in the victory over the Cornishmen at Blackheath. In the 4th HENRY VIII. he was sent, with other gallant persons from England, to assist Ferdinand of Arragon, against the French; and he was subsequently, being at the time a knight of the Garter, one of the commissioners deputed to make a palace before the castle gate at Guisnes, preparatory to the celebrated interview between HENRY VIII. and FRANCIS I. Upon the attainder of the Duke of Buckingham, Sir William Sandys obtained a grant of the manors of Willesford and Stratton, co. Wilts, and in the 14th HENRY VIII. he was treasurer of Calais: in which latter he led, in conjunction with Sir Richard Wingfield, the rear of the army sent under the command of the Earl of Surrey into France; and for his good services was summoned to parliament by warrant directed Willielmo Sandys (de Vine) chivalier, from 3 November, 1529, to 16 January, 1542. (Dugdale states from Stow, that six years previously viz., 27 April, 1523, he had been advanced to the degree of a baron of the realm by the title of LORD SANDS at the king's royal palace of Bridewell, but that no patent of the creation is upon record). He certainly bore the title of Lord Sandys long before the first of these summonses, and so designated, led the van of the army sent, under the Duke of Suffolk into France, in the 15th HENRY VIII., and in two years afterwards, as Lord Sandys, had a reversionary grant of the office of lord chamberlain, after the death of Charles, Earl of Worcester. His lordship was in the train of Wolsey, when the cardinal was deputed to complain to the King of France, of the sacking of Rome by the Duke of Bourbon. He subsequently subscribed the articles of impeachment against that celebrated prelate, and he signed the letter to Pope CLEMENT regarding HENRY's divorce from Queen Katharine.

The principal seat of the Sandys family, anciently at the Vine near Basingstoke in Hampshire, had been alienated by an heiress to the family of Brocas, but was recovered by this Lord Sandys, who rebuilt the manor house there. His lordship m. Margery, only dau. and heir of John Bray, Esq. (brother and heir of Reginald Bray) by whom he eventually acquired a considerable property. He d. in 1542, having had issue,

- I. Thomas, who s. as 2nd baron.

 Margery, m. to Henry Carey, Esq., of Hamworthy, co. Dorset.
 Walter (Sir).

His lordship (who is stated by Leland to have had four sons and six daus., a junior of the former being, says THYRKER'S Chronicle, executed at St. Thomas Waterings, 18 June, 1556, for a robbery of £3,000,) was s. at his decease by his grandson,

WILLIAM SANDYS, 3rd baron, summoned to parliament from 8 May, 1572, to 14 November, 1621. This nobleman was one of the peers who sat upon the trial of the Duke of Norfolk, and upon that of MARY, Queen of Scotland. Afterwards taking part, 43rd ELIZABETH, with the Earl of Essex, in that nobleman's insurrection, he suffered imprisonment. His lordship m. 1st, Christian, dau. of Bryan Annesley, Esq., of Lewisham, in Kent, and had a son, WILLIAM, his successor. He m. 2ndly, Catherine, called "the Fair Brydges," dau. of Edmund, Lord Chandos by whom he had an only dau.,

ELIZABETH, who m. Sir Edwin Sandys, Knt., son of Miles Sandys, of Latimers, and had issue,

HENRY SANDYS, a colonel in the royal army during the civil wars—of whom hereafter—as successor to the 4th baron.

His lordship d. in 1623, and was s. by his son,

WILLIAM SANDYS, 4th baron, but never summoned to parliament. His lordship m. Althea, eldest dau. and co-heir of John Panton, Esq., of Brinneskid, co. Denbigh, but d. s. p. in 1629, when the barony devolved upon his nephew of the half blood,

SARSFIELD—VISCOUNT SARSFIELD.

Lineage.

SIR DOMINICK SARSFIELD, Knt., chief justice of the Court of Common Pleas in Ireland, was created the 1st baronet in Ireland, 30 September, 1619, and raised to the peerage of Ireland by Privy Seal, 13 February, 1624, as Baron of Barrett's county, and Viscount Kingsale, both in the co. Cork; which privy seal having no effect by reason of the death of King JAMES, the title was conferred by King CHARLES; but a dispute arising between him and the Lord Courcy, of Kingsale, it was referred to commissioners appointed for that purpose, who decreed that he, Sarsfield, should relinquish the title of Kingsale, and take the title of Viscount of Roscarbrie or any other place in Ireland at his election, whereupon he chose the title of Viscount Sarsfield, of Kilmallock, co. Limerick, which was conferred without loss of precedence or place, as if he had continued his former honour of Kingsale. Soon after, Sir Dominick was made Viscount Sarsfield, of Kilmallock, with precedence of the former patent. He had two sons,

I. WILLIAM, his heir.

II. Dominick, whose will is dated 1642, was father of Edmund, mentioned in his father's and uncle William's will. He had besides two younger sons who d. unm., two sons,

LADY ELIZABETH SAVAGE, dau. of Thomas D'Arcy, Lord D'Arcy, of Chiche, and EARL RIVERS, and widow of Thomas Savage, 1st Viscount SAVAGE, of Rock Savage, was created 21 April, 1641, COUNTESS RIVERS, for life. Her ladyship d. 9 March, 1650, when the title became of course EXTINCT.

SAVILE—BARONS SAVILE, EARLS OF SUSSEX.

Barony, by Letters Patent, dated 21 July, 1628.

Earldom, by Letters Patent, dated 25 May, 1644.

Lineage.

The family of SAVILE is of great antiquity in the north of England. In the reign of EDWARD III.,

SIR JOHN SAVILE, Knt., of Eland, in Yorkshire, was constituted escheator for the cos. Northumberland, Cumberland, and Westmoreland, and in the next reign was sheriff of Yorkshire, and governor of the castle of York. In the 2nd HENRY V. (1414-15),

THOMAS SAVILE, of Thornhill, co. York, being at that time one of the Esquires to Edward, Duke of York, was, in consideration of his good services, made forester of that Prince's chase and park at Arynghden, in the same shire. From this Thomas descended

SIR HENRY SAVILE, of Thornhill, K.B., temp. King HENRY VIII., who by his wife, a dau. and co-heir of Thomas Southill, Esq., of Southill, had a son and heir, EDWARD, who d. s. p., and a dau., Dorothy, m. to John Kay, Esq., of Woodsome, co. York. He had also, by a concubine, named Barkston, another son,

SIR ROBERT SAVILE, alias BARKSTON, Knt., who, in the 15th ELIZABETH, served the office of high sheriff for the co.

* The 4th Earl Rivers had two illegitimate children, a dau. Beasy, wife of Frederick, Earl of Rochford, and a son, the ill-fated Richard Savage, the poet.

Lincoln. He m. a sister of John, Lord Hussey, and widow of Sir Richard Thimelby, and was s. by his son.

SIR JOHN SAVILE, Knt., of Howley, in Yorkshire, high sheriff for Lincolnshire, in the 32nd ELIZABETH, and member of parliament for the co. York, temp. King JAMES I. and King CHARLES I. He was likewise high steward for the honour of Pontefract, and was elevated to the peerage, by letters patent, dated 21 July, 1628, as BARON SAVILE, of Pontefract. His lordship was subsequently sworn of the privy council, and appointed comptroller of the household. Lord Savile m. 1st, Catherine, dau. of Lord Willoughby, of Parham, but had no issue. He m. 2ndly, Elizabeth, dau. of Sir Edward Carey, Knt., and had issue,

Henry, who m. Helen, dau. and co-heir of William Oglethorpe, Esq., and d. v. p., leaving a son,

JOHN, who d. also before Lord Savile.

Edward, m. Anne, dau. and heir of Richard Tolson, Esq., of Cumberland, but d. s. p.

THOMAS (Sir), who s. to the peerage.

Elizabeth, m. 1st, to Alveray Cooper, Esq., of Batley, in Yorkshire, and 2ndly, to Richard Banks, Esq.

Frances, m. to the Rev. Thomas Bradley, D.D., rector of Castelford, co. York.

His lordship d. in 1630, and was s. by his eldest surviving son,

SIR THOMAS SAVILE, Knt., 2nd Baron Savile. This nobleman was created 11 June, 1628, Viscount Savile, of Castlebar, in the peerage of Ireland. His lordship was comptroller of the household, and attending King CHARLES I. at Oxford, was advanced, by letters patent, dated 25 May, 1644, to the dignity of EARL OF SUSSEX. During the whole of the civil wars he remained faithfully attached to the fortunes of his royal master, and his services merited fully the honours he received. His lordship m. 1st, Frances, dau. of Sir Michael Soudes, Knt., of Throwley, in Kent, and widow of Sir John Leveson, but had no issue. He m. 2ndly, Lady Anne Villiers, dau. of Christopher, Earl of Anglesey, and eventually sole heir of her brother, Charles, last Earl of Anglesey, of the family of Villiers. By this lady he had issue,

JAMES, Lord Savile, his successor.

Frances, m. to Francis, Lord Brudenel, son and heir of Robert, Earl of Cardigan, by whom she had issue,

GEORGE, 3rd Earl of Cardigan.

Viscounty, by Letters Patent, dated 13 January, 1668.

Earldom, by Letters Patent, dated 16 July, 1679.

Marquessate, by Letters Patent, dated 22 August, 1682.

Lineage.

The principal legitimate branch of the SAVILE family was represented by

SIR GEORGE SAVILE, Bart., of Thornhill, co. York (see BURKE'S Extinct Baronetage), who m. Lady Mary Talbot, dau. of George, 6th Earl of Shrewsbury, and was grandfather of

SIR WILLIAM SAVILE, Bart., who m. Anne, dau. of Thomas, Lord Coventry, and was s. by his son.

SIR WILLIAM SAVILE, Bart., of Thornhill, who, in consideration of his own and his father's eminent services during the civil wars, was elevated to the peerage by King CHARLES II., 13 January, 1668, as Baron Savile, of Bland, co. York, and VISCOUNT HALIFAX. On 16 July, 1679, his lordship was created EARL OF HALIFAX, and MARQUESS OF HALIFAX, 22 August, 1682. He m. 1st, Lady Dorothy Spencer, dau. of Henry, Earl of Sunderland, and had issue,

HENRY, who m. Esther, dau. and co-heir of Charles de la Tour, Marquess of Gouvernet, in France, and d. s. p., v. p.

WILLIAM, his successor.

George, fell at the siege of Buda, in 1683, and d. unm.

Anne, m. to John, Lord Vaughan.

His lordship m. 2ndly, Gertrude, dau. of William Pierrepont, of Thoresby, 2nd son of Robert, 1st Earl of Kingston, by whom he had an only dau.,

ELIZABETH, who m. Philip, eldest son of Philip Stanhope, 2nd Earl of Chesterfield.

The Marquess of Halifax was lord privy seal, and some time president of the council, temp. CHARLES II. He was esteemed a statesman of the first grade. Burnet characterizes him "as a man of great and ready wit, full of life, and very pleasant, but much turned to satire; his imagination was too hard for his judgment; and a severe jest took more with him than all arguments whatever. He let his wit run much on matters of religion, which got him the reputation of a confirmed atheist; but he denied the charge. Friendship and morality were great topics with him; and punctuality and justice more remarkable in his private dealings. In relation to the public, he went backwards and forwards, and changed sides so often, that, in the conclusion, no side would trust him." Macaulay bears more flattering testimony to the merit of this eminent politician:—"The memory of Halifax," says that brilliant writer, "is entitled in an especial manner to the protection of history. For what distinguishes him from all other statesmen is this, that, through a long public life, and through frequent and violent revolutions of public feeling, he almost invariably took that view of the great questions of his time which history has finally adopted. He was called inconstant, because the relative position in which he stood to the contending factions was perpetually varying. As well might the pole star be called inconstant because it is sometimes to the east and sometimes to the west of the pointers. To have defended the ancient and legal constitution of the realm against a seditious populace at one conjuncture, and against a tyrannical government at another; to have been the foremost champion of order in the turbulent parliament of 1680, and the foremost champion of liberty in the servile parliament of 1685; to have been just and merciful to Roman Catholics in the days of the Popish Plot, and to Exclusionists in the days of the Rye House Plot; to have done all in his power to save both the head of Stafford and the head of Russell; this was a course which contemporaries, heated by passion and deluded by names and badges, might not unnaturally call fickle, but which deserves a very different name from the late justice of posterity."

His lordship d. in 1696, and was s. by his eldest surviving son,

WILLIAM SAVILE, 2nd marquess. This nobleman m. 1st, Elizabeth, dau. of Sir Samuel Grimston, Bart., of Gorbamby, co. Herts, and sister and heir of Sir Harbottle Grimston, by whom he had to survive, an only dau.,

ANNE, m. to Charles, 4th Earl of Elgin, and 3rd Earl of Allesbury, and was mother of a dau. and eventual heiress, LADY MARY BRUCE, who m. 1728, Henry Brydges, 2nd Duke of Chandos, and had one son James, 3rd Duke of Chandos (whose dau. and heiress, Anne-Eliza, m. 1796, Richard, Earl Temple, afterwards Duke of Buckingham and Chandos), and one dau. Caroline, wife of John Leigh, Esq., of Adlestrop.

His lordship m. 2ndly, Lady Mary Finch, dau. of Daniel, Earl of Nottingham, by Lady Essex Rich, dau. and co-heir of Richard, Earl of Warwick and Holland, and had, with two sons, who both d. young, three daus., viz.,

Essex, d. young.

Dorothy, m. to Richard Boyle, Earl of Burlington.

Mary, m. to Sackville Tufton, Earl of Thanet.

SAYE, OR SAY—BARONS SAYE.

By Writ of Summons, dated 22nd EDWARD I.

Lineage.

The first member of the family of SAY mentioned by Sir William Dugdale, is

PICOT DE SAY, who, in the time of the CONQUEROR, and living in 1083, was one of the principal persons in the co. Salop, under Roger de Montgomery, Earl of Shrewsbury. The next is

INGELRAM DE SAY, one of the staunchest adherents of King STEPHEN in his contest with the Empress MAUD, and made prisoner with that monarch at the battle of Lincoln. After this gallant and faithful soldier, we come to

WILLIAM DE SAY, son of WILLIAM DE SAY, and grandson of WILLIAM DE SAY, who came into England with the CONQUEROR. He m. Beatrix, the divorced wife of Hugh Talbot, and dau. of Geoffrey de Mandeville, Earl of Essex, sister of Geoffrey, and aunt, and eventually heiress of William de Mandeville, Earls of Essex, by whom he had issue,

William, who d. v. p., leaving two daus., viz.,

Beatrix, who m. Geoffrey Fitz-Piers, and from whom descended the Fitz-Piers's, who subsequently s. to the Earl-dom of Essex.

Maud, m. to William de Bocland.

GEOFFREY.

The 2nd son, and eventual heir male,

GEOFFREY DE SAY, was one of the barons chosen to proceed with William de Longchamp, bishop of E. y. chancellor of England, with the covenanted ransom of 70,000 marks of silver for the release of RICHARD I. He m. Lettice, sister, and at length heir, of Walkeline Maminot, and dying in 1214, was s. by his son,

GEOFFREY DE SAYE, who, in the 16th JOHN, paid 400 marks to the king for livery of the lands of his inheritance both by father and mother. In the next year this Geoffrey was in arms with the other barons against the king, and was one of the twenty-five appointed to enforce the observance of Magna Charta. His lands in the cos. of Northampton, Cambridge, Essex, Hertford, Norfolk, Suffolk, and Lincoln, were in consequence seized, and given to Peter de Crobini; but returning to his allegiance in the next reign he had full restitution, and on levying the scutage of Montgomery, 8th HENRY III., answered for 42 knights' fees. He m. Alice, dau. and co-heir of John de Cheyney, and dying in 1230, was s. by his son,

WILLIAM DE SAY, or SAYE, who, in the 44th HENRY III., was constituted governor of the castle at Rochester, but being afterwards at the battle of Lewes, on the side of the king, he fled from the field on the defeat of the royalists. He d. 56th HENRY III., 1272, and was s. by his son,

WILLIAM DE SAY. This feudal lord had summons (by a writ, the regularity of which as a summons to parliament, is doubtful, and which, though on one occasion admitted in the general report of the Lords' Committee, has been finally rejected), with other great men, in the 22nd EDWARD II., to advise with the king upon the most important affairs of the realm; and he had subsequently a military summons to march into Gascony. He d. in 1295, and was s. by his son,

GEOFFREY DE SAY, then only fourteen years of age, whose wardship was given to William de Leyburne, in order that he might marry Idonea, dau. of the said William. In the 34th EDWARD III., he had livery of his lands upon doing his homage; and was in the expedition made at that period into Scotland. In the 7th EDWARD II. (26 July, 1313), he was summoned to parliament as a Baron, and thenceforward to the 14th of the same reign. His lordship m. Idonea de Leyburne, d. in 1322, and was s. by his son,

GEOFFREY DE SAY, 2nd baron, who, making proof of his age, 19th EDWARD II., had livery of his lands, and was summoned to parliament, from 25 February, 1342, to 15 July, 1353 (27th EDWARD III.) In the 8th EDWARD III., he obtained the king's charter for free warren in all his demesne lands within his lordships of Greenwich, Deptford, &c., and in two years afterwards he was constituted admiral of the king's fleet, from the mouth of the Thames westwards, in which service, besides himself then a banneret, he had of his retinue, four knights, twenty men at arms, and three archers. From this period Lord Say was constantly employed in the wars of France and Flanders, and deported himself with great gallantry. His lordship m. Maud, dau. of Guy de Beauchamp, Earl of Warwick, and had issue (besides, it appears, two sons, Thomas and John, who d. unm. and young),

WILLIAM, his successor.

Idonea, who m. Sir John Clinton, Knt., of Maxtock, co. Warwick, 3rd BARON CLINTON, the 8th in descent, from whom THOMAS CLYNTON (DE SAY), primogenitus Comitiss Lincoln, was summoned to parliament, 13 February, 1604, v. p., as Lord Clinton. To this Idonea, Charles Rudolph, present LORD CLINTON, is elder co-heir.

Elizabeth, m. to Thomas, or John, de Aldone, and d. v. p. Joane, m. 1st, to Sir William Fiennes, and her grandson, Sir JAMES FIENNES, or FYNES, Knt., was summoned to parliament in 1447, by King HENRY VI., as BARON SAYE AND SELLE, a dignity still extant, and now enjoyed by FREDERICK, 13th LORD SAYE AND SELLE, who is 20th in descent from Geoffrey, Lord Saye, the Baron of Magna Charta. Joane Say m. 2ndly, Stephen de Valoines.

Lord Say d. in 1359, and was s. by his son,

WILLIAM DE SAY, 3rd baron, summoned to parliament, from 14 August, 1362, to 4 October, 1373. This nobleman m. Beatrice, dau. of Thomas de Braose, and had issue,

JOHN.

Elizabeth.

He d. 1375, and was s. by his son,

JOHN DE SAY, 4th baron, who d. in minority, a ward to the king, in 1382, leaving his sister,

ELIZABETH DE SAY, his heir. This lady m. 1st, Sir John de Fallest, or Falvesley, who was summoned to parliament as a Baron (see Falvesley), and 2ndly, Sir William Heron (d. 1404), also summoned to parliament as a Baron (see Heron), but d. v. p. in 1399, leaving the descendants of her aunt, Idonea, Lady Clinton, and JOANE, Lady Fiennes (refer to issue of 2nd baron), her heirs, amongst whose representatives the Barony of Say has continued from that period to the present in ABSTINANCE.

SCALES—BARONS SCALES.

By Writ of Summons, dated 6 February, 1299.

Lineage.

ROBERT DE SCALES, Lord of Newselles, co. Herts, who, in the 26th HENRY III., paid a fine of £10 to the king, to be exempted from serving in the wars of Gascony, at that time, d. in 1265, leaving, by Muriel, his wife, two sons, William, who became a canon at Blackburgh, co. Norfolk.

And his heir,

SIR ROBERT DE SCALES. This feudal lord having distinguished himself in arms both in Scotland and France, in the reign of EDWARD I., was summoned to parliament as BARON SCALES, by that monarch, from 6 February, 1299, to 22 January, 1305, and dying in the latter year, left, by Alice, his wife, a son,

ROBERT DE SCALES, 2nd baron, summoned to parliament from 3 November, 1306, to 14 March, 1322. This nobleman being made a knight of the Bath, with Prince Edward and several others, attended him in the expedition made, at that time, into Scotland. He was also summoned as a peer to the coronation of EDWARD II. His lordship m. Evelina, dau. of Hugh de Courtenay, and sister of Hugh, Earl of Devon, and dying in 1322, was s. by his son,

ROBERT DE SCALES, 3rd baron, then in minority, for whose guardianship, his mother paid a fine of 200 marks to the king. His lordship attained his majority in the 7th EDWARD III., and in two years afterwards, we find him in the expedition made into Scotland, in the retinue of William de Ufford. He was again in Scotland the ensuing year, and in the 12th of the same reign he attended the king into Flanders. From this period, until the 30th EDWARD, he was almost unremittingly engaged in France. His lordship m. Katherine, dau. of Robert de Ufford, sister and co-heir of William de Ufford, Earls of Suffolk, and had issue,

1. ROGER, his successor.

1. Margaret, m. Sir Robert Howard, and by him (who d. in 1389,) left a son and heir,

Sir John Howard, M.P. co. Cambridge, m. 1st, Margaret, dau. and heir of Sir John de Playtz; and 2ndly, Alice, dau. and heir of Sir William Tendring; by the latter he had a son, ROBERT, ancestor of the DUKES OF NORFOLK; and by the former he had a son,

Sir John Howard, who dying v. p., left an only dau. and heiress,

ELIZABETH, heiress of her grandfather; this lady m. John de Vere, 12th Earl of Oxford. Of this marriage, the co-representatives (all being co-heirs of the Barony of Scales), are 1 the DUKES OF ATHOLE; 2 WISC-

COMBE-HENRY-HOWARD HARTLEY, Esq., of Bucklebury; 3 SIR RAINALD KNIGHTLEY, Bart.; 4 MRS. TROTH JENKINS; 5 SIR ROBERT BURDETT, Bart., of Foremark; 6 SIR CHARLES-ROBERT TEMPEST, Bart., of Broughton; 7 CHARLES STANDISH, Esq., of Standish; 8 JOHN WRIGHT, Esq., of Keldon, co. Essex; 9 JOHN ROGERSON, Lord Rollo; 10 GEORGE-WILLIAM VILLIERS, Esq.; and 11 MONTAGU, EARL OF ABINGDON.

III. Elizabeth, m. to Sir Roger de Felbrigg, and had issue, Sir Simon de Felbrigg, who m. Margaret, dau. and heiress of the Duke of Silesia, and left an only dau. and heiress.

ALEXA, m. Sir William Tyndall, of Dene, co. Northampton, father of Sir Thomas, the father of Sir William Tyndall, K.B., temp. HENRY VII., who was found, by the inquisition taken after the death of Anthony, Earl of Rivers and 8th Lord de Scales, to be one of the two co-heirs of Elizabeth, Lady de Scales; a direct descendant of Sir William Tyndall—possibly his representative—JOHN TYNDALL (son of Deane Tyndall) d. aged ninety, in 1706, leaving an only dau., Elizabeth, who m. 8 January, 1700-1, Jasper Rlythman, Esq., of New Lathes, co. York, and by him had an only dau., Lucy, who m. Charles King, Esq., and was mother of two daus., her co-heirs, viz., Elizabeth, wife of REV. WM. CAMPBELL, and Lucy, wife of REV. RICHARD BULLOCK. Mrs. Campbell d. 1779, s. p.; Mrs. Bullock, in 1784, leaving two sons, William and Edward; the elder of these (William Bullock) d. in 1832, leaving three daus., Lucy, Marianne, wife of Sir James Douglas, K.C.B., and Emily, wife of John Cay, Esq.

Lord Scales, who had summons to parliament, from 25 February, 1342, to 6 April, 1369, d. in the latter year, and was s. by his son,

ROGER DE SCALES, 4th baron, summoned to parliament from 28 December, 1375, to 3 September, 1385. This nobleman was in the expedition made into France, in the 46th EDWARD III.; and upon the breaking out of the insurrection under Jack Straw, temp. RICHARD II., his lordship was one of those eminent persons whom the insurgents seized, and compelled to march along with them. In the 5th of the same reign, Lord Scales, by an inquisition, was found to be one of the co-heirs to William de Ufford, Earl of Suffolk. His lordship m. Joan, dau. and heiress of Sir John de Northwode, and dying in 1386, was s. by his son.

ROBERT DE SCALES, 5th baron, summoned to parliament from 30 November, 1396, to 3 October, 1400. His lordship, at his accession to the dignity, was in his fourteenth year. In the 1st HENRY IV., Lord Scales was one of the lords in parliament, that voted for the safe custody of the late King RICHARD II., and he embarked soon afterwards in the expedition made into Aquitaine. His lordship m. Elizabeth, dau. of William, Lord Bardolf, by whom (who m., after his decease, Sir Henry Percy, of Athol,) he had issue,

THOMAS, }

He d. in 1402, and was s. by his elder son,

ROBERT DE SCALES, 6th baron, but never summoned to parliament. This nobleman dying unm., in 1418, was s. by his brother,

THOMAS DE SCALES, 7th baron, summoned to parliament from 13 January, 1445, to 9 October, 1459. This nobleman attained high military renown in the reign of HENRY V. and HENRY VI. In 1436, upon the death of John Plantagenet, Duke of Bedford, the Normans rebelling, this Lord Scales was sent out with others, against them; when, after he had destroyed many of the rebels, and some of the towns and villages, the country was reduced to obedience. For this especial service, he obtained from the crown a grant of £100 per annum, for life. In the 21st HENRY VI., his lordship was constituted one of the ambassadors then deputed to France, for the purpose of negotiating a peace. In the 28th of the same reign, we find Lord Scales in arms against Jack Cade; and in the subsequent conflicts between the Houses of York and Lancaster, he remained ever faithful to King HENRY VI. His lordship m. Emma, dau. of John Walesborough, and had issue,

THOMAS, who d. v. p.

Elizabeth, m. 1st, to Henry Bouchier, 2nd son of Henry, Earl of Essex, but he d. s. p.; and 2ndly, to Anthony, son and heir of Richard Widvile, Earl of Rivers, who was summoned to parliament in her right, as Lord Scales, but afterwards s. to the Earldom of Rivers, and was beheaded in 1483. Lady Scales d. previously s. p.

Lord Scales, is said by Story to have been murdered 25 July, 1460, but Dugdale merely says, that he departed this life. After his lordship's decease, the 2nd husband of his only dau. and heiress, Elizabeth, Anthony Widvile, was summoned to parliament, jure uxoris, as Lord Scales, and upon the death of the said Elizabeth, s. p., the Barony of Scales fell into ABEYANCE, between the descendants of Margaret, Lady Howard, and Elizabeth, Lady Felbrigg (refer to issue of Robert, 3rd baron), as it still continues with their representatives.

The noble family of Scales resided for many generations, in great splendour and power, at the castle of Middleton, near Lynn, co. Norfolk.

SCHOMBERG—DUKES OF SCHOMBERG.

By Letters Patent, dated 9 March, 1689.

Lineage.

JOHN MEINHARDT SCHONBERG, or SCHOMBERG, a German, of an ancient and noble family in the Palatinate, m. Anne, dau. of Edward Sutton, Lord Dudley, and was father of

FREDERIC SCHOMBERG, a military officer of high reputation. This eminent person commenced his gallant career in the service of the States General; he was afterwards in Portugal, where he commanded the Portuguese army against the Spaniards, and in 1668, achieved by arms, the full recognition of the right of the House of Braganza to the crown of Portugal. We next find him in the service of Louis XIV., by whom he was raised to the rank of a Marshal of France. In 1688, he accompanied the Prince of Orange into England, and when His Highness obtained the sceptre as WILLIAM III., was elevated to the peerage, by letters patent, dated 9 March, 1689, as BARON TETES, and EARL OF BRENTFORD, co. Middlesex, MARQUESS OF HARWICH, and DUKE OF SCHOMBERG, all in remainder to his 2nd surviving son, Charles, and his issue male; failure of which, to his eldest surviving son, Meinhardt, and his male descendants. His grace m. 1st, Johanna-Elizabeth, the dau. of his paternal uncle, and had issue,

Frederick, who resided in Germany.

MEINHARDT, who was created in the peerage of Ireland, in 1690-1, Baron of Tarragh, Earl of Bangor, and DUKE OF LEINSTER.

Otto, who fell at the siege of Valenciennes.

Henry, d. at Brussels.

CHARLES, successor to the honours, under the patent.

The duke m. 2ndly, Susanna, dau. of Count Anmale de Harcourt, in France, but had no issue. His grace, besides his other honours, had been made a knight of the Garter and Master of the Ordnance, and had been granted by parliament £100,000. At length, after a long and glorious military career, Schomberg fell at the Boyne, in 1690, aged eighty-four, and was buried at St. Patrick's, Dublin, with the following inscription—

"Underneath lies the body of Frederick, Duke of Schomberg, slain at the battle of the Boyne, in the year 1690. The dean and chapter of this church, again and again, besought the heirs of the duke, to cause some monument to be here erected to his memory. But when, after many entreaties by letters and friends, they found they could not obtain their request, they themselves placed this stone; only that the indignant reader may know where the ashes of Schomberg are deposited.

"Thus did the fame only of his virtue obtain more for him from strangers, than nearness of blood from his own family."

His grace was s. according to the limitation, by his son,

CHARLES SCHOMBERG, 2nd duke, who dying unm. of a wound, received at the battle of Marsaglia, in Piedmont, anno 1693, was s. by his elder brother,

MEINHARDT SCHOMBERG, Duke of Leinster, in Ireland, as 3rd Duke of Schomberg. This nobleman m. Charlotte, dau. of Charles-Lewis, Elector Palatine, and had issue,

Charles, Marquess of Harwich, colonel of horse, who d. v. p., anno 1713, s. p.

Mary, m. to Count Dagenfeldt.

Caroline, d. unm.

Frederica, m. 1st, to Robert D'Arcy, Earl of Holderness; and 2ndly, to Benjamin Mildmay, Earl Fitz-Walter, and d. in 1751.

His grace, who, like his father, was a military man of high reputation, d. in 1719, when, for want of an heir male, all his honours became EXTINCT.

SCOT—EARL OF CHESTER.

By Inheritance, anno 1231.

Lineage.

THE LADY MAUD DE MESCHINES, eldest dau. of Hugh (surnamed Keeldik), 3rd Earl of Chester, m. David, Earl of Huntingdon, brother of WILLIAM THE LION, King of Scotland, and had with four daus. (see MESCHINES, Earls of Chester), an only son.

JOHN LE SCOT, who, upon the demise in 1231, of his uncle (his mother having d. previously), RANULPH DE MESCHINES (surnamed Blundevil), 4th EARL OF CHESTER, without issue, succeeded to the whole Palatine of Chester, and became, in consequence, Earl of that county. This nobleman carried the sword, called Curtana, at the marriage of King HENRY III., anno 1236; and Selden, in his titles of honour, says, that his lordship then bore the express designation of "Earl Palatine;" observing, that until the time of the 2nd HENRY he had never found "Palatine" so applied. In the same year his lordship assumed the cross, but it is doubtful whether he ever set out for the Holy Land or not. He d. in 1244, by poison, suspected to have been administered by his wife, Helen, dau. of Llewellyn, Prince of North Wales; and as he left no issue, the Earldom of Chester was annexed to the crown for ever (in 1246); "Ne

SCOTT (FITZ-ROY)—DUKE OF MONMOUTH.

By Letters Patent, dated 14 February, 1663.

Lineage.

JAMES, natural son of King CHARLES II., by Mrs. Lucy Walters, dau. of Richard Walters, of Haverford West, co. Pembroke, was elevated to the peerage, 14 February, 1663, in the dignities of Baron Tynedale, co. Northumberland, Viscount Doncaster, and DUKE OF MONMOUTH, and afterwards invested with the Garter. His grace was b. at Rotterdam, 9 April, 1649, and bore for several years the name of Crofta, but on his marriage 20 April, 1663, with the celebrated heiress, LADY ANNE SCOTT, Countess of Buccleuch, dau. and sole heir of Francis, 2nd Earl of Buccleuch, he assumed her name of SCOTT, and was created Duke of Buccleuch. By this lady he left two sons, and one dau., viz.,

JAMES, Earl of Dalkeith, from whom the present Duke of Buccleuch lineally descends.

Henry, created Earl of Deloraine, a title that became extinct in 1807.

Anne, who d. of grief a few days after her father, in her eleventh year.

The fate of the Duke of Monmouth, is an historical event, so well known, that it would be idle to enlarge upon it here—suffice it to state, that his grace, soon after the accession of King JAMES II., took up arms to depose that monarch, and to establish his own right to the throne, as the legitimate son of King CHARLES II. (under the allegation, that the king had married his mother)—that he came to a pitched battle with the royal army at Sedgemore, 6 July, 1685, and sustained a decisive overthrow—that he was soon afterwards made prisoner, and brought to the block, on the 15th of the same month, when the Dukedom of Monmouth, and the minor honours became EXTINCT, under the attainder. Burnet characterizes his grace, "as possessed of many good qualities, and of some that were bad; that he was soft and gentle, even to excess; and too easy to those who had credit with him; sincere and good-natured, and understood war well; but too much given to pleasure and to favourites." The duke had separated from his duchess, and lived with Henrietta, Lady Wentworth. Immediately prior to his execution, Rapin states, that Dr. Jennison and Dr. Hooper, the divines in attendance upon him, "tried, but in vain, to obtain satisfaction, regarding his connexion with this lady, though he had a duchess of his own, and his pretending to be lawfully married to her before God; alleging that his first marriage was null, as being too young when he gave his consent. All the pains taken by the two doctors to convince him of the falsehood of this opinion were fruitless, nay, he chose rather to deprive himself of the communion, than own his engagements with that lady to be unlawful."

Macaulay gives a painful description of Monmouth's execution: "At length, after many blows of the axe, life was extinguished, and the head and body were placed in a coffin covered with black velvet, and were laid privately under the communion table of St. Peter's Chapel, in the Tower."

Henrietta, Baroness Wentworth, had a sad and sorrowful history: to her romantic and devoted attachment to the Duke of Monmouth she sacrificed her maiden honour and the hope of a splendid alliance: she abandoned all for him, and was his one loved companion in exile and in misfortune up to the very hour of his death: that event she survived but a few brief months, and then sank broken-hearted to the grave. "Near the quiet village of Toddington, in Bedfordshire," remarks Macaulay, "stood an ancient and stately Hall, the seat of the Wentworths. The transept of the parish church had long been their burial place. To that burial place, in the spring which followed the death of Monmouth, was borne the coffin of the young Baroness Wentworth, of Nettlested. Her family reared a sumptuous mausoleum* over her remains; but a less costly memorial of her was long contemplated, with far deeper interest. Her name, carved by the hand of him whom she loved too well, was, a few years ago, still discernible on a tree in the adjoining park."

Arms—The royal arms of King CHARLES II., viz.: quarterly, 1st and 4th, France and England, quarterly; 2nd Scotland; 3rd Ireland debruised, with a baton sinister, arg.

SCOTT—EARL OF DELORAINE.

SCOTT—EARL OF TARRAS.

By Letters Patent, dated 4 September, 1660.

Lineage.

WALTER SCOTT, of High Chester, eldest son of Sir Gideon Scott, of High Chester, 2nd son of Sir William Scott, of Harden, was m. at Wemyss Castle, 9 February, 1659, to Mary, Countess of Buccleuch, the greatest heiress then in Scotland; her ladyship had not completed her eleventh, nor Mr. Scott his fourteenth year. In consequence of this alliance, he was created EARL OF TARRAS, Lord Alemoor and Camp Castell, for his life only, by patent, dated 4 September, 1660. Mary, Countess of Buccleuch, d. at Wemyss, 12 March, 1661, in her thirteenth year s. p., when her title and estates devolved on her sister, Anne, afterwards Duchess of Buccleuch, wife of the Duke of Monmouth. The Earl of Tarras, who was implicated in the treasonable designs of the Duke of Monmouth, his brother-in-law, was brought to trial, 5 January, 1685, and found guilty, whereupon his titles and estates were forfeited, and his arms ordered to be torn. He obtained, however, a remission, 5 February following, and his liberty out of the castle the same day. The Earl of Tarras was one of the first who engaged in the Revolution of 1688, and d. in 1693, aged about forty-eight, when his title became EXTINCT. SCRIMGEOUR — VISCOUNTS DUDHOPE, AND EARL OF DUNDEE.

Viscounty, by Letters Patent, dated 15 November, 1641.
Earldom, by Letters Patent, dated 8 September, 1660.

Lineage.

SIR JOHN SCRIMGEOUR, of Dudhope, hereditary King's Standard Bearer for Scotland, representative of the Scrimgeours, Constables of Dundee, was raised to the peerage, by patent, dated at Holyrood House, 15 November, 1641, as VISCOUNT OF DUDHOPE, and LORD SCRIMGEOUR, with the eventual limitation to his heirs male whatsoever. He d. 7 March, 1643, leaving by his wife, Margaret Seton, of the family of Parbroath, co. Fife, two daus., Jean, m. to Sir Thomas Thomson, Bart.; and Mary, m. to Sir James Haliburton, a son and successor.

JAMES SCRIMGEOUR, 2nd Viscount of Dudhope, who m. Lady Isabel Ker, 3rd dau. of Robert, 1st Earl of Roxburgh, and by her had (with two daus., Mary and Margaret, wife of John Graham, of Pintry) two sons. His lordship d. from the effects of a wound he received at Marston Moor, 22 July, 1644, and was s. by his son.

JOHN SCRIMGEOUR, 3rd Viscount of Dudhope, colonel of horse in the engagement to attempt the rescue of King CHARLES I., under the Duke of Hamilton, in 1648. His lordship accompanied CHARLES II. to the battle of Worcester, and escaping thence, and joining General Middleton in the highlands of Scotland, was taken with a party of Middleton's forces in the braes of Angus, by the English, in November, 1654. At the Restoration, he was, in consideration of his services and sufferings in the royal cause, sworn a privy councillor, and created EARL OF DUNDEE, Viscount of Dudhope, Lord Scrimgeour and Inverkeithing, 8 September, 1660; the limitations are not known, the patent not being on record. He m. in 1644, Lady Anne Ramsay, 2nd dau. of William, 1st Earl of Dalhousie, by whom (who took to her 2nd husband, Sir Henry Bruce, of Clackmannan) he left no issue at his decease, 23 June, 1668.

The representative of the distinguished family of Scrimgeour devolved, at the decease of the Earl of Dundee, on the Scrimgeours, of Kirkton, whose present male heir is FREDERICK-LEWIS SCRIMGEOUR WEDDERBURN, Esq., of Wedderburn, heritable royal standard-bearer for Scotland.

SCROPE—BARONS SCROPE, OF BOLTON, EARL OF SUNDERLAND.

Barony, by Writ of Summons, dated 8 January, 1371.
Earldom, by Letters Patent, dated 19 June, 1627.

Lineage.

The great baronial house of Scrope had an unbroken male descent from the Conquest, if not from the time of EDWARD THE CONFESSOR.

SIR WILLIAM LE SCROPE, Knt. (son of William le Scrope, and grandson of Henry le Scrope, who were both buried with their ancestors at Wensley) possessed lands in Bolton, co. York, 1298. Several deponents in the Scrope and Grosvenor Controversy, report him to have been celebrated for his conduct in the field, and "the best knight of the whole country at jousts and tournaments." He left issue,

I. HENRY LE SCROPE, his heir.

II. Geoffry le Scrope, of Masham, knight-banneret, and chief justice to both EDWARD II. and EDWARD III.; with the latter of whom he also served in a military capacity throughout his French and Scotch wars. He was likewise celebrated for his achievements in the lists and tournaments, and many interesting anecdotes are given concerning him, by the deponents in the Scrope and Grosvenor Controversy. He was the progenitor of the line of the LORDS SCROPE OF MASHAM.

SIR HENRY LE SCROPE, eldest son of Sir William le Scrope, became a judge of the Court of King's Bench, 2nd EDWARD II. He was a trier of petitions in the parliament which met at Lincoln, 9th EDWARD II., 1316, and in the following year was made Chief Justice of his court, which judicial office he filled for seven years. He was in high favour throughout the greater part of the reign of EDWARD II., and was employed in various situations of high trust. On the accession of EDWARD III., he was re-appointed Chief Justice of the King's Bench, and subsequently made Chief Baron of the Exchequer. He obtained charters of free warren for his manors of Bolton, and others in Yorkshire; and for his large benefactions was considered the founder of the wealthy abbey of St. Agatha, of Richmond. He d. in 1336, and left issue by his wife, Margaret, dau. of Lord Roos,

I. WILLIAM LE SCROPE.

II. Stephen le Scrope, who d. s. p.

III. RICHARD LE SCROPE, who became heir to his brother William.

The eldest son,

SIR WILLIAM LE SCROPE accompanied King EDWARD III., in several of his French and Scotch expeditions. He was at the battle of Vironfoss, in Picardy, in 1339; at the siege of Tournay, in 1340; and at that of Vannes, in 1342. He d. of a wound received at the siege of Morlaix, in 1344, and was buried in the abbey of St. Agatha. He was s. by his brother,
